LONG—May 26th, at Mountain Lake Park, Ruth May, infant daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Thomas S. Long, aged one year and one month. The funeral services were conducted Saturday afternoon at three o'clock by Rev. Dr. Koonts, of Keyser, assisted by Rev. J. M. Davis, Dr. Frysinger and L. A. Rudisill. The remains were taken to Keyser, West Va., the same afternoon for interment.

RALSTON—At his home near Bittinger Sunday morning, of heart disease, George S. Ralston, aged about fifty years. The deceased was at the time of his death going from his house to the barn when death overtook him. He was an excellent citizen. He leaves a widow and seven children, all residnig at home. The funeral took place Tuesday, interment being made at Bittinger.

Interesting Lecture at the Normal.

Last Friday afternoon the Oakland Normal was addressed by Rev. Dr. Scott. His subject was "The Life of a Teacher," which was handled in a masterly manner. Among other things he said "much preparation was needed by the teacher before he could begin to teach and a continued preparation was necessary if the teacher hoped to be successful in his future work as a teacher." The speaker dwelt at some length on the moral responsibilities of the teacher in imparting the right precepts to his pupils in moulding their characters. The manners of the teacher and their relation to the pupil was an excellent sub-division of the speaker's subject and one that was very appropriate.

On next Friday Prof. E. A. Browning will address the school, his subject being "The Beauty of Literature and How to Find It."

The council of Kingwood has voted for license and it is stated that the county court will grant it. This action is said to have come about through the existance of seven speakeasies in the town. The county court is said to have promised to do what the town wants them to do. We venture the assertion that the town is not in favor of license if it comes to a vote of the people.

Lime is one of the best known and the cheapest of all disinfectants. People who use plenty of lime about their premises have little sickness. This goes to show that the use of lime is a preventative of disease. You can buy a whole barrel for a dollar or so, and it will last several months, supplying every need in the way of disinfecting and making healthy spots about your premises which might otherwise breed disease.

The first act of the German Baptist Brethern at their annual meeting, which convened at Carthage, Mo., on Monday, is said to have been the adoption of a resolution declaring the name of the denomination to be German Baptist, not Dunkard or Tunker. The latter designation was formerly common, but for years past has rarely been used in this section of the country. The original church name, and one not infrequently still used, was Brethren. The Century Cyclopedia and Dictionary says this is the proper name, and states that the founders of the church in this country were driven from Germany by persecution early in the eighteenth century. That they took refuge in Pennsylvania and thence extended their societies into neighboringing States. They have become numerous and influential in this section of Maryland.

Oakland Model Steam Bakery

To my Patrons and the Public:

Owing to the steady increase in my business and the determination to give my customers the best service and goods that can be produced anywhere, I have installed in my Bakery an up-to the-minute steam plant by which the product of my establishment is more than doubled and in consequence no delay is anticipated in putting upon the market twice daily fresh, nutritious Bread, Cakes, Pies, etc.

The dough mixer in my establishment has a capacity of three barrels which is driven by an engine and is of the latest pattern and a model in every respect. The dough is mixed by this machine and turned upon the table without being touched by the hands, thus ensuring better mixed bread and cleanliness in every respect. "Cleanliness" is our motto.

I have also installed a power ice cream machine and am better prepared than heretofore to manufacture Ice Cream and sell at wholesale and retail on the shortest notice.

I respectfully invite the public to inspect my plant.

Very truly yours, HENRY LAUER.

Love and a Theory

By Edward C. Lampson

Copyright, 1903, by Edward C. Lampson

FOUR years ago a southern girl, with a voice filled with that sweet tenderness that touches the northern man's heart, came into my life. I have never forgotten Elizabeth Martin. I never can forget those blue, hypnotic, trusting eyes. We were friends at once. In a week our fancy had traversed the earth, and in two weeks each had explored the mysteries of the other's sympathetic heart.

All too soon the happy vacation days passed. I returned to my country office, while a thousand miles intervened. Knowing the differences that existed by nature in our circumstances and inbred convictions, I lacked the courage to fall hopelessly in love with Miss Martin. Although conscience informed me that delicate advances would not be rebuffed, yet this monitor at the same time increased my conviction that I had no moral right to encourage a reciprocity of deep sentiment.

Because of my northern birth and respect for the unaristocratic simplicities of republicanism I resisted the temptation to win this sweet girl's love. No matter how refined, such training as mine could not always harmonize with those innate opinions held by one who counted the heritage of the south—its democratic aristocracy—of supreme importance.

But there came a day when no amount of reasoning or struggling with my honor concealed from me that I loved Elizabeth Martin, nor any doubt of the full return of love from that noble little girl in Dixie. But no sooner had this conviction mastered me than the struggle was renewed to make my will the dominator. I committed no wrong in loving, but the wrong lay in permitting any evidence of such passion to appear to Elizabeth.

Elizabeth Martin was the daughter of General Richard Martin, a man of wealth and power. Of his wife and daughter he asked only that they grace his home, treat his guests with distinctive courtesy and maintain the traditions of his family. But Elizabeth Martin sought more than the pleasure and honor of balancing the family social accounts. She sought no career. She asked no higher goal than honorable wifehood and motherhood.

But did Elizabeth Martin understand the sacrifices wifehood and motherhood imposed upon a high spirited girl, especially when those conditions are made more difficult by the commonplace associations and duties of the average man's wife, who from choice or necessity must be companion and cook, housekeeper and nurse, business adviser and pincher of the nimble nickel?

There seemed to be but one answer to this question. She did not and could not understand. This answer left me no moral right to assume even the possibilities of our matrimonial alliance. From that day began my first discourtesy. I made no reply to her letters.

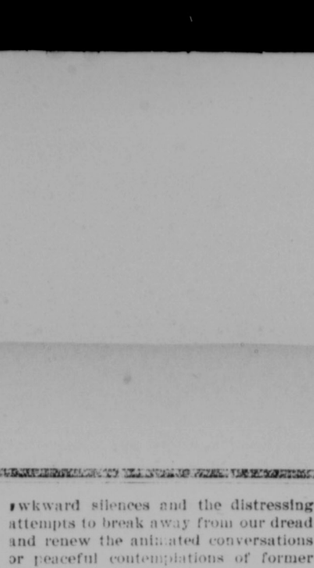
For a few weeks this discourtesy made no difference with Elizabeth. Her letters continued their cheerfulness, their encouragement and literary brilliance until suddenly stricken by my lack of appreciation, fearing she had made too great a committal, a few deliberately cold lines asked the question I had expected with great dread. Monday morning my clients, if there were any, found this notice on my office door: "I'm going to arbitrate. Go do thou likewise."

WE BOTH FELT THAT FOREBODING OF MISFORTUNE.

At Nashville Elizabeth received me with marked cordiality and such lack of surprise that I forgot my apology, and my inclination to explain grew less as the necessity diminished. Instead of a day in the city the day grew into days, and not until a telegram from home demanding my immediate presence was received did my mind revert with a sickening thud to the fact that absolutely no part of my purpose in visiting Nashville had been accomplished.

With the telegram in my hand, I made my last call at the home of Elizabeth Martin. From the moment of my reception we both felt that uncomfortable foreboding of misfortune. The awkward silences and the distressing attempts to break away from our dread and renew the animated conversations or peaceful contemplations of former visits led me, like the will-o'-the wisp, into the bog. With ill selected words I stumbled into a discussion of soul friendships and that high spiritual love of which poets dream and angels alone know does not exist and cannot between warm blooded men and women—of a love that denies the body and reeks the soul and feeds on platitudes. Her eager listening placed me more at ease, and my speech became bolder and more empty and vain, being filled with those hopes associated with platonic regard. The thought was rigged with all the pedantic beauty and sophistry at command, and that beautiful woman, with trembling lips, promised to share this impossible and imaginary state. I knew that she asked for love. Her eyes told it, and my offer was an empty cup, a human fallacy that tried to make a spirit of dry bones.

The argument was easy, and the more dangerous the theme the more attractive until a sudden impulse—an answering appeal from those tear wet eyes—and logic was overturned. Two soft arms were clasped about my neck. Two strong arms held a gentle woman in warm embrace. The tenderest words came to our lips—and then no time for words. One more long, sweet embrace and we parted—forever.



"I WANT YOU TO MARRY ELIZABETH MARTIN."

A week later my conscience, stricken with the errors of this romance, would have welcomed a public horsewhipping. I could tolerate no further delay in ending this unfortunate matter. That I deserved no further consideration, even if our circumstances in life were compatible, I knew and accepted as final. Elizabeth Martin must cease to be an important factor in my life. In order to facilitate this removal I determined to adopt the theory that love is a condition subject to mental control, and, after finding some one whose experiences, ambitions and circumstances were in harmony, to win her love and to place my affections and welfare in her keeping.

The good and the undesirable features of the unmarriageable young women of the neighborhood were studied with interest. There were many favorable points in each one who, unknown to herself, of course, was a candidate for my matrimonial net. However, none was exactly satisfactory. Some expected too much of the man. Few were willing to bear their share and were prone to grumble. Some didn't like the town and wouldn't live in Myersburg for a "mint of money." Every one of them could spend money faster than three young lawyers could earn it. They seemed to have an idea that money grew on trees and all that was necessary was to continue to shake the paternal limb. The other objections were common enough, though they are more the fault of the mother who is ambitious and who has forgotten the romance of the struggle of her own young wifehood and remembers only the bitterness of that struggle to keep up appearances while scraping and saving to found a home and a comfortable fortune. The only romance mother or daughter looks forward to in these days includes three servants, a maid, a butler and a French chauffeur.

At last, in spite of being so peculiar and particular, there came a candidate without flaw—absolutely without flaw—interesting, intelligent, high spirited, good taste, perfect in form and possessing all of those feminine graces that please the average man. Jovial though serious when need be, seasoned enough to command respect and a wholesome fear, she makes a capital companion and a good chum. You see, when I begin talking of Isabel I wander from the main point and almost forget to ask you if there isn't something wrong with this love theory.

The first cloud appeared on Saturday morning. It was a telegram from Elizabeth Martin. She was at Lakewood again and wondered if I was not coming before she left for Japan. I did just what you would have done, and exactly what twelve months before I had taken solemn oath never to do again.

The return journey brought me home heavy eyed and heartsore. It was no longer right for me to keep this experience from Isabel, and that very night, without reservation, she was given the entire story. That Elizabeth Martin had been my true love I did not conceal. No defense was made, and none was necessary. There were tears in Isabel's eyes, not of anger nor of pained surprise, but tears of love and unfathomed sympathy. Then to Isabel was given the message of Elizabeth, the message of a gentle, womanly heart to one who by chance had usurped her throne.

"Tell her," Elizabeth Martin said—"tell her that as I loved you, Ned, so shall I love her if she adds happiness to your life." The tender nobility of this message broke our restraint. An hour afterward, when the sobs were very faint and all so quiet that the beating of our hearts were audible, a rustle of her gown, and Isabel passed to an open window. Without, all was clothed in moonlight, in peace and mysterious beauty. Then, as if having drawn inspiration from the clear eyed stars, my Isabel turned and said: "I would have despised you, Ned"—and there was no reproach in her voice—"if you had concealed these things from me. Ned, I—I love her, too—and—and I want you to marry Elizabeth Martin because—well, because she can help you more than I. It's hard to give you up, Ned, but it seems best for—the three of us. As long as life lasts, Ned, I shall be true to you, because to me there has been a spiritual union too sacred to permit my thinking of any one else as my husband. Good night and goodby, Ned." Before I could recover from my surprise and remonstrate Isabel lightly touched her lips to my unhappy head, and I was alone.

But one feels different the next morning. Here comes the postman—a letter from Elizabeth, written the morning I left Lakewood. Such a strange letter! I'll let you read it, though you don't deserve the privilege. I want you to elevate your opinions of women in their relations:

Dearest Ned—It was good of you to come and see me and to tell me of your approaching marriage. How happy you are and how blessed she must feel! I am glad, Ned—no, sorry—you could not read the pain in my eyes when we talked so earnestly in the shadow. Ned, each word you uttered tore my heart like jagged, rusty knives. But when your voice quavered or the words came haltingly to your lips I was—wickedly happy. Yet how I admired you—and hated you—because you could tell me such things as you knew were eating my life at its very core. And when you took no advantage—I mean wouldn't take me—when I would have given my hope of heaven for one more kiss like that first kiss, Ned. Oh, what am I doing to write this to you!

But, perhaps it's best. It may save you from falling again and keep you clear of the platonic rut. I forgive all your sins against me but this one. Ned, when you were at Nashville I knew you came because you loved me, and you must have known my heart stood timidly, yet expectantly, at your door. Why did you talk so foolishly of empty friendship? As though a woman wants friendship from the man for whose heel she would make a cushion of her heart! Had you asked me to be your wife then and there I would have robbed heaven and bartered my soul for that existence. But you prated of soul friendship, like a cheap sop, a dry bone for a starving dog.

You spoke of our different stations in life, as though it made a moment's difference. With your own hands you built a barrier of my wealth and your own common means. Is a woman so much barter? Is it the price obtained that animates her to face the greatest sacrifice in life? Is her body so many yards of cloth, a handful of jewels, houses and lands or

Are women less discerning than men? You complain of our different experiences resulting from lifelong surroundings. Are gentlemen and gentlewomen the result of surroundings? Am I not sufficiently cosmopolite to know and to appreciate courtesy in my neighbor, though it be rough? Does not courtesy exist among your neighbors as among my own?

You hesitate to take me to live in your native town lest I misunderstand and take offense at your friends, lest I might mistake their frequent patriotic utterances as directed against me as a representative of the "lost cause." I wish I could say more, but I must not divert attention from the main purpose of this last letter.

You can do nothing finer, nothing more sincere, Ned, than to be for Isabel James all that I have prayed you might be for Elizabeth Martin. Be manly and be optimistic. Pessimism never frightened the wolf from any man's door. Your success in life will be success enough for me. If you fail, I fail.

Do you remember the little church on the corner where once we knelt together in prayer? At that church each day of my life, God willing, I will daily kneel in prayer and lay bare my heart before heaven that it may flay me to spare you and yours, dearest Ned.

I could not sleep last night, Ned, for fear I would not see you pass my window early in the morning for the train. I waited all the long, dreary night, but how happy I was when in the misty dawn you stopped in passing, turned your face toward me, all unconscious that I watched you from my curtain. And when you uncovered your head and stood that brief moment as though in prayer my heart leaped for joy because I know you understand. Then you turned away—but looked again, waving your hand as though you knew I could see—and now, oh, Ned, you are gone forever. Forever—but, dear Ned, I have so much faith in you.

WORLD'S FAIR HOTEL ACCOMMODATIONS.

St. Louis Hostelries Prepared to Handle Vast Throngs—Prices Not to Be Increased—Hotel Inside of the Exposition Grounds With a Capacity For 6,000 Guests.

Ample hotel accommodations have been provided for the World's Fair visitors at St. Louis both within and outside of the Exposition grounds.

The Exposition management has organized a free information service. A pamphlet has been issued for gratuitous circulation explaining many of the conveniences that have been provided. A list of all the hotels, with rates, is contained in this pamphlet. The entire city has been canvassed, and many thousands of private householders have arranged to receive visitors. These houses are in every section of the city, and the rates at which guests will be received is a matter of record on the books of the bureau.

The Inside Inn, a hotel on the Exposition grounds, has a capacity for 6,000 guests. The Exposition management has control of the rates, which have been fixed at from $1.50 to $3.50 per day, European plan, including admission to the grounds. On the American plan the rates range from $3 to $5 per day. The hotel is 400 by 800 feet and is three stories high.

There are more than 150 established hotels in St. Louis, and a signed agreement has been made between many of their managers with the Exposition officials that rates shall not be raised during the Exposition period. Many new hotels have been built on sites adjacent to the Exposition grounds, and the published fixed rates warrant the assertion that no one need pay exorbitant rates for accommodations either at hotels or private houses.

Among the new hotels may be mentioned the Hotel Napoleon Bonaparte, which stands at Clayton avenue and Skinker road, overlooking the Exposition grounds. This hostelry will accommodate 5,000 persons. The rates, European plan, are from $1 to $5 per day. The Grand View hotel, south of the Exposition, on Oakland avenue, has a capacity for 5,000 guests, and the rates are $1 to $1.50 per day, European, and $2 to $2.50 per day on the American plan. The Kenilworth, on West Park boulevard and Billon avenue, has a capacity of 1,500 guests, with a rate of $1.50 per day.

The above mentioned are a few of the new hotels that have been erected near the Exposition grounds for the accommodation of World's Fair visitors. All told there are about twoscore. All are within easy walking distance, and all are situated on high ground, with comprehensive views of the grounds. All of the structures are well built, and in some of them the most luxurious quarters are obtainable. The rates are established and will not be increased during the Exposition.

NEW MUSIC FOR WORLD'S FAIR

Three Compositions by Famous People. Band Tournament.

Musical people and all who appreciate good music may thank the World's Fair for three notable compositions, written upon the invitation of the Exposition management. These are the "Hymn of the West," by the most distinguished living American poet, Edmund Clarence Stedman, the music for which was written by Professor John K. Paine, who is at the head of the music department of Harvard university; "Louisiana," a march by Frank Vanderstuken, leader of the Cincinnati Orchestra; a waltz, "Along the Plaza," by Henry K. Hadley of New York, who has won his laurels long before this as writer of operatic and other musical compositions. This music will be heard publicly for the first time upon the opening of the Exposition on Saturday, April 30, and frequently thereafter in the musical programmes of the greatest of world's fairs. These are the only official compositions.

Thirty thousand dollars will be given in prizes for the best bands at a tournament to be held during the Exposition. All through the World's Fair the musical feature will be prominent. The most famous bands of the world are under contract to participate during considerable periods. Among these are Le Garde Republicaine band of France, the Royal Grenadier band of England, the American National band, Sousa's band and others.

Stories by the Little Mites of Humanity

SMALL Tommy was entertaining his sister's best beau in the parlor. Finally he said, "You and sister are going for a walk this evening, ain't you?"

"Yes, Tommy," answered the young man. "But how did you know it?"

"Sister sent to see the corn doctor this mo[illegible]g," explained Tommy.

Johnny—What's your papa's business?

Tommy—He writes poetry and funny things for the papers.

Johnny—Huh! That ain't a business; it's somethin' that ails him.

Little Elsie came home from her first day at school eager to show her mother the callisthenic exercises she had been learning.

"It's called fistical culture, mamma," she explained, "'cause you do it nearly all with your fists."

"How much is your candy?" asked little Joe.

"Six sticks for 5 cents," replied the dealer.

"Let me see," mused Joe. "Six sticks for 5 cents, five sticks for 4 cents, four sticks for 3 cents, three sticks for 2 cents, two sticks for 1 cent, one stick for nothin'. Gimme one stick, please."

Here is a schoolboy's composition:

"Winter is the coldest season of the year because it comes mostly in the winter. In some countries winter comes in the summer; then it isn't so worse. I wish winter came in summer in Cleveland; then we could go skating barefooted and make snowballs without getting our fingers froze. When it snows in summer they call it rain."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Cunning Youngster.

The little girl had been bad, and her stern father had punished her and put her to bed. Her fond mother, realizing the necessity for discipline, had kept as far as possible out of sight and hearing while the tragedy was in progress. Now she was downstairs, while the paternal parent sat beside the bedside of his erring offspring.

"Daddy," said the little girl finally, "please go downstairs and get me a bottle of milk."

"No, Clara," he said. "You have just eaten your supper, and I don't think you had better have any more."

Silence reigned for a few minutes. Then the child spoke again.

"Daddy, please go downstairs anyway."

"What do you want me to go downstairs for, Clara?"

"Because just as soon as you get down to the bottom of the stairs I'll cry real loud, and then mammy 'll hear me and come running up to lie down with me."—Chicago Tribune.

Getting His Measure.

"So Josh has been in town three weeks."

"Yes," answered Farmer Corntossel.

"How's he getting along?"

"I dunno yet. There's no tellin' for a month or so how a boy's goin' to turn out in the city. I reckon we'll know in a short time whether he's a gold brick buyer or a gold brick seller."—Washington Star.

For the Negative.

"So you don't think Solomon was wise?"

"Haven't I his matrimonial record to the contrary?"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 7, 1902.

Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

Don't you want freedom from pain? Take Wine of Cardui and make one supreme effort to be well. You do not need to be a weak, helpless sufferer. You can have a woman's health and do a woman's work in life. Why not secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist today?

Christ's Trial Before Pilate.

As procurator of Judea, Pilate was palpable misfit. There is something in a name sometimes. This "Javelin-man" from the beginning of his official life in this most undesirable of provinces, had not ceased to hurl his darts at the hierarchy and people, for whom he had a superlative hatred. Utterly indifferent to the fact that they esteemed it an extreme profanation, he allowed his soldiers to bring their eagles into the holy city, he hung up gilt shields dedicated to Tiberius, and took money out of the temple treasury to build an aqueduct. When the outraged populace stood before his palace protesting and refusing to disperse, his soldiers, disguised and scattered in the throng, at a signal, began a wholesale assassination. On another occasion he mingled the blood of some Galileans with that of their sacrifices. Once the Jews had appealed to Cæsar, and not unsuccessfully, against this tyranny. The relation between ruler and ruled was now strained to the last degree. Another successful appeal to Rome would probably effect the deposition of Pilate, his exile or execution.

It was under circumstances like these that the procurator had come up from his official residence in Cæsarea to keep the peace in the great concourse of Passover week. What to him did all the Oriental splendor of the great Idumean's costliest palace, which he occupied on this occasion, amount to, when at any moment, under its vermilion ceilings and over its tessellated floors, the lava-streams of popular insurrection were apt to sweep? Imagine, then, his feelings when, the feast being at its height and the city crammed to its utmost capacity with a heterogeneous throng from every quarter, there appeared at the portal of his palace a mob headed by the high priest, and all worked to the highest pitch of religious frenzy. It was aggravating to the last degree. Yet fear of another appeal to Rome, whose fixed policy was the conciliation of the provinces, required at this juncture that these imperious petitioners should not be driven unheard from the judgment-seat. Pilate makes, with illgrace, his first concession. The Jews will not enter the judgment hall for fear of ceremonial defilement. So the procurator places his curule outside. Before him, with hands bound, stands the object of this religious fury. The accusation is demanded. Pilate's answer is, "Take him and punish him according to your law." This brings the confession that power to inflict capital punishment was no longer theirs. The charge is that Jesus is a deceiver, encourages the withholding of tribute, and calls himself king. Pilate beckons Jesus, and both retire into the comparative quiet of the judgment hall. He asks him: "Art thou, poor lone peasant, king of the Jews?" Jesus puts the counterquestion: Do you ask me whether I am king in the Roman or Jewish sense of that word?" Pilate retorts: "Am I a Jew?" Jesus replies: "In the Roman sense I am no king. In the mistaken Hebrew sense, too, I am no king. My kingdom is unlike any earthly or political sovereignity. If it were, I would have trained my followers to arms." "Are you a king in any sense?" asks the judge. The answer is: "I am. My realm is truth, my subjects the lovers of truth." "Truth! What transcendentalism is this!" Pilate announces the innocence of Jesus. Accusations fill the air like flying arrows. The ruse of transferring the jurisdiction to Herod Antipas fails. "What shall I do with Jesus?" asks the jaded governor. "Crucify him!" is the answer. One more protest. "Why crucify an innocent man? Let me scourge him only." Like a wild sea the vociferation broke about the Gabbatha, Pilate washes his hands.

The Jews accept the onus. Direct from the scourging, decked with mock insignia, His life-blood giving new tint to the mottled pavement, Pilate as a last appeal, cries: "Behold the man! Is not this suffering and humiliation enough?" "Crucify!" is the only answer, "Then crucify Him if you will; but He is innocent of offense against any law of which I am cognizant." The priests answer: "He has violated a Jewish law, the penalty of which is death. He affirms Himself the Son of God." Pilate takes Jesus aside to ask Him the meaning of the term. The meaning is beyond his comprehension. Jesus is silent. Pilate marvels, exclaiming: "I have power to crucify or acquit you." Jesus answers: "You have power only because God permits you to use it. You are guilty, because you condemn Me, knowing Me to be innocent; but those are more guilty who delivered me to you, as they sin against greater light." "Will they not prefer Jesus to Barabbas as the object of clemency to grace their festival according to custom?" With the collapse of this last shift comes the ominious warning of Pilate's wife. He is on the point, even so late, of acquitting the accused, when the prosecutor lets fly the last arrow in his quiver: "Let this man go, and you are not Cæsar's friend!" "Behold your king!" says Pilate. "We have no king but Cæsar!" resounds once more. So ends the long-drawn battle in which the life of Jesus was at stake. Pilate orders Him to the cross.

The Teacher's Lantern

Pilate is a conspicuous type of the time-server. He had no moral earnestness. He thought truth an indifferent matter. His ruling motive was willing to condem the innocent.

Yet to some degree he showed a Roman's proverbial regard for law and justice. He demanded the accusation and evidence. He contended with the Jews, making use of various expedients, until they were on the point of tumult; then, however, he ignominiously conceded to their demand.

Pilate's time-serving brought him small reward. He eked out his official life a few years; but, on the complaint of these very Jews whom he sought to placate by such a sacrifice of honor, he was finally deposed and exiled. His name will go down to the end of time in deepest infamy,as it is repeated in every land and language in the imperishable creed "Crucified under Pontius Pilate."

That cloud-hooded mountain, up whose somber heights one can look from the balcony of the inn at Lucene may not have been the actual scene of Pilate's suicide, as tradition says it was; but it seems a fitting memorial of one of the most odious characters of history.

Take from the galleries of the Old World the pictures, the themes of which were suggested by the life of Jesus, and art would be irretrievably impoverished; and gospel narrative still yields inspiration for the pencil of genius, as Munkacsy's "Christ Before Pilate" show.

"Art thou King?" How unlikely! So it seemed to the procurator,proud of his power, and inclined to patronize the despised claimant to royalty.

Yet Jesus was the real Ruler though in disguise. Pilate's power, then on the wane, lasted a scant six years longer. Jesus' dominion, ever augmenting, has lasted for twenty centuries, extends from sea to sea, and is owned by three hundred million of the race. David's cradle hymn over the infant Solomon applies better to David's greater Son.

In the ultimate testing of character, the tinsel and trappings of office play no part. The moral qualities of justice, humanity, courage,and the like, outweigh crowns,scepters,and thrones Nothing fortuitous counts. In the final analysis it is what the man is that makes or unmakes him, not what he appears.

One moral earnest soul is the touchstone for all others They rise or fall by such test. As Jesus is the supreme ethical and spiritual character, the destiny of men is fixed by their attitude toward Him. This is not arbitrary, but inheres in the very nature of the case. A choice must needs be pressed. The cry which was heard at Pilate's judgment seat still rings in the conscience, "Which will ye?" Will the loftiest character the world has ever known be taken as the model, or one less worthy— or wholly unworthy. The circumstances do not admit of neutrality. It is still "for" or "against," "gathering with" or scattering aboard." The same choice made two thousand years ago is making still in current life. There are tragic personal rejections of the Christ-ideal, as there was then a national rejection.

Letter to H. C. Sincell.

Dear Sir: Clothing is just like paint: It fits or it don't it wears or it don't turns weather and water or not; and goes out of fashion.

What do we wear clothing for? Did you ever think of it? Different persons have different reasons,no doubt, but one paints Devoe for beauty, to be in the fashion,and keep-out water.

Fashion says paint: we all paint. There is beauty in paint; we paint a good deal for that. And buildings are costly and fashionable; put-on a waterproof two or three coats of paint, and your buildings last as long as you keep them dry. It costs nothing to paint; it costs your buildings not to.

Devoe is the paint that lasts; disappointing paints are the paints that cost.

Yours truly

REVISED STATE SCHOOL LAW.

Summary of its Provisions By Superintendent of Education.

The following is a summary of the provisions of the State School law, as revised by the General Assembly of 1904, and promulgated by State Superintendent of Education M. Bates Stephens for the information of the county school boards:

1. The office of the State Board of Education and State Superintendent of Education will be transferred from Baltimore to Annapolis. You will be notified when the transfer is made.

2. The State Board of Education is now composed of eight members, consisting of six appointed by Governor, and the Governor and the State Superintendent of Education. The terms of the members of the State board correspond to those of the County School Commissioners and minority representation is provided.

3. The State Superintendent of Public Education is Secretary of the State Board of Education.

4. The official title of the secretary of the county school board is "secretary, treasurer and county superintendent." The name "examiner" does not occur in the new law.

5. The secretary, treasurer and county superintendent is appointed in the month of May, when the board is organized, but does not enter upon his new duties until the beginning of the scholastic year August first.

6. Trustees must be appointed on the first day of May or first meeting thereafter, which must be held in the month of May.

7. Principal teacher is appointed by the board of trustees and becomes the secretary of the board of district trustees.

8. All assistant teachers are appointed by the county school board.

9. County school boards are given authority to consolidate schools when desirable and practicable, and to pay charges of transportation.

10. The normal school at Frostburg, the normal department of Washington College, the Maryland State Normal school and the Baltimore colored normal school are under the supervision of the State Board of Education.

11. The free book fund is $150,000, and the expenditure of same is limited to text-books and supplementary reading books and Maps of Maryland. All text-books are to be adopted and purchased by the county school boards.

12. Diplomas of State normal schools from other states may be indorsed by the State Superintendent of Education.

13. The minimum county school tax rate is now 15 cents.

14. The State school tax rate is 15 cents, instead of 10½, as heretofore.

15. Teachers of white schools where the average annual attendance of pupils is 15 or more, shall receive as salary for the yearnot less than $300, and such schools shall remain open not less than nine months. Schools where the average is less than 15 are in the control of the county school board, who determine the school year and the amount of salary to be paid the teacher.

16. Where the school board fails to provide a school year of nine months and the minimum salary of $300, to white teachers whose schools average 15, the Comptroller will withhold the March installment of the school tax.

17. There is no separate fund for colored schools. All matters pertaining to colored schools are left with the county school board.

18. The State school tax is now apportioned on the basis of (colored and white) between the ages of 5 and 20 as disclosed by the census.

19. The academic and free school funds are not affected by the new law.

20. The new law went into effect from the date of its passage. All State taxes for the coming fiscal year will be collected on the new rate of 22½ cents.

21. In counties containing more than 85 schools the school board may employ a clerk. Where the number of teachers exceeds 175 they may also employ an aisistant county superintendent.

22. The pension fund for teachers was increased to $25, 000 annually.

CO[illegible] TEST

Jerseys at the World's Fair Are Expected to Show That They Are Superior to All Other Breeds.

The herd of Jersey cows assembled at the World's Fair at St. Louis to represent the Jersey breed in the universal dairy test has been inspected and has been pronounced in perfect condition and ready to start upon their six months' grind on a day's notice.

W. R. Spann of the Burr Oak Jersey farm, Dallas, Tex., was the inspector, and he was thorough in his work. He passed a week on the Exposition grounds, and much of the time was spent in and around the Jersey cattle barn, and the condition of each individual of the herd of forty cows was definitely ascertained.

Never was more intelligent and careful treatment lavished on animals. No athlete was ever better trained for a contest requiring the development of speed, skill and endurance than has been this herd of Jerseys. When it is known that this herd is to compete with selected herds of Holsteins, Shorthorns, Brown Swiss and Devons, and the herd making the best score for the production of butter, milk and cheese is to establish the standing of the various breeds, the importance of the cows being in perfect condition may be understood.

For a solid year the Jerseys have been in constant training. Twenty-five cows will participate in the contest. Cows were selected from the best herds in the United States.

Dr. J. J. Richardson, president of the American Jersey Cattle Club, under whose auspices this entry is made, toured Europe and visited the famed Isle of Jersey, where the breed originated. He was seeking the best cows, but returned satisfied that Europe could show no cows that were better than those bred in America.

Though only twenty-five cows will participate in the test, forty cows were selected. They were assembled at Jerseyville, Ill., a year ago. This is near St. Louis, and the cattle have become acclimated. Last December they were removed to St. Louis. The cows are the property of individual members of the club and are loaned for the term of the test. C. T. Graves, a breeder at Maitland, Mo., was selected as the superintendent to have charge of the cattle, and he has been highly complimented by Dr. Richardson and Inspector Spann for the wonderfully fine condition in which he has placed the herd.

A series of model dairy barns have been built for the breeds competing in the test. The barns are octagonal in form, and are so arranged that the cows are in the center and a wide promenade permits visitors to pass around and view the cows as they stand in their stalls.

The milking and feeding are to be done in plain view of the public, and representatives of the various herds will at all times have access to all the barns to see that no sharp practices are indulged in.

The test not only consists in showing the amount of butter, milk and cheese produced, but the cost of production is taken into consideration. Every ounce of food given each cow is weighed and carefully recorded. When the cows are milked, the milk is conveyed to a model creamery in the Agricultural building, where it is tested and made into butter and cheese and where all records are carefully kept.

The Jersey cattle participated in a similar test at Chicago during the Columbian Exposition and carried off first honors.

Superintendent Graves is sanguine over the result of the present test. He says that the Jerseys have always demonstrated their superiority over all other breeds when placed in competition, and this time they will show to better advantage than ever. Not only is the Jersey milk richer in butter fat than the milk of any other breed, says Mr. Graves, but it can be produced at a less cost. The Jersey cows are the smallest of the standard breeds, and he asserts that they consume less feed. They assimilate their food, and it is converted into milk and butter and is not used in building up and sustaining a large carcass.

"We are going to make all other breeds take to the woods after this test," said Mr. Graves. "A few days ago I was testing some of our Jersey milk, and my hands were all sticky and greasy from the enormous amount of butter fat the milk contained. Mr. Von Heyne, who is in charge of the Holsteins, sent over a quantity of his milk for me to test. Of course, from a commercial standpoint, there was no comparison between the milk, but it was a pleasure to test his milk, for when I got through there was no grease on my hands. After this I will have a bucket of Holstein milk around handy to wash my hands in after testing our own rich Jersey milk."

The test begins May 16 and continues 120 days.

Unique California Map.

A unique exhibit at the World's Fair was prepared by the agricultural department of the University of California. It is a large map, so colored as to show the character of the various soils of the state. It gives a clear idea of the situation and the extent of the arable and untillable sections. In the localities that cannot be cultivated are shown the Sierras, the lava beds and the desert. The map indicates the location of the cultivable portions of the mountains and Mohave plateau and shows the nature of the foothills and valleys of that wonderful state.

Twenty Minutes of Carnage

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

June 3, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

AT Cold Harbor Grant for the third time within a month of battles between the Rapidan and the James ordered an attack all along the lines. The hour set for the grand charge was 4:30 in the morning June 3. The assaulting column consisted of Hancock's Second corps, with its three divisions under the veteran leaders General Frank Barlow, General D. B. Birney and General John Gibbon, the Sixth corps under General H. G. Wright and the Eighteenth corps under General W. F. Smith (Old Baldy). Smith's three divisions under General Devens, General Brooks and General Martindale and Wright's under General Neill, General Ricketts and General Getty occupied the ground they had captured in a battle and intrenched the afternoon of June 1.

Nearly all of the Federal troops engaged were veterans of many battles. Here and there a new regiment had a place in the line, usually at the head of column. It is not possible to make a slaughter picturesque by the most eloquent description. All that can be said of the fighting at Cold Harbor on June 3 is that on the Federal side it was a wild havoc of carnage. Veteran officers set the example of gallant exposure, as though the hopelessness of the situation could be relieved by glorious bravery. Ten regimental leaders were killed outright.

The Confederates took the battle very coolly. All the diaries and reports from that army that have come to light speak uniformly of "assaults repulsed" from one end of Lee's line of battle to the other. General Law of Kershaw's division, which held the center of Lee's line, says that on the morning of Grant's attack his troops were under arms awaiting the assailants. The men were "in fine spirits, laughing and talking as they fired."

Recalling the carnage in the ranks of the enemy, General Law says: "I had seen the dreadful carnage in front of Marye's hill at Fredericksburg and on the 'old railroad cut' which Stonewall Jackson's men held at the second Manassas (Bull Run, 1862), but I had seen nothing to exceed this. It was not war; it was murder. When the fight ended more than a thousand men lay in front of our works (Kershaw's division alone), either killed or too badly wounded to leave the field."

Ordinarily soldiers on the defensive would not receive an assault so coolly, but would be expecting a flank attack or other stealthy maneuver under cover of the bold advance. But from their experiences at the Wilderness and Spottsylvania the Confederates could well believe that their foe would come blindly on in droves, like sheep, to be shot down at will. Grant's personal memoirs contain a startling confession with respect to this grand charge at Cold Harbor. Writing twenty years after the event the general declared, "I have always regretted that the last assault at Cold Harbor was ever made."

The history of Hancock's Second corps says that "scarcely twenty minutes from the time the signal was given the repulse of the corps was complete. Three thousand men had fallen. Among the officers the loss had been portentous." In Gibbon's division of this corps 65 officers and 1,032 men were killed or wounded.

If personal gallantry on the part of the boys in blue could have won the grand charge at Cold Harbor, there would be a different story to tell. Each of the three divisions of the Sixth corps carried the advanced rifle pits of Lee's line and then assaulted the main intrenchments. Then it transpired that the entire line was raked lengthwise by Lee's batteries. One of the Sixth corps batteries, Captain Hexamer's First New Jersey, ran its guns up to the front, where it could throw canister into the enemy's ranks. Hexamer was a veteran of the Prussian army and gave it as his experience that there was not another case on record where a battery of artillery advanced with a column of charging infantry to a point near enough to the enemy's works to use canister with effect.

Colonel Upton's brigade of the Sixth corps was led in the charge by the Second Connecticut heavy artillery, acting as infantry. It was a new regiment, one of those received at the front in those days with cries of "Fresh fish!" from the veterans. There were 1,400 men in the ranks. Fixed bayonets and uncapped muskets were the orders for these novices in war. The Connecticut men formed line about 400 yards from the enemy and advanced across an open space at quick step, aiming for a re-entering angle in the intrenchments. A thin pine wood sheltered the column for a moment at the start, but when it emerged from that shelter the fury of the Confederate fire increased. Men fell at every step. Gallantly the gaps made by the bullets were closed, and a solid line rushed forward to the enemy's abatis.

The abatis in front of the Connecticut line proved impassable, and the column was checked at that point, giving the Confederates a chance to sweep the ranks with canister and bullets. The commander, Colonel Kellogg, marched at the head of the leading battalion. His tall, erect form made a good target, and he fell pierced with a dozen balls. The foremost companies were almost wiped out, but the regimental line remained intact, intrenched and held its ground. The proportion of killed and wounded in this regiment proved the danger it had faced. Out of 320 shot down 120 were killed outright and 191 wounded.

The Fifth New Hampshire veteran volunteers went into the grand charge at Cold Harbor with a fighting reputation to maintain. After Gettysburg, where its original leader, Colonel E. E. Cross, was killed, only ninety-seven men remained with the colors. It reported back to the army on the field of Cold Harbor on June 1 with veterans and fresh recruits to the number of 577 and dashed forward in the Second corps column at daybreak that fatal morning of June 3.

At the first rush the New Hampshire men bounded over the parapet of a Confederate battery without firing a single shot, but depending upon the bayonet, and charged for the enemy's second line. Having no supports, the daring fellows were finally compelled to fall back to the battery, which they did, disputing every foot of the way in a hand to hand struggle. The artillerists of the battery threw themselves upon the retreating foes, but the gallant fellows rallied to one another's aid and beat off their assailants one by one.

A captain was the last to leave the battery when the Fifth was finally overcome and driven out. His parting blow was a sword cut, which split a Confederate from the shoulder downward, leaving him dead and nearly decapitated by the side of his gun. Terrible work that, but the Fifth was used to it. At the "Bloody Lane," Antietam, Colonel Cross streaked his face with blood and powder and sounded the Indian war whoop in order to incite his men to stand their ground.

At Cold Harbor the names of sixty-nine heroes were added to the death roll of this elite regiment, and at the end of the war the Fifth New Hampshire was accredited with 295 killed in battle, the highest in any northern command. GEORGE L. KILMER.

APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

MAYOR ROBERT M'LANE ENDS OWN HIS CAREER

By Firing a Bullet Through His Brain at His Baltimore Home.

RASH ACT UNACCOUNTED FOR.

A Few Minutes Before Commission of the Deed He Was Seemingly In Usual Health—Succeeded In Office by a Republican.

Baltimore, Md., May 31—Robert M. McLane, mayor of Baltimore and a bridegroom of about two weeks, committed suicide at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon by shooting himself through the head. Worry over the troubles resulting from the recent big fire and family differences growing out of his recent marriage are said to have caused mental aberration which led to the act.

The tragedy occured in the dressing room of the mayor's bed chamber at his home, 29 West Preston street. He died from the effects of the self inflicted wound at 4 45 p. m. At the time of the shooting Mrs. McLane was taking a nap in a front room on the same floor. Hearing a shot, she went into the dressing room to find the mayor dying on the floor with a bullet in his head.

Mrs. McLane gave the alarm. Messages were hurried to the members of Mr. McLane's family and the first to reach him was his father, James L. McLane. Dr. A. Trego Shertzer, who resides a few doors below the mayor's residence, was the first doctor on the scene. When he went into the room he found Mr. McLane lying on the floor in front of the bureau in a pool of blood. He was lying with his head under his left arm. Dr. Shertzer put pillows under his head and then made an examination of the wound. The pistol, which was a five-shooter, was lying under him with a white pistol holster. The bullet had penetrated the upper part of the right temple, and had made its exit a little behind and just above the left ear. Both wounds were bleeding profusely.

A statement was made to the coroner by Mrs. McLane, widow of the mayor. She said that a few minutes before the shooting, she and Mayor McLane were in her apartment talking. He appeared to be in very good spirits and they were laughing together over a package which he was tying.

The mayor remarked to Mrs. McLane that he wanted to put to rights some articles in a bureau drawer in another room, the one in which the shooting took place, and left the apartment where they had been together. In something less than five minutes Mrs. McLane heard a noise, which she thought was a shutter banging to, or some article downstairs had fallen. She went down one flight of stairs and called the maid, Lizzie Redchurch, asking her if anything had fallen downstairs.

The girl replied that she thought the noise was upstairs and Mrs. McLane suggested that the mayor had dropped a drawer. The maid went upstairs and rapped on the door, and receiving no answer entered. The mayor was lying on the floor in front of a wardrobe mirror. Lizzie Redchurch exclaimed to Mrs. McLane, who had followed her into the room:

"Mr. McLane had fallen and hurt himself."

As Mrs. McLane approached her husband she saw what had occurred. The pistol was lying on the floor by him. The mayor was breathing heavily, but was unconscious. She lifted his head and put a pillow under it, and immediately sent for medical assistance. Coroner Hayden said:

"As much as I regret to so state, I am obliged to give my official opinion that Mayor McLane committed suicide by shooting himself with a .32 caliber Smith and Wesson revolver. The powder marks on his head show that he pressed the revolver close to his head and pulled the trigger."

Mrs. McLane could throw no light on the mayor's death, and told the coroner that she did not know that her husband had a revolver.

Soon after Mayor McLane's inauguration came the big fire, which swept away millions in Baltimore's business interests. A period of reconstruction was necessary, and it was up to the mayor to formulate the necessary plans. He named a "burned district commission," laid the grounds for the passage by the legislature of a $6,000,000 loan to improve the docks and looked personally after the details in general. Because the work did not progress rapidly enough, and in many instances the personnel of the several commissions did not suit, the mayor was criticised in many quarters, and this, with his domestic difficulties, caused him to become morose.

To cap the climax, he engaged in a quarrel with his best friend, City Solicitor W. Cabell Bruce. This came about over a disagreement as to how the dock loan money should be expended. Bruce, in open council, threatened to resign and it was only after considerable difficulty that the affair was patched up. All this time the mayor was brooding over his home affairs and it was noticed that at times he was well-nigh distracted.

E. Clay Timanus, president of the second branch of the city council who will succeed to the mayorality under the city charter, is a Republican. He has twice been elected to the city council from his ward. During the absence from the city of the late mayor he was called upon on several occasions to administer the affairs of the municipality. Mr. Timanus received an ordinary public school education, and when fourteen years old was put to work in one of his father's mills. He served seven years as an apprentice, and was then taken into the firm, of which he is now the head. Mr. Timanus is a familiar figure on the floor of the chamber of commerce, where he has transacted business for nearly nineteen years. Mr. Timanus is now senior member of the firm of D. C. Timanus and brother.

Robert M. McLane, was the son of Mr. James L. McLane, president of the National Bank of Baltimore, and a nephew of the late Robert M. McLane, former governor of Maryland and United State Ambassador to France. He was but thirty-six years of age and the youngest mayor Baltimore ever had.

Mayor McLane was elected as a Democratic to the office of chief magistrate of the municipality in May of last year for a term of four years. Previous to his election as mayor he had for four years filled the office of State's attorney, in which he had distinguished himself by a zealous and intelligent discharge of his duties.

Mr. McLane was born in Baltimore and lived his entire life in one locality. He loved home life best, though he was a member of the Maryland, Baltimore, and other clubs.

Mr. McLane impressed every one he met with his sincerity and honesty of purpose. His dark brown eyes were expressive at once of sincerity, honesty, benevolence, intelligence, and affection. His profession was that of a mercantile lawyer, and he had an excellent law library.

His success in solving knotty problems during his short career was somewhat phenomenal. He feared neither criticism nor censure when he believed he was right.

Mayor McLane was not a practical politician, though Democratic to the core, as were his ancesters. He was more of the diplomat. He was a strict party man so far as he could go with safety.

During the progress of the great fire Mr. McLane was at several times the man of the hour, and on those two days there fell to the lot of this young municipal executive experiences such as would turn gray the heads of others much older than he.

From the beginning of the trying ordeal which presented itself the moment the blaze got away from the firemen, Mayor McLane conducted himself in a manner that has been admired throughout the country, and even on the other side of the Atlantic. His conclusions were intelligently reached, his judgment was good, his actions were deliberate, his manner manly throughout, and his personal bravery undaunted. His great mental and physical endurance and his pluck at all times won him applause. The example set by him doubtless had much to do with preventing disorder during and immediately after the fire. His subsequent stand that Baltimore would be able to take care of herself without the outside assistance kindly offer resulted in his receiving hundreds of complimentary messages from different parts of the United States and Europe.

The romantic circumstances of the wedding in Washington two weeks ago last Saturday, attracted much attention at the time. The wedding was a complete surprise to the mayor's social and political friends.

Mr. Lloyd Lowndes, Jr., of Cumberland, was in Oakland a few hours last Sunday afternoon.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No: 1273 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Isaiah Fuller, Plaintiff, vs Mary E. Fuller, Defendant.

The oject of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff, a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant.

The bill states that the parties were married in the year 1891, and that the defendant almost immediately deserted the plaintiff. That the desertion of the plaintiff by the defendant has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years before the bringing of this suit, that it is deliberate and final and beyond hope or expectation of a reconciliation.

The bill further states that the defendant is a non-resident of the Stat of Maryland, and prays for an order of publication against her.

It is thereupon, this 28th day of May, in the year 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county, give notice to the defendant, who is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, of the purpose of this suit, by publishing said notice once a week for four successive weeks before the 1st day of July, 1904, and warning the defendant to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 18th day of July, 1904, to show cause, if any she may have, why a decree ought not to be issued as prayed.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1276 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Mary Johnson, Plaintiff, vs. Alonzo S. Ellis, Defendant.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant, and to decree the marriage of the said plaintiff to the said defendant null and void.

The bill states that on the 24th day of December, 1900, the plaintiff was married to the said defendant, in Garrett county, with whom she resided until the month of March, 1902. That previous to said marriage to the plaintiff the said defendant was married to a certain Laura S. Jefferson, at Huntington, W. Va., on the 6th day of March, 1898, with whom the defendant lived until some time in the year 1900. That at the time of said marriage of the defendant to the plaintiff the defendant was previously married to the said Laura S. Jefferson, now Ellis, who is still living and from whom no divorce was had and that the said Laura Ellis was then and still is the lawful wife of said defendant. That the said defendant committed the crime of bigamy when he married the plaintiff, and that at the time of said marriage to the plaintiff she believed and was assured that said defendant was an unmarried and single man and had no knowledge of such prior marriage and that previous to the coming of said defendant into Garrett county the defendant was a resident of the State of West Virginia and that he was unknown to her until she met him in this county, where she resides. That she learned of said previous marriage some time in the month of March, 1902, that the defendant had a lawful wife living in the State of West Virginia and that she had left him and refused to live with him any longer. That one child has been born to them from the said marriage, viz: Raymond, who is three years of age. That she is advised that said marriage of the defendant is null and void. That the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant, that the said marriage of the defendant to the plaintiff be judicially decreed null and void, for the guardianship of said infant child, Raymond, and for general relief.

It is thereupon ordered, this 31st day of May, 1904, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 1st day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 18th day of July, 1904, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

In the Circuit Court for Garrett County. No. 1270 Equity.

John E. Winters, Plaintiff, vs. Anna A. Winters, Defendant.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant.

The bill states, that on the 10th day of June, 1900, the plaintiff was married to his wife, the said defendant, in Garrett county, with whom he resided until the 16th day of January, 1901. That the conduct of the plaintiff towards his wife, the said defendant, has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, and that the said defendant has, without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted the plaintiff and has declared her intention to live with him no longer; that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties is beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation and that the said plaintiff and defendant have had no children born to them from said marriage, and that said defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii and for general relief.

It is thereupon this 11th day of May, 1904, ordered, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 17th day of June, 1904, give notice to said defendant of the object and substance of the bill, warning her to appear in this court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 4th day of July, 1904, to show cause if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

The Oakland politicians don't visit us as they formerly did owing to the fact that they don't need our support in campaign years as they once did.

Our young people are not so frequently reported the "guests" of the Oakland youths as in former days.

Rev. Rose preached a very interesting and instructive discourse last Sunday morning to the "Red House" congregation using as the basis of his remarks St. Matthew 5: 14, 15, 16.

"Dan" Orendorf of near here, sold his farm a few days ago to Mr. Dodge of Terra Alta, W. Va. We are very sorry to loose from our community so valuable a citizen as Mr. Orendorf has proved to be We have found him intelligent, honest and very self-reliant.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Lohr and little daughter, of Bittinger, came up on Friday and Sundaved with "Grandma" Brenninger, of this place, returning home Monday.

Communion services will be conducted at St. John Evangelical Lutheran church on Sunday, the 12 inst., at three o'clock, by the pastor, Rev. Rose.

Miss May Hutson, who has been quite ill for the past several days, is slowly improving in health.

A new and up-to-date church building is badly needed by the Lutheran congregation at the Red House. Then other improvements could be very advantageously added.

Miss Ethel Hutson returned home last Saturday, after a visit of three weeks to friends and relatives in Grafton, Fairmont and other West Virginia towns.

The Oakland Normal.

The "Beauty of Literature, and How to Find It" was very ably discussed on last Friday afternoon by Prof. Ed. A. Browning, the County School Superintendent. Prof. Browning first discussed the subject of Literature and the manner in which it should be presented to a class, so that the pupils could grasp the thoughts and see the beauty contained in them, which is very often deeply hidden. After this had been elaborated on, the lecturer read and analyzed a poem, picturing the thoughts of the author to the students. The object of Prof. Browning was to aid the teachers in the presentation of the subject to their pupils, and he unquestionably accomplished his puspose.

KENDALL.

James Mead, a machinist from the Climax Manufacturing Company, Corry, Penn'a., has been working for the Yough Manor Lumber Company repairing locomotives and other machinery.

J. H. Henderson, sales manager for the H. C. Huston Lumber Co., Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, was here one day last week.

Roy W. Shanks, assistant superintendent of the Yough Manor Lumber Company, spent several days last week in Baltimore in attendence upon United States Court.

Chas. Whitmore, yard superintendent and superintendent of the Yough Manor mill at this place, has been honored by the Board of Education of Garrett county, by appointment on the board to trustees for the public schools of this place. Mr. Whitmore takes an active interest in the school system of this state and we are assured that he will procure the best teaching talent for our schools that can be.

Mrs. Edwards, wife of Chas. Edwards, sawyer on the large mill at this place, was burial last Tuesday. Mrs. Edwards, who died of comsumption, was ill for more than a year and her death was expected weeks before it occurred. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband and a family of small children.

Mr. F. F. Goss, of Oakland, who has large contracting interests with the Yough Manor Lumber Company, presented to Hon. S. A. Kendall, President of the company, a full blooded Water Spaniel. Mr. Kendall appreciates it very much and has taken the dog to his summer home in Pennsylvania for his two young sons.

Henry Krug and his brother George are taking in the sights at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, St. Louis.

Miss Pearl Ringer of this place, left Tuesday for Addison, Penn'a., to live with the family of Robert E. Ross.

F. C. Vough, representing T. C. Jenkins & Co., wholesale grocers, Pittsburg, was here Thursday looking after trade for his firm.

Truman J. Root, than whom there is no more congenial soul living, was a visitor to this berg one day last week. Mr. Root, who is a staunch Democrat, thinks that Roosevelt will be his own successor, and Trum knows.

BRIDE HELD MOB IN CHECK

But When She Retired The Bull Ring At St. Louis Was Burned To The Ground.

Senora Manuel Cervera, who kept cool during the World's Fair riot on Sunday afternoon and held a mob of 700 men and boys at bay, when they wanted to do violence to the promoters and principals of the bull fight which had been postponed after the money had been collected, is an Baltimore girl, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Abell, who a number of years ago resided in Oakland where Mr. Abell established The Gazette which later be came THE REPUBLICAN. Mr. and Mrs. Abell now live at 1401 N. Washington street, Baltimore.

Senora Cervera was born in Baltimore 26 years ago and was educated at Notre Dame. Shortly after leaving the school she went to New York to study for the grand opera, and when 20 years of age sailed for Europe with an opera company. One day while with her company in Southern Spain she attended a bull fight, and as she sat among the spectators she became fascinated with the famous matador, Manuel Cervera, nephew of Admiral Cervera of the Spanish Navy. The young Spaniard was at the time the hero of the bull ring in Spain and had vanquished more animals than any other young man of his age. Cervera in turn attended the opera that night and the attraction became mutual. Time passed and Miss Abell returned to the United States, from which place she exchanged letters with the dashing young Spaniard. A few months later Cervera came to this country, and shortly afterwards engaged as a bull fighter in Venezuela, Cuba and Mexico.

Recently Miss Abell's company was in El Paso, Texas, and there she left the glare of the footlights to become the bride of a matador.

When the World's Fair opened, arrangments were made by which the matador was to exhibit in a bull fight at St. Louis, and the first date was fixed for last Sunday. Sunday afternoon a crowd of 700 people had gathered and paid admission, when they learned that the fight could not come off on account of police interference. Immediately there was a rush for the box office, which the mob found barricaded, as the Norris Amusement Company, under the direction of which the fight was to be conducted, claimed that it would be able to secure the sanction of the authorities as soon as it gave evidence that the brutal features of the ordinary Spanish bull fight were to be eliminated. This did not satisfy the mob, and the assualt on the office was renewed. At this junction Senora Cervera appeared in the presence of the angered crowd, and, with cool deliberation, ordered it to stand back. Her determined demeanor had its effect, and the crowd drew aside as she walked in its midst. Thinking the trouble had been quieted, a few minutes later she retired. As soon as she had gone bricks and other missiles began flying thick and fast, while some of the more desperate set fire to the exhibition stand and had it not been for the prompt arrival of the fire engines many of the surrounding Exposition structures might have been destroyed.

Orders Recount Of All The Precincts.

Judge A. Hunter Boyd yesterday ordered a recount in the 31 remaining precincts of this county after hearing the arguments of the attorneys in the Robb-Wilson contested election case. The attorneys for Mr. Wilson entered objections as to the jurisdiction of the court in the cause, and the objection was overruled. The court stated that the recount in the ten contested precincts had overcome the majority of six votes by which Mr. Wilson had been returned elected, and in order that it might be clearly shown who is elected it would be necessary that the remaining precincts should also be recounted. The recount of the ten precincts changed from a majority of six votes for Wilson to a majority of 58 votes for Robb. —Cumberland News.

DECORATION DAY AT DEER PARK.

The Occasion Appropriately Observed By the Veterans.

After copious showers of rain which has gladdened the hearts of our farmers and after a pleasant Memorial day on the 30th ulto., this finds us scribbling some "jottings" to THE REPUBLICAN on this first day of June, 1904, and whilst still sad after the decoration of our own dear dead relatives' graves, and mingled our tears with others, so recently bereft of loved ones, and yet other sad news reach us, as we glanced over our daily paper and see the head lines, "Mayor McLane Suicide," and Baltimore's young mayor takes his own life.

Yet many things, on the past Memorial day has gladdened our hearts, the meeting of a few of the veterans. Whilst their heads are beginning to silver over and their steps not as elastic, in this 20th century as it was in the 19th, yet as they marched to the cemetery to the quick and beautiful strains of music by the Deer Park Cornet Band, they felt like boys again and the 39 years that has passed since the great struggle that shook this great continent, closed, seemed but as a few dreams by nights, and the social time on the grounds at 2 o'clock p. m., and after a free lunch to the veterans, they felt so happy that when the grapophone struck up an old time familiar tune, one of the old soldiers, although past the meridian of life and going down the western slope of time to him, got out on the green sward and cut the old time "Pigeon Wing" with all the grace and vigor of his youthful days.

The exercises at the grounds and the program of the day as proposed by the young ladies committee, was appropriately carried out, and the music by our young band boys was simply grand, and the young ladies and gentlemen composing the "Armstead choir" added greatly to the musical part of the evening and we were favored with the presence of the pastor of the M. E. church, who was also one of the boys that wore the blue and he led in the Devotionial part of the program, and again we were favored with the presence of that genial gentleman from Baltimore, who has his beautiful summer home here, in the suburbs of our mountain town, called "Uplands," the Hon. G. W. Haulenbeek, the efficient trusted official of the Law Department of the B. & O. railroad, who was the first speaker, and in his graceful way, said some things to his comrades, that did them good and at the same time paid tribute to the charms of Deer Park, that he loves so well, and at the same time complimenting the Deer Park Band and the Armstead choir for the delicious music.

The next speaker was Rev. H. E. Friend, who was in his usual happy mood and made a grand speech, so full of conciliating words, calculated to heal all wounds (if any exist) of sectional strife, and paying tribute to those who wore the blue and gray alike, and he, although an impromtu address, exaulted himself as a speaker, even to that of a preacher and he being an ex-soldier of the Maryland P. H. Brigade, and most of the ex-soldiers present belonged to the same brigade. His address was received with great applause

Modesty forbids us to personate the one who presided at this demonstration but will say that being the only ex-Confederate soldier present, and through the courtesy of the members of the band was selected to preside and under embarassing circumstances was in the absence of one of the speakers pressed in to service by one of the ex-Federal soldiers to make the closing address, saddened by the rement bereavement of a dear young friend, a member of a close neighbor's family, and the sad scenes of that funeral still fresh in his mind, and the morning exercises at the cemetery, strewing love emblems on the graves of an elder brother, a dear sister, and other relatives, cast such a gloom that what was said in the rambling closing remarks, deponent saith not.

After exercises in the grove ended the announcement was made that a grand parade of the Cornet Band would take place at 6 o'clock sharp and an entertainment in the town hall at night.

To tell of this parade is beyond words to express, and could only be seen to be appreciated, the costumes of the members, the comic features of the march with Sargent John Landis acting as drum major in the costume of a "Jap." The fatigue suit of one of the students of the Maryland Agricultural College and his antic ways on the march, and the young student of Eastern School of Telegraphy, of Lebanon, Pa., costumed as a Chinaman, with his "pigtail" whirling in the breeze. The four charming young ladies costumed in fantastic style, marching in rear of "The Drum Major" and the major with his courtly bearing swinging his baton and all the other members of the band equally costumed, that space forbids to mention, made a scene so comic and grand that we don't wonder at the hundred that filled the side-walk, and laughed to their heart's content. And we don't wonder, at the success at the Hall at night where refreshments were served, and well appointed exercises on the stage carried out as promised. And the financial receipts from the packed house went far beyond the sanguine expectations of the committee.

Taking the day's proceedings as a whole in its different phases, gotten up by home talent in our little village, we simply say it was a grand success, and best of all not one thing done or said to mar the intercourse of the day—thanks to the Exit Saloon influence. It closed as the most successful occasion in the history of our town.

Gorman's Name on Marble Column.

Workmen engaged in moving some hangings in the Supreme Court room in the Capitol at Washington recently discovered the name "Arihur P. Gorman" cut in one of the marble columns. In 1852 the present Supreme Courtroom was the Senate chamber, and "Arthur P. Gorman" had just been appointed a Senate page. This work with his penknife indicates assurance on the part of this 13-year-old Maryland youngster, remarkable even in a Senate page boy, and Senate page boys as a class fear neither men, princes, nor potentates, nor do they respect any other power than the Sergeant-at-Arms. But few of them deface the Capitol with their penknives in quite such a conspicuous fashion. "Arthur P. Gorman" at 12, however evidently intended to miss no opportunities to leave an impression of his presence behind him. He is said to have been no paragon as a page boy, but a very ordinary, active, mischievous youngster.

WHAT DEMOCRATIC SUCCESS MEANS.

The interest of the Democratic leaders in trying to make it appear that the panic under the last Cleveland administration was due to the Republicans is at least amusing. The Democrats realize that the people will not forget the awful punishment they suffered as a result of the Democrats securing control of the Government for the first time since the war.

During Cleveland's first administration the Democrats did not have control of both branches of Congress and were unable to do anything in the way of partisan legislation. But they had full control in Cleveland's last administration with disastrous results. Should they again secure control there would in all probability be a repetition of the depression and starvation that followed the Democratic inauguration in March, 1893. The change that resulted can well be recalled in the following extract from the annual review of R. G. Dun & Company, an impartial commercial agency—

"Starting with the largest trade ever known, mills crowded with work and all business stimulated by high hopes, the year of 1893 has proved, in sudden shrinkage of trade, in commercial disasters, and depression of industries, the worst for fifty years. What the final results of the panic in 1837 were, the scanty records of that time do not clearly show. The year closes with the prices of many products the lowest ever known with millions of workers seeking in vain for work, and with charity laboring to keep back suffering and starvation in all our cities."

A PESSIMIST PROFESSOR.

The University of Chicago can unusually be relied upon to furnish absurd views on current subjects of interest, and one Prof. Star supplies more than his share in this line. He is quoted as saying that if Japan is successful in the war with Russia, "the doom of the white races will be sealed."

He talks further foolishness thus: "This is war of races and not of nations Every race has its day, just as every dog has its day. The day of the white race is almost past. England is on its last legs. Statistics show that one child of every hundred of English birth becomes a lunatic. The country is exhausted and its strength is on the wane. The same thing is true all over Europe."

Does this half baked Chicago professor suppose that all the powers of Europe would have declared their neutrality if the Russo-Japanese war were a war of races instead of a war of nations? He has read history and studied conditions to little purpose if he imagines the white races of the earth are in any real danger from other races.

A professor's chair is the last place in which to place a pessimist.

TWENTY-FIVE cent wool sounds good to the farmers of Harrison county, and its paralyzing to the Democratic calamity howler in this presidential campaign. The Republican party always was favorable to the farmer who raises sheep and has wool to sell. That party has always seen to it that a condition of prosperity prevails that puts the price of wool, where the farmer can afford to grow it, and the news that wool this year is worth 25 cents a pound tends to show the farmer that that political party is keeping up its record in the matter of good prices for wool and that there is to be no retrogression this year but to the contrary an advance in the right direction. Locally this news comes from R. T. Lowndes, who has opened up the wool buying season in Harrison county and adjoining counties. He is paying 25 cents a pound for it delivered at his warehouses in this city, and 24 cents a pound at the farmer's door. This is considered a good price.—Clarksburg Telegram.

Humorist Number of the Book of the Royal Blue.

TheMay number "Book of the Royal Blue," published by the Passenger Department of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has been devoted to contributions from the American Press Humorists and Cartoonists. It is full of unique features and unlike the average magazine, is an all-star publication containing contributions from fifty of the best known newspaper humorists and thirty of the popular cartoonists of the country.

Each humorist is portrayed in some characteristic manner by the cartoonist who has worked with him some time and know his hobbies; and a most remarkable collection of drawings has resulted.

The majority of the big daily newspapers are represented.

At the time of the Baltimore fire this magazine issued a special edition, which was quickly followed by two more editions, which were completely wiped out in two or three days.

The humorist edition is limited, and those desiring copies are requested to mail ten cents to D. B. Martin, Manager Passenger Traffic Baltimore & Ohio R. R., Baltimore, at earliest possible date. The Magazine will be sent to any address, regularly, for 50 cents per annum.

PLATFORM AMUSES SENATOR M'COMAS

Considers Work of Democratic State Convention.

CONCERNING MR. ROOSEVELT

Republican Leader Says He Fails to Find Anything in the Democratic Platform—Charges Against the President Are Unfounded.

United States Senator McComas was asked what he thought of the Democratic platform adopted by the Maryland state convention.

His reply was "What is there in it? I see nothing except a plan reaffirmance of Bryan's paramount issue. Independance for the Filipino. What is to be done with the Visayans, the Moros, the Negretos, and the millions who are not Filipinos is not said. I assume that they mean by Filipinos the incongruous group of civilized and uncivilized peoples in the island, and that they want a republic in six months established like Cuba, but, unlike Cuba, to end in a welter of bloodshed and anarchy. The platform does distinctly pledge us this—all else is vague: On the isthmian canal question I interpret the plank to be a surrender to the triumphant administration policy which has already begun the isthmian canal.

"We are accustomed to the Democratic cry for economy and retrenchment when not in office. The truth is, expenditures are liberal, but all are for the public interests and thus defensible; so defensible that the platform does not attack them by a single specification

"The wide spread corruption in the department" must mean the offenders in the postal department; but these are either undergoing sentence or trial; the innocent will be vindicated and the guilty relentlessly punished. President Roosevelt has not halted one moment. No new man could do better than Roosevelt's best.

"The tariff plank, I think, requires to be read a great many times before any man of average intelligence can feel sure that he knows what it means.

The plank on the usurpation by President Roosevelt of legislative and judicial power is unfounded and absurd. No member of the convention would say the President had usurped judicial power in any instance. The Republicans in the House and Senate will all testify that no President has made less use of the veto and no President has so readily bowed to the will of Congress in its legislative sphere. Except President McKinley I can recall no President who has kept so closely in touch with both houses of Congress as President Roosevelt has done.

"Now I have reviewed the whole platform. If there is anything else in it, show it to me. Declamation, evasion and no distinct pledge. Nothing for the public credit for sound money; nothing for the national honor; nothing definite about revenue legislation."

Senator McComas added musingly: "William C. Whitney was a very able man. He was the ablest and wisest of Democrats when he went to his grave. How true was his last notabe saying: 'The Democratic party has no issue and no man.'

"The New York, Ohio and Maryland platforms show the Democratic party has no issue and St. Louis will reveal that it has no man who will not be defeated by Roosevelt, who is sincere, honest, clean and courageous."

A Storm at Bloomington

The most violent and disastrous rain storm that ever visited this end of Garrett county, stuck the Chestnut Grove settlement, last Wednesday afternoon, destroying growing crops of grain and washing great furrows in freshly ploughed fields.

Mr. Martin Tichnell is the greatest sufferer from the effects of the storm as his entire oat crop was washed away, and his corn field devastated entirely. James Davis is also a looser and will be obliged to replant his corn field as not a single hill remains. Wilber Tasker suffered similar loss. The soil in many fields was washed away and what was a growing field of grain a few days ago, now looks a great deal like a river bottom, nothing but stone and rocks. The tender and growing foliage of the trees was stripped from them and strewn along the roads. The storm seemed to be local in its extent ½ mile wide by 2 miles long resulted in a cloud burst in its character.—Bloomington Corr. Piedmont Independent.

GOD SAVE THE KING

By Henry Carey

THIS song, the most popular national hymn of Great Britain, is sung to the tune appropriated by us for our "America." The words are not of high merit, considered as poetry, but they never fail to stir the British heart. Of course, when a woman occupies the throne the word "queen" is substituted for "king" and the personal pronouns are changed to correspond. "God Save the King" has been attributed to "rare Ben" Jonson, but it is held by most critics that the words were written by Henry Carey, who died in 1743. Carey left behind him another monument in the popular song "Sally In Our Alley."

GOD save our gracious king!
Long live our noble king!
God save the king!
Send him victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us,
God save the king!

O Lord our God, arise,
Scatter his enemies,
And make them fall;
Confound their politics,
Frustrate their knavish tricks;
On him our hopes we fix,
God save us all!

Thy choicest gifts in store
On him be pleased to pour;
Long may he reign.
May he defend our laws,
And ever give us cause,
To sing with heart and voice—
God save the king.

THE CURSE ON THE TRAITOR

By Thomas Moore

OH, for a tongue to curse the slave
Whose treason, like a deadly blight,
Comes o'er the councils of the brave,
And blasts them in their hour of might!
May life's unblessed cup for him
Be drugged with treacheries to the brim—
With hopes that but allure to fly,
With joys that vanish while he sips,
Like Dead Sea fruits, that tempt the eye,
But turn to ashes on the lips!
His country's curse, his children's shame,
Outcasts of virtue, peace and fame,
May he, at last, with lips of flame
On the parched desert thirsting die—
While lakes that shone in mockery nigh
Are fading off, untouched, untasted,
Like the once glorious hopes he blasted!
And, when from earth his spirit flies,
Just Prophet, let the damned one dwell
Full in the sight of Paradise,
Beholding Heaven, and feeling Hell!

TELL ME, YE WINGED WINDS

By Charles Mackay

"IF any gentle hearted, imaginative person would have the springs of childhood's purest feelings touched and the aspirations of manhood's noblest moods strengthened, let him read the sweet poems of Charles Mackay. If any strong souled reformer, battling with evil times and selfish men, would feed the fountains of his faith and charity and brighten the visions of his choicest hours, let him read the glorious poems of Charles Mackay."

TELL me, ye winged winds,
That round my pathway roar,
Do ye not know some spot
Where mortals weep no more?
Some lone and pleasant dell,
Some valley in the west,
Where free from toil and pain,
The weary soul may rest?
The loud wind dwindled to a whisper low,
And sighed for pity as it answered—"No."

Tell me, thou mighty deep,
Whose billows round me play,
Know'st thou some favored spot,
Some island far away,
Where weary man may find
The bliss for which he sighs—
Where sorrow never lives
And friendship never dies?
The loud waves, rolling in perpetual flow,
Stopped for awhile, and sighed to answer—"No."

And thou, serenest moon,
That, with such lovely face
Dost look upon the earth,
Asleep in night's embrace;
Tell me, in all thy round
Hast thou not seen some spot
Where miserable man
May find a happier lot!
Behind a cloud the moon withdrew in woe,
And a voice, sweet but sad, responded—"No."

Tell me, my secret soul,
Oh, tell me, Hope and Faith,
Is there no resting-place
From sorrow, sin and death;
Is there no happy spot
Where mortals may be blest,
Where grief may find a balm,
And weariness a rest?
Faith, Hope and Love, best boons to mortals given,
Waved their bright wings, and whispered—"Yes, in heaven!"

THE REWARD OF SERVICE

By Elizabeth Barrett Browning

AN eminent critic says of Mrs. Browning and her work: "In melodiousness and splendor of poetic gift Mrs. Browning stands first among women. She may not have the knowledge of life, the insight into character, the comprehensiveness of some, but we must all agree that a poet's far more essential qualities are hers—usefulness, fervor, a noble aspiration and, above all, a tender, far-reaching nature, loving and beloved, and touching the hearts of her readers with some virtue from its depths."

THE sweetest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds both great and small,
Are close knit strands of an unbroken thread,
Where love ennobles all,
The world may sound no trumpets, ring no bells;
The Book of Life the shining record tells.

Thy love shall chant its own beatitudes
After its own life working. A child's kiss
Set on thy singing lips shall make thee glad;
A poor man served by thee shall make thee rich;
A sick man helped by thee shall make thee strong;
Thou shalt be served thyself by every sense
Of service which thou renderest.

Oakland Model Steam Bakery

To my Patrons and the Public:

Owing to the steady increase in my business and the determination to give my customers the best service and goods that can be produced anywhere, I have installed in my Bakery an up-to-the-minute steam plant by which the product of my establishment is more than doubled and in consequence no delay is anticipated in putting upon the market twice daily fresh, nutritious Bread, Cakes, Pies, etc.

The dough mixer in my establishment has a capacity of three barrels which is driven by an engine and is of the latest pattern and a model in every respect. The dough is mixed by this machine and turned upon the table without being touched by the hands, thus ensuring better mixed bread and cleanliness in every respect. "Cleanliness" is our motto.

I have also installed a power ice cream machine and am better prepared than heretofore to manufacture Ice Cream and sell at wholesale and retail on the shortest notice.

I respectfully invite the public to inspect my plant.

Very truly yours, HENRY LAUER.

HOW TO BUY.

J. M. Davis & Sons' is the Place to Buy.

Hardware Our stock of goods is unusually large, especially in Builders' Hardware, Edge Tools, Garden Tools, Shovels, Forks, Spades, Locks, Hinges, Cut and Wire Nails, Barb and Smoothe Wire, Brushes of all kinds, Woodenware, etc. We have combined with our shelf goods a choice lot of Cutlery, Table Knives, Butcher Knives, Carving Knives, Razors, Silver Plated Ware, Door Bells, School Bells, Hand Bells, etc., besides a great variety of articles usually handled in a full-stocked Hardware Store. Most of our goods are bought direct from the manufacturers and will be offered at very moderate prices. The party who occasionally offers a few leading articles at a very low price, or less than cost, to draw trade, is not usually as much benefit to the community as the one who keeps up a constant supply of the best goods and can fill an order at the market value when the goods are needed. In nearly all lines the merchant must make the greater part of his profits in buying, not, however, by selecting a cheap class of goods, but in getting the very best at the lowest inside figure, so that first-class goods may be supplied at reasonable prices.

Stoves We have a stock on hand of more than one hundred stoves of all kinds, sizes and prices, running from a $10.00 Cook Stove to a $40.00 Steel Range, and Heating Stoves from $5.00 to $20.00. The above has been selected with the greatest care, not only in regard to price, but to the requirements needed for the trade in this part of our country. Stoves are manufactured for the section of country in which they are sold, and to suit the kind of fuel used, and prices are fixed by the manufacturer according to quality, style and finish. The stove business is a trade in itself and requires years of experience to know when you have the best goods that can be bought for the money, and best suited to the trade you are supplying. If you contemplate buying a stove of any kind, call and look our line over before buying. We think we can please any and all both as to price and kind.

Dishes This line we have given a great deal of time and attention to during the past five years, so that we have today a stock that cannot help pleasing any one, in both imported and American goods, running in prices from $4.50 for Dinner Set of American goods to a large decorated English Set that we are offering at prices as low as the same goods are sold anywhere. We also carry a very desirable line of Fancy China Novelties, that are equal to those found in many of our large towns and cities. Call and be convinced what we can do for you in this line.

Glassware Our counters are full of all kinds of glassware of the latest and most approved shapes including a line of heavy deep cuts that look so much like cut glass that one can hardly tell it from the genuine.

Washing Machines We are agents for the White Lily, which was put on the market some 18 months ago, and that stands today the largest manufacture of any one style of rotary Washing Machines in the world. This is a very broad statement when you take into consideration that they are practically a baby concern just 18 months old, but the company claims that it can back back up this statement with ample proof. At no time have they been able to supply the demand. The machine is sold on a guarantee to give satisfaction, and any ten year old child can operate it. Send for circulars showing cuts, styles and price of the most wonderful Washer ever made, and makes wash day what it should be, a pleasure instead of a drudge to the housewife. Price, $7.50; Wringers, $1.50 to $3.50.

Bread Maker The Universal Three Minute Break Maker is so simple in construction that the housekeeper's first thought is that the claims made for it are extavagant, but a trial will remove all doubts. No housekeeper who has once used it will ever be content to go back to the old, laborious, disagreeable way of making bread by hand. The reasonable price at which it is sold places it within the reach of every family.

Sewing Machines Two years ago we commenced selling the New Royal Sewing Machine, contracting direct with the manufacturer, and have the first one yet to find any fault with one of these machines, they are all guaranteed for 5 years, made with the latest improved attachments, and in style and finish cannot be excelled. COLONEL MONROE

The Lincolnville Philosopher Pictures the Great City of the Immediate Future

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick Upham Adams

"I'M mighty curious to know what rapid transit has to do with people falling in love and getting married and raising children and all that sort of thing," said Postmaster Jenkins as he assisted Colonel Monroe with his coat and placed a chair near the stove for Judge Sawyer. "You said last week that rapid transit was the remedy. I've been thinking about it ever since, and blamed if I can figure it out. I asked Flannagan, the brakeman."

"What did Flannagan say?" asked Colonel Monroe, with a twinkle in his eye.

"He said it was easy," replied Jenkins. "He said that with rapid transit people could get to the divorce courts quicker. Is that the answer?" The postmaster looked doubtfully at the colonel.

"Flannagan is facetious," laughed Colonel Monroe. "The problem is to get our young folks before a preacher and not before a divorce judge. Let me light a cigar and I'll attempt to explain."

Colonel Monroe tendered a well worn case to Judge Sawyer, and both smoked for a few minutes in contented silence.

"I presume I'm a confirmed optimist," the colonel said. "I cannot convince myself that everything is going to the bad, or that this old earth of ours is whirling in the wrong direction. Given a fair show, the average man or woman will do the right rather than the wrong thing. Despite all the croakers to the contrary, this is a fact. Justice and kindness are normal instincts, and crimes are bred only amid artificial surroundings. Therefore, whenever I see any considerable faction transgressing a natural or moral law I hesitate to blame them as individuals, but look about for the condition or institution which is to blame. Show me a general tendency toward misdoing, and I'll name to you a faulty condition or an imperfect social institution."

"Am I to infer that you consider marriage a faulty institution?" asked the judge, looking searchingly at Colonel Monroe.

"On the contrary, I'm its stanch defender and certainly should be," was the reply. "I will come directly at the point I desire to make. In my opinion, the stupendous growth of our cities at the expense of the country districts is responsible for the decadence of marriage and the decrease in the American birth rate. In 1790 out of each thousand of the population only thirty-four lived in cities. A hundred years later 291 out of each thousand were crowded in cities, and today the number is at least 320. There was no cry of 'race suicide' a hundred years ago. No statesman foresaw that a time would come when nearly one-third of the people would be massed around factories. All this has happened because of the perfection of the machine. Like huge magnets, the massed factories have drawn thousands from the farm, stacking them into tenement houses and apartment buildings until one small block contains the population of a rural county. And as the factories increased in size and number the tenement houses have towered higher. The modest dwelling, with its lawn and flowers, has disappeared. In such an environment, where the sky is seen only as a rift between solid walls of masonry, crime, ignorance, disease and pauperism have increased, and marriage, between Americans at least, has decreased. The poorer class of emigrants is content to raise a family in such an environment, but not so with the young man who was raised on a farm or who once knew the delights of life where one can observe the beauties of nature."

"Foreigners don't care where they live or what they eat," declared Postmaster Jenkins. "There ought to be a law passed keeping out all foreigners and sending back what's over here."

"Your remedy is rather drastic," remarked Colonel Monroe. "I've observed before this that the more conservative a man imagines himself to be the more radical is his remedy when he deems one necessary. The emigrant has little to do with this problem. The machine evolved it, and the machine will solve it. Some day a poet will write an epic on the machine and immortalize his name."

"He will probably compose it on a typewriter," said Judge Sawyer, smiling. "Can you imagine a typewritten epic, colonel?"

"Hardly," laughed Colonel Monroe. "That's a very bad joke, and I'm surprised at you, judge. But let me continue. The people have massed in the cities and near the factories because they had to. Consider the strides that transportation has made in this country. Fifteen years ago there were no means of urban transit other than horse cars available to the workingman, and these conveyed him to no point where he could secure cheap rents. He therefore had to live within walking distance of his factory, or, if a clerk, within easy reach of his store or office. This fact is responsible for the geographical plan on which the average American city is constructed. There is a nucleus of factories, stores, office buildings and public structures, surrounded by two well defined concentric areas. The poorer classes occupy the inner one and converge toward the center. Surrounding them are the various grades of the well to do, stretching away to the open country. In most cities the prosperous have their eyes, ears and nostrils offended whenever they are compelled to pass through the squalid zone which separates residential property from productive wealth. Thus we have a center with three circles drawn from it. The first includes the business quarter and a large part of the manufacturing and employing district, the second limits the distance within which the workers can go back and forth from work, and the third is the residential section of the property class and their higher salaried employees and retainers. There are various modifications of this plan, and the edges are serrated, but all large cities are modeled on it. Do I make myself plain?"

"I understand you perfectly," said Judge Sawyer, "and confess that I never observed how closely that plan has been evolved."

Colonel Monroe traced the three circles on a pad of paper and then drew a fourth one of much greater radius.

"It is in this outer circle, beyond the present limits of our cities—in the open country—that our great middle class belongs," he said. "The day is at hand when for a few pennies the wage earner, or the man drawing a moderate salary, can travel from his place of employment to some beautiful suburb in half an hour or less. The electrical train of tomorrow will run at speeds of from sixty to ninety miles an hour with ease and safety. Cheap and rapid electrical transportation is now clearly in prospect in every large city of the country and will make available for residence purposes the vast tracts within fifty miles of the respective centers of these cities. There will be an explosion—an electrical explosion—of these pent up forces which will hurl them far beyond the existing boundaries of the cities. It is the most splendid promise that material progress holds out to our crowded millions."

"I fear you are too sanguine," said Judge Sawyer after a pause. "There are great changes impending, beyond a doubt, but I am afraid there will always remain sections like the east side of New York and the poverty infested quarters of Chicago. Your theory is pleasing, but it may not work out as you hope."

"Like most of my theories, it has already been demonstrated," retorted Colonel Monroe. "The explosion has occurred in London. In that vast city 3,000,000 people work in the center of the city during the day and scatter over 2,000 square miles of territory at night, and London has only begun to perfect rapid transit. It may be true that criminal and pauper classes will cling to the center, but when once the movement is under way they will not be tolerated as settlements. The city proper will be devoted mainly to business, manufacturing and amusements, and will be a place of residence only to those citizens of leisure and luxury who can keep pace with fashion. It will be a wilderness of hotels and bachelor apartments—the show section of the metropolis—magnificent enough, no doubt, but childless, save for some occasional prattler, and out beyond this section of commerce and pleasure will live the men and women who do the world's work."

"Such a happy result would solve not only the marriage problem, but all others arising from the congestion of population," said Judge Sawyer. "You have drawn a beautiful picture and I hope the near future will realize it. It would be a revival of the village form of life on a large scale. We should have all the advantages of a metropolis and all the quiet delights of a secluded district. There would be no janitors to frown against children, and the little ones would be miles from the roar of the streets and the foul air of the present tenement districts. I hope you are a true prophet, colonel."

"I firmly believe that the pending improvements in methods of rapid transit will do more to solve our municipal problems than all the laws which have been forced from legislators," said Colonel Monroe. "The black spots on our maps will be erased. When we give young men and young women a chance to meet and live in God's pure air there will be no need to sound a warning against 'race suicide.' The tenement houses and the apartment buildings are the twin destroyers of motherhood and childhood. They find their origin in the high price of city real estate, as a result of inadequate means of transit. When you annihilate distance you destroy monopoly in land and kill the germs of congestion. Rapid transit will bring us nearer the day when the mill exists for the man, and not the man for the mill."

"Those foreigners won't move out into the country," declared Postmaster Jenkins. "Besides, in New York, Tammany won't let them."

IT WILL BE IGNORED.

An indictment of the Republican party of the United States by a convention of Maryland Democrats, at this period of the country's history, is an almost farcical proceeding. And yet that is about what can be said of the resolutions adopted and the speeches made at the Democratic convention in Baltimore last week. Little or nothing that has been done under Republican administration escaped animadversion and adverse criticism, and the Democratic solons declaimed and resolved in dreary platitudes, that the Democratic party, of which it can be truthfully said that it advocated the payment of the public debt in irredeemable greenbacks; that it repeatedly voted that a 50-cent dollar has as much purchasing power as a 100-cent one; that free-trade is better than protection; that it made Maryland politics a stench in the nostrils of decent people for thirty years, and that from 1893 to 1897 it brought the country to the very verge of financial wreck and ruin, is the party to reform abuses and deliver the land from existing abuses—abuses which, according to this indictment, are almost without limit.

It is not too much to expect that the people will return this Democratic indictment "ignoramus," at the election in November. They had the experience of a Democratic administration from 1893 till 1897, which, in its consequences, make its repetition most undesirable to people who prefer prosperity to adversity. The history of that period is yet too fresh in the minds of all, except the very young, to be lightly put aside as of no consequence in the affairs of the country. There is many a business man whose career of prosperity was ruthlessly cut short by the action of the tariff tinkers elected in 1892, and who does not desire to see a return of the stagnation which marked almost every line of industry during that era.

The contrast between the prosperity of today and the adversity which marked the four years of Mr. Cleveland's last administration is about the best answer that can be given to Maryland Democrats, or Democrats of any part of the country, who undertake to arraign and condemn the Republican party, which has administered the government and done much to make the country great, as well as prosperous, during the last seven years and more. And the people are not likely to forget it.

AN OLD TENENT SAVED.

Before adjourning the other day the Methodist General Conference, which had been in session in Los Angeles, California, for several weeks, decided that there should be no change in the attitude of the church toward dancing, card-playing and theatre-going. Early in the session the question of modifying the church discipline in relation to these amusements had been referred to a committee, and for a time it seemed as if the General Conference would hereafter permit their members to indulge in them. The proposition was more in the form of a compromise. The church would not endorse these forms of amusement, but the church discipline would be so amended as to permit members who participate in them to retain their church membership. It was held that other churches permit their members more liberty and freedom in these directions, and that because of the arbitrary position of the church many persons connected themselves with other denominations, and that the cause of Methodism was thereby being injured.

To us it seems the General Conference did the only thing consistent with the Methodist faith and doctrine when it decided to continue its opposition and antagonism to those amusements which the church has so long decried. We do not recall another orthodox body of any denomination which has ever considered the propriety of surrendering a fundamental principle to public clamor and with a view to increasing the membership. It may be true—and we believe it is—that the church which imposes the fewer restrictions upon their members in matters of personal liberty and individual freedom is more attractive to those who feel that they should unite with some religious body but who do not care to sacrifice all the pleasure the world seems to hold for them in the doing of it. Yet whatever liberties are bestowed by the various denominations they are those prescribed by the church rules and discipline of long standing, and have not been regulated to please the changing moods and fancies of the non-members. The Methodists have been unalterably opposed to certain forms of amusement during all their history, and the church since the days of its founding by Wesley has never countenanced in any degree dancing, card-playing and theatre-going.

A departure from this established rule—one, too, which has made the Methodist stand out conspicuously among the religious sects in the controversy along these lines—would have done the cause an irreparable injury. It would have been a concession to the clamor of outsiders which would have detracted from the dignity and consistency of the church, while it may have added a few thousands to the church rolls.

Without touching upon the prerogatives of church members to dance, to play a social game of cards or to attend a high-class and moral theatre performance, we believe the Methodist General Conference did much toward retaining the high standing of its church by upholding one of the most revered and highy honored portions of its discipline which has served it so faithfully and so well.

DELEGATE GORMAN.

Mr. Gorman appropriately heads the Maryland delegation at St. Louis. He is the choice of his democratic fellow citizens for President, and he will thus be in position to personally supervise his own interests. He may not permit the use of his name in the convention. The situation there may be such as to preclude the hope of success. But if a deadlock occurs, if an opportunity presents itself which makes Parker and Hearst and others impossible, Mr. Gorman, being on hand, will appreciate its full value as respects his own case. He will decide whether to seize it or leave it. If it is seized and Mr. Gorman captures the prize, the entire credit will be his. If it is seized and yet the prize is lost, the responsibility will be his. No search will be made for a bungling lieutenant upon whom to fix the blame. With Mr. Gorman on deck and in touch hourly with events, no supporter of his anywhere need fear for an alert and intelligent direction of his interests. Self preservation is the first law of Gorman.

The platform adopted reads smoothly—is indeed, as smooth as the senator himself. There is, of course, a demand for honest and economical national government. Corruption in the other fellows is deplored. Tariff reform Mr. Gorman insists upon. Trusts are lambasted in terms certain to make Mr. Havemeyer and his friends smile in the confidences of their private officers. The isthmian canal must go forward. It will be dug in dishonor, but will open in glory. And so forth.

Mr. Gorman excoriates the one-man power in politics. Precedent, and it may be said decency, required that Governor Warfield and Senator-elect Rayner should be delegates-at-large to St. Louis. Both aspired to recognition. But both were denied it. Why? Because both have refused to wear Mr. Gorman's collar. Both hold high commissions from the people of Maryland, but that fact counts for nothing in the light of Mr. Gorman's personal displeasure. The chief executive department of Maryland is subject to Mr. Gorman's interference at any time or he will know the reason why, and where the Legislature refuses Mr. Gorman a senatorial colleague of his own choosing the man so chosen must pay the penalty that Mr. Gorman prescribes. Which is why we all laugh when Mr. Gorman raises the cry of dictator against Mr. Roosevelt.

DEMOCRATS SPLIT.

The Democratic party in Maryland is split wide open. The State convention in Baltimore personally affronted Governor Warfield and Senator-elect Rayner. It is an accepted custom in all the states in both parties to send as delegates-at-large to the national party convention the Governor and the United States senators of their political belief in the state. Mr. Rayner, who has just been elected to the United States Senate by the votes of the Democratic members of the Legislature, and Mr. Warfield, who was elected Governor by the Democratic voters, were ignored by the party bosses who controlled the convention in Baltimore. The name of the Senator-elect was not mentioned and the name of the Governor was only mentioned once, and then in tones of opprobrium by the "Big Boss." Everyone knows that Mr. Gorman is consumed by an insatiable ambition to receive the Democratic nomination for President, and in order to have the delegation entirely subservient to him, one that would push his interests to the exclusion of everything else, he saw fit to ignore the Senator and the Governor of the state. Mr. Gorman did not want to take any chances of the national convention learning that, as a matter of fact, the large majority of the people of the state of Maryland are opposed to his nomination as President. He wanted to go to St. Louis with a crowd of "whoopers" to create the impression that he is as solid as a dollar in Maryland and will sweep things in this state this fall. He was afraid that Mr. Warfield and Mr. Rayner might give out a different impression and he simply compelled them to stay at home without regard to their rights in the matter. He could have had them both chosen as delegates if he had expressed the slightest desire that they be sent. He did not, however, and has arrayed himself in open enmity toward them. These gentlemen were chosen by the Democratic party, but the bosses do not approve of them because they are not Gormanites, as has been pointed out repeatedly. There are but two parties in this state—the Republican party and the Gormanites. The real power in what is known as the Democratic party are the Gormanites. If anyone doubts it they only need to review the proceedings of the convention in Baltimore last Thursday.

"I'LL STUDY and get ready and maybe the chance will come," said Abraham Lincoln, when a boy struggling with adverse fortune. There are some boys and young men about Oakland who are engaged in the same brave struggle, but there are also not a few who give no evidence whatever of being animated by any such worthy resolve. They loaf and lounge around, apparently having no ambition to become anybody or achieve any useful purpose in life. Young man, get a move on! Don't be an idler and a drone!

We had on Monday evening a very hard rain storm, accompanied by some lightning. A tree near the auditorium was struck. The light company had about one-half of their line put out of service, as well as several transformers. The lightning arresters located on the line protected the company from a large loss. Two arresters were burnt out. The company was able to light the Park as usual Tuesday night. Twelve large glass were broken in Mrs. Blue's house, and three cracked in Mrs. Weimer's home. The electric wires in Loch-Lynn were cut in two at several places. It is thought that the lightning arresters opposite the auditorium saved that building from destruction. A number of trees were blown down.

DEER PARK JOTTINGS.

Copious showers still continue to gladden mother earth, and yet we hear the chronic croaker grumbling; first, the hard, cold winter, then the late spring, and then again when a few days of warm or dry weather, it is so dry, nothing is growing; and so we find conditions in this 20th century, with all the light of the 19th century to drive away superstition and ignorance to teach people that God rules the elements for our best good.

Our young friend Charles A. Jones returned home yesterday (Monday) from his school at Buckhannon, W. Va., and reports his brother Ray, who has been sick for the past six weeks, convalescing. We were glad to meet our bright young friend, but the care of his brother and hard study has paled his face and reduced his flesh, and with his hair parted in the middle and cut the late West Virginia student fashion, if it had not been for his pants we would have taken him for a modest, shrinking damsel from the "West Virginia hills." But we must remember that Charley is yet in his teens and will get back again to his former Maryland boy unassuming ways, and he again can echo the sentiment of the writer, "Maryland, my Maryland," and be himself again.

Our enterprising stone mason, farmer and carpenter, Mr. Geo. Marley, with the aid and skilled work of Mr. Enoch Clark, is building one of the most complete and substantial foundations for Mr. William Engle, who is going to erect a modest but complete home on a beautiful plot of land purchased from Mayor E. F. Droege. The contract for the carpenter work is given out to our W. B. Miller, who is noted all over this section of Garrett county as an honest workman, and one that never slights his work. We bespeak for Mr. Engle a house or cottage that he will take just pride and comfort in in his declining years here in Old Maryland, and amidst (during the summer) Deer Park's gay society and culture, far exceeding the wild and wooly west, with its cow-boy etiquette.

We were pained to notice the death of the late William Keyser, of Baltimore, who, as many will remember, was vice-president of the B. & O. R. Co. for a number of years when John W. Garrett was president, and after whom Keyser, some twenty-two miles east of here was named. Mr. Keyser was a brother of Mrs. John W. Williams, one of our most popular lady summer guests and whose husband has a splendid estate in the suburbs of our village, or town, as we must call it now, as it resents being called "village," with its new board of "City Council."

Rev. Wm. E. George, who is 84 years old, and at times suffers with a peculiar dizziness, and at times seems despondent, is out this five o'clock a. m. (as I scratch these jottings) singing as gay as a lark. We hope in God's providence that this good old man may be spared many years to mingle his voice with the songsters of the air that so brighten our homes these June mornings.

Our citizens who attended services in the various churches had a religious feast with the morning sermons preached by Rev. E. Manges, in the Lutheran church, and Rev. H. E. Friend in the M. E. church, but at 3 o'clock p. m., in the Union church a young Baptist minister, Rev. Wm. H. Faust, from Georgia, preached, for one of his years, one of the most practical sermons that it has been the pleasure of this people to enjoy. We would like to give the text and a short synopsis if our time and your space would permit, but suffice to say, this young Southerner has just arrived at his majority and fresh from the Louisville Theological College, yet with three ministers facing him and drinking in his eloquent and divine thoughts on sacred things, "On the Walk to Emmaus with the Risen Lord," he seemed to be so inspired and absorbed that the presence of his brother ministers failed to embarrass. This is the first time at a single service that three preachers, representing four churches were present to hear the fourth, and he a comparative boy. The fraternal feeling that pervaded the audience left an influence for good, and are led to hope that the old hypocritical envy of the prosperity of other churches may have received a just rebuke.

Memorial Day at Friendsville.

Memorial Services were held at Friendsville, on Monday, May 30th, by Sherman Post G. A. R., with a respectable congregation and a liberal supply of flowers were contributed. Fifty-two graves were decorated.

The choir rendered appropriate music. Divine blessing was invoked by Revs. A. L. Donachy.

Approdriate addresses were delivered by Rev. D. A. Friend and A. L. Donachy.

Recitations by Ruth Harring, Cora Harring and Kate Frantz. Poem by Bessie Moore. The National Holiday can be made a blessing to our people.

RAILROAD RUMOR.

The Oakland & Confluence May be Made Connecting Link.

The Cumberland Times recently contained the following, relative to railroad building:

The latest rumor in railroad circles is that the B. & O. management has under advisement a plan to build a double-tracked road from a point west of Oakland to connect with the Pittsburg division near Sand Patch.

The reason given for this contemplated move is said to be a desire to avoid the seventeen-mile grade on the third division with through freight.

The seventeen-mile grade has always been an expensive piece of railroad, but in the past year the frequency of disastrous wrecks has made the total cost enormous. If the new line spoken of should be built it would mean that the usefulness of the Pinto tunnel would be practically limited to coal shipments from the George's creek region.

All through freight to and from the west would pass Hyndman.

"There is no telling what the B. & O. may do," said a railroader in discussing the rumor already referred to.

"But a few short years ago," he continued, "the Cumberland yards were built, and then we were told that Keyser would be abandoned as a railroad town. The yards here had not been finished six months until the Pinto cut off was arranged for, and shortly afterward the talk went the rounds that Cumberland was to be reduced to a little branch station with accommodation trains to caray passengers to the main line. Keyser, it was declared was destined to become the railroad center. Now that the cut-off has its day, and Keyser has had the excitement incident to great hopes, it would not be surprising if even at this early day another change is considered."

Resolutions.

Resolutions of respect on the death of Harry Nethkin, of Elkins Lodge No. 192, I. O. O. F.

Whereas, It has pleased the Great Supreme Being to remove from us our beloved brother, Harry Nethkin, under circumstances peculiar to us, and

Whereas, We deem it appropriate to record our high regard for him and our admiration for his many splendid qualities, therefore be it

Resolved That while we bow in humble submission to this dispensation of our Creator, we realize the great principles of the order part of his every day life, and whose actions were founded on the true spirit of Friendship, Love and Truth.

That we extend to the bereaved family and friends of our deceased brother our deepest sympathy in this hour of their sad bereavment.

That we extend the thanks of this Lodge to the officers and members of Oak Lodge No. 8, of Mt. Lake Park, Md., for the funeral ceremony, and for their expression of sympathy in our loss.

That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this lodge and a copy be furnished the local and Oakland, Md., papers for publication.

Libelous Language.

A physician writing in the Medical Review says that many women whom he observes at the theatre are "hebetudinous." Unless the author of the allegation is a psychychologist possessing propensities for spontaneous action in the subconscious mind, arriving at conclusions by a process of ratiocination characteristic of phrenologists, his own case may be diagnosed as dictionarionmania.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Scott's Emulsion is the means of life and of the enjoyment of life of thousands of men, women and children.

To the men Scott's Emulsion gives the flesh and strength so necessary for the cure of consumption and the repairing of body losses from any wasting disease.

For women Scott's Emulsion does this and more. It is a most sustaining food and tonic for the special trials that women have to bear.

To children Scott's Emulsion gives food and strength for growth of flesh and bone and blood. For pale girls, for thin and sickly boys Scott's Emulsion is a great help.

A BIG LAND DEAL.

Three Hundred and Fifteen Acres of Coal Land Brings $31,000.

On Monday Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Halterman, of Wilsonia, in District No. 8, accompanied by their son W. H., were in Oakland where they consummated the sale of three hundred and fifteen acres of coal by acknowledging the deed for the same and placing it upon record. The coal was sold to Pennsylvania coal operators and for it the sellers received $31,000, or nearly one hundred dollars per acre, they retaining the surface.

BITTINGER.

Mr. J. O. Stroup, of Altoona, Pa., and Dr. S. D. Stroup, of East End, Pa., are here visiting their parents, Rev. and Mrs. Stroup.

After attending Conference at Oakland last week, Rev. Stroup pastor at this place, went to Cumberland on a short visit to his sister.

Mr. Samuel Bowman, formerly residing near McHenry, moved to this place last Monday and entered upon his duties as mail carrier on Tuesday morning.

Mr. Henry B. Platter, one of the few veterans of the civil war in this section, has recently been granted an increase of two dollars per month in his pension.

While clearing up some buckwheat ground last Saturday, Mr. Albert Brenneman cut his foot very badly with an ax.

Mr. Melchor Hetrich injured his hand quite seriously while peeling bark one day last week.

Messrs. Simon Meyers and Young Lohr returned to Oakland last Friday, after having completed the lathing of the Lutheran parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner Lohr were visiting relatives in and near Oakland over Sunday.

Mr. Edward Brenneman, who is attending Normal at Grantsvile, was home to spend Sunday.

Capt. James A. Hayden sold to Mr. Alpha Hinebaugh one day last week the lot and building on Liberty street which was for many years the home of this paper. Mr. Hinebaugh will remove the old structure and improve the lot by the erection of new carriage houses on the street end of the lot and on the alley back he will build a large livery barn.

Mrs. O. J. Shooley, of the Park, who was operated upon at the McComas Sanitarium a few weeks ago at which time an immense tumor was removed from her abdomen along with a portion of the intestines, has almost completely recovered and will be discharged from the institution in a few days. The operation was a remarkable one and her rapid recovery still more so.

The sudden storm Monday evening about six o'clock which struck this section of country did considerable damage to shade trees and orchards. In town quite a number of trees were blown down or stripped of their limbs and several signs blown from their fastenings. In the country near Oakland many orchards suffered. Aside from this little other damage has been reported.

Elijah Livengood met with a very painful accident, several days ago. He operates a sawmill about five miles up the Jennings railroad, and rides to and from his work on a small car that is propelled by hand and foot power. He got one of his feet caught between two cog wheels, which lacerated and tore the flesh in a frightful manner, but we are glad to note that the wound is not serious, although very painful.

WILL BEGIN LONG TRAMP.

Rev. J. B. Shoup Will Start On His Trip to St. Louis Saturday.

Rev. J. B. Shoup, a member of the Old Soldiers' Colony, located at Fitzgerald, Ga., intends to take a long walking during the summer. At sunrise on June 11 he will start opposite a marker set up to designate the starting point of the old National Pike and walk the entire length of the old road to St. Louis—some 900 miles.

After spending sometime at the great show the old minister expects to attend the national G. A. R. encampment at Boston, August 15; then take another tramp down through Maine, across New Hampshire and Vermont to the St. Lawrence, ascend that stream by boat, cross New York and attend the annual reunion of his old regiment, the Third Pennsylvania Heavy Artillery, at Gettysburg in October; then, perhaps, return on foot to his home in Georgia.

Rev. Mr. Shoup formerly served Lutheran churches in Garrett county, Md., but has lived for some 20 years in Florida and Georgia. He served two years during the Civil War and was one of the Davis-Clay prison guards at Fortress Monroe. Having suffered a sunstroke in '64 he is much of his time unable to work in the ministry, but must lead an out door life; hence, in part, this pedestrian undertaking.

This office was visited Monday by Mr. Wade Lohr, of Bittinger, who came here Saturday with his wife to visit Mr. and Mrs. Peter P. Lohr.

Last Thursday Merchant Arthur Townshend slipped and fell against the edge of a protruding board at his place of business on Alder street and striking his back fractured two ribs. With characteristic energy, however, Mr. Townshend is still on duty although at times suffering intensely.

The Guild of St. Matthew's church will hold their market at Mrs. Cropp's store on Saturday morning, from nine until eleven o'clock. Those who have promised donations will please send the same to the store by 9 o'clock. All are cordially invited to give the market their patronage and leave orders for the following week.

Miss Rosalie Boughner Howe returned Sunday night from Memphis, Tenn., where she spent the past year most successfully as the head of the piano department of St. Mary's school. Miss Howe will be here until after commencement but will probably go elsewhere to spend the summer. She expects to return to Memphis next fall.—Morgantown Dominion.

Mr. Sylvester Ryland, who is something of a gardener, is bemoaning the fact that a horse got loose in his garden on Tuesday night, after the heavy rain, and the next morning it looked as though a good sized cyclone had passed through it. It is a good thing that Mr. Ryland is as mild tempered as he is, otherwise the quietude of the neighborhood might have been disturbed.—Meyersdale Commercial.

Mr. A. F. George, of Swanton, who is one of the Government's inspectors of rural free delivery routes, is at present in Hodgenville, Ky., near where Abraham Lincoln was born. A few days ago this office received from Mr. George a very handsome souvenir showing pictures of the house in which President Lincoln was born, the spring from which he carried water when a boy to supply the household and the old grist mill to which he "saddled" grain to be ground into flour. The booklet is an interesting one and Mr. George has our thanks for the same.

School Trustees Organize.

The trustees of the Oakland public schools, Messrs. John W. Hart, Daniel Hinebaugh and Joseph E. Harned, organized last Saturday by the election of Mr. Hinebaugh president of the board and Mr. Harned secretary.

Matters looking toward the improvement of the local schools were discussed at length. Among other things it was decided by the board not to employ a principal for the school at present but to hold the position open until August 1st and in the meantime receive applications for the same.

It is Seasonable.

Mr. S. A. Kendall, president of the Yough Manor Lumber Company, came home from Kendall, Md., on Friday night, he having spent the week at their large mill and lumbering camp at that point. He reports that one day last week some of his men engaged in logging got in to a nest of "rattlers" and killed seven large ones before they could hide away in the rocks, and it was not much of a day for snakes either. That part of the mountains has long been noted for its snake dens, and they are more prolific than usual this year it appeares.—Myersdale Republican.

Havoc At Mt. Lake.

One of the hardest rain storms known at Mountain Lake Park caused considerable damage Monday evening. Lightning struck a tree near the auditorium and two lightning arresters on a pole of the electric light company were broken and burnt out. Twelve large glass in Mrs. Blue's home, opposite the auditorium were broken and three in Mrs. Weimer's house cracked. The wires of the light company were cut at several places and a number of transformers put out of use. The light company was able to light the town as usual Tuesday night, as they had a force of men at work at once. A number of trees were blown down.

Town Wrecked.

The town of Amos, situated in the interior 12 miles from Fairmont, was partially destroyed and that portion of Marion county oil fields situated near the town nearly completely cleared of its derricks by a hurricane which swept over the section Sunday. Fifty derricks were destroyed and the roofs of half the houses of the town, which has 300 inhabitants, were blown off, while many of the houses were lifted from their foundations and completely wrecked. Many persons received slight injuries, but no one was seriously hurt. The property loss in the field and town will aggregate $150,000.

OFFICE IN THE NEWS BUILDING.

BETTER ROADS IN MARYLAND

Much Interest Shown in Many Counties of the State

THE SHOEMAKER ROAD BILL

Has Given Much Encouragement What the Geological Survey is Doing.

Encouraged by the Maryland Legislature's passage of the bill for State aid in the building of scientifically constructed roads, known generally as the Shoemaker Good Roads bill, the Maryland Geological Survey, under the direction of Dr. Wm. Bullock Clark is preparing for an active summer of service in the interest of the Boards of County Commissioners throughout the State, from which calls for assistance in the way of expert information, estimates and road engineering have begun to come in to the Survey authorities. As the advantage of the new law became more generally understood in its economical aspect, ease of administration and satisfaction to the user of the road, the Marvland Geological Survey will be very active through its highway engineer, Mr. A. N. Johnson in meeting requests of assistance from all quarters of the State.

A very striking sign of the prospective betterment of roads in Marvland is the interest and progress manifested in the various counties to help themselves and to push forward scientific road-building. In each case the fact that there will early be available a considerable sum under the Shoemaker Act will be a great assistance and it is expected that full advantage will be taken of the opportunity for obtaining the supervision of road-building by Mr. A. N. Johnson. The question with which each county is confronted is whether under the present method of administering its road funds the roads have steadily improved a dollar's worth for every dollar that has been expended upon them and whether the best results have been obtained in each case. In other words, have your roads in your county when once built, even though at considerable outlay, given thorough satisfaction and require but little expense from year to year for repairs, or does the same amount of labor have to be gone over each year at the same total expense because they were not built scientifically in the first place?

What are the facts in this connection? In the past fifteen years the people of Montgomery county have expended on their roads, including tolls, over $540,000. Let us say that it is necessary to expend as much as half this sum on repairs which are absolutely needed to keep the roads in a safe condition and that the other half of the money should have been expended in making good macadam roads. If this had been done, then in the past fifteen years they would have spent a little over $270,000 on well-made roads. Now put the cost of a good macadam road at a comparatively high figure, say $6,000 per mile for a 18-foot macadam, accordingly they should have constructed in the last 15 years 45 miles of good roads. But 45 miles of good macadam roads have not been built in the last 15 years in Montgomery or in any other county of the State.

A realization of the unsatisfactory and wasteful method pursued in the past, is, however, apparant in many parts of the State and there is now in progress a definite sentiment for scientifically constructed roads. Requests for assistance have been received by the Survey from 14 of the 23 counties in the State and examinations, plans and estimates have been made for upwards of 60 pieces of roads. Not all of these have been improved wholly accordingly to the suggestions given, but in a large number of instances the work has been done according to the plans and specifications that were furnished.

The latest engagement received by the Highway Division, through the impetus of the superiority of the roads already built by the Survey and by the recent discussion of the good roads bill in this State, is a proposition to build a macadam road two miles long from Kensington, Montgomery county, to Wheaton. Mr. Johnson had a consultation with the Board of County Commissioners of Montgomery county last Friday at which measures were taken to have specifications presented at an early date. As another instance of progress, Baltimore, Prince George, Allegany and Carroll counties have engaged a road engineer for the improvement of their highways and with these gentlemen the Highway Division of the Survey will in all probability be called into consultation. In a number of other counties money has been appropriated and in one instance bequeathed for making sections of the State model roads under the specification of the Maryland Geological Survey. One of the roads was made in Queen Anne's county on the Eastern Shore, where heretofore oyster shells had been the only material used to improve the roads. This road was constructed by Survey of a base slag from the steel works at Sparrow's Point, where the slag could be readily shipped on barges to a point about a mile and a half from the road. The material was employed because of its cheapness and has made a very satisfactory road although one not well adapted to withstand very heavy traffic. Its cost was $2300 a mile. In 1903 the county commissioners of Cecil county appropriated $11,000 for the construction of a macadam road to be built under the Maryland Geological Survey specifications at Rising Sun. This road which has been completed for one mile, is macadamized for a width of 12 feet and grade for a width of 20 feet, and will cost at the rate of about $4,000 a mile. The result of the employment of a road engineer in Baltimore county who should have charge of all the road mending throughout the county, has been in more road-construction according to modern methods, in the past two years than any time before. In Prince George's county, the new road law created a board of road commissioners who have complete charge of the road funds, which were taken out of the hands of the county commissioners. This law also provided that the improvment of the roads leading into the county from Washington should be under the direction of the State Geological Survey, and considerable work of a permanent character has been done in reducing the grades and graveling a number of these main roads of the county. As the amount of money for this purpose is only $6,000 annually, but comparatively small mileage of road has been improved so far.

In every case it has been the effort and the aim of the highway engineer of the survey to induce the county officials to concentrate the road funds at their command to the improvements of especially bad portions of the roads, putting such places into a proper state of repair to the end that some real and lasting benefit would be gained; so that what was done in one year would not be entirely obliterated in the next. A very simple necessary improvement to the road-building equipment of the counties, and one which is strongly urged by the Geological Survey is the purchase of steam rollers for the highways. The counties of Baltimore, Hartford, Cecil and Allegany have already accepted the suggestion of the Survey and have provided themselves with the rollers while Dorchester and Howard counties are considering a similar purchase and the Montgomery county commissioners have been advised to do likewise.

Miss Rose McGraw was at Deer Park yesterday, where she completed arrangements for occupying the family's beautiful summer cottage for the present season, and, with her mother, expects to leave this city for that point next Tuesday. This season bids fair to be a very successful one at Deer Park and Oakland. Many residents of eastern cities who will go to the St. Louis Exposition will stop for a season at one or the other of these famous resorts, and the demand for cottages this season is heavy already. The McGraw cottage at Deer Park is one of the most handsome and comfortable and has extensive and beautiful grounds, and the family greatly enjoy occupying it during the heated term.—Grafton Sentinel.

Try for Health

222 South Peoria St.,
CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 7, 1902.

Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

Georgia Dunbar

Don't you want freedom from pain? Take Wine of Cardui and make one supreme effort to be well. You do not need to be a weak, helpless sufferer. You can have a woman's health and do a woman's work in life. Why not secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist today?

WINE of CARDUI

One Sided

By MARAVENE KENNEDY

....Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure....

"A wife? You mean a housekeeper. Unless I learn to cook your dinners and make my own dresses you won't marry me. Very well." She laid his ring on the table. "It isn't so much that I object to the work of cooking and sewing, but that you should make it an issue in our marriage."

Weston's handsome face was troubled.

"I love you," he said simply, "love just to look at you, be near you, hear your voice, but there has to be more than an emotion between folks for a happy wedded life. Humanity is pretty poor stuff; we never rise far above our material wants. When a man has just downed a poorly cooked dinner—burnt steak, undone biscuit, soggy pie—he's not just in the humor to appreciate his wife's kisses."

He drew her on his knee and kissed tenderly the mutinous little mouth.

"It's for your happiness as much as mine, sweetheart. I don't want to make a slave of you. We'll have a girl to help with the work, and I won't howl over the bills for my little wife's dresses. But I want you to know how to do things."

"Papa is satisfied with the way I manage his house," she said stubbornly.

Weston glanced at the untidy rooms, the slovenly servant passing the open window. He thought of the unsavory meals he had eaten in "this house" and inwardly groaned.

"But, Lucie," he urged, "wouldn't you rather laugh with me evenings than cry on my shoulder because the cook's left and you've burned the meat up, or because Madame Highflier has ruined your new frock? My sister was raised pretty much as you've been, and I lived with her a year after she was married, so I know whereof I speak. John has dyspepsia and looks as though he wished heaven were his home."

"He had no right to marry unless he could support his wife properly," she retorted unreasonably.

"He earns $6,000 a year," said Weston dryly, "three times what I do." He shrugged his shoulders and laughed. "You see, darling, it behooves us to know how to manage our house and our frocks."

IN A FLASH WENT DOUGHY HANDS AND ALL AROUND HIS NECK.

"Life is too short to drudge," said she, unmollified. "I want my time for my own—to read, study, travel about."

"That's different," he answered in a constrained voice. "I was thinking of just a little home, with our own pretty yard and garden. I even looked forward, joyfully, to working that same garden myself; and a nice little house and runabout, and a few weeks' vacation in summer, and one servant just to help—not to manage. My brother Ned lives that way—he and Alice and the two children. Ned don't earn as much as I do, either. So you see—I—I thought"— He waited a little. "Good-by, Lucie," he said softly and put the discarded ring in his pocket.

"It's my ring," she cried, then jerked her hand away as he tried to put it on her finger.

"Keep it, Lucie; it's yours, as are my heart and life. You can send it to me when—you—marry the man who can give you the things I can't."

"I hate you!" she sobbed and rushed from the room.

Weston went slowly down the walk, a serious look on his strong, young face. Perhaps he had bungled, he thought miserably. But he was only a man, practical and unimaginative; he could not know that to the girlish, romantic mind it was simply impossible to think of love as other than thrills, kisses and blissful hours of being together.

Lucie cried heartbrokenly. For a week she stayed at home and hugged her grief—not nearly so joyous a proceeding as hugging Tom and talking and laughing in their jolly way together. But on Thursday she went to see Emma Day. Emma was a music teacher. Then the tide turned. It was a buxom Irish girl with pleasant face and hearty voice. She wanted to take music lessons. She was cook in a foine family, ma'am; she had three hours a day all to hersilf, so she did, an' could she be afther larnin' to play the pianny at all in a year come last Palm Sunday?

Miss Day looked commiseratingly at the girl's big, unshapely fingers.

"It takes a long time to learn to play the piano well," she said kindly, "and it would cost you about all your wages. Frankly, I would advise against it."

The girl's face fell dismally. She turned to Lucie. "Is it so, ma'am?" she asked piteously. "I cooks on your sthrate, an' I hears you playin', an' I want to play that thune about the shamrock that you plays, ma'am."

She sat down with a thump as Lucie's face, too, spoke disapproval. "I must, ma'am," she moaned. "It's for Ignatius. He's comin' over thin. He loves the pianny—he's to be me man—an' he sings foine, ma'am. There's not his equal in the ould country, an' him a tyin' to me. Shure, an' it's one sided, it is. If I could only do something to plaze him; somethin' to make him feel I was desarvin' of his love."

"He'll have your love—yourself!" cried Lucie in a strange, tense voice.

"An' shure an' he will, ma'am; a great hulk who can cook his victuals an' wash an' iron; any girl can do that. I wants to do somethin' for him, somethin' that'll make him feel histed up over, ma'am. 'An' shure an' Katie did this for me,' he'll say. It's the swate consate of men to want their swatehearts to do for thim what they've niver done for no one else. It would be worth all the time an' money, ma'am, jest to see me boy's face whin I sets down an' plays him a thune."

Lucie's fair face was transfigured. To see her Tom's face, to hear him say, "And my Lucie did this for me!"

"You shall play!" she cried joyously. "I'll teach you myself, an hour every day, and you can teach me to cook and to keep house properly. I'm to be married too. It's one sided now, but—it won't be."

Then they both cried a little, but during the next month life was roseate to Lucie and Katie, though they both worked harder than they had ever done before. Lucie had intended to be very dignified about her love affair, but somehow Katie learned as much about Tom and his perfections as did Lucie about Ignatius and his "darlint ways."

Lucie was in the kitchen, hands deep in biscuit dough, dimpled arms moving with scientific motion, face flushed and deeply interested—when in walked Tom. And the look he gave her! In a flash went doughy hands and all around his neck.

"I got the dinner all myself yesterday," was what she said. "And I've made two dresses, and Katie says my pies are as good as hers—she can play exercises now—and, oh, Tom, tomorrow I'm to bake a cake!"

And though two open mouthed, wild eyed Irish girls stood not six feet away, Tom kissed the sweet upturned face "tin whole times, kusmack, for I counted thim meself," wrote Katie to Ignatius.

Wisdom For Wives.

A country vicar in the old country was noted for his excellent fatherly advice to young couples he wedded. He had printed cards of advice, which he used to distribute, besides giving guidance verbally. One of the cards was for the man and the other for the woman. That to the woman ran as follows: "When you marry him love him; after you marry him study him; if he is honest honor him; if he is generous appreciate him; when he is sad cheer him; when he is cross amuse him; when he is talkative listen to him; when he is quarrelsome ignore him; if he is slothful spur him; if he is noble praise him; if he is confidential encourage him; if he is secretive trust him; if he is jealous cure him; if he cares naught for pleasure coax him; if he favors society accompany him; if he does you a favor thank him; when he deserves it kiss him; let him think how well you understand him, but never let him know that you 'manage' him."

The Regulation of Financial Institutions

By F. D. KILBURN, New York State Superintendent of Banks

I AM unqualifiedly in favor of state control, ADEQUATE AND CLOSE CONTROL, not only of trust companies, but of all institutions of a financial nature which invite the public confidence and deal with the PEOPLE'S money. This control should be sufficiently comprehensive as to regulate the organization, provide ample supervision, and restrict investment in a way that will conserve, in so far as human ingenuity can provide, the interests of the public.

Investments in untried securities, promotion of questionable enterprises, speculative underwriting of stocks and bonds, and all other things of a character involving dangerous investment or promotion of individual interests, should not only be prohibited, but MADE A PENAL OFFENSE if indulged in contrary to law.

Immigration and the Schools

By Dr. W. H. MAXWELL, Superintendent New York City Schools

NEW YORK has shown a greater increase in its school attendance than any city in the world, and, though there are several contributory causes, THE CHIEF CAUSE IS IMMIGRATION. The number of immigrants in 1899 was 311,715 and in 1903 939,830, and diminution is not probable. The change in the character of the immigrants from the Teutonic races of twenty years ago to the preponderance of Latin and Slavish peoples of recent years has given educators much to think about, and particularly so here in New York, where a comparatively large percentage of the influx remains.

The significance of the problem lies in the fact that the immigrant of today DOES NOT ASSIMILATE as readily as did his Teutonic predecessor.

The Automobile In War.

Now the bold Kuropatkin has sprung a new deal
In the shape of an ironclad automobile.
So woe to the Japs, and alas for their fate!
Let them swim for their island before it's too late.

Oh, think of blue fiends and red devils by scores
Being rushed through the ranks that compose the Jap corps,
Leaving mangled and bleeding men strewn on the scene,
Leaving powder smoke mingled with stale gasoline.

Their skill has been splendid, their pluck has been great,
But we who have witnessed buzz carts operate
Know it's time for the Japples to take to their heels
If civilized war admits automobiles.

FOR ALL ROUND WEAR our "Standard" Sack Suit meets its requirements perfectly. It is just the suit for the man who has not the time or the inclination to change frequently. While it is made on very modest lines yet it has that individuality which characterizes all Clothcraft productions. It has all the exclusive Clothcraft features, too, such as the non-breakable coat front, the patent telescope sleeve, and the telescope vest back. It will stand up under continual wear because it is made of all wool goods and is put together in the perfect manner which has made the makers famous.

"Clothcraft" manufacturers have been in business half a century. They've learned how to produce high grade clothing at low prices. You can judge their success from this one suit.

Your own custom tailor couldn't give you a better one at double the cost—and then he would keep you two weeks waiting for it. We can fit you ten minutes after you come into our store at a cost of $10 to $25. There's a style book here for you—don't you want it?

Christ Crucified.

The quadruple description of the crufixion is a literary marvel. Though a circumstance of transcendent importance, the narrative of it is surprisingly condensed. There is no spinning out of details, no obtrusion of the personal opinions and sentiments of the narrators.

Here is a suggestion of how we ourselves should approach Calvary. It is not a theme for volubility. There should be no striving to magnify its painful horrors, or to compare the physical sufferings of its victim with those of others. A personal appropriation by faith is great riches.

Religious romancists have paved all the way between the Prætorium and Calvary with miraculous incidents. In strong antithesis to this, the evangelist mentions but two circumstances. At sight of one on whose brow innocence and benignity was stamped led to a shocking death, the daughters of Jerusalem wept aloud in pity. Jesus turned, and, as if with the impending siege in plainest view, bade them not to weep for Him, but for themselves and their children. In those awful days, barrenness, the disgrace of the Hebrew woman, would be at a premium. For if such a cruel deed as was now being done was possible, the tree of their national life yet being green, what horrors would characterize the extinction of that life! The fainting strength of Jesus makes the impressing of some one to bear his cross necessary. A foreign Jew, recognized as such by his Libyan garb, is compelled to do so. A changed heart was probably his exceeding great reward. So goes that most pitiful procession earth has ever seen. The centurion, mounted and in the van; a guard in shining armor, and numerous enough to make rescue of the victims impossible; the condemned, with their crimes recorded in black letters on boards daubed with gypsum, and hung about their necks; in the rear, the slaves carrying refreshments for the soldiers, besides nails, hammers, ropes, etc., necessary for the execution; and back of all, such a motley, unsavory crowd as a public execution would draw in our day.

Following the narrative, we first have the numbering of Jesus with transgressors. He was crucified between the malefactors, the insurgent robbers and murderers. He who could challenge the world to impeach his sinlessness, was "made sin." He was put to the extremity of a convicted felon.

With the first shedding of his blood begins his mediatorial prayer, "Father, forgive them." The "inventiveness of love" finds a palliating circumstance in their ignorance. "They know not what they do." The prayer sweeps out to include, not the coarse executioners alone, but the cunning conspirators who use them as their tools.

It is enough to brand it with infamy that destroying vice of gambling, that it obtruded itself at the crucifixion. The soldiers threw dice to determine which should have the most valuable garment of the sufferer. They "chanced off" the seamless robe.

"He saved others." Unconscious, undesigned encomium! "Let Him save Himself." Last recurrence of the wilderness temptation! That which is a literal possibility is a moral impossibility. Except he stay upon the cross he cannot be a Savior. If He remains not, He can not utter that ineffable cry, "It is finished!"—the work the Father gave Me to do." Keener than mortal pangs are the brutal gibes of rulers, populace, and soldiery.

That triple inscription may signify that the story of the cross is destined to go into all languages, as it there appeared in the tongues of conquest, culture and colloquy.

The sovereign power of redeeming love has a splendid exemplification even in the deepening gloom of Calvary. As the hours wear away, the innocence, the divinity of his fellow-sufferer dawns upon the miud of the malefactor. It pains him to hear the continued railing of his comrade in crime. He chides him, reminding him of the justness of their condemnation, and affirming the guiltlessness of Jesus. To eye of faith there opens to him a blissful vista beyond the chasm of death. He recognizes the sufferer, spite of His marred visage as monarch of that realm. In the strength of a belief that prompts to action, he joins his fortunes irrevocably with those of the crucified Nazarene, and entreats recognition when He comes to the regal splendors of His coronation.

What Jesus did then, he has been doing ever since. He opened paradise to a penitent. But His obedience unto death, even the death of the cross, was the key, and the only one, to unlock that paradise.

Nature, as if become sentient on account of the incomparable tragedy now enacting, drapes herself in a veil of impenetrable blackness.

In that darkness, the seventh word from the cross is heard. The Son, having drunk to its dregs the cup the Father had given Him now, in the very hour and article of death, confidently commends His soul to that Father.

The Teacher's Lantern

Pilate's ironical inscription has a germ of truth in it. Jesus is king. His dominion is wider than the most ambitions Cæsar ever dreamed of.

What was a taunt to the Jews was a tribute to Jesus. Pilate would fain acknowledge Him a kingly spirit, of whom the Jews were not worthy. To this covered eulogy of the procurator the dying thief added his "Thy kingdom."

The cross is always divisive. It once separated a believer from an unbeliever. It does so yet wherever it is preached. People range themselves in two classes. The cross is the divisor.

A study of Calvary reveals the intensive forcefulness of the expression, "Crucify the Son of God afresh." Indifference, unbelief, and apostasy are doing this daily.

It is inconceivable that the spirit of Jesus, just mingled with common air, was dissipated and lost, as to its identity, when he breathed it forth. He commended it as an inconceivably precious thing to the care of a personal God, the Father of Spirits.

The Lord of life helped the dying penitent at His side to stand the shock of dissolution by the assurance of a perpetuation of conscious life beyond, and an immediate entrance to Paradise.

When Jesus entered Paradise it was in company with an executed criminal. This trophy of His redeeming love, this evidence of the power of His cross, He presented to all the intelligences of the sky.

It is a common error that the man who was impressed to bear the cross was a Negro. The presence of a Jew from Africa can easily be accounted or. Ptolmæus Lagi forcibly colonized Cyrene, Northern Africa, with a great number of Jews, who built for themselves a synagogue in Jerusalem to which they might resort at feast-times.

The thoughts of Jesus, even in His mortal agonies, were upon others, as his three first "words from the cross" indicate, "Father, forgive them;" and to the penitent thief, "This day;" and to His mother, "Woman, behold thy Son."

Gambling is that one horrid vice that could intrude upon even the crucifixion scene. The rattle of the dice-box was heard at the foot of the cross. It is the dehumanizing vice. At Monte Carlo, todav, the suicide's revolver often rings at the table. Liveried servants throw a sheet over the corpse and carry it out, and the game goes on!

Crucifixion was abolished by Constantine, out of sacred regard for the cross as the instrument of the Savior's passion. Thus for fifteen centuries the world has been rid of this cruelest mode of capital punishment. And the spread of the humanizing gospel has reduced to the minimum the pains and indginities of those who must suffer the extreme penalty.

The twenty-second Psalm, written, as Henstenberg affirms, in the greatest heat of David's conflict with Saul, is also strikingly minute in its portrayal of the last agony of Jesus. The agonized cry, the derision, the pierced hands and feet, the parting of the garments, and many other circumstances, are here. They are directly quoted, or at least alluded to, in the New Testament. The psalm evidently has a broader application than to the mere historic event of David's being surrounded by the soldiers of Samuel at Maon. It is most Messianic of all Messianic psalms.

HEAT AND THUNDER IN JUNE SAYS HICKS.

Month of Roses is to Be of the Kind That Blisters the Bather.

The Rev. Irl R. Hicks promises some "spells" of unsettled stormy weather in June.

On the 2d and 3d it will grow much warmer. During the 4th to 6th marked electrical storms will move eastward across the country. Intense lightning and thunder, with hail and heavy rain in many parts may be counted on. There will be a change to much cooler, with rising barometer, westerly winds and clearing skies after the storm.

General rain and thunder storms, with abnormal displays of lightning and heavy hail may be expected, reaching a crisis about the 9th to 12th. For several days thereafter there may be protracted storms and thunder squalls. Very changeable temperature will be experienced, ranging from phenomenally high to unreasonably cold.

The third storm period—regular—is central on the 16th. There may be expected a very warm wave, low barometer and high humidity, causing many very active and violent electrical storms with downpours of rain and hail. Change to high barometer and surprisingly cool, almost to frost northward, will come in from the northwest behind these storms.

The fourth storm period—reactionary—central on 21st to 22d, should bring rising temperature and falling barometer, with much lightning in the heavens during the nights and afternoon thunder squalls and showers, to the great annoyance of haymakers.

The last storm period—regular—may bring a prolonged period of threatening, stormy culminations, one centering about the 25th and the other about the 30th. A very warm wave will appear in western parts about the 24th and rapid storms of wind, rain and thunder need not surprise on and touching the 25th. There may be a daily cycle of afternoon thunder storms up to the end of the month. Possibly a rising barometer, west winds and cooler may intervene, bringing fair weather from about the 27th to 29th. But returning warmth, low barometer and electrical storms are almost certain to develop about the 30th.

How Forrest Won New Laurels

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

June 10, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

THE Confederate cavalry leader General N. B. Forrest added to his reputation as a great horseback fighter by winning a remarkable victory at Brice's farm, Mississippi, June 10, 1864. An army of 8,000 Federals under General S. D. Sturgis marched out of Memphis with flying colors to sweep Forrest and his rough riding band off Sherman's line of communications. Sherman was then closing in on Atlanta with a large army and drawing his supplies by rail from Nashville, Tenn., hundreds of miles from the scene of operations.

Twice before within the space of six months the ubiquitous raider Forrest had been slated for destruction by his anxious foemen for the purpose of safeguarding Sherman's march. General Sturgis himself led an expedition out of Memphis to entrap Forrest at the time of the Fort Pillow affair in April, but the movement had failed, like many others of the same nature in the course of the war. When Sturgis came within sight of Forrest at Brice's farm he wanted to turn back, but was dissuaded by his officers and formed for battle on the arc of a circle three-fourths of a mile in extent about half a mile from Brice's house, his right resting upon the main road along which he was marching southward. His force comprised two brigades of cavalry and three brigades of infantry, with two six gun batteries of light artillery.

Forrest had with him Lyon's, Rucker's and Johnson's brigades, all mounted men, and two four gun batteries, about 3,200 troops in all. The ground where Sturgis formed his men was elevated and thickly clad with stunted trees and tangled undergrowth, which furnished cover for the troops. A cautious soldier in Forrest's place would have taken a good position across the valley and compelled his foe to assume the initiative, but the impetuous fighter was fearful of delays and gave the order for a general attack. Sturgis' men received the assailants with a terrible fire, and the southern line was repulsed, with confusion in some places. Opportunely Forrest's batteries came to the front at a gallop and opened briskly on the Federals confronting Rucker's brigade. Under cover of the cannonade Rucker pushed his line forward, but the carnage inflicted by Sturgis' firm line again caused the southerners to waver.

Sturgis was not on the field during Forrest's first attack, and his brigade commanders failed to take advantage of the confusion in Forrest's column. No effort was made to follow up whenever one of the southern battalions recoiled from the deadly fire. Neither did the Federals attempt to turn the flanks of the enemy's shorter line. Sturgis was five miles in the rear, bringing up a brigade which had been delayed by a quagmire in the road produced by recent heavy rains. His officers at the front advised him to form the infantry for battle at some point in the rear of the fighting line and withdraw the cavalry to that position. This he declined to do and massed his whole command in front of Forrest, with his artillery stationed along the road.

It was past noon when Sturgis brought up the last troops and Forrest saw that his foe was being reenforced. Ordering his artillery captains to double shot the pieces with canister, Forrest led them to within sixty yards of the Federal line just as Sturgis was taking the offensive and his troops emerging into open ground near Brice's house. After two or three discharges from each of the eight guns in position the brigades of Lyon and Johnson charged upon the Federal left flank. The Federals were pressed slowly back upon Brice's house by this flank attack. Meanwhile Rucker's brigade, re-enforced during the fight by two regiments under Colonel Bell, moved forward across the fields and over fences, using their revolvers freely, toward the house. At this point the slaughter was fearful. Fully 800 Federals, according to Confederate accounts, lay dead and wounded around the house.

For a time this assault was held in check by the steady fire of Sturgis' cavalry on the front line. Finally, when Forrest's men pressed up to within seventy paces of the center of the Federal line, it gave way, exposing the flank of Colonel George E. Waring's brigade, which held a position in the woods and up to that time had beaten back every advance of the foe. Waring fell back and carried along Winslow's brigade as well.

Forrest's line, now shortened and strengthened, pressed on after the retreating Federals. Six of Sturgis' guns were captured around Brice's house. In a charge of the Eighth Kentucky cavalry upon this battery the color bearer was disabled by a shot, and Sergeant Brown of Company A seized the falling flag, rushed ahead of the line and placed it upon one of the Federal guns.

Forrest's artillerists promptly manned the captured guns and turned them upon the Federals. The fire from these pieces disabled the horses attached to another Federal battery, which was abandoned to the pursuers. Meanwhile Forrest's own batteries under Morton and Rice galloped forward and opened a canister fire upon the Federals crowded in the single road leading to Tishimingo creek, where there was a bridge still standing.

The day was sultry and hot, and the troops brought to the field by Sturgis were worn and distressed with the long march. The bridge was blocked with wagons, the teams of which had been shot down, and the retreating soldiers rushed into the creek to pass the obstructions. Forrest ordered his cavalry to halt and reorganize for more effective pursuit. As soon as the bridge could be cleared of wagons and debris two guns of Rice's Confederate battery worked their way through and, taking favorable positions, harassed the retreating troops on the banks of the Tishimingo.

The delay of the pursuers at the bridge gave Sturgis time to rally his line. For half an hour he gave vigorous battle, his men charging their pursuers and hurling them back upon Rice's guns. About 5 o'clock this second line was smashed by a flanking fire on the left and the artillery on the right. Rice's battery hurled double charges of canister into the Federal ranks, and Lyon's brigade rushed forward, completing the rout. Sturgis' colored brigade made an ineffectual attempt to hold on, but finally dissolved under the canister of Rice's guns.

The largest part of Sturgis' wagon train, numbering 250 and containing ten days' rations for the troops and a large supply of ammunition, fell into Forrest's hands, with 1,500 unwounded prisoners of war. Forrest captured fourteen pieces of artillery in action. Sturgis retreated all night and reached Ripley, twenty-four miles from Brice's farm, early on July 11. An attempt was made to reform the command there and give further battle, but a single regiment of Tennessee troopers, only 250 strong, appeared on the road behind the town, and, after checking an attack in this quarter, which threatened to cut the line of retreat, the Federals again marched on toward Memphis.

Forrest in person reached Ripley at 8 o'clock on the 11th and but for his impetuosity might have had time to inflict another terrible blow upon Sturgis. Only a single regiment was at hand besides his escort, and with them he attacked. The Federals fought bravely, losing a hundred men, including Colonel G. M. McCraig of the One Hundred and Twentieth Illinois infantry. In this fight General Grierson, commander of the Federal cavalry, narrowly escaped capture at the hands of Forrest's youngest brother, Colonel Jesse Forrest. Finding themselves beset in the rear and on the flanks, the Federals abandoned the ground before a strong column which Forrest had sent around their rear could get into position to cut off the retreat of the rear guard.

Forrest set out by a roundabout road to head off the enemy at Salem. Before reaching that place he fell exhausted from his saddle and lay for an hour by the roadside in a state of stupor. He had covered fifty-eight miles in twenty-four hours, besides the rides back and forth during the maneuvers of battle, and, although a man of iron frame, the ordeal had proved too much for him.

The Confederates claim that Forrest surpassed his previous records in this affair at Brice's farm. Their captures of artillery are fixed at nineteen guns, including two which the Federals buried. They also took twenty field ambulances and over 400 draft horses. The Confederates state that they buried 1,900 Federals and took captive 2,000 officers and men, including the wounded. Their own loss is set down at 140 officers and men killed and nearly 500 wounded.

The Confederates also state that Forrest brought but 2,300 men into action, as every fourth man was detailed as horse holder, the troopers fighting on foot. The adjutant of the Fourth Missouri cavalry (Federal) of Colonel Waring's brigade says that the enemy in view did not exceed 2,500 men. This officer admits that Forrest was outnumbered at least three to one. GEORGE L. KILMER.

A PSALM OF SPRING.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
Life's a vain and vapid thing,
Flavorless as young cucumbers
In the blithe and bounding spring.

Life is real, life is action,
When the year is in its prime;
Also seventeen varieties distraction
At the gay house cleaning time.

Not enjoyment and not sorrow
Is our destined aim and end,
But to see if we can borrow
Half a dollar from a friend.

In the world's nerve racking battle
Always on the lookout be,
When you hear the muskets rattle,
For a place behind a tree.

Trust no smooth, persuasive stranger
With a patent get rich plan;
Even though he be a granger
He will "do" you if he can.

Lives of great men oft remind us
That queer methods sometimes pay
If policemen cannot find us
And we make our get-away.

Let us, then, be up and doing
When the year is at its flood,
Give the rag a rest from chewing
And take something for our blood.

Mr. Dooley's Cousin on the Merger.

"Do yez understand about the Northern merger decision?" asked Mr. Hennessy's uncle as he stepped in for his morning bracer.

"I do," says Mr. Dooley's cousin. "I do. 'Tis this way. Jim Hill he says to himself and some others that owned a nice bunch of railways, 'Boys,' he says, 'competition,' he says, 'is the life of trade,' he says. 'That bein' the case,' he says, 'we will,' he says, 'do our own compatin',' he says, 'and kaap,' he says, 'the life of trade in the family,' he says.

"'Do ye hear that, Teddy?' says Gineral Knox.

"'I do,' says the prisidint. 'Bad luck to them,' he says, 'it's against the law.'

"'Do ye know who we are?' says Jim Hill.

"'I do,' says Teddy.

"'Ye don't talk that way,' says Jim Hill.

"'You're pinched,' says Teddy, 'and ye can tell yer troubles to the suprame coort.'

"'All right,' says Jim Hill. 'They are a foine body of gintlemen.'

"'We'll see,' says Teddy dryly.

"'We will,' says Jim Hill.

"Well, the suprame coort thought about it eight hours a day for several months, seriously interferin' with golf, and finally they says: 'The prisidint is right. Ye'll have to compate with one another and not with yerselves.'"

"'Tis a great victory for the peaple," said Mr. Hennessy's uncle.

"It is," said Mr. Dooley's cousin. "It is; only they may never find it out whin they come to pay the freight."

CITY COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Regular Monthly Meeting Held Last Monday Evening

The June meeting of the City Council was held last Monday evening with all members of the body except President Ross present. Councilman Dixon was chosen president pro tem. Mayor McComas was also present.

After reading the monthly bills and ordering them paid business matters of minor importance engaged the members until a late hour.

A crossing was ordered placed on Third street from the corner of Green stieet, and the location of the sewer at that point ordered changed.

An ordinance regulating telephone and electric light wires was introduced and discussed at some length and final action deferred until a later meeting.

Another ordinance ordering telephone lines to be cabled was also introduced and held over until a special meeting to be held at the call of the president.

An order was passed instructing Councilman Bolden to draw plans and specifications for the reconstruction of the board walk fronting the block leading from Green street to the corner of Mr. D. E. Offutt's property on Second street.

The Republican Appreciaed.

From the far-off Golden Gate this office received Tuesday afternoon a letter from Mr. E. E. Enlow enclosing money order for his subscription, and in closing his letter says: "There never has been a time since I left the dear old mountains of "My Maryland" that I have not eagerly read THE REPUBLICAN, feeling it to be a long letter from home.

Cutting Off Trackmen.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company has extended its economical move to the maintenance of way department and is now cutting off many trackmen all over the line. The action took effect on the first day of June and there are now many trackmen formerly in the service that are out of employment.

Look Out for Swindlers.

The crop of swindlers working in the farming districts this year seems to be greater than ever this spring. Here are two of the latest. A number of men are working in different states selling a stock remedy on this plan. They appoint a local agent and offer to supply him with a stock of the remedy to be paid for after it is sold, but they require a signature to a contract ordering about $100 worth of the stuff to be shipped prepaid. At the end of a month the farmer agent is notified that he is indebted to the concern for the amount of the contract. (which by the way is in the hands of the swindler, the former agent having given no duplicate), and suit is brought for a smaller amount so as to keep it in a lower court. The farmer generally pays or compromises. The other swindler offers to set out an acre or more of trees and take half his pay from the crops of fruit. His scheme is to ask about one half more than the trees are worth on the plea that they are some new and wonderful variety, and he nce are sold at half (?) price, the other half to be paid, as stated, from the fruit. Suffice it to say this swindler having collected his price for the trees, which are generally of inferior sorts, never turns up for his share of the crops. Better confine purchases to local dealers or to men who advertise in papers of reliability and let general agents with wonderful propositions alone.

STUMP SPEECH IN CHURCH.

Governor White Talks for Dawson—Doxology Closes Meeting.

In stumping Mason county in the interests of Dawson as his successor, Governor A. B. White is using pulpits and biblical texts to meet emergencies. The other night at Leon the schoolhouse was engaged, but the crowd was so large that an adjournment to the church was necessary.

The choir was practicing hymns, and after this feature was concluded Governor White said it would be appropriate to begin a meeting in a church with a text from the Bible.

From the text he preached a sermon on tax reform, the issue in the fight for the governorship. At its close a sturdy farmer suggested singing the doxology, which was done with a will.

The Greed of Great Britain

By ANDREW CARNEGIE

MY aim is to show Englishmen how absurdly grasping they are—how unreasonable. Never has the world seen such a nation and there is much excuse for the feeling that Britain is entitled to continue to inherit the earth. She still wants more when what surprises every one conversant with her position is HOW SHE EVER SUCCEEDED IN GETTING AND DOING SO MUCH. I am impressed every time I look into the figures.

Mark ye, our foreign commerce is ONLY £903,363,000 per year.

Ungrateful favorite of the gods! It never was so great either in imports or exports. No nation ever approached it in amount. Per capita it is £21 10s. France has only £8 11s. 9d.; Germany, £8 6s. 8d.; United States, £6 3s.

Insatiate greed! It never was so great and is constantly increasing. ALL THE OTHER NATIONS COMBINED HAVE NOT AS MUCH. Beware lest thine ingratitude offend the gods. Think not that one nation can long continue to possess more than all others. Thy fleets shall increase, though thy world's share may fall as new nations grow. Thou wert first; now others build ships and must share with thee.

Our national wealth is ONLY £11,806,000,000. To none of thy sister nations has so much been given per capita, and to none, even to the largest, such sum in the aggregate. Only the American Union, forty-five nations combined, exceeds thy hoard, but even it—thy child beloved of the gods—HAS MUCH LESS PER CAPITA.

ONLY 9,000,000 tons of iron and ONLY 5,000,000 tons of steel do we now produce per year. Even our product of coal (230,000,000 tons) is no longer greatest of all.

This is the highest product of iron and steel thou hast ever reached, greater per capita than Germany both of iron and steel. Not even the giant United States equals thy iron product per capita. Hear thou the counsel of the friendly gods. Until a new supply of iron ore be discovered, draw not upon thy present store one ton more per year. Thy consumption per man is greatest of all.

Our people number only 42,000,000 and increase slowly. Russia has 120,000,000 and increases apace. Germany has increased until she has one-third more than we, and her yearly rate of increase is nearly double. America has double our number and has increased in the last three years more than 2,000,000 yearly. Our increase is not 400,000. We dwindle in comparison. Consider the lessening stamina of thy sons, the numbers rejected as unfit for military service, the millions upon the brink of starvation. The gods in their mercy deny thy prayer for much denser population. This must not be. MUCH INCREASE OF POPULATION WOULD DRAG THE STANDARD STILL FURTHER DOWN.

NOT TO ALL THE LEADING COUNTRIES COMBINED HAVE SO MANY BEEN GIVEN. WHAT WILL SATISFY THEE, SPOILED DARLING OF THE GODS? BEWARE THOU TEMPTEST THEM NOT TO WITHDRAW THEIR FAVOR. NOT EVEN THE AMERICAN UNION HAS HALF AS MANY SPINDLES, THOUGH DOUBLE IN POPULATION. HEAR THIS AND PAUSE.

In recent years what thy brimming cups could not hold has necessarily been bestowed upon other lands. What they get lessens not thy store; far otherwise—THOU SHAREST THEIR PROSPERITY. To thee the gods have placed under tribute the nations of the earth; none escapes. Rejoice, therefore, in the rapid advancement of the world, for upon this thine own undiminished prosperity depends. Thou must decline if the world prospers not. CEASE TO BE AS CHILDREN CRYING FOR THE MOON.

Thinkest thou the friendly gods have not foreseen this and ordered all for Britain's safety? Consider war, with the combination of powers which drove Japan from her spoil—France, Germany and Russia. Where, then, would be thy food supply if dependent upon thine own empire, every ton of it subject to capture upon the seas? How different thy position with the republic demanding that her flag be respected and food not contraband of war, every ton of thy needed food protected, or the republic thine ally! Think of all this and render thanks to the gods for their prevision.

THIS FOR YOUR OWN EAR: THE GODS HAVE MADE IT IMPOSSIBLE THAT THERE CAN EVER BE WAR BETWEEN THEE AND THY CHILD ACROSS THE SEA—SIMPLY IMPOSSIBLE.

If ever there could be war, which the gods have made impossible, food for thee from Canada would never reach Canadian seaports. Dismiss from thy thoughts such phantoms and chimeras dire; never again are English speaking men to stand face to face in battle. When they fight it will be SIDE BY SIDE for noble causes. Thus have the gods decreed. Know this, therefore—the best and safest position possible for thee, dependent as thou art and must remain for food from across the sea to feed thy people, is that thou be not dependent for thy chief supply upon thy colonies, thy food subject to capture, but upon the independent republic of THINE OWN RACE.

Do Newspapers Make Juvenile Criminals?

THE boy thieves and pickpockets in the gangs of New York do not seem to care for the money they take in, BUT FOR THE HONOR OF BELONGING TO THE GANG. Exploitation in the papers is just what they desire, as it makes them appear heroes. ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No: 1273 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Isaiah Fuller, Plaintiff, vs Mary E. Fuller, Defendant.

The oject of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff, a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant.

The bill states that the parties were married in the year 1891, and that the defendant almost immediately deserted the plaintiff. That the desertion of the plaintiff by the defendant has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years before the bringing of this suit, that it is deliberate and final and beyond hope or expectation of a reconciliation.

The bill further states that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and prays for an order of publication against her.

It is thereupon, this 26th day of May, in the year 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county, give notice to the defendant, who is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, of the purpose of this suit, by publishing said notice once a week for four successive weeks before the 1st day of July, 1904, and warning the defendant to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 18th day of July, 1904, to show cause, if any she may have, why a decree ought not to be issued as prayed.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1276 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Mary Johnson, Plaintiff, vs. Alonzo S. Ellis, Defendant.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant, and to decree the marriage of the said plaintiff to the said defendant null and void.

The bill states that on the 24th day of December, 1900, the plaintiff was married to the said defendant, in Garrett county, with whom she resided until the month of March, 1902. That previous to said marriage to the plaintiff the said defendant was married to a certain Laura S. Jefferson, at Huntington, W. Va., on the 6th day of March, 1898, with whom the defendant lived until some time in the year 1900. That at the time of said marriage of the defendant to the plaintiff the defendant was previously married to the said Laura S. Jefferson, now Ellis, who is still living and from whom no divorce was had and that the said Laura Ellis was then and still is the lawful wife of said defendant. That the said defendant committed the crime of bigamy when he married the plaintiff, and that at the time of said marriage to the plaintiff she believed and was assured that said defendant was an unmarried and single man and had no knowledge of such prior marriage and that previous to the coming of said defendant into Garrett county the defendant was a resident of the State of West Virginia and that he was unknown to her until she met him in this county, where she resides. That she learned of said previous marriage some time in the month of March, 1902, that the defendant had a lawful wife living in the State of West Virginia and that she had left him and refused to live with him any longer. That one child has been born to them from the said marriage, viz: Raymond, who is three years of age. That she is advised that said marriage of the defendant is null and void. That the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant, that the said marriage of the defendant to the plaintiff be judicially decreed null and void, for the guardianship of said infant child, Raymond, and for general relief.

It is thereupon ordered, this 31st day of May, 1904, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 1st day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 18th day of July, 1904, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

In the Circuit Court for Garrett County. No. 1270 Equity.

John E. Winters, Plaintiff, vs. Anna A. Winters, Defendant.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant.

The bill states, that on the 10th day of June, 1900, the plaintiff was married to his wife, the said defendant, in Garrett county, with whom he resided until the 16th day of January, 1901. That the conduct of the plaintiff towards his wife, the said defendant, has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, and that the said defendant has, without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted the plaintiff and has declared her intention to live with him no longer; that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties is beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation and that the said plaintiff and defendant have had no children born to them from said marriage, and that said defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii and for general relief.

It is thereupon this 11th day of May, 1904, ordered, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 17th day of June, 1904, give notice to said defendant of the object and substance of the bill, warning her to appear in this court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 4th day of July, 1904, to show cause if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS.

This is to notify the taxpayers of Garrett county that the annual levy for 1904 has been made and published, and to call their attention to the following abstract, Section 45, Chapter 566, Acts of 1890, relating to the discount to be allowed and the interest be be charged on all tax bills:

"All county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of the levy thereof, and on all county taxes paid on or before the 1st day of September a discount of 3 per cent. shall be allowed, and after the 1st day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cents per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the tax bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt given for taxes so paid. But the discount shall not be allowed unless the whole amount of State and county taxes are paid when same is made.

Try for Health

CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 7, 1902.

Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

Yours truly Dunbar

Don't you want freedom from pain? Take Wine of Cardui and make one supreme effort to be well. You do not need to be a weak, helpless sufferer. You can have a woman's health and do a woman's work in life. Why not secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist today?

LOCOMOTIVE STRUCK HORSES AND WAGON

Killed One of the Animals and Smashed Vehicle to Splinters.

ACCIDENT OCCURED AT DEER PARK

Tuesday Afternoon—Mr. George Marley, Driver of the Team, Escaped Death By Jumping from Wagon.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad crossing at Deer Park Tuesday afternoon was the scene of a frightful accident in which one horse was killed and a man, Mr. Goorge Marley, driver of the team, came near losing his life.

Mr. Marley who is quite an aged man was engaged in hauling with a two-horse farm wagon, and coming upon the crossing at the point above referred to he failed to notice the swift approach of a west-bound fast freight train drawn by locomotive No. 2052, running as an extra 97. When nearly across the track Mr. Marley saw the train and realizing his dangerous position jumped barely in time to escape death. The pilot of of the engine struck the wagon about the centre and threw it high in the air. One of the horses attached to it was dragged by its harness against the engine which killed it instantly, the other animal escaping unhurt.

The engine was considerably damaged and the track for some distance was slightly torn up.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Mrs. A. M. Hers, of Washington, D. C., was a visitor at the Park Monday last. Before returning to the city she rented the Crane cottage.

Mr. G. D. Springer, of Fairmont was a guest of Dixie cottage Sunday and Monday last.

Mrs Kate V. Hardy is a guest of her aunt, Miss Swan, at Briarbend Seminary.

The great felt want of this mountain top is—hot weather. Hot day and night; of course not on the mountains, but in the cities and valleys. So hot that the people will have to seek "higher climes."

Messrs. Moon & Hudson have rented a cottage in "Cozy Row," and will give instructions in oil painting, and sell pictures of noted places in and about the Park.

Merchant J. H. Cuppett and wife, of Friendsville, spent the 15th and 16th at the Park.

Mr. J. Grant Hayden, wife and little daughter arrived at the Park Tuesday from Colorado. They will summer here in the Cowan cottage, which they will occupy jointly with Mr. Geo. Dixon and family, of Piedmont.

Mr. E. Summers, of Clarksburg, W. Va., spent Wednesday at this place. He will return next Saturday with his family and summer here.

Supt. Long went to Baltimore Tuesday to attend the reception given to Bishop Wilson by the Methodists of that city.

Our boarding houses and hotels are ready for guests. The Mountain Lake Hotel, Allegany House and the Assembly House report several guests. Some few of the boarding houses have guests.

Mr. McCulloh Brown and sister visited their relatives, Mrs. Mactier and family, at this place last Saturday.

Mr. F. T. Martin and family moved into their cottage on D street last Saturday.

CHILD DRANK LAUDANUM AND RECOVERS.

A Little Tot of Four Years. Son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Dixon

NEARLY PUTS AN END TO ITS LIFE.

Heroic Measures Used to Expel the Poison Which Is Accomplished, and the Child is Practically Well.

A little four-year old boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Dixon, of Oakland, came within a hair of putting an end to its life last Sunday morning by drinking from a bottle a quantity of laudanum which the child found upon a table.

It is thought that the boy drank the poison about eight o'clock while the other members of Mr. Dixon's family were in another part of the house and it was an hour or more before the condition of the child and its cause was discovered. Immediately thereafter Dr. Legge was summoned and the usual treatment in such cases was prescribed. The boy was made to walk for hours and it was only by the greatest effort on the part of his father and the physician that he was kept upon his feet, the drug having taken such hold upon his vitals that it was almost impossible to overcome it.

Sunday evening at a late hour the effects of the laudanum had worn off and the patient was pronounced out of danger and at this time he is entirely well.

DAYTON FOR SECRETARY NAVY.

West Virginian Said to Have Been Selected By President.

MANY YEARS IN CONGRESS.

Now Represents the Second District of West Virginia—Sketch of His Career.

Washington, June 15.—"President Roosevelt has tendered the position of Secretary of the Navy to Representative Alston G. Dayton, of West Virginia."

This statement was made by one of Mr. Dayton's closest friends last night and after the former had held his conference with the President yesterday. Mr. Dayton left for his home at Philippi last night and will give his answer to the President in a day or two. It is said by his friends here that Mr. Dayton will accept the position.

Mr. Dayton, probably more than any other man in Congress, has done more towards the upbuilding of the American Navy, and his selection would meet with very general approval.

Alston Gordon Dayton was born at Philippi, Barbour county, W. Va., now West Virginia, on October 1, 1857, and has lived all his life in the town of his birth, which is noted historically for having been the scene of the first land battle of the civil way.

Mr. Dayton comes from New England stock. His father, Spencer Dayton, was a native of Litchfield county, Ct. At 15 years of age, in September, 1873, young Dayton entered the second year of the Preparatory Department of the University of West Virginia, and during the year "made up" beside the regular studies, the Greek of the first preparatory years in which he was deficient. Those were hard times in this country and in consequence Mr. Dayton's class was a small one, and when it came to commencement day in June, 1878, it consisted of only six members.

He then took up the study of law and was admitted to the bar in the fall of his graduating year; in 1879 he was appointed to fill out an unexpired term as prosecuting attorney of Upshur county, W. Va., and was elected prosecuting attorney of Barbour county in 1884.

Mr. Dayton's entrance into national public life occurred in 1894, when he was selected as the Republican candidate to oppose W. L. Wilson. After a vigorous campaign he was elected and he has since been re-elected to every succeeding Congress. Mr. Dayton is a member of the Presbyterian church.

BIG FRUIT CROP.

Reports Received Show it is To Be a Whopper.

The fruit crop this year will be the largest ever experienced if reports are borne out by subsequent events. Every county has reported that the indications are the best ever known. This will be cheering news to those who like fruit but are prevented from getting all they wanted by the scarcity and prevailing high prices of former years.

BITTINGER.

The hail storm which passed over this place last Thursday afternoon was the most remarkable of the kind within the experience of the oldest residents. The remarkable features of the storm were the very small area covered by it and the length of the period during which the hail fell. Within a mile of the centre of the storm no hail was seen and but a slight sprinkle of rain. This was true on all sides of the storm, while within this small circle rain and hail poured down in torrents for fifteen minutes, covering the ground with ice to an average depth of an inch or more. A large amount of damage was done to corn and garden plants.

The outside visitors to this village over Sunday were Misses Ada and Clara Beachy, of Springs, Pa., Miss Rebecca Bevans, of Grantsville, Mr. Ger. Yommer and family, of Jennings, and Mr. Maust's of family of Meyersdale, Pa.

Mr. C. E. Ellithrope was called to Cumberland quite hurridly last Sunday.

Contractor Whorton, of Oakland, has a force of workmen here plastering the Lutheran parsonage.

Born, unto Mrs. Hettie Doolittle, residing near here, on Saturday, June 11th, a son.

A meeting of the District Republican Committee will be held at this place on next Saturday evening to recommend registration and election officials.

Mr. William Winterburg, who has been ill for some time at his home in Grantsville, is back again in charge of his old gang on the grade.

LOOKS LIKE OIL NEAR FINZEL

Most Favorable Indications at 175 Feet—Fine Drilling Outfit

The Piney Run Oil and Gas Company started their first well near Pocahontas, a few miles north of Finzel, Md., on June 1, and Wednesday last had reached a depth of 175 feet. John V. Wilcox, of Pittsburg, has charge of the drilling, the outfit being most complete. The machine weighs 24,000 pounds and has a 20-horse power boiler and engine. Dense, hard rock was struck on Monday at noon and oil has been very noticable ever since. It is now showing in quantities and the most competent oil men say the indications are very good.

GARRETT COUNTY BOYS AHEAD.

Took Two Prizes at the Wood Commercial College, Washington.

At the nineteenth annual commencement of Wood Commercial College, held in Washington, D. C., last Friday night the two first prizes were carried off by Garrett county boys, they being Mr. Joseph Dixon Ashby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ashby, of Crellin, and Clyde Rodney Smith, also of Crellin. The class from which these two young men graduated numbered more than a hundred, representing nearly every state in the Union. It is a rather singular coincidence also that of the prizes awarded Maryland students carried off the four first.

Mr. Ashby has already accepted a lucrative position with a real estate firm in Washington, where he expects to locate permanently. He is energetic, industrious and capable and his friends in Garrett county wish for him unbounded success. Mr. Smith is also in Washington and what has been said of Mr. Ashby's capabilities will apply with equal force to him.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

MANY men have been obscure in their origin and birth, but great and glorious in life and death. They have been born and nutured on farms or villages but have reigned and triumphed in cities. They were first laid in mangers of poverty and obscurity, but have afterwards become possessors of thrones and palaces. Columbus was the son of a weaver and a weavsr himself. Homer was the son of a small farmer. Demosthenes was the son of a cutler. The biography of ten of our presidents is the story of poor boys. John Adams, second President, was the son of a grocer of limited means. Andrew Jackson was born in a log hut in North Carolina and was reared in the pine woods for which the State is famous. James K. Polk spent his early life toiling on a farm in North Carolina. Millard Filmore was born in a small town in the Alleghany mountains. His father cut the logs of which their cabin home was built. Abraham Lincoln was the son of a wretchedly poor farmer in Kentucky and lived in a cabin until he was twenty-one. Andrew Johnson was apprenticed to a tailor at the age of ten years by his widowed mother. U. S. Grant lived the life of a village boy in a plain house on the Ohio River. This house is now on exhibition at the St. Louis exhibition. James A. Garfield was born in a log cabin. Grover Cleveland's father was a Presbyterian minister with a large family and a small salary. Willian Mckinley's home was plain and his father worked hard to keep him in school. Thus you all see that poverty is often a beacon light guiding industrious, honest young men to fame and fortune. No young man in glorious America has cause to be discouraged because he was born in poverty. From the most humble walks of life have sprung our greatest and best men and women.

TROUBLE comes to all of us. The past is strewn with broken expectations and inconsolable griefs. Death has left its shadows across almost every hearthstone and its constant ravages ever approaching near to us fill the bravest spirits with terror. But to us the rainbow of hope has been ever present. We have never believed that existance was purposeless. The same all-prevailing Power, whose handiwork jeweled the heavens with stars, who leveled the plains, who lifted up the mountains and taught the rivers to run down to the sea, designed our being and contemplated our destiny.

What it shall be we do not know. How it shall come we cannot tell.

Whether it shall come as the old prophets thought, "amid the clash of worlds or wreck of matter," or as the gentle beauty of a May morning we cannot see. But it will come. It will be just as easy for this world to end as it was for it to begin; and there is much greater reason for the ending than there is for the beginning. The inequality of this world must be somewhere adjusted. Here wrong is sometimes triumphant, insolent power occasionally victorious and unblemished virtue misjudged and misunderstood.

As surely as the sun shines, the time will come when the one will be punished, and the other rewarded, and when equal and exact justice, the most glorious phrase known to any language shall be meted out to all.

CAPTURES BRIDE AT LONACONING

Marriage of Dr. W. H. Ryland, of Meyersdale, and Miss Schuyler, Solemnized.

Miss Mary Schuyler, of Lonaconing, and Dr. W. H. Ryland, until recently of Grantsville, now of Meyersdale, Pa., were married Friday evening, by Rev. Charles A. Jones, of the M. E. Church. The wedding was private and there were no attendants. Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's father on the Island, only a few intimate friends of the contracting parties being present.

Dr. and Mrs. Ryland left Saturday morning for St Louis, where they will visit the Exposition. After a ten days' absence in western cities they will return to Meyersdale, where they will reside.

The bride-elect is the handsome and accomplished daughter of Mr. James Scuyler, county treasurer, and is one of Lonaconing's most popular young ladies. Dr. Ryland is a successful dentist, enjoying a large and profitable practice, and possesses the friendship and esteem of a wide circle of friends.

HOW TO REPAIR ROADS.

Highways Must Have Constant Attention.

Charles Williams, a contractor in Connersville, Ind., gives a few points on road repair in a paper before a farmer's institute which will be of interest: "Now, some points on how to keep roads in good condition, and how to repair them. A road must have constant attention, if it is to be of any use or value.

"Whenever a rut forms, it should be repaired at once. The road should be graded in the spring and graveled in the fall. The road will then be hard and smooth, and the gravel will be packed down, but not worn out before bad weather sets in. It depends on what shape the crown of the road is in what the condition of the road will be for travel through the winter; if the crown is in good shape, it will shed the water to the side ditches, and if they are in good shape the road will remain dry and solid.

"Now I will tell a few ways to spoil a good road:

"The surest way is to use the road grader and pile all the mud, sod and weeds from the sides and ditches into the center of the road. This makes the road soft and muddy, and it will be impossible for the next coat of gravel to unite with the old road bed. The result is the road will be spongy. The best plan is to scrape it up into piles and haul it to some gully, of which all roads have a few, and dump it there.

"The road grader is a good road builder in the hands of a man that knows how to use it, but otherwise he will do a great deal of damage.

"Another way to spoil a road is to make the crown so steep that all the travel will take the center. The result is the road is worn out in the center, and no use has been made of the remainder of the road. The center is cut up by three gulleys, which hold water and cause the road to be soft and muddy when it would otherwise be in good shape."

Dodson Man Buys Extensive Coal Tract.

William Burns, of Dodson, has purchased an extensive coal tract on Rich Mountain, in Randolph county, W., Va., three thousand acres of which lie on Roaring Creek, which has one of the most celebrated coal deposits in West Virginia. The veins on Roaring Creek on the Marshall, Scott and Rowan farms range from six to seven feet in thickness. On the summit of Rich Mountain, the average thickness is from five to six feet. Coal and timber lands hereabout are in great demahd.

The Church and The Stage

By FREDERICK WARDE, Eminent Tragedian

AN appropriate text for this article would be a paraphrase of the words spoken by the Master when he stood before his one earthly judge, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." I would ask all to render unto the church the reverence and the love that are the church's, and unto the stage the RESPECT AND ESTEEM WHICH ARE ITS DUE. Let us remember that the stage is an institution founded by the church; that the first theater audience was a church congregation, the first stage was an altar, and THE FIRST ACTORS WERE PRIESTS. Long before the advent of the Christ the drama was born, and, side by side with Christianity, it has survived the centuries, establishing itself beyond question as one of the most potent factors in mental enlightenment and MORAL CIVILIZATION.

What are the morals of the drama? Why have they been so sweepingly condemned? In the humblest playhouse in the country you will nightly witness the reward of virtue and the confusion of the wicked. The meretricious play of the more modern playwright cannot be laid at the door of the actor who speaks the lines. THE EVIL ORIGINATES IN THE BOX OFFICE. So long as the public patronizes the problem play so long will that class of play be written. The personal preference of the actor is in the opposite direction, but the actor is rarely free to follow his own inclinations. The American theatrical manager is a business man, investing his money in the commodity which sells best. It is unfair to condemn the people of the stage for a condition of affairs for which the public is to blame.

The uplifting of the stage, therefore, is the work of theater goers, not of actors. When recognition is given to the drama as an EDUCATIONAL institution, and not merely as a recreation and an entertainment, the stage will take its proper place among the world's civilizing agencies.

WITH ITS WEALTH OF LITERATURE, ITS VAST STORE OF LEARNING AND ERUDITION, IT SHOULD BE KEPT CLEAN AND WHOLESOME, PERFORMING WITH THE CHURCH AND THE SCHOOL-HOUSE THE FUNCTION FOR WHICH IT WAS INTENDED.

A Standing Army Is a Necessity; a Great Standing Army a Menace

By Bishop E. R. HENDRIX of Kansas City

A STANDING army is a NECESSARY evil, like a constabulary or police force. A great standing army, especially in a republic, is a MENACE to the liberties of the people. More than once in France it has meant the subversion of their liberties, whether civil or religious. Under the BEST discipline army life is demoralizing whether in times of peace or war. Men withdrawn for a term of years from commercial and industrial pursuits not only cease to be producers, but soon forget the very arts which make producers. Retired soldiers from the regular army are usually unfit for anything but unskilled labor, and with such an aversion to that as often to be useless to their employers, who may be moved by SENTIMENT to give them work. London can tell the story of the countless discharged soldiers, or "redcoats," whom General Booth encountered as he began his Christian mission, to which he finally gave the name "Salvation Army" in order to appeal to the military instinct in men where every other instinct was long dead. His industrial colonies were undertaken to remove them from the vices so common to men whose idle hours in barracks and camp are usually spent in gambling, OR WORSE.

General Sheridan shocked the sensibilities of many patriots when he declared that an old soldiers' home should not be located near a great fort with its regiments of regulars. He knew too well the habits of even veterans to consent to have his army exposed to the same vices NO LONGER CONTROLLED. We breathed easier when our regular army was reduced after the campaign in the Philippines, when we knew what vices were undermining the health and morals of thousands of our young men in another hemisphere. May we expose as few as possible to such evils of army life! Our own land, with its self reliant manhood quick to respond in time of national peril, can be depended on to furnish an additional armed force besides our moderate sized regular army WITHOUT INVOKING ALL THE EVILS WHICH COME OF LARGE STANDING FORCES such as cursed the assembled troops at Mission Ridge waiting for orders during our war with Spain.

THE HAGUE TRIBUNAL IS BETTER THAN A STANDING ARMY OF A MILLION MEN TO SUCH A NATION AS AMERICA, THE PEACE KEEPER OF THE WORLD.

There Should Be More Bible Study

By LESLIE M. SHAW, Secretary of the Treasury

THE Bible is not now taught in the public schools, and I do not say it ought to be taught there. In our busy life it is not taught in our homes.

IT IS SELDOM TAUGHT EVEN IN THE PULPIT. You will learn much about salvation and the plan for redemption if you listen to the sermons, but you won't know much about the Bible if you depend upon getting your knowledge of it from the pulpit.

THE ONLY PLACE ON THIS EARTH WHERE THE BIBLE IS TAUGHT IS IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

We Have Put a Stop to Home Baking.

If our bread did not stand the test of eating with home-made bread we would soon have to quit business. Our new process of making the dough by machinery is far better and cleaner than it can be done by human hands in any kitchen. A short visit to our light, airy bakery will show that delicatessen bread is superior to home-made bread, on sanitary conditions alone. We know it is better than home-made bread and a trial will convince you.

A fine assortment of fine cakes always on hand, fresh every day.

OFFICE IN THE NEWS BUILDING.

Where to Buy. What to Buy.

HOW TO BUY.

J. M. Davis & Sons' is the Place to Buy.

Hardware Our stock of goods is unusually large, especially in Builders' Hardware, Edge Tools, Garden Tools, Shovels, Forks, Spades, Locks, Hinges, Cut and Wire Nails, Barb and Smoothe Wire, Brushes of all kinds, Woodenware, etc. We have combined with our shelf goods a choice lot of Cutlery, Table Knives, Butcher Knives, Carving Knives, Razors, Silver Plated Ware, Door Bells, School Bells, Hand Bells, etc., besides a great variety of articles usually handled in a full-stocked Hardware Store. Most of our goods are bought direct from the manufacturers and will be offered at very moderate prices. The party who occasionally offers a few leading articles at a very low price, or less than cost, to draw trade, is not usually as much benefit to the community as the one who keeps up a constant supply of the best goods and can fill an order at the market value when the goods are needed. In nearly all lines the merchant must make the greater part of his profits in buying, not, however, by selecting a cheap class of goods, but in getting the very best at the lowest inside figure, so that first-class goods may be supplied at reasonable prices.

Stoves We have a stock on hand of more than one hundred stoves of all kinds, sizes and prices, running from a $10.00 Cook Stove to a $40.00 Steel Range, and Heating Stoves from $5.00 to $20.00. The above has been selected with the greatest care, not only in regard to price, but to the requirements needed for the trade in this part of our country. Stoves are manufactured for the section of country in which they are sold, and to suit the kind of fuel used, and prices are fixed by the manufacturer according to quality, style and finish. The stove business is a trade in itself and requires years of experience to know when you have the best goods that can be bought for the money, and best suited to the trade you are supplying. If you contemplate buying a stove of any kind, call and look our line over before buying. We think we can please any and all both as to price and kind.

Dishes This line we have given a great deal of time and attention to during the past five years, so that we have today a stock that cannot help pleasing any one, in both imported and American goods, running in prices from $4.50 for Dinner Set of American goods to a large decorated English Set that we are offering at prices as low as the same goods are sold anywhere. We also carry a very desirable line of Fancy China Novelties, that are equal to those found in many of our large towns and cities. Call and be convinced what we can do for you in this line.

Glassware Our counters are full of all kinds of glassware of the latest and most approved shapes including a line of heavy deep cuts that look so much like cut glass that one can hardly tell it from the genuine.

Washing Machines We are agents for the White Lily, which was put on the market some 18 months ago, and that stands today the largest manufacture of any one style of rotary Washing Machines in the world. This is a very broad statement when you take into consideration that they are practically a baby concern of 18 months old, but the company claims that it can back back up this statement with ample proof. At no time have they been able to supply the demand. The machine is sold on a guarantee to give satisfaction, and any ten year old child can operate it. Send for circulars showing cuts, styles and price of the most wonderful Washer ever made, and makes wash day what it should be, a pleasure instead of a drudge to the housewife. Price, $7.50; Wringers, $1.50 to $3.50.

Bread Maker The Universal Three Minute Break Maker is so simple in construction that the housekeeper's first thought is that the claims made for it are extavagant, but a trial will remove all doubts. No housekeeper who has once used it will ever be content to go back to the old, laborious, disagreeable way of making bread by hand. The reasonable price at which it is sold places it within the reach of every family.

Sewing Machines Two years ago we commenced selling the New Royal Sewing Machine, contracting direct with the manufacturer, and have the first one yet to find any fault with one of these machines, they are all guaranteed for 5 years, made with the latest improved attachments, and in style and finish cannot be excelled. We are offering these machines from $13.50 to $25.00, according to style and finish. If in need of a machine and you look into the merits of the New Royal, we are sure you cannot help but be pleased. And when you want needles or any little repairs, you can easily obtain them for you have a Standard Machine that is not put out under any fictitious name by catalogue houses or department stores.

Hay Tools To parties building barns and in need of a complete outfit for same of Hay Carriers, Forks, Fulleys, Barn Door Tracks, Hangers, etc., we can offer you a full line of these goods as manufactured by Mayers Hay Tool Co., who are today the largest and best Manufacturers of this line of goods in the United States. Years of experience has brought their goods up to such a high standard that no one in need of anything in their line makes a mistake by placing their order for whatever they need in this line. Place your order now, and be ready to take care of the harvest when it comes, and save yourself time, labor and trouble.

Cutlery This is a line in which you always expect to find a good assortment in a Hardware Store, and we feel sure you will not be disappointed when you look over our line, comprising as it does all sizes, styles, and finishes, and the same thing is true of Razors, examine the Real Safety Razor, one that you cannot cut yourself with. Guaranteed to give satisfaction. Sold on trial to any one and money refunded if not satisfactory.

Paints The Devoe line has been so largely sold and advertised by us during the past two years that it needs no recommendation to the general public, we believe it to be as good a paint as is made by anyone. It is a strictly pure Lead, Oil and Zinc Paint; contains no adulteration of any kind. Sold on its merits as one of the best, cheapest and most economical paints that is made. Send for our circular giving testimonials of parties who have used it.

Nickel-Plated Ware The growing demand for high-grade Nickel Plated Ware has led us to carry a nice line of up-to-date goods along this line, heavily plated on copper, such as Tea Spoons, Coffee Pots, Bread Trays, Ladles, Tea Sets, Chafing Dishes, Baking Dishes, Crum Trays, Cake Baskets, etc., once used by the housewife is always a standing advertisement.

Blue Flame Oil Stove Experience has demonstrated the Blue Flame Oil Stove to be the best and most perfect Oil Stove on the market. It burns common coal oil producing a powerful blue flame and cooks and bakes perfectly. The latest improvement is the Wickless. The burner is so constructed that no wick is necessary and so simple that no one can help but appreciate it. Call and see sample at work.

Field and Garden Fencing If you are looking for a fence that will stand hard usage, that will not sag, that has stays that will not slip, that will conform to uneven ground, that has no slack wires, that does not require an expert to erect that is low in price, then buy the only electrically welded fence made, absolutely stock proof, we can save you money on fencing. Call and see it, or send for booklet showing size, style and price.

Kitchen Supplies Among the many lines found in our store none will please the house-keeper more than to look over our line of tinware, granite ware—5 and 10 cent goods that are always wanted to complete a well regulated kitchen. A dollar spent along this line will greatly help to lighten the every day work of the kitchen.

REMEMBER We do not canvass to sell goods, as the cost of canvass and salary to agents is usually paid by the purchaser, but we will cheerfully send circulars and prices, quoting the very lowest market prices at the time, as we try to keep in touch with the ruling markets of the country.

COLONEL MONROE

Canada's Project of Building a Transcontinental Railroad Discussed

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick Upham Adams

"THE dispatches from Ottawa," remarked Judge Sawyer, "seem to indicate that the Canadian government is seriously considering the proposition of constructing a railroad line from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean."

"Yes, I read something about it in one of the magazines," observed Colonel Monroe. "My newspaper has been so crowded with accounts of highly interesting murders and society scandals that this item of Canadian news has not yet been mentioned."

"Come to think of it, I saw it in a Canadian paper," reflected the judge. "There seems to be an overwhelming public sentiment in that country in favor of the scheme. I am surprised that so radical a step should receive such strong and respectable support."

"We are the only conservative people now existing on the face of the globe—unless an exception be made in favor of the Chinese—and I am beginning to have my doubts about the Celestials," said the colonel soberly. "We are not even spectators of the great projects and experiments which are under way or in operation in other countries. We are not even informed concerning them. I don't suppose one American citizen out of a hundred knows or cares that the Canadian government has for years owned and operated thousands of miles of railway and that it has been the fixed policy of that government to extend its tracks across the continent at the earliest possible opportunity. The present parliament may or may not authorize this work, but it will be done when the proper time arrives. You see, judge, the Canadian people are not aware that the government ownership of railroads is a failure. We are the only ones in the world who have discovered that great secret."

"We are the greatest people in the world, all right," declared Postmaster Jenkins, "and we have the greatest railroads in the world."

"You are certainly in a position to make such a statement," said Colonel Monroe, who reflected that not since the Centennial exposition had Jenkins been fifty miles from Lincolnville. "We should aim to live up to your claim, but for one I am willing to admit that other nations show occasional evidences of a desire to progress. What do you think of that Canadian proposition, judge?"

"As you know, I am opposed on principle to the government ownership of anything that can properly be conducted by private enterprise," declared Judge Sawyer. "That is part of my political religion. I hold that the government should interfere as little as possible with those activities which have been developed by individuals. Believing this, I am naturally opposed to the proposition that our government enter into the railroad business or any other enterprise now controlled by private interests."

"You are entitled to such a belief and are in good company," observed Colonel Monroe. "It is a very old and a very respectable doctrine, though some ascribe its discovery to Thomas Jefferson. In the last half century there has been formulated another theory which has many honest and earnest followers, who hold that the government should own everything that cannot properly be managed by individuals. Personally I do not subscribe to either of the doctrines. It seems to me that civilization is the result of taking advantage of experiments. Our constitution was a compromise between several theories and a lot of hard and stubborn facts, and we have been experimenting with it ever since it was signed. Now, you will admit that there are some things which a government should own and operate?"

"Certainly I will," admitted Judge Sawyer.

"What, for instance?"

"I have no complaint to make against what our government now owns and operates," the judge said after a pause. "In my opinion, it is well that the post-office, the signal service, the agricultural department and similar institutions should be under the control of the nation. Education should be fostered by the nation, state, municipality or district. It has been demonstrated that these services can best be so conducted."

"But suppose it became apparent that the public administration of any one of these was a failure?" asked Colonel Monroe. "Suppose, for instance, that France or England abandoned control of the postal service and by contract or otherwise secured from private interests a much better one, would you not favor our government taking a similar step?"

"I should," answered Judge Sawyer.

"So would the body of the American people," asserted the colonel. "If public education proves a failure the experiment should be abandoned and private education adopted in its place. But it is not a failure, neither is the postal system, and hence there is no demand for a change. We both agree, however, that a government has no right to perpetuate a failure."

"There is no chance for an argument on that score," said Judge Sawyer.

"Now, let us suppose, on the other hand," suggested the colonel, "that a corporation in control of an industry national in its scope—a great railroad system, for instance—let us suppose that such a private industry, having a practical monopoly, refuses to keep abreast the progress of science and invention; that for the purpose of paying dividends on watered stock it maintains rates far in excess of the cost of operation and fair carrying charges; that it evades, disobeys or defies reasonable laws passed in the interests of its patrons; that it openly maintains in various state legislatures and in the national capital a lobby which does not halt at corrupt practices; that it finds it advisable to so control party machinery that it may select its own legislators, congressmen, senators and even judges; that it discriminates in favor of allied corporations; that it punishes or ruins communities which dare oppose its will; that it becomes a factor for good or evil, possessed of sufficient power to defy for a time the mandate of the law backed by the force of public opinion—in whom shall the future ownership of such a property be lodged, in private or in governmental hands?"

"The abuses you cite exist to a greater or less extent," admitted Judge Sawyer, "but I am not prepared to concede that the remedy lies in turning the properties over to the government In my opinion, that should be the la resort."

"It is the last resort," declared the colonel, with some earnestness. "This is a great country, as our friend the postmaster truly says, but it is not large enough to maintain side by side with the national government a rival as powerful and unscrupulous as the railroad trust and its allied corporations. One or the other must stand aside. The assertion that a time has arrived when 'the government must own the railroads or the railroads own the government' is more than a clever arrangement of words. It is not true to say that the railroads now own the government, but they certainly have managed to acquire a minority representation out of all proportion to their voting strength. They can obtain anything they care to demand. Never in recorded history has a private interest wielded so vast a power in the affairs of a nation. We cannot comprehend this for the reason that we are a part of it. It is as if the federated shoemakers of France had been able to dictate to Napoleon the choice of his generals and the details of his campaigns.

"Why, in the name of common sense," continued Colonel Monroe, with an impatient gesture, "should a railroad have anything more to do with legislation than a manufacturer of wooden spoons? Cigarmakers do not combine to send their men to the United States senate. I never heard that it was necessary for the carriage manufacturers to send representatives to congress, and I wish to tell you that the wagon and carriage interest is a pretty substantial one. I have yet to hear of the apple growers finding it necessary to have their man appointed to the bench, and yet the value of the annual apple crop would purchase a good sized railroad."

"You have wandered away from your subject," observed Judge Sawyer.

"What subject?"

"Canada's proposal to build a transcontinental railroad."

"I may have wandered a little, but I have had my eye on it all the while," laughed the colonel. "We cannot regulate all of the affairs of the universe in one evening, and we will talk that over some other time. Mrs. Monroe has invited me to dinner, and I dare not refuse. Good evening, judge. Good evening, Jenkins."

The postmaster closed the door after him and waited until the sound of his footsteps had ceased.

"The colonel's all right," he said, turning to the judge, who was calmly finishing his cigar. "Of course I don't agree with all that he says, and sometimes I can't make out what he means, but I'm satisfied of one thing."

"What's that?"

"The rumor that the colonel is going to run for congress isn't so," declared Jenkins, with a shrewd smile.

"What makes you think so?" The judge looked at Postmaster Jenkins over his glasses.

"What he said about the railroads," answered Jenkins. "After what the colonel said tonight the M. N. and W. wouldn't let him have a delegate from this county—not a delegate! You can put it down that Colonel Monroe is out of politics and out to stay. It's too bad. He was the best congressman that ever went to Washington from this district."

ILLINOIS TO VOTE FOR HEARST.

If there were any chance for the nomination of Hearst at St. Louis, that chance would be vastly increased by the action of the Illinois Democratic Convention yesterday, in instructing the delegates of that State to vote for Herst as long as his name is before the National Convention. Illinois is the third State in the Union, with 27 electoral votes, and accordingly with 54 votes in the St. Louis Convention. According to the instructions ordained by the Illinois Democrats yesterday, these 54 votes will be solidly with Hearst "first, last and all the time." At an earlier stage in the pre-nomination campaign, this result of the Illnois scramble might have made considerable impression, but the trend toward a conservative candidate—who is most likely to be Judge Parker—has by this time become too clearly pronounced to make the Illinois action a ground for alarm. As to the intrinsic significance of that action, it is reduced to a minimum by the circumstance that the control of the Convention by John P. Hopkins, the Chicago boss, was absolute and flagrant. Hopkins, for reasons good sufficient to himself, deemed it to his interest to have the delegates instructed for Hearst, and then Mr. Clarence S. Darrow, a bonafide Hearst man, moved to amend the simple instructions to vote for Hearst by the addition of the words "as long as his name is before the Convention." This was a clear move, and one that could not be opposed by Boss Hopkins without a confession of insincerity in his support of Hearst. The New York newspaper man's boom has all along been in a peculiar condition, anyway; if anything helps it, the question immediately arises whether it hasn't been hurt more than it has been helped The Parker movement derived its main force from the desire to nip the Hearst affair in the bud; and one of the chief reasons of the decline of interest in Parker was the feeling that Hearst had been sufficiently attended to. If this Illinois affair should happen to be viewed by the knowing in politics as of serious import in aid of Hearst, there will immediately be a fresh rallying round Parker, with the result that the Hearst boom will be rather worse off than before.

WATTERSON ON HEARST.

Colonel Watterson is very apt to be logical even though he be wrong in his conclusions. He has reached the conclusion that Mr. Hearst, the Democratic candidate for the St. Louis nomination, who thus far is exceeded in the number of votes by Judge Parker only, is insane. Colonel Watterson accepts the report that Mr. Hearst has already spent $2,000,000 in his canvass, a large draft even on the Hearst estate, and that as he has not a particle of chance for the nomination he must be crazy. Colonel Watterson's error appears to be in assuming that Mr. Hearst has not the ghost of a chance and that there can be no other plausible reason for his candidacy.

It is not safe to say in advance what a Democratic National Convention will do, as witness the gathering in Chicago in 1896, and the more extraordinary doings of the Kansas City convention in 1900. Surely the nomination of Mr. Hearst at St. Louis would not be stranger than the deliberate suicide of the party at Kansas City. The Republicans, though usually secure through their candidates and principles in mapping out a campaign, allow an ample margin for Democratic blunders and they are generally safe in doing so.

Mr. Hearst may also have two strings to his bow. His emphatic declaration that he will support the nominees of the St. Louis convention gives probability to this hypothesis. Millions of dollars are sometimes spent in advertising and the immense expenditure has generally been a sage investment. Mr. Hearst has already displayed shrewduess in this particular line of enterprise and it may have occurred to him that if he should be unable to land a presidential nomination he might largely add to the dividend-paying capacity of his individual enterprises. It is well to know what a person has in view before pronouncing dogmatically on his mental condition.

OUR WASINGTON LETTER.

As the time approaches for the assembling of the great nonimating conventions, the political situation becomes more interesting, and some unexpected changes are noticed. The Cabinet Ministers who have been West and East are returning and reporting at the White House. They bring good news and are satisfied with the situation, Secretary Hitchcock is back from St. Louis, and Secretary Cortelyou has returned from a tour of inspection in and around New York. The question of who should be on the Republican ticket for vice President will be left for the Chicago convention to determine. A Representative from Indiana, who called at the White House yesterday, informed the President that while Senator Fairbanks will not strive for the nomination, he will not decline it if it comes to him as the voluntary wish of the party. Congressman Hepburn of Iowa, also saw the President yesterday. He says that Speaker Cannon under no circumstances will consent to become Vice President. Little is now said regarding the Mr. Hitt for that office.

One question which it was thought would occupy a subordinate place in the coming campaign is rapidly coming to the front owing to a variety of unexpected circumstances, and that is the Philippines. The recent decision of the Supreme Court, handed down last Monday that not even American citizens, if they happen to reside in the Philippine Island are entitled to a trial by jury, together with the vigorous dissent of Mr. Justice Harlan, attracts wide attention. It has been an open political secret that the anti-imperialists will support the party which denounces imperialism and promises freedom and self-government to the Filipinos. This the Maryland Democracy, inspired by the fine hand of Senator Gorman has done. In a few days a large Philippine Commission will arrive in Washington, and be entertained at luncheon by the President, as well as by the business men of the city. No political speeches may be made but from June 15 to 18 the Filipinos will be the guests of the New York Stock exchange, with a big banquet at Delmonicos. The editor of the Manila Times is in Washiegton, to urge free trade. He thinks the people of the Islands will be glad to come into the Union as a territory, with the privileges of citizenship. All these matters are some what perplexing and indicates that there must be a modification of policy. But the Republicans are always equal to the situation and will hardly stand by and allow themselves to be outbid by the opposition.

As Republicans look at the Democratic situation it appears to be full of complicationss and possibilities. Thus far Judge Parker has 194 delegates; 220 are uninstructed; Hearst has 90; while the states of Massachusetts, Wisconssn, Maryland and Nebraska have favorite sons. The Democratic State platforms runs through the the whole scale, from the platitudes of the New York, to the radical statements of Nebraska and Maryland. One represents the silent Parker, the other the open-mouthed Gorman and Bryan. The question is whether to put a convervative man on a radical platform, or vice versa. We give it up.

Sir Chentung Liong Cheng, the Chinese Minister, has been in New York for a few days with Prince Pu Lun. He was received with great ceremony by the New York Stock Exchange, and in a speech by its President he was assured that if the United States insists upon an open door in China, the Chinese have just as good a right to insist upon an open door in America, with the treatment for the subject of that Empire as we require for Americans in China. News comes from Atlantic City that Chaochu Wu,—son of the former Minister from China, took the first prize on graduation day in the high school at that place. He speaks English perfectly and is studying French, German and Latin. He will pursue his studies at the University of Pennsylvania. The boy was educated in the public schools of Washington and has many admirers in this city.

Handsome, wealthy and young Congsessman Nicholas Longworth of Cincinnatti, who was often seen in the company of Miss Alice Roosevelt when Congress was in session in this city, is happily in St. Louis at the same time of Miss Roosevelt's visit. He told the women of the Exposition city that "it is a singular thing that it is your sex and not mine that showed such an interest in Miss Roosevelt. I am sure that she dislikes it very much." Of course Mr. Longworth ought to know. To escape the snapshot fiend while in that city, Miss Roosevelt wore a heavy veil completely covering her face. Even then she was "taken" veil and all, and her picture appeared on the first page of one of the principal newspapers.

It is known that Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Bristow has been engaged for some time in the formidable task of reorganizing the rural free delivery in order to be ready for the new arrangements provided by law which go into operation on the first of July. The number of divisions is to be reduced from eight to six; rural agents are to be employed; and the new schedule of salaries will take effect. The Department will not be able to do as much for the clerks as it intended, since for the coming fiscal year the amount appropriated for the increase of salaries is but one half a million of dollars while for the current year the amount was one million and two hundred thousand dollars. Of clerks employed in the postal service who receives more than $1,400 a year, of whom there are more than 600, only 58 can be promoted. Of those who receive less than $1,400 only about 30 per cent of those who have been recommemded for promotion will be made happy. And yet, the Democrats, in their state platforms, love to harp upon the exravagance of the Republicans in voting away the public money.

DEER PARK JOTTINGS.

Again, as the birds are singing their morning melodies, we are up at 5 a. m., June 14th, 1904, casting about for items, for as June is almost half gone, and the first part—one rain after another—the time has flown away, and to us this most glorious month of the year is rapidly passing away and in a few weeks the glad and festive 4th of July will be here, and when we think of the last 4th, and then think, what changes one short fleeting year has made in many homes of this fair land by the grim monster, who has invaded the home in the humbler walks of life. It has invaded the homes of the rich and called to their final account in our own land more of our prominent statesmen and business men than any one year in the history of our country.

Col. W. E. Burwell is at his office at the famous Deer Park Hotel, guiding and directing affairs in his usual western style and push, and all indications point to a successful season. If push and vim are necessary in conducting a first class hotel, then you may be sure this famous resort will in the future be more of a success, than in the past.

We find in taking a little ramble of a few days over the county that a spirit of improvement is abroad among our farmers. Especially is this so in the North Glade locality of Garrett county. New barns are going up, fish dams for private use, well painted churches, and school houses, and a cheerful greeting by all old friends of years gone by, made us feel like a boy again, as in the good old ante-bellum days. Especially was this so when we entered the hospital home of good kind Lloyd McRobie with all his worldly weakness (and we all have them). He has a great, generous, kind heart, and his home is presided over in the absence of his wife by his daughter. A few days ago, when the writer was extended all the kindness of that home (after getting lost on different occasion, among the saw mill roads of this lumber region), by this bright young lady and the rich viands was enjoyed—for a ride among the pines is a great apetizer—and we hope to have the pleasure of seeing our friends at Deer Park soon when we can, like him, say "come again, the latch string is always out and the granary never locked on your tired horse." Good, kind Lloyd, I would rather have your disposition then all the ill-gotten gains of some even in Garrett county that thinks they are far superior. But a few fleeting years and the sweet by and by will reveal, who will have the seat highest in that "City not made with hands."

Our genial friend and neighbor, Mr. Hennen of the B. & O. Railroad, outside of his profession as an engineer, is one of the neatest gardeners in our town. It looks like our friend should have been a farmer, which is the happiest life of all the many vocations of earning a living, and this grand man is too fair a specimen of manhood to be dominated over by this grasping monopoly.

We were surprised and pained in looking over the Grant County Press, published at Petersburg, W. Va., that our old friend ond comrade Benjamin Wotring, late of Bayard, and in busines at Sang Run the past few years, had died on 25th of May last at Hendrix on the W. Va. C. & P. R. R. The writer has often met this comrade since we wore the "Grey" and fought our battles over, but the gay and exciting ride into Cumberlaud on February 21st, 1865, when with 64 men, we entered a city guarded by 8000 infantry and 2000 cavalry and gave Genl's. Crook and Kelly, also Maj. Melvin of Kelly's staff a morning ride. Poor Ben Wotring you were the jolliest on that never to-be-forgotten ride, when we woke those Generals up, and one hundred and ten miles was passed over in the next 18 hours before a halt was made.

Our progressive farmer and stock raiser, Col. George Truesdell is now in Germany, after being in France, purchasing fine blooded sheep, and we hope to see his smiling face on the mountain top before the summer is over.

W. C. Jones reports his son Ray, who is a student at the West Virginia Conference Seminary, much improved in health and hopes to bring him home in a few weeks.

An invitation to the marriage of our old friend Dr. Harry Ryland was received a day or so ago by the writer, but too late to attend. We extend congratulations.

MAY TEST HIGHWAY ACT.

State Geological Survey Eager for Road Construction To Begin.

A special meeting of the State Geological Survey Commission was called by Governor Warfield at the headquarters of the Geological Survey at the Johns Hopkins University Tuesday at noon to consider the act passed by the last Legislature providing for State aid to highway construction and with regard to which some question has been raised concerning its constitutionality. It was decided at the meeting to prepare a letter to the boards of county commissioners of the several counties offering the services of the State's highway engineers in the making of surveys and the drawing up of plans and specifications for the construction of roads under the provisions of the act.

As the money under the act does not become available until after January, 1905, it will be necessary for the counties to co-operate with the State Geological Survey under the existing law, which provides for the highway division. Before the money under the new act can be secured from the State Treasury it will probably be necessary to bring the matter before the Court of Appeals at Annapolis for the decision, which is likely to be done at the earliest date. It is considered important, however, that surveys be made at as early a date as possible in order that plans may be ready for the construction of roads as soon as the act becomes operative, should it be declared constitutional. It was pointed out that construction could not begin before the spring or early summer of 1905 in any event, as much time is necessarily involved in the letting of contracts and in preparing for the actual construction. None of the State highways built under this act could therefore be completed prior to the autumn of next year.

The commission authorized the printing of a large number of copies of the new act, which, with a brief explanation of the method of operation of the law, will be widely distributed to the people of the State. Special forms showing the method of application for aid under the act will also be prepared and distributed to the various boards of county commissioners.

Governor Warfield requested the engineering staff of the survey to begin the preparation of topographic maps of the various State properties, and suggested to Professor Clark that he should make arrangements to begin with the Springfield State Asylum, at Mount Afry, where the management of the asylum is preparing for the construction of additional buildings to meet the needs of the State insane. Mr. Johnson of the highway force, will have charge of the work. At Governor Warfield's request plans have already been prepared of the grounds of the Executive Mansion at Annapolis, and Mr. Johnson will supervise changes in the roadway and other improvements to the grounds provided by the last Legislature.

Professor Clark made a report to the board regarding the great exhibit of mineral resources which the survey has prepared and installed at St. Louis. Dr. Atkinson, the State Comptroller, had just return from St. Louis and spoke enthusiastically to the board regarding the fine exhibit in the Mines Building and complimented the management of the survey on the exhibit.

ON HIS LONG JOURNEY.

Rev J. B. Shoup, Started on Schedule Time To Walk to St. Louis.

Some time during last winter. Rev. J. B. Shoup, formerly of this county, where he acceptably filled the Lutheran pulpit at Accident for a long number of years, and who for the past eighteen years or more resided with his family at Fitzgerald, Ga., wrote this paper a letter for publication in which he expressed his determination to start from Cumberland on June 11th, the anniversary of his birth, and walk the entire distance from that point to St. Louis where he will attend the World's Fair, and invited some other of his old comrades to join him in the tramp, but none accepted the invitation.

Nothing daunted, notwithstanding Mr. Shoup's advanced years, he started from Cumberland at sunrise on last Saturday, following the National Pike from that point to St. Louis. On Sunday night Mr. Shoup was in Grantsville, where he preached to a large and appreciative congregation, leaving there the following morning on his trip West.

When a young man Mr. Shoup walked a distance of three hundred miles at a stretch and although not now as young as he was in former years, the same indomitable will pervades him. On the trip to St. Louis he is carrying very little luggage consisting mainly of a change of clothing. His baggage precedes him via express.

As above stated Mr. Shoup is a Lutheran minister, but owing to a severe sunstroke has not been able to follow his calling and has led a retired life at his Georgia home, where his wife and daughter and a son, who saw service in the Spanish-American war in Cuba, reside. Rev. Shoup is a civil war veteran, and saw service as second lieutenant of Battery G, 3rd Pennsylvania Heavy Artillery. During the war he was stationed at Fortress Monroe, where he helped guard the late President Jefferson Davis, of the Southern Confederacy. Rev. Shoup arrived at Cumberland from Gettysburg, where he attended the Pennsylvania encampment. He is a genial, venerable looking gentleman, quite hale and hearty for his age.

OAKLAND HOTEL WILL OPEN JULY 4

Will Probably Be Operated by the Baltimore and Ohio.

R. J. Sensor, who operated the Oakland Hotel last year and who had a lease upon the property for the present year, surrendered the lease to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company last Thursday, being unable to make the necessary arrangements whereby he could successfully open and conduct the hotel.

Mr. W. E. Burwell, superintendent of the Baltimore and Ohio hotels, was in Oakland on Friday and stated that unless some one could be found to take the house and manage it this year it will be opened by the railroad company on July 4th for the reception of guests.

In the meantime extensive improvements are being made to the property. Carpenters have been busy for sometime making necessary repairs to the main and auxiliary buildings. An electric light house has been erected adjoining the laundry in which will be installed a large boiler, a seventy-five horse power engine and a dynamo of sufficient capacity to light the buildings and grounds. The machinery has already arrived and will be placed in the building within a few days.

POSTOFFICE ROBBED AT EGLON.

Merchandise Belonging to Julius Scherr Also Stolen.

The postoffice at Eglon, over which our enthusiastic Republican friend, Julius Scherr presides, and which is located in his store, was robbed last Saturday night of cash and postage stamps amounting to about $25, all letters remaining uncalled for in the office and also letters mailed for despatch. Besides the Government losses Mr. Scherr is the loser by about $200 as that amount in goods was carried off by the thieves.

As soon as the theft was discovered the robbers were followed and several miles east of Eglon portions of burned letters were found in the woods indicating the spot where the men had gone through the mail stolen from the office.

WILL BE ONE OF THE DOORKEEPERS

At the National Republican Convention In Chicago Next Monday.

Mr. William A. Smith, of Hoyes, has received a notice from Sergeant-at-Arms William F. Stone, of the Republican National Convention which meets in Chicago next Monday, that he has been appointed one of the door keepers at Convention Hall. Mr. Smith will leave for Chicago tomorrow morning, going by the way of Pittsburg, and after the adjournment of the convention he will go to St. Louis where a week or ten days will be spent at the World's Fair.

The following rates for work at Liller's barber shop became effective Monday of this week: Shaving, 10 cents; hair cut, 25 cents; neck shaved or clipped, 5 cents; shampoo, 25 cents; massage, 25 cents. 15—2

Mr. George W. Legge, of Oakland, was on Monday granted a pension of six dollars per month. This, under the new ruling of the Department, is the minimum paid veterans when they arrive at the age of sixty-two years.

Miss Connell, of the Ladies' Bazaar has disposed of her stock of goods to a Mr. Taylor, of Baltimore, who will take charge of the store this week. Miss Connell will return to her home at Hutton and reside with her aged mother.

Mrs. Charles A. Tower went down to Cumberland yesterday morning to visit her brother, Judson Sprigg, who has been and is still quite ill. The young man will be taken to a hospital in Baltimore in a few days where he will be operated upon.

AN ENJOYABLE OUTING.

Several Gentlemen Guests of Superintendent Long at the Park Monday.

Monday afternoon a party of ten gentlemen of Oakland accepted an invitation extended by Rev. John M. Davis on behalf of Superintendent Thomas S. Long, of Mountain Lake Park, to enjoy an hour's ride in the new yacht recently put into commission on the lake at the Park.

The party composed of Rev. Mr. Davis, Messrs. D. E. Offutt, G. S. Hamill, Fred. A. Thayer, A. G. Sturgiss, E. H. Sincell, Chas. A. Deffinbaugh, J. D. Hamill, and the editor of this paper, were driven to the lake in Martin's bus where they were received very warmly by Mr. Long and immediately passage was taken by the entire party for a sail on the (blue not briny) waters of the beautiful lake. Mr. Long took his station at the engine and soon had the boat going full speed notwithstanding its load of nearly a ton. The editor was at the helm and succeeded by the hardest to keep the nose of the boat off the shoals and sandbars. We congratulate ourself, however, that no mishap occurred, but this was made possible by following the instructions whispered in our ear by the chief engineer who knew the location of shallow places.

The boat acted beautifully and the sensation of being aboard a vessel propelled by power away up here nearly three thousand feet above tide water was exhilerating in the extreme. The speed made exceeded ten miles an hour.

At the lake besides the yacht, which is appropriately named "Mountain Lake," there are ten new boats of excellent construction which are propelled by oars and which will be kept in commission during the coming season.

The little outing was enjoyed by all the party, and to Superintendent Long and Mr. Davis for the slight diversion from business affairs the thanks of the gentlemen were warmly extended.

Mr. Jacob S. Miller, executor of the late Christian Orendorf, of Grantsville district, will sell at public auction on the premises near Bittinger, four parcels of land belonging to the late Mr. Orendorf. The lots range from 34 to 60 acres. He will also sell the timber off 75 aeres belonging to the same estate. The sale will take place on Saturday, July 9th, at 2 p. m.

The ladies of Swanton and vicinity have arranged a program for an entertainment in May's Hall, at Swanton, on Friday evening of this week. The object of the affair is to raise funds with which to build a sidewalk in the town. The ladies of Swanton are to be commended for their public spiritedness and we trust that they may meet with great success.

Mr. Duncan Sloan, of Lonaconing, and Mr. D. Lindley Sloan, of Cumberland, were business visitors to Oakland Tuesday morning. The former is one of the leading merchants of his native town and the latter is a rising young attorney of the Queen City. Both are excellent gentlemen and were cordially greeted by their many friends in Oakland.

Mr. Fred. A. Thayer and Mr. E. H. Sincell returned to Oakland Monday from a week's fishing trip in Pocahontas county, West Va. They were accompanied by ex-Sheriff W. P. Lee, who joined them at Bayard, and by Messrs. M. N. and Merritt Wilson, whose head quarters are now at Elkins, West Va. The party had a pleasant outing and during the week caught about three hundred brook trout.

Postmaster Michael Nathan, of Grantsville, visited Oakland Monday and on Tuesday he was appointed by the Orphans' Court for this county administrator of the personal estate of the late Francis McKenzie, of Grantsville. Mr. Nathan returned to Grantsville Tuesday afternoon. He was greatly impressed with the improvements made in Oakland since his former visit here something over two years ago.

The crossties on the Baltimore and Ohio bridge which crosses the Big Youghiogheny River two miles west of Oakland, were set on fire last Saturday evening by hot ashes dropped from the ash pan of a passing locomotive. The crew on an east bound train reported the matter to the station here and the trackmen were notified who went out to the bridge and soon quenched the fire. But little damage resulted.

If a man had a $20 bull pup he would look after it very carefully and not let it run over town at night. But if he has a boy it is different. He is turned loose at a tender age to go to the bad and people wonder where the great army of bums, tramps, deadbeats, loafers, thieves and gamblers come from. They are germinated from the pure seed gathered from the home, sown broadcast on the streets and alleys. The boys ought to be given a show equal to that of a bull pup.

NO FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION.

Oakland Citizens Have Decided Not to Celebrate This Year.

For some weeks the question of having a Fourth of July celebration in Oakland, has been discussed pro and con, several meetings of the business men and others interested have been held, but a conclusion was not reached until yesterdyay when the committee appointed to make the necessary arrangements decided that in view of the circumstances and the lack of funds with which to successfully carry on the affair to drop the matter and in consequence Oakland will not entertain on that day.

While this is regretable still it is thought that it is best and we can go "a-fishin'!"

Rev. E. Manges, pastor of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, will leave Oakland Tuesday morning for Fayetteville, Pa., where on Wednesday he will officiate at the wedding of his son, Rev. Lewis Manges, pastor of the Hummellstown (Pa.) Lutheran congregation, to Miss Margaret Long. Mr. Manges the elder will return to Oakland Thursday morning, accomponied by his daughter, Miss Annie, who has been at York, Pa., during the winter.

Festival.

The teachers of the public school will hold a strawberry and ice cream festival in Offutt's Hall, Thursday evening, June 23, proceeds to go toward the remodelling of the interior of the school building in Oakland. The cause is a most worthy one and all residents of town should give it their support.

Lutheran Services.

Rev. E. Manges, pastor of the Oakland Lutheran church, will preach at Crellin next Sabbath afternoon at 2.30 o'clock; at Hutton he will preach Thursday, June 16th, at 8 p. m.; catechise at 7 o'clock.

Special Prices Every Saturday.

This from the antiquarian department of the Hagerstown Morning Herald: "Jeweler J. Walker Fell of West Washington street repaired a watch last week reputed to be the one once in posession of Louis XIV., King of France in the Seventeenth Century, and presented to that monarch by the Italian magician, Prinetto. The timepiece is a most delicate piece of mechanism, and very curious. It consists of a golden frame, circular in form, with three glass dials in the front piece, one circulating about the minute hand, one about the second hand and the third about the hour hand, the hands themselves remaining stationary on a small pivot. The mechanism is cleverly concealed in the circular frame, moving in perfect time with the three different glass dials. The watch was given to Mr. Fell to be cleaned by a Mr. Joseph L. Reed, traveling man of Knoxville, Tenn. Mr. Reed stated that the watch was presented to him by an English Army officer some years ago in Mexico upon the latter's death."

To the editor of The Republican

The subjoined communication appeared in the issue of the Morgantown Dominion and as it fits the condition of things in Oakland with respect to the nuisances complained of, I ask that you will give it space in your columns this week. SUBSCRIBER.

The communication above referred to as appearing in our West Virginia contemporary follows:

Dogs! Did you say, Dogs? Was it dogs mentioned?

Well, there are dogs, and there are dogs. There are a few dogs in Morgantown.

A man passed down street a few minutes ago with four distinct, individual dogs following him. He was was a representative citizen.

He likes dogs.

You must like dogs or you are not in it with this population—you are a fureigner.

You may not like to have a dog yourself, but then you must like your neighbor's dog and like to have them visit you and upset your garbage barrel and scratch up your flowers and sich.

Now, there is a neighbor of mine who likes flowers. She is a very foolish woman or she would prefer dogs. But she persists in planting a litile flower bed, and every dog in town visits that flower bed every day.

It is just across the street and when I have a leisure hour I just sit at the window and count the dogs at that flower bed.

They come in a procession. They take a sniff at the flowers and then scratch with all four feet.

Then when all the dogs in town have had their sniff at that flower bed, the patient lady comes out and looks around somewhat dazed and then begins to gather them up and replant her precious flowers.

When she has finished and retired the country dogs begins to file into town—for every vehicle has from one to two dogs following it.

These country dogs seem to like flowers too. But the town dogs sometimes object to them sniffing our town bouquets and they fight over this neighbor's flower bed. And then, if you could see that flower bed some evening when all the dogs in town have sniffed it, and when all the country dogs have fought for a sniff—well it is then that I just go into my back yard and take "a laff" all to myself.

But this lady and some other neighbors I hear talking over the back fence about "putting out some dog pizen."

But the owners of fine dogs are opposed to "pizen."

They say it is "ornery" and "mean" to "pizen a dog."

It is certainly very hard on the dog. But then these neighbors say they have a perfect right to "put out pizen" on their own premises, and no dog will get hurt if he stays at home. Every man, they say, has a right to keep a dog, or two dogs, or a dozen dogs, if he keeps them at home, but he has no more right to let his dogs forage on my premesis than his cow or his horse.

So these neighbors held a caucus and then called a convention and passed resolutions to "put out pizen" and plenty of it.

As I am a middle-of-the-road-mugwump and don't have any dog or any flowers I thought I would just report the proceedings of this convention, and as "times is a little dull this season" I suggest that dog fanciers also call a convention and pass resolutions and adopt a platform, and that we enter upon a summer campaign to determine whether anybody has any rights in this town that the dog ought to respect.

He likes dogs.

You must like dogs or you are not in it with this population—you are a fureigner.

You may not like to have a dog yourself, but then you must like your neighbor's dog and like to have them visit you and upset your garbage barrel and scratch up your flowers and sich.

Now, there is a neighbor of mine who likes flowers. She is a very foolish woman or she would prefer dogs. But she persists in planting a litile flower bed, and every dog in town visits that flower bed every day.

It is just across the street and when I have a leisure hour I just sit at the window and count the dogs at that flower bed.

They come in a procession. They take a sniff at the flowers and then scratch with all four feet.

Then when all the dogs in town have had their sniff at that flower bed, the patient lady comes out and looks around somewhat dazed and then begins to gather them up and replant her precious flowers.

When she has finished and retired the country dogs begins to file into town—for every vehicle has from one to two dogs following it.

These country dogs seem to like flowers too. But the town dogs sometimes object to them sniffing our town bouquets and they fight over this neighbor's flower bed. And then, if you could see that flower bed some evening when all the dogs in town have sniffed it, and when all the country dogs have fought for a sniff—well it is then that I just go into my back yard and take "a laff" all to myself.

But this lady and some other neighbors I hear talking over the back fence about "putting out some dog pizen."

But the owners of fine dogs are opposed to "pizen."

They say it is "ornery" and "mean" to "pizen a dog."

It is certainly very hard on the dog. But then these neighbors say they have a perfect right to "put out pizen" on their own premises, and no dog will get hurt if he stays at home. Every man, they say, has a right to keep a dog, or two dogs, or a dozen dogs, if he keeps them at home, but he has no more right to let his dogs forage on my premesis than his cow or his horse.

So these neighbors held a caucus and then called a convention and passed resolutions to "put out pizen" and plenty of it.

As I am a middle-of-the-road-mugwump and don't have any dog or any flowers I thought I would just report the proceedings of this convention, and as "times is a little dull this season" I suggest that dog fanciers also call a convention and pass resolutions and adopt a platform, and that we enter upon a summer campaign to determine whether anybody has any rights in this town that the dog ought to respect.

DOG PURP.

NUMBER NINE, surgical ward, was lying quite still, with his eyes tightly closed and his little freckled hands pressed down hard on the covers so they might not see how they were trembling. Two doctors were standing by his bed. One was a large, portly man, with bushy gray hair and a pretentious manner.

"INDEED, I FULLY AGREE WITH YOU."

That was the great Dr. Fletcher, senior physician in charge. The other—younger, thin, less imperative, wearing double glasses and a therapeutic side whisker—was Dr. Parks, the junior. Number Nine pretended to be asleep and listened, for they were talking about the case.

"But"— said Dr. Parks hesitatingly.

"But what?" said Dr. Fletcher impatiently. "The symptoms are there."

"Except"—

"Except the fever. I know he doesn't carry temperature. But it has never been proved that fever is invariably attendant."

"If"— began the junior.

"'If' is a dangerous word in surgery, my dear Parks."

The objector succumbed. The great Fletcher had dropped the formal and always slightly ironical "doctor" and had called him "my dear Parks." It was an unusual thing for the senior physician in charge to court the opinion of the junior, and perhaps that is why the junior regarded the diagnosis of Number Nine with something resembling suspicion. However, he succumbed to the cajolery of his chief.

"I shall operate at 3 o'clock this afternoon," said Dr. Fletcher. "If you care to be present you will, of course, receive mention as 'assisting' in the operation. But, as you do not concur in the diagnosis, I"—

"Indeed," interrupted Dr. Parks—"indeed, I fully agree with you in all the main points and will be glad to act as your assistant. Your knowledge, your experience, your high rank in"—

"Then," cut in the chief curtly, "at 3 sharp."

Number Nine opened his eyes, which were pale blue and very strained and scared looking.

Being only ten years old, he believed in the superstition that doctors and operating knives are the natural enemies of the integral human being.

The new surgical nurse came along and stopped at the foot of the bed. He and Number Nine had become friends immediately after their acquaintance had begun.

Perhaps some explanation is due as to why the Needle's Eye hospital came to employ Robert McManus as a professional nurse. The hospital was supported by a legacy and managed by a board, and that accounted for many things besides the popping of many corks in the officers' quarters and exceeding thin beef tea in the patients' wards. For example, if a pleasant faced young fellow comes along and is willing to undertake for $50 certain duties that stand for $100 on the payroll, you naturally engage him on the spot. It is plain to see that the money will go further—in other directions. In this wise we find McManus, professional, at his new post.

"Hello, kid!" said McManus, looking closely at the boy's chalky face "What's the trouble?"

A shaky little paw crept from under the coverlet and clutched a finger of McManus' hand.

"Bob, you know as much as the doctors do, don't you?"

"Well, kid," said the nurse cogitatively, "a man gets rusty in his business sometimes. You see, I haven't been followin' my regular profession right lately. I played short and third with the Little Rocks all summer, and they went to pieces and left me on the hog. I saw an ad. in the paper about a professional nurse wanted here, so I thought I'd sign with the hospital till there's somethin' doin'. You might keep all that to yourself, though, kid."

"Bob," said the boy, with laboring breath, "do you know what pendy—pendy—sy—tis is?"

"Sure thing," answered McManus cheerfully. "The Sunday paper tells about it. But you don't call it right. It's appendiscedus. It comes from eatin' apple seeds, and they slice you up for it."

Number Nine's hand clung tighter. "They thought I was asleep," he continued—"the doctors did—and I heard 'em talkin'. What's op—per—ate, Bob?"

"Operate?" Bob rubbed his nose quickly. "Why, that's the medical term for carvin'. They're goin' to carve some party up to see what's in um. I think it's that guy in the last bed. I heard the croaker say last night he was goin' to cut off his narcotics."

"No, it's me, Bob; it's me! They was standin' right over me and thought I was asleep. Don't let 'em cut me up, Bob—please don't!"

"Steady, now, kid. Don't play too far off your base. Why didn't you say it was you?"

"I ain't got it, Bob—honest I ain't! It's just a little pain that 'll be well in a few days. Don't let 'em do it, Bob!"

"Hold your base, now. These croakers ought to be on to their job. They want to do what's best for you. A croaker, you know, kid, he does the infightin', while a trained nurse like me only does the bottle and sponge act, you might say. They looked into your case. You been eatin' plenty apples, I guess, and swallowin' seeds."

"I double crisscross declare, Bob, I ain't et an apple in two months!"

"That's funny," mused the new nurse perplexedly. "It comes always from eatin' apple seeds. What give you this pain, then, kid?"

Number Nine drew a long, slow, quivering breath.

"Nothin' never give it to me," he answered dully—"nothin' 't all. My fadder sent me here 'cause I was sick." After a pause he continued: "Me fadder gimme a sled one Chris'mus. Me fadder was good to me. Three o'clock, the doctor said, Bob, and it's most 12 now."

McManus laid Number Nine's head back upon the covers and rose, stooping over him to arrange the pillow.

"Kid," he said thoughtfully, "you lay still and remember that Bob is goin' to look out for your interests. I'm goin' to investigate this business."

The hospital druggist, an anaemic young man in a garrulous checked suit and red necktie, was bending over his counter, jabbing capsules full of a white powder. Came the new nurse and leaned upon his elbow two feet away.

"Hospital pretty full for the time of year, doctor?" inquired the nurse insinuatingly and scored a base hit.

"Oh, I'm not one of the physicians!" said the druggist in a tone that intimated the loss to the institution. "Though if it wasn't for my looking after things I don't know what the patients would do, old Fletcher's away so much. You're the new nurse—professional?"

"Professional—sure! It must take a pretty wise head, now, to hold your job. Guess you get on to all the latest dodges. What's your opinion about operatin' for appendiseedus, now?"

"It's a deuced neat caper," said the druggist, with a critical frown. "I always assist old Fletcher. He's crazy about appendi-ci-tis—excuse me—cases. He's writing a book on the subject. He's a brilliant operator, but I don't exactly approve of his plan of ligating and amputating below the ligature. I believe in suturing over it. Still, he's been successful."

"Your idea seems to me to be best," said McManus, with admiration in his tone. "Now, that kid, Number Nine, they're goin' to operate on—you think he's got it?"

"Well," said the druggist, slowly closing one eye, "did Eighteen have necrosis when Fletcher amputated his leg last Thursday? And did Five have septicæmia when he lost an arm on Saturday? I guess I can talk to you."

"You mean the kid ain't got it?" asked the nurse, with a shade too much interest in his voice. The druggist's enthusiasm ebbed a little. He shrugged his shoulders.

"Oh, he's been diagnosed. Fletcher is supposed to know his business. But," he added in a little flurry of self vindication, "you know yours, too, so just take a look at the temperature chart on the wall behind his bed."

"You know a first class croaker—er—I mean doctor—that's got an office close around here?" asked the nurse suddenly.

"There's Dr. McIvor on the next corner below, this side of the street. I'm studying theory and practice with him after hours. He's Al, but not as daring as Fletcher."

Half an hour later McManus walked into Dr. McIvor's office and laid down $4.20 upon the table.

"That's my pile, doc," he announced. "Take it and write me out on a piece of paper full directions how to size up when a party's got appendiseedus, dead sure thing or not, whichever the case may be."

At a quarter to 3 Dr. Fletcher strolled into the surgical ward jingling silver in his pocket and humming a tune in a very flat key. In his pseudo cheerful, loud voice he rallied the patients playfully—miserable wretches who much perforce seem visibly grateful for this gratis sick room heartiness—thus performing the part of the benefactor who condescends to relax.

Round the room he went, stopping here and there, pretending to be unaware of a certain bed, as a cat will sometimes circle, counterfeiting ignorance of a mouse she has caught and laid, disabled, a little out of her reach. While on his round he spoke a word to an attendant, who put on a big white apron and went and busied himself in a smaller adjoining room.

At five minutes to 3 the new nurse began to hover around Number Nine's bed. As the clock began to strike he had just completed his fifth or sixth pretended arrangement of the bedclothes. On the stroke Number Nine's hand closed, with a desperate grip of terror, around his friend's primary digit. Dr. Parks strolled in, imitating as far as his rather mean port would permit the benignant strut of his superior. Finally, as the cat abandons comedy and goes to its meat, the senior physician's stroll culminated at Number Nine's bedside.

"And how does my 'ittle man feel?" he lisped, with the painful sprightliness of a stranger to child talk.

The nurse's finger that the boy held seemed to be in a vise. Number Nine's freckles grew dark against his increasing pallor. His eyes, the irises of which were completely white encircled, stared so fixedly at the distinguished vivisectionist that that gentleman's spurious smile became almost real as he noted the marvelous resemblance of Number Nine to one of the many rabbits he had seen gaze thus up at him wired down to his dissecting table.

"Will you trust Bob, kid?"

He heard a faint "Yes, Bob," and the small form, now Number Nine no longer, but a "subject," lay quite still, looking out the window, but never relaxing his hold on his protector's finger.

The druggist bustled importantly in with the keys to the instrument cases. The doctors donned white gowns. Fletcher was humming a tune. Dr. Parks stuffed some absorbent cotton into a paper funnel and began to pour the ether.

"You may go now," said Fletcher to the nurse.

"No-o-o-o!" the shrill voice of the boy went, keen and startling, through the wards. Outside in the corridor a nurse said to another: "Operating without anæsthetics! Old Fletcher's getting in a bigger hurry than ever."

Dr. Fletcher bent over the boy.

"'Ittle man let the good doctor give um medicine to make um well." To McManus he said: "You'd better stay till he's under the influence. He'll be quieter." The druggist was arranging the instruments on a little stand. Unexpectedly the nurse spoke up.

"Doc," he said quietly, "the kid knows what you brought him in here for. He heard you and the other croaker talkin' it over. Doc, don't you think you're callin' too many strikes on him?"

Dr. Fletcher regarded McManus as he would have gazed upon an anatomical freak, minus the pleasure.

"What does this buffoonery mean?" he asked coldly.

"Wait till I have a look at the score card," said the nurse, drawing a sheet of paper from his pocket. "Here you are! Doc, that kid ain't got appendiseedus any more than I have. I got all the runs—I mean the symptoms—right here. 'Localized pain,' it says; that he's got. 'Rig-rig-idity of the wall on right side;' maybe he's got that. 'Tenderness in the ileo-ileo-cae'—I'll have to pass that word up. But, doc, where's your fever? Where's your 'in-invariable rise of temperature?' The kid ain't had a mite of fever since he's been sick. Besides, doc, I'll take a paralyzed oath he ain't et an apple in two months."

"I believed you represented yourself to be a trained nurse?" said Dr. Fletcher, incasing, for a moment, the fire of his rising wrath in the asbestus of sarcasm—"a professional."

McManus' eye met the doctor's withering gaze with a peculiar gleam in it.

"I am the goods," he said, with serene ambiguity.

"Leave this room and this hospital at once, you meddling ignoramus!"

"You bet I'm a trained nurse," said Number Nine's champion softly, lingering with the original proposition.

"From what most extraordinary institution of instruction, may I ask?" said Fletcher, shifting back from his bluff to the more tenable ground of sarcasm.

"Barney Gilligan's East Side gymnasium." The nurse's voice split the air as keen as one of the doctor's scalpels. "Want to see my diploma?" He bent over Number Nine. "Turn my finger loose, kid, and we'll make a home run."

McManus balanced himself lightly upon both feet, and now it would have been a captious critic who would not have said that his manner was purely professional. His arms moved outward, one after the other, with such apparent ease that it seemed out of all proportion to the exertion that the big doctor should fall with his head in a corner and remain there; also that Dr. Parks should dive backward through a screen and present only the soles of his shoes to the rest of the action.

"Am I a trained nurse?" remarked that individual, addressing the query to emptiness, or rather to unheeded ears, for the attendant and the druggist had fled, neither of them feeling authorized to examine into the credentials of Gilligan's graduate.

"Catch on, kid!" said the nurse. Number Nine's bony arms clutched his deliverer's neck. He felt himself lifted, as a feather, from the cheated altar of science and borne out through the ward. One stop they made when the nurse put on his hat and wrapped his coat around the boy. Then he took up his burden again and halted not until they were clear of the building and grounds of the Needle's Eye hospital.

On the sidewalk the boy said faintly: "I don't want to go back to me fadder, Bob. I wants to stay wid you."

"Not go back to your father, kid, what was good to you and bought you a sled Chris'mus?"

"'Twas a many a Chris'mus ago, Bob. He was good to me oncet, and I ain't fergot it. He's different now. He's a-drinkin'. I wants to stay wid you, Bob."

"And you shall, kid. I told you I'd bring you home when it was my strike, and I'll do it. There's plenty of jobs. I'll find another one before night, and we'll stick together. Bob wouldn't let you die on third!"

"Bob!"

"Yes, kid."

"I'd never tell anybody but you. I know what's de matter wid me."

"The mischief you do! You sure you didn't eat a apple, kid, and it slipped your mind, maybe?" asks McManus anxiously.

"Sure. I knows all about it. I didn't want nobody to know. He used to be awful good to me, Bob. That sled was a red one with a yellow rose on de side. I ain't forgot it. But last week he kicked me—here in the side. That's what's the matter, Bob."

"And you wouldn't— Well, I be ——!" said the ex-nurse.

Bowser's Stone Dog

He Gives Him a Coat of Paint—Too Much Criticism Causes Him to Lose His Temper, and He Handles a Citizen Rather Roughly.

[Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.]

WHEN Mr. Bowser seemed to be taking things very easy at the breakfast table the other morning, Mrs. Bowser asked if business at the office had dropped off.

"There's business enough, but I shall spend the day at home," he replied. "I want to do a little painting."

"You—you won't paint the steps or the veranda?"

"No; I may touch up the fence a bit and give the gate a coat, but I want to pay particular attention to our stone dog. He is in a shabby condition. All the old paint has peeled off. There isn't a front yard in this town with a nicer ornament than that dog."

"Couldn't any painter give him a coat or two?" asked Mrs. Bowser, as she began to see trouble ahead.

"Yes, any painter could daub him over, and after the paint was on he'd look as much like a hyena as a dog. I have always painted that dog myself ever since I bought him, and I see no reason to pass the job along. If you are afraid of an explosion or anything you might go away for the day."

Mrs. Bowser mentally regretted that some tramp had not stolen the terra cotta during the winter and sold it for beer, but she had nothing to say, and as soon as breakfast was over Mr. Bowser got into his old clothes and rummaged around for paints. In the course of an hour he was ready to begin on the dog. The idea was to imitate the colors of the living animal as far as possible, and he therefore had four or five kinds of paint. He had scarcely begun to clean off the statuary when a tramp came along and leaned on the fence to observe:

"What breed of dorg do you call that, old man?"

"Are you addressing me?" demanded Mr. Bowser as he looked up.

"I wasn't addressin' nobody else. It looks to me as if the man who made that dorg had a goat before him."

Mr. Bowser dropped his tools and went over to the fence, and, shaking his finger within six inches of the tramp's red nose, he made an address lasting five minutes. His words were not loud, but intense, and he was still speaking when the man swallowed the lump in his throat, got a brace on his wabbling knees and started off. He didn't stop until he was two blocks away, and then he wiped the perspiration from his brow and muttered to himself:

"By George, but if they don't chain that old chap up he'll do murder yet!"

Half an hour later, as Mr. Bowser was putting black and white spots on a portion of the dog, a butcher came along and paused to look. He couldn't be satisfied with looking, but presently blurted out:

"If you were foolish enough to buy that thing for a sheep you have been taken in and done for."

"Is it your business whether it is a sheep or a calf?" exclaimed Mr. Bowser.

"No, of course not, but I hate to see a soft headed man taken advantage of. If I were you I'd take the ax and"—

Mr. Bowser went over to him. His words could not have been heard thirty feet away, and his gestures were no stronger than Hamlet's, but as the butcher listened he began to turn pale and beads of moisture to start out on his forehead. As soon as he could get a move on him he got away, and an umbrella mender on the other side of the street shook his head most solemnly and said to himself:

"That baldheaded man inside the fence don't weigh over half a ton, but I'll bet my last plunk he's a holy terror on wheels."

The third man came along at a leisurely pace with a benign look on his face, and his motive was utterly unselfish as he stopped for awhile to remark:

"My friend, if you are seeking to imitate nature you are making a mistake in getting so much white on. In fact, I don't think there should be any at all."

"What do you know about it?" curtly replied the painter as he paused in his work.

"Well, I have seen a few black bears in my time, and have also read considerable natural history, and I can't agree with you that they are white and black. A black bear is black, isn't he?"

"Do you call this a bear?"

"I suppose it is intended to represent a bear, though there is something uncouth about it."

"If this represents a bear, then you represent a jackass! By John, but the next man who comes along and opens his gab about this dog will get rolled in the mud! Bear, you noodlehead! Can't you tell a bear from a dog? Get on with you and call a grasshopper a chipmunk!"

"My dear man"—

But Mr. Bowser's ears began to work, and the man moved on down to the corner and there met a woman and somewhat plaintively inquired of her:

"Madam, do you happen to know the—ah—person who lives back there with the stone bear in the yard?"

"Yes, sir," she replied. "His name is Bowser."

"And is he considered—ah—dangerous?"

"He is. If he is down on you, you'd better get a mile away as soon as possible."

"Ah, I see. Many thanks. As the day is fine for walking, I think I'll move on."

Mr. Bowser had given the dog a white tail, white ears and a red mouth and was standing back to gaze on his work when a quietly dressed and quiet mannered man of middle age turned into the gate. After looking at the dog a moment he smilingly said:

"I am afraid you cannot change the work of the original artist."

"I am not trying to," was the reply.

"But do you hope to make a dog out of a pig?"

"You take this for a pig, do you?"

"I certainly do."

"Then come around in the back yard for a couple of minutes!"

Mr. Bowser laid down his brushes and led the way, and the stranger followed him. He had an idea that there was more statuary back there to be identified, and he failed to note the signs of an approaching cyclone. When the back yard was reached, Mr. Bowser extended his hand and grasped the man by the collar and said:

"Now, then, I have heard enough about sheep and calves and bears and pigs! I said I'd break the back of the next idiot who came along, and I'm going to thump you till you can't holler!"

"But, my dear sir—my dear man—my"—

"Shut up! If it's got to that pass that a respectable citizen and taxpayer can't go out into his own front yard to paint a stone dog without being insulted by half a dozen loafers, then let him take the remedy into his own hands. Prepare to be driven into the earth head first!"

"But I am no loafer, sir. If your wife were here, she"—

Mrs. Bowser called to Bowser from a back window to stay his hand, and a minute later she was down in the yard whispering in his ear.

"Well," he said to the man as he released his collar, "as you are a clergyman, that makes a difference, but don't ever come around here criticising things again. That's a stone dog out there, and he will continue to be a stone dog till the end of his days. Don't mix him up with pigs if you want to keep out of trouble."

The minister went away with pale face and shaking chin, and Mr. Bowser had to make a trip to the store for some turpentine. Upon his return he found that a change had come over the face of the heath, or at least o'er that portion of it specified in his warranty deed. The tramp whom he had scared away had not been satisfied to leave things thus. He had sought the assistance of three other tramps, and when Mr. Bowser's back was turned the four had painted the stone dog a jet black and propped him up against the front steps, and then one of them had fashioned a rude sign which read:

"This Whale For Sale Cheap!"

"And you—you allowed that to be done in my absence!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as Mrs. Bowser met him at the head of the steps.

"But, you see—you see"—

"Yes, I see! Woman, the law might not call this a direct attempt to assassinate me in my own dooryard, but I know and you know what the intent was, and now your old stone dog can go to thunder, and I'll paint the house seventeen different colors!"

Christ Risen

When the facile pen of Charles Dickens dropped from his hand in the midst of the writing of his "Mystery of Edwin Drood," a sensation of regret was felt by his admirers that he had left a story half told. Had the evangelists laid down their pens before narrating the resurrection, it would not have been a passing sensation of regret, but the universal human heart would have been torn asunder between faith and doubt. There is so much upon the sacred page to indicate Divinity, but the glorious seal to it would be lacking. The unfinished Mystery of Jesus Christ would have plunged each succeeding generation of readers into grief and despair. The lament of the disciples on the way to Emmaus would have been the World's refrain: "We thought it had been He who should have redeemed us. But how can an unrisen Savior save?"

With joy and confidence we turn then to the fourfold narrative of the resurrection. No unfinished mystery is here. That last event essential to the symmetry of the Divine Person is told with incontestable truth. Each evangelist, from his own point of view, narrates the sublime event independently of the rest. What one lacks the others supply. Each gives some minor touch caught upon the sensitive plate of his own individuality. So from the four pencils groweth the ever-living picture of the soul—the rising Christ! From the four Gospels the circumstantial evidences of the resurrection of Jesus may be gleaned and arranged as follows:

I. Reality of Jesus' Death
Insured by
(1) Discipline of Roman soldiers.
(2) Malice of Jews.
(3) Centurion's report.
Hence reappearance of Jesus not the result of recovery from swoon.

II. Jesus' Tomb Empty on Third Day
Fact admitted by friend and foe. Mistake impossible; one body only in tomb.
(1) Body not taken by enemies.
No object in removing it, or could have refuted story of resurrection by reproducing body.
(2) Body not taken by friends.
Proved by their transparent ingeniousness.
(3) Body could not have been taken by any one.
(a) Because of the discipline of Roman soldiers.
(b) Because of position of grave cloth.

Q. E. D.—Christ arose of his own will and power.

No event of the human history is more completely verified, more incontestably authenticated, than the resurrectian of Jesus from the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, in the garden near Calvary. If the circumstance, as related by the evangelists, can be impeached, then any page of history can be impeached by the same methods.

In this circumstantial narrative—full of incidents that at first glance seem trivial, but soon appear each in its proper place—an irrefragible link in the mightiest chain of evidence ever forged, it is as if one hears the Master's voice to His doubting disciples in each generation: "Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands: and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side, and be not faithless, but believing."

The Teacher's Lantern

The absolute ingeniousness of the apostolic company is manifest in the women's errand. They were no party to the opening of the tomb or removal of the body. What they had in their hands was striking and material testimony of their unfeigned openness. They came to minister to the dead, to complete embalmment. Their perplexity and grief at finding the tomb apparently rifled completes the evidence of their candor and truth.

The evidence of the ingenuousness of the apostles themselves is equally strong. The women's report seemed idle talk. They were not inclined to receive it; rather the contrary. In the Iliad of woes attendant upon the crucifixion they had forgotten Jesus' assurance that He would rise the third day. If remembered, a spiritual significance was attached to it. Here was no hasty and credulous acceptance of an agreeable hypothesis. It required repeated appearances, under the greatest possible variety of conditions, to establish the fact of the resurrection in the apostles' minds.

The testimony of such witnesses, given under conditions like these, and of record in form, the authenticity and genuineness of which is unimpeachable, has had overwhelming weight in each generation, and as widely as published.

The resurrection of Jesus is the confessed corner-stone of the Christian system. If He be not risen, it is built upon a lie; faith is vain; apostles are false witnesses; spiritual resurrection of the soul from the deadness of sin is an illusion; the resurrection of the body a mockery; those who died in the false hope are annihilated.

"But"—thank God for that strong and inspired adversative of the master logician!—"He is risen!" The fact remains! That, too, after two millenniums of criticism.

On the diamond pivot of that blessed conjunction "but" the whole case swings the other way. Preaching is the power of God; faith is effectual; apostles are true witnesses; the spiritual resurrection of the soul from sin is assured. Christ is the first sheaf of the universal resurrection-harvest.

There was nothing preternatural in the personal appearance of Jesus in the forty days after His resurrection. His countenance was not like lightning nor His raiment white as snow. He was mistaken for a gardener, and later as a common traveler. There was s sweet "humanness" in His words as well. He uttered Mary's name with a familiar accent. He called the disciples "My brethren." He appointed free and easy Galilee as the place of rendezvous. Even the salutation "All hail!" which in our version seems so majestic, is really just the common and happy greeting of friends.

Faith in the resurrection of Jesus is inseparable from the Scriptures. Cut off from them it withers as the branch severed from the vine. No amount of watering serves to keep it alive. Neglect of the Bible, indifference to it or contempt of it, is the fruitful cause of unbelief.

We still need the double opening of the Scriptures to our understanding, and of our understanding to the Scriptures: to find the event corresponded to the prediction, as the tenon to the mortise, "Thus it is written" that Christ should rise.

Only the resurrection adequately accounts for Christianity. It has been said that it is more rational to believe the system founded upon a miracle than on a lie. Farrar affirms, a conscious falsehood could never have had power to convince the disbelief and regenerate the morality of the world.

Dogmatism and categorical statements concerning the nature of the resurrection body of Jesus, and of believers in general, had better be avoided. Exact description, minute definition, are unnecessary, dangerous, and entangling. Paul affirms in general terms that the resurrection body shall be incorruptible, glorious, powerful, spiritual. That suffices.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCHELLE, GA., Jan. 30, 1902.
Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.

Kearsarge Versus Alabama

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

June 12, 1854

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

ONE of the most thrilling naval combats of the civil war was that between the Confederate commerce destroyer Alabama and the United States cruiser Kearsarge.

On Sunday, June 12, 1864, the Kearsarge lay in the river Scheldt, Holland, when a telegram from Paris arrived stating that the Alabama was at the port of Cherbourg, France. From that moment the commerce destroyer was a doomed ship. The Kearsarge hounded her remorselessly until she was beneath the waves.

Orders were given at once to sail an announcement which the crew received with cheers. The vessel reached Cherbourg on Tuesday, and the Alabama was seen lying behind the breakwater in the harbor. The Kearsarge drew near enough to look her over and then set up a ceaseless watch. The ship was put in order for battle. Thursday passed and Friday, and no Alabama appeared. Saturday the waiting Yankees began to think there would be no fight, but that night, at a banquet among sympathetic friends, Captain Semmes of the Alabama declared positively that he would go out next day—Sunday—and "sink the Yankee ship or gain a new corsair."

The Alabama was built especially for the Confederate service and was a ship for speed rather than for battle. She carried eight guns, one one hundred-pounder pivot forward and two eight-inch solid shot pivot guns aft and six thirty-two pounders in broadside. Her crew numbered 150 officers and men. Semmes was an old officer of the regular United States navy. The executive officer of the ship, McIntosh Kell, was also a veteran of twenty years' experience in the United States navy. The crew was a composite one, including many English and Americans. After giving orders to sail out in search of the Kearsarge, Semmes made a speech to his crew:

"Officers and seamen of the Alabama, you have at length another opportunity of meeting the enemy, the first that has been presented to you since you sank the Hatteras. In the meantime you have been all over the world, and it is not too much to say that you have destroyed and driven for protection under neutral flags one-half of the enemy's commerce, which at the beginning of the war covered every sea. This is an achievement of which you may well be proud, and a grateful country will not be unmindful of it. The name of your ship has become a household word wherever civilization stands. Shall that name be tarnished by defeat? The thing is impossible! Remember that you are in the English channel, the theater of so much of the naval glory of our race, and that the eyes of all Europe are at this moment upon you. The flag that floats over you is that of a young republic, who bids defiance to her enemies whenever and wherever found. Show the world that you know how to uphold it. Go to your quarters."

The crew received the speech with cries of "Never, never!" About the middle of Sunday forenoon, just as the bell tolled for service on board the Kearsarge, Captain Winslow stood with his prayer book in his hand, ready to read. The officer on deck shouted, "The Alabama!" All hands took up the cry, "The Alabama!" The captain exchanged his prayer book for a trumpet and ordered his ship about to meet the cruiser.

The Alabama came on, escorted by a French frigate as far as the three mile limit. Then the frigate turned back. Winslow saw by that act that they were very near the French waters and knew that if the battle took place there the Alabama, in case of her defeat, might escape; therefore he turned about and drew away to sea some seven miles. Then he put about and stood direct for the Alabama, intending to close on her and run her down. At a distance of about a mile the Alabama opened confidently upon her antagonist with solid shot fired in broadside volleys. The missiles did but very little damage to the Kearsarge.

The Alabama sheered, and the Kearsarge, following up, caused the fight to take place in a circle, the ships sailing round and round a common center. At about 900 yards the Kearsarge opened with the starboard broadside, the ships lying broadside to. In that position both the ships fired shell. The Alabama's ensign was soon cut by a shot from the Kearsarge and fell. Another was quickly run up. The shell of the Kearsarge from the beginning riddled the hull of the Alabama. At every discharge many of the Confederate gunners were killed or disabled. In some cases an entire gun's crew was wiped out by a single shell.

The shells from the Alabama exploded all right upon the sides of the Kearsarge, but with very little harm. Semmes saw that his shells were having no effect and after that alternated shot with shell. He speedily came to the conclusion that he was no match for the Kearsarge, and he gave orders to Kell that the moment the head of the Alabama was pointed toward France, in the circuit on which they were sailing, he should crowd on all steam and hasten to get into neutral waters. This was done at the proper moment, all sail having been meanwhile set. The people on the Kearsarge noticed this movement and bore down on her harder than ever, every shot telling and the crew cheering at each discharge: "That's a good one! Give her another!"

So terrible was the execution of these shells on the gun deck of the Alabama that it was necessary to throw the dead bodies overboard in order to work the aft pivot gun during the time of retreat. Only one shell from the Alabama really did harm on board the Kearsarge. It was a sixty-eight pounder Blakely from the forward gun of the cruiser. It passed through the Kearsarge's bulwarks, wounding three gunners, one of whom afterward died. Several other shells entered the ship, doing trivial harm. On the seventh rotation the Alabama steered straight for the French coast. The Kearsarge pursued and, coming close up, proceeded to give her volley after volley until she began to sink. Her sides were gaping with immense holes cut in them by shot from the Kearsarge. Semmes sent an officer below to learn how long his ship would float. The answer was ten minutes. Within an hour from the time of the firing of the first shell of the Alabama her flag was lowered forever.

Semmes sent his master's mate, an Englishman named Fullam, to the Kearsarge to ask for assistance. Winslow asked him the direct question whether Semmes had surrendered. The answer was "Yes." Then Winslow permitted Fullam to return to the Alabama to help save her crew. At the same time he signaled to the captain of an English yacht, Deerhound, which was on the scene, giving him permission to go to the rescue of the crew of the Alabama, who were in the water. After being taken on board of the Deerhound, Semmes and his officers escaped.

Forty years after the great battle the United States navy has two magnificent battleships, one named Kearsarge, the other Alabama. The bones of the gallant old Kearsarge of 1864 are at rest on Roncador reef, but her fame is fadeless. After thirty years of usefulness following the war the grand old ship was wrecked and lost in the Caribbean sea on Feb. 2, 1894.

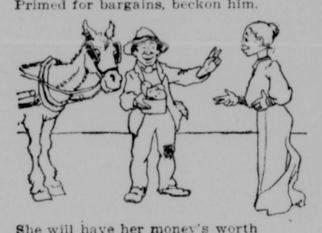
It is not the fault of the politician. He could not tell the truth and hold his job.

Try to get away from trouble by taking the train and it follows you by telegraph.

At a Bargain.

Hear the peddler's raucous cry,
"Fine potatoes, clean and dry;
Rhubarb, lettuce, carrots, beans,
Spinach, dandelion greens!"

See the matron, grave and grim,
Primed for bargains, beckon him.



She will have her money's worth
'Spite of any man on earth.

"Lettuce? Yessum, two for five;
Fresh and crisp and all alive.
Eggs? As fresh as eggs can be;
Special order laid for me."

"Well," says madam, "what's the price
Of this rhubarb? It looks nice."
"Eight a bunch, ma'am," with a bow;
"Rhubarb's getting plenty now."

Looks the matron, shrewd and keen,
On the pieplant, fresh and green.
"Three for twenty-five you'll sell?"
"We-e-ll, to you, ma'am." "Very well."

So she takes her pieplant in,
Tickled till she has to grin,

But what language she does sling
When she figures out the thing.

Her Great Sorrow.

In a low chamber a woman sat weeping.

Without, the storm raged fitfully, but in the matter of falling wetness it could only play a close second to her.

Hot, scalding tears fell from her eyes in great profusion. Anon she shed bitter tears for a change, and then as the mood struck her she switched the faucet to salty tears and let it run for awhile.

The inteligent and discerning reader will at once judge that she felt bad about something, and he will not judge amiss.

Her slight, delicate frame trembled with convulsive shudders, much as a poodle dog shakes himself after he has chased into the calm and crystal waters of a mill pond for a rubber ball.

All of the joy had gone out of her life and had telephoned back from the corner drug store that it would never return.

She would never be happy again, never, never, never. (Repeat never 365 times. White paper is too expensive to print it.)

Had she lost her wealth, her ma or her poodle dog? Why speak of such trifles? Harold, her husband of three short months, having just four minutes to eat his breakfast and catch his train, had rushed off that morning without kissing her.

Do you wonder at her tears?

Made to Order.

The guess is made at those who scoff
At some swell lady fair
Who wears the smile that won't come off,
The druggist put it there.

He Knew Her.

"I have come to ask you for the hand of your daughter," said the trembling young man.

"Did she send you?" asked the elder one, with an encouraging smile.

"Yes, sir."

"Well, as I consider you a worthy young man and a desirable son-in-law, I shall have to say no."

"But," faltered the young man, "I thought"—

"Oh, never mind; that is all right," said the elder one, offering the youth a cigar. "If you tell her that I object nothing in the world can keep her from marrying you."

Time Hangs Heavy.

Like racing yachts the seasons sail
When you are paying rent.
They're slower when you are in jail
And haven't got a cent.

Up to Date.

"Does the villain bite the dust before the last chapter?"

"No, he is a scientific chap and he knows that the dust is full of microbes."

THE NEW EDUCATION.

Developement of a Remarkable Institution at the New Town of Oread in Maryland.

A big function is planned for on June 17th, at the laying of the corner stone of the auditorium group of buildings at the unique educational institution known as Oread, which is being removed from Worcester, Mass., to the new town of Oread, Maryland, near Glencoe station, north of Baltimore. The orator of the day is Herbert Myrick, editor of American Agriculturist, and president of the magazine Good Housekeeping, and also a well known educational expert. There will be some novel exercises by the entire graduating class of the domestic science department, composed of nearly 50 young ladies representing every state and territory in the union. A large number of invitations have been accepted by public officials and private parties and their ladies, and the attendance promises to be commeasurate with the public interest in this remarkable enterprise. A dinner will be served to invited guests, and basket lunches to the public.

An entirely new set of buildings is under construction for the domestic science department of Oread, including not only the auditorium, class rooms, etc., but dormitories, dining room group of structures, houses for professors, etc. In addition to this, an entirely new town is being laid out, to be known as Oread, including Oread station on the Northern Central railroad, Oread postoffice, and the various industries of Oread, including canneries, preserving factories, bakery, creamery, etc. for utilizing the products of Oread farms and the surrounding country.

Oread was established at Worcester, Mass., in 1848, as an institution of higher education for women, by the famous Eli Thayer. Many women who subsequently achieved distinction in American life and activity were graduated at Oread. In 1898, the property was acquired by Henry D. Perky of Worcester, who founded the Oread Institute of Domestic Science. The primary purpose was to provide practical teachers of a practical domestic science.

This purpose has been carried out so well that Oread graduates are now teaching the domestic sciences in universities, colleges and schools throughout the country. Says a high authority: "No educational enterprise has a better record in these respects than this unique institution, which has added so largely to the fame of Massachusetts as a leader in educational progress."

President Perky devoted a quarter of a million dollars to the upbuilding of Oread, in excess of its receipts, until the pressure of students made more room imperative. To provide liberally for an expansion that will accomodate not only girls and women in the domestic sciences, but also boys and young men who wish to qualify themselves in the natural sciences—agriculture, industrial arts and commerce—Mr. Perky has removed Oread to its new location and furnished it with an endowment much larger than the sum mentioned.

For this purpose the celebrated Filston farms and adjoining tracts in Baltimore county were acquired to the extent of nearly 2000 acres, including the Filston herd of 175 imported Jerseys (the head of the herd cost $5000), other thoroughbred stock, kennels of Collie dogs, 750 acres of meadows, and about 500 acres of cultivated crops. Besides Filston manor, there are 25 other homesteads and residences, a dozen groups of large barns, and other buildings. This outfit is for the agricultural department of the school.

Oread's purpose is best stated in Oread's motto: "We learn to do by doing." Not only do pupils in both departments apply theory and exact science in a practical way by actually doing the work, but this principle is also applied to buying and selling, and to the conduct of Oread's commercial activities. Experience in practical business and real finance is thus afforded, in addition to the other educational processes, the results of which are their own justification.

Oread seeks no financial aid. Its president believes that its pupils will be all the more benefited by realizing that they are co-operators in the development of a self supporting institution. He maintains that the land should yield a net revenue sufficient to increase Oread's already liberal endowment and so add to its efficiency that branches may soon be established in other parts of the country.

The Men Who Are Needed In the Philippines

By POULTNEY BIGELOW, Author and Traveler

SECRETARY TAFT in a report on the Philippines proves that we need in the islands Americans who shall not go there merely to make money or for short terms, but young men who INTEND MAKING A LIFE WORK OF GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

It is a splendid career, calculated to stimulate the ambition of our students, provided we give these young men A CHANCE FOR PROMOTION and a reasonable certainty that they will not be dismissed excepting for business reasons.

Last year more than twenty Americans in the Philippines were convicted of embezzlement and sent to jail. These all were disbursing officers and there probably were others who were not caught. If the government held out fair inducements to the young men of our colleges such as are offered to the graduates of West Point and Annapolis I am certain public sentiment and congress ultimately would give us a public service CLEAN AND HONORABLE as is that of England.

Our administration in the Philippine Islands is today the most expensive imaginable for the mere reason that generally incompetent men accept office under present conditions, whereas under a system similar to that of our military schools we may expect a high standard.

IT IS ONLY AS A GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL THAT THE AMERICAN'S HAND APPEARS TO PALSY AND HIS MORAL SENSES TO BECOME BLUNT.

The State Ranks Woman With the Criminal

By BELLE DE RIVERA, President Equal Suffrage League

WOMAN, disfranchised, stands in a false position to the government. How can she conscientiously teach a child to honor a state which DISHONORS her, which ranks her character and her intelligence with that of a CRIMINAL and the LUNATIC?

There is no truth in her lessons of justice for all and consideration of others' rights when her boys may go forward to the franchise and her girls have to face the fact that, although amenable to all the conditions of the government, they have ABSOLUTELY NO VOICE in the laws which control those conditions.

IT IS THE DAILY INJUSTICE OF AN ENFRANCHISED CLASS RULING A DISFRANCHISED CLASS, A PUBLIC ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF THE ARISTOCRACY OF SEX.

The mother of the future, taking her rightful place, recognizing her duties to the state as supplementing those of her home, will go into the jury box and for the first time a woman who has broken the law will be judged by A JURY OF HER PEERS. The judge's chair will be open to woman's ability, and the power of woman's opinion may be crystallized into law.

THE DAY WILL COME WHEN NO PUBLIC OPINION, NO VOICE OF CARDINAL OR KING, NO ARBITRARY RESTRAINT OF STATE, SHALL DARE TO LIMIT HER INTELLIGENCE OR INTERFERE WITH HER USEFULNESS.

The Newspaper The American Bible

By Bishop Coadjutor DAVID H. GREER of New York

ONE of the most important factors in our educational life is the newspaper press. A vast proportion of the population gets its MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL FOOD from the newspapers. The papers have come to be our Bible, our prayer book and our church; in fact, it has been well said that the modern newspaper is the REAL American church. It preaches every day, and many times a day. It is the only church that SOME persons know. Does it do good? Does it make for righteousness? On the contrary, we find some of the most successful papers low, vicious, scurrilous, scandalous or personal and frivolous, with flashing headline type catering to indecency, audacity and hunting vice, bringing it before the people morning, noon and night, with extra meals between time. And why is all this? TO MAKE THE PAPER SELL.

I have only words of praise for the theater when it caters to us as an EDUCATIONAL institution. The dramatic instinct is human, and to denounce it indiscriminately is a mistake. But many theaters have become so indecent in character as to make a man, and much more a woman, AFRAID TO GO lest his or her feelings should be outraged. They do this that they may not suffer the loss and damage which they might suffer if they refused to CATER TO THE BASEST PASSIONS.

Beauty and Brains Combined In Woman

By Miss MARY COLEMAN, Prominent New York Lawyer

IT is a theory of long ago that a woman who is beautiful is NECESSARILY not an intellectual one. In the olden days when a woman was fair that was considered all sufficient. HER FACE WAS TRULY HER FORTUNE, and it mattered little whether she had a cultured mind, or, indeed, if she had a mind at all. If a woman was daring enough to choose to be an individual and determined to enter upon a career, one and all alike concluded that she must be utterly wanting in personal charms. A woman who elected to aid humanity either by law or medicine was always supposed to be without beauty or grace and was at once put down BY HER SISTERS as a dowd.

But all this was long ago. The American woman has proved that a beautiful woman may also be a CLEVER and an intellectual one. She stands well out as an example of what Gladstone declared to be a perfect one.

"WOMAN," SAID THE GRAND OLD MAN OF ENGLAND ON ONE OCCASION, "IS MOST PERFECT WHEN SHE IS MOST WOMANLY."

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1273 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Isaiah Fuller, Plaintiff, vs Mary E. Fuller, Defendant.

The ojject of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff, a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant.

The bill states that the parties were married in the year 1891, and that the defendant almost immediately deserted the plaintiff. That the desertion of the plaintiff by the defendant has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years before the bringing of this suit, that it is deliberate and final and beyond hope or expectation of a reconciliation.

The bill further states that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and prays for an order of publication against her.

It is thereupon, this 26th day of May, in the year 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county, give notice to the defendant, who is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, of the purpose of this suit, by publishing said notice once a week for four successive weeks before the 1st day of July, 1904, and warning the defendant to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 18th day of July, 1904, to show cause, if any she may have, why a decree ought not to be issued as prayed.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1276 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Mary Johnson, Plaintiff, vs. Alonzo S. Ellis, Defendant.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant, and to decree the marriage of the said plaintiff to the said defendant null and void.

The bill states that on the 24th day of December, 1900, the plaintiff was married to the said defendant, in Garrett county, with whom she resided until the month of March, 1902. That previous to said marriage to the plaintiff the said defendant was married to a certain Laura S. Jefferson, at Huntington, W. Va., on the 6th day of March, 1898, with whom the defendant lived until some time in the year 1900. That at the time of said marriage of the defendant to the plaintiff the defendant was previously married to the said Laura S. Jefferson, now Ellis, who is still living and from whom no divorce was had and that the said Laura Ellis was then and still is the lawful wife of said defendant. That the said defendant committed the crime of bigamy when he married the plaintiff, and that at the time of said marriage to the plaintiff she believed and was assured that said defendant was an unmarried and single man and had no knowledge of such prior marriage and that previous to the coming of said defendant into Garrett county the defendant was a resident of the State of West Virginia and that he was unknown to her until she met him in this county, where she resides. That she learned of said previous marriage some time in the month of March, 1903, that the defendant had a lawful wife living in the State of West Virginia and that she had left him and refused to live with him any longer. That one child has been born to them from the said marriage, viz: Raymond, who is three years of age. That she is advised that said marriage of the defendant is null and void. That the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant, that the said marriage of the defendant to the plaintiff be judicially decreed null and void, for the guardianship of said infant child, Raymond, and for general relief.

It is thereupon ordered, this 31st day of May, 1904, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 1st day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 18th day of July, 1904, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

In the Circuit Court for Garrett County. No. 1270 Equity.

John E. Winters, Plaintiff, vs. Anna A. Winters, Defendant.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant.

The bill states, that on the 10th day of June, 1900, the plaintiff was married to his wife, the said defendant, in Garrett county, with whom he resided until the 16th day of January, 1901. That the conduct of the plaintiff towards his wife, the said defendant, has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, and that the said defendant has, without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted the plaintiff and has declared her intention to live with him no longer; that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties is beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation and that the said plaintiff and defendant have had no children born to them from said marriage, and that said defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii and for general relief.

It is thereupon this 11th day of May, 1904, ordered, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 17th day of June, 1904, give notice to said defendant of the object and substance of the bill, warning her to appear in this court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 4th day of July, 1904, to show cause if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

ANOTHER FIGHT

or the Somerset Military Camp Site.

A press dispatch from Somerset Saturday last says:—"Over 100 farmers from the southern and western parts of the county are here to-day, renewing their agreement to sell their land to the United States Government for a permanent army camp site. W. A. Scott, Jr., of Pittsubrg, who represents the syndicate, is here taking the options, and he tells the farmers he still believes there is a good chance to dispose of the land to Uncle Sam.

The men here to-day represents 3,000 acres, and they all signed the new agreements. A significant fact is that nearly every one of them agreed to accepted a lower price than was asked before. Mr. Scott told them he believed the Government officials preferred the Somerset site, and all that stood in the way was the price. It is said the average figure now asked by the holders of the land here is about $80 per acre. This would bring the 3,000 acre site up to about a quarter of a million, which even with the profit of the syndicate added, would be quite a little less than the $1,000,000 asked before.

The Young Folks' Social Club met at Mrs. W. A. Smith's Friday evening. Those present were: Misses Blanche and Dessie Callis, Ollia and Bernadette Mattingly, Mae and Sadie Dewitt, Malvie Wilburn, Auburn Smith, and Messrs. Ralph Brenneman, Burns and Harry Loudermilk, Arthur Dewitt, Charles Callis, Ray and Arthur Custer, Colonel Dewitt and Earl Smith. The evening was spent very pleasantly with games and music, after which refreshments were served.

Will Lawton, of Oakland, did some plumbing at Mr. E. Cuter's new building recently.

SEVENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Last Sunday A Memorable Day in History of M. E. Sunday School.

FOUR OLD SCHOLARS PRESENT.

They Being Mrs. Helen Ashby, Mr. William White of Jos., Mr. Abraham Wilson and Mr. Nicholas Merrill.

Last Sunday was a glad day for the members of St. Paul's M. E. Sunday school for upon that day was celebrated the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the school, in the year 1829, by Col. Isaac McCarty and some of his associates, chief among them being Mr. George Loar, the father of the late David H. Loar, of Oakland. On another page of today's REPUBLICAN will be found an interesting history of the school.

The church on Sunday was tastily decorated with cut flowers which had been gathered for the occasion and a literary and musical program was carried out both at the morning and evening services of the church.

On the front row of pews to the eight of the pulpit Sunday morning was seated four survivors of the school of 1829, they being Mrs. Helen Ashby, widow of the late William Ashby and sister of the late and venerated Ralph Thayer of Oakland; Messrs. William White of Joseph, Abraham Wilson and Nicholas Merrill.

The morning service opened at 10 o'clock with a processional, "Soldiers of Jesus," rendered in fine style by the choir led by Prof. J. G. Robinson, after which Rev. Dr. Scott offered a prayer, which was followed by an athem, "Seek Ye the Lord." This was followed by responses from the 91st Psalm, and then the reading of the historic sketch printed elsewhere in this paper.

Following the reading of this sketch personal experiences of the members of the original school was call for and in response a number of interesting incidents in connection with the school seventy-five years ago were related by Mrs. Ashby, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Merrill and Mr. White. That part of their talk concerning the literature in use was of more than passing interest. Mr. Wilson stated that he walked nine miles to attend the school and that it required four days to secure a doctor from Cumberland to attend his uncle who was suffering with typhoid fever. Col. Isaac McCarty was spoken of in the highest terms by the survivors of the school and to him was given the sole credit of laying the foundation for the Sunday school fabric as it is constituted to day in Garrett county.

The address of Superintendent John M. Davis was listened to with interest by the crowd present. In it he related some personal experiences in connection with the Sunday school work and as superintendent of the present school for the past thirty-eight years.

The committee of reception to the survivors of the school was composed of Rev. and Mrs. H. Scott, Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Davis, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Townshend, Mrs. Sallie Scott, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Kepner, Mr. and Mrs. William Groves, Mrs. D. H. Loar, Mrs. Jane Wolf and Mrs. Margaret Lawton.

Mr. James W. White, the painstaking secretary, in recent years gathered the necessary data to complete the record of the school since the year 1852, without which the anniversary services would have been incomplete.

The evening service consisted of music, prayer and song and a brilliant address by Rev. Dr. Scott, pastor of the church.

Newspaper Advertising.

The influence of newspaper advertising is wonderful. It makes small stores great. It turns the tide of business towards the advertised store as nothing else will. It places the names of the stores strongly in the minds of the people that they cannot think of dry goods, clothing, shoes or drugs without the name of that advertised store coming to their minds simultaneously. By a good, persistent advertising campaign any business house can push its way to the front. The very best medium to use in your community is your local newspaper, as it goes to the people when their minds are easily impressed. —The Ad-Writer.

KILLED IN A MINE.

Charles Friend, Aged About 40, Killed By a falling Roof.

Charles Friend, aged about forty years, son of Edward Friend, of Friendsville, was killed yesterday afternoon about three o'clock in the coal mine owned by Mr. E. Z. Tower three or four miles west of Oakland, by a rock weighing several hundred pounds falling from the roof of the mine and crushing the unfortunate man's skull.

The lifeless body of the man was discovered by Orphans' Court Judge G.B. McMillan who is employed by Mr Tower as his foreman at the mine. As soon as possible he communicated the news to Oakland and Justice Gonder went to the scene accompanied by Sheriff Frantz, where an investigation was made as to the manner of the man's death. After examining one or two witnesses Justice Gonder decided death was due to an accident and deemed an inquest unnecessary.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

KENDALL.

We are having too much rain in this neighborhood. Seem to us that instead of the second destruction of the world by fire as promised in Holy Writ, we will again be destroyed by water.

A party of young ladies and gentlemen of Friendsville visited this town one day last week. They get tired of country life in and about Friendsville and to live and learn as they are wont, a trip to Kendall is necessary occasionally.

Samuel A., Jr., and John W., the two young sons of S. A. Kendall, President of Yough Lumber Company, are spending the week here taking in the sights. Mr. Kendall is in Chicago, as a delegate to the Republican National Convention.

Mrs. Arthur Dixon, one of our most estimable ladies, is on the sick list at this writing.

Henry Krug and brother George have returned from, St. Louis, where visited the Louisiana Purchase Exposition for ten days. They report a fine time in every particular and say the show is too large to be seen in a short time. Mr. Henry Krug hurt his leg while away and is housed up. We trust however that he will soon be alright again.

Grant Burns, conductor of the train on the Confluence & Oakland Railroad is laying off this week. John Redline, is acting conductor in his place.

DEER PARK HOTEL.

DEER PARK, MARYLAND.

This famous Allegheny Mountain hostelry will open on June 18, with prospect for a brilliant season. The twelve cottages have been renovated and painted, inside and out. Two of the choisest can be secured if application is made at once. Many suites of rooms have been engaged in the hotel.

The popularity of this resort is due to its splendid location, 2,800 feet above the sea level, out of range of malaria and mosquitoes. Every convenience is provided for guests. Delightful rooms and an excellent cuisine The hotel is provided with all modern improvements for comfort; and bowling alleys, billiard rooms, tennis courts golf links, swimming pools, etc., for amusements. An entirely new livery equipment has been installed.

EX-SENATOR RAVENSCROFT ILL.

His Condition Serious—Suffering with an Attack of Typhoid Fever.

The relatives and friends of ex Senator R. A. Ravenscroft, now occuying the position of Survey of the Port at Baltimore, are greatly alarmed over his physical condition. A few days ago he was taken ill with typhoid fever and immediately removed to the Maryland General Hospital in Baltimore, where the disease rapidly developed. Yesterday a telegram was received at his home from the physicians in charge of the hospital summoning his family to his bed side. He is being give the cold-water treatment for the disease.

Dr. Ravenscroft has not been in his ordinary health for several months, suffering at times greatly from a stomach disorder and upon a visit of Oakland on Tuesday of last week he complained of feeling very badly attributing the cause to malaria.

Come to Oakland on July 4th and spend a pleasant day.

INJURED AT THE CRELLIN MILL.

Two Men Seriously Hurt Last Thursday and Friday.

Last Thursday a man named Loomis employed upon the Crellin mill of the Preston Lumber Coal Company in the capacity of a laborer, was very seriously injured by having his foot caught between a rapidly revolving shaft and the floor of the mill. On the shaft was a protruding set screw which caught the man's instep and plowed its way through the flesh and bone to his toes lacerating several so badly that amputation was necessary which operation was performed by Dr. Legge.

The following day Brydon Frantz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Frantz, was operating one of the machines on the same mill when a board was ejected therefrom which struck him in the stomach inflicting painful and at the time thought to be fatal injuries. Today, however, the young man is much better and hopes are entertained for his recovery.

SMASHING AN IDOL

By CYRUS DERICKSON

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

While visiting her aunt in the city in the late spring Miss Hattie Saunders, daughter of Farmer Saunders of Redfield county, attended the theater several times, and for a special reason she attended one particular play three different times. The special reason was because the hero captivated her heart within fifteen minutes after the curtain went up. In the four acts of the play he rescued his love, killed three men, rode a bucking broncho, got the best of a land shark and found a million dollars in gold in a cave. He was a man to do and to dare, and when he shouted "Zounds!" and "S'death!" whole tribes of hostile Indians had to flee before him.

While the country maiden fell in love with Colonel Bings and adored his heroism, she had to depart for home without having told him anything about it. Other girls who also loved and adored may have sent him notes and bouquets, but Hattie would have been frightened at the idea. She departed for home, hiding her feelings from everybody, and her brother Bill and her father's hired man never looked so common to her before. The idea of one of them pulling out a revolver and crying "Zounds!" seemed like the rankest burlesque to her.

HE DREW HIMSELF UP INTO AN APPLE TREE.

Providence brought things around in a queer way two months later—that is, it brought Colonel Bings, as he had been named on the programme, to the farm of Abel Saunders as a boarder. Farmer Saunders didn't hanker for boarders, and his wife agreed that it wouldn't be worth the bother, but Hattie settled it as soon as she set eyes on the stranger. Here was the hero of the play standing before her, hat in hand, and she would have given five years of her life rather than that he should go elsewhere. He was out for a fortnight's vacation and was willing to sleep on a straw bed and eat potatoes with the jackets on, and after a bit he was taken in. Hattie was a little disappointed that he didn't throw her father over the well curb and her brother Bill over the fence in the first fifteen minutes, but she was a girl of patience, and she gave him time. She also realized that it must be hard work on the voice and muscles for a man to be a hero all the time. He must have a day off now and then to recuperate.

Supper was the first meal Colonel Bings sat down to. He didn't have any eagle feathers in his hair or buckskin fringe on his jacket or trousers, and he didn't mince his food like a hero. On the contrary, as brother Bill took occasion to remark, he "just shoveled it in" and put the hired man to the blush. It was a disappointment, but Hattie was not discouraged. She sat down with her hero that evening to draw him out. He was ready to be drawn. He said he got a salary of $30 per week for playing the part of Colonel Bings, or would have had if the manager hadn't cut sticks and left him in the lurch. The girl had made up her mind that nothing less than $1,000 per week could command such talent as that and that hundred dollar bills were as common as matches to him, and he took something of a drop in her estimation.

In the play he had saved a sweet faced heroine whose tears had captured Miss Hattie's sympathies at an early stage, although at the same time she had been made a little jealous by her being carried around in the hero's arms when she could just as well have walked. She was now to learn that the heroine was a woman of forty who had been married and divorced three or four times and whose sweet face was made so by grease and paint. The hero also further mentioned that the heroine's trunk was being held by her landlady for six weeks' board.

There was no posing on his part as he walked about under the apple trees. When he was bitten by a mosquito Hattie expected to hear him call out "Zounds!" or "S'death!" but he didn't. He called out "Thunder!" instead. When the hour grew late and bedtime came he didn't bend over her little brown hand and kick out one foot, as in the play, but bade her a brusque good night and said it looked as if there might be rain before morning.

The hero worshiper went to bed with a heartache, and the more she thought things over the more disappointed she was. She almost cried over it, but after awhile she found several excuses for Colonel Bings. He was probably tired out, perhaps he had a headache, maybe the heroine had tried to borrow money of him. At any rate, she would not believe that he was only common clay till he had been further tried.

The next morning brought hope to her heart. He was heard shouting "Egad!" and "Thou varlet!" to himself in his room before breakfast, and his manners were courtly as he sat down to tackle the fried pork and hard boiled eggs. After the breakfast things had been cleared away the girl invited him to walk across the field to the gooseberry bushes with her, and it did her soul good to see him assume his heroic stride as he walked beside her. In her mind's eye she was picturing the scene where he slew three villains and cried "Ha, ha!" in triumph, when he suddenly sprang from her side and drew himself up into an apple tree. A yearling calf was coming across the field on a run, and the hero didn't mean to take any chances.

It took five minutes to assure him that he was in no danger and to coax him down, but the gooseberries were not yet at hand when a mother goose showed a disposition to attack him, and he climbed a fence and left poor Hattie to save her own life or perish by inches. The matter did not end there. He had almost recovered his equanimity and was seeking after a pose when a bumblebee bobbed up and did business. Colonel Bings was lifted a foot high, but instead of coming down to conquer or die he descended to utter half a dozen cuss words and reprove Hattie for the grin on her face.

Most girls would have made up their minds then and there that Colonel Bings was no hero, but Hattie Saunders did not want to do him injustice. She gave him more rope. That evening as she swung in her hammock she remarked that she had always thought she would make a great actress and asked him for an honest opinion.

"It's all bosh," he replied as he dodged a wandering horsefly seeking a night's lodging. "You haven't got the face or the form, and you'd make a dead failure of it in a week. Better stick right here till you can marry some lusty fellow."

Miss Hattie closed her eyes for a moment to blush, and when she opened them again her idol lay shattered on the grass. She had admired and worshiped and was ready to love, but the veneer had peeled off, and her mahogany hero was only plain pine. He remained ten or twelve days more, and there were days when he stretched out his arm and cried, "Back, you sons of Satan, or die!" But the girl could not recall her reverence and enthusiasm. When his fortnight was up he went, and Hattie queried of her father:

"Papa, do you think Colonel Bings is a hero?"

"I guess he is," replied the old man. "He went away owing me for the last week's board."

A Jewish View of Inspiration.

The question of revelation is always involved in discussion concerning the contents of the Bible. The ambiguity of this term would be removed if the idea of the supernatural were detached from it. The old theology must certainly count with the indisputable fact that the personal characteristics, the temper and disposition and the variable range of intellectual culture and spiritual insight are the inseparable conditions controlling every manifestation of human intelligence. When it is conceded that the Bible speaks in the language of man the idea of a miraculous revelation is abandoned.

In the case of the Hebrew prophets the nature of the psychological process inciting their oracular messages is not difficult to understand. The intensity and clearness of their moral and religious convictions and the irresistible urgency to proclaim them they felt as an impelling force not their own, but coming from a higher source. Jeremiah and Ezekiel in a less enthusiastic state of mind acknowledge that the divine law is written upon the heart. In fact, every liberation of thought is a revelation. Spiritual experience can be nothing else than the best and noblest thoughts that the wise and good in every age have felt and taught.—Menorah.

Milesian Mendicants.

Here are some characteristic stories anent Milesian mendicants:

"Could yez help a poor fellow today and the Lord save yez?" said a beggar to a Dublin publican. "Get away!" cried the landlord. "I've had a dozen of your kind here today already." "Shure, and it's meself that sadly knows how the professhion is overrun," replied the beggar.

Quite recently the following conversation was overheard between two old crones: "Good morra to ye, Mrs. Fogarty," said one. "Good morra, kindly, Judy," replied the other. "I hope I see you well this mornin'?" "Oh, very well, entirely! So, Mrs. Fogarty, ye married yer daughter Kate. Did she get a good match?" "A splendid man, praise be to heaven! She got Blind Darby Driscal on the Dyke, that makes more money than any three beggars in Cork." "Ah, thin, but it's me that's glad to hear yer news! And did ye give her anything?" "Faix, I did, then! Didn't I give her the best side of Patrick street, which if well begged is worth siven and sixpence a week?" "Upon me word, but 'tis ye that was generous!" exclaimed the other.—London Family Herald.

Why Manual Labor Is Indispensable

By COUNT LEO TOLSTOI

HOWEVER strange and unkind it may seem that I, who live in luxury, allow myself to advise others to continue to live in want, I do it boldly, because I do not doubt for a moment that your life is a good one—good before your conscience, before God, and therefore it is essential and MOST USEFUL TO MANKIND—and that my activity, however useful it may seem to some people, loses, I hope not all, but certainly the greatest portion of its significance, through not showing the most important sign of the SINCERITY of what I preach.

A short time ago a clever and religious American, William Jennings Bryan, was in my house, and asked me why I consider common manual labor indispensable. I told him that, firstly, it is a sign of sincere RECOGNITION OF THE EQUALITY OF MEN; secondly, that it brings us nearer to the majority of the working people, from whom we are fenced off by a wall, if we profit by their need; thirdly, that it gives us the highest bliss and peace of conscience, which no sincere man utilizing the work of slaves has or can ever have.

In education, physical as well as mental, I suppose that the most important thing is not to FORCE anything on children; all the more is this necessary when it comes to the most important subject—ligious education.

Just as it is useless and harmful to feed a child when it does not want to eat or to force a child to study subjects which do not interest it and which are unnecessary to it, so it is even more harmful to teach children religious conceptions about which they do not ask, and in most cases formulate them crudely and thus DESTROY THAT RELIGIOUS ATTITUDE toward life which at this time may perhaps unconsciously develop and establish itself in the child. All that is necessary, it seems to me, is to answer, but to answer TRUTHFULLY, the questions asked by a child. It seems very simple to answer truthfully the religious questions of a child—but in reality only he can do it who has answered to himself truthfully religious questions—about God, life, death, good and evil, those very questions which children always ask so clearly and definitely.

AND HERE COMES TRUE THAT WHICH I HAVE ALWAYS THOUGHT REGARDING EDUCATION—THAT THE ESSENCE OF EDUCATING CHILDREN CONSISTS IN EDUCATING ONESELF. HOWEVER STRANGE THAT MAY SEEM, THIS EDUCATION OF SELF IS THE MOST POWERFUL TOOL OF THE PARENTS' INFLUENCE OVER THEIR CHILDREN.

Love Is a Most Beloved Torment

By Mrs. FRANK LESLIE

IS love a good thing?

Adam loved Eve and LOST PARADISE; Paris loved Helen, and thousands of lives were offered as a hecatomb to her charms; Cleopatra loved Antony and lost both Egypt and her own life; Henry VIII. loved a good many wives and CUT OFF THEIR HEADS so that he might love yet another one better, and so on.

"Cherchez la femme," commanded the subtle diplomat when a puzzling crime or complicated mystery was brought before him. And he was wise, but in rather a one sided fashion, for if women have often incited men to crime or conspiracy they have also very often committed crimes themselves for the sake of some man, and have also allowed themselves to be used as tools that the man they loved might attain the success of a crime in which they did not sympathize. In fact, I do not know whether the disastrous effects of love have fallen most heavily upon the masculine or the feminine majority of mankind, but it is safe to say that 90 PER CENT OF THE RESULTS OF LOVE HAVE BEEN DISASTROUS TO THE RACE.

And yet do we wish to do away with love? Had we the remodeling of a world, of which we so loudly complain at times, should we modify existing conditions very essentially?

I FANCY NOT, ESPECIALLY IN THIS MATTER OF LOVE WITH ITS DISASTROUS RESULTS. IT IS, IN FACT, OUR "DEAREST FOE," AND SURELY GOOD PEOPLE ARE BOUND TO LOVE THEIR ENEMIES AND CHERISH THOSE WHO DESPITEFULLY USE THEM.

Cupid is not a benevolent deity; quite the reverse. In fact, he far more nearly resembles Puck and Ariel, those "tricksy sprites" whose chief delight seems to be in tormenting and teasing the very mortals they prefer to serve. But yet we cannot do without Cupid. We could far "better spare a better man," and those whom he kindly refrains from tormenting are always VAINLY COAXING him to visit them.

Let us say, then, that love, like fire and water and air, is a good servant, but a bad master. But here again our own words mock us, for are we not always declaring that LOVE IS LORD OF ALL, and, if so, how dare we speak of him as a bad master?

We can in a measure control conflagrations and floods and avoid cyclones while adapting fire and water and air to our own uses, but who has got out a patent for a love escape, or a love embankment, or a beneficent love trade wind, or a safety latitude for lovers?

LOVE IS INEVITABLE; LOVE IS DANGEROUS. LOVE IS ESSENTIAL TO HAPPINESS; LOVE IS DANGEROUS TO PEACE. LOVE IS A BAD MASTER; LOVE IS LORD OF ALL. LOVE SHOULD BE KEPT IN SUBJECTION; LOVE LAUGHS AT LOCKSMITHS. LOVE, IN A WORD, IS A NECESSARY EVIL, A MOST BELOVED TORMENT, AN IDOL AT WHOSE FEET WE THROW OURSELVES EVEN WHILE KNOWING THAT UNDER THOSE FEET YAWNS THE GULF OF DESPAIR.

Where to Buy. What to Buy.

HOW TO BUY.

J. M. Davis & Sons' is the Place to Buy.

Hardware Our stock of goods is unusually large, especially in Builders' Hardware, Edge Tools, Garden Tools, Shovels, Forks, Spades, Locks, Hinges, Cut and Wire Nails, Barb and Smoothe Wire, Brushes of all kinds, Woodenware, etc. We have combined with our shelf goods a choice lot of Cutlery, Table Knives, Butcher Knives, Carving Knives, Razors, Silver Plated Ware, Door Bells, School Bells, Hand Bells, etc., besides a great variety of articles usually handled in a full-stocked Hardware Store. Most of our goods are bought direct from the manufacturers and will be offered at very moderate prices. The party who occasionally offers a few leading articles at a very low price, or less than cost, to draw trade, is not usually as much benefit to the community as the one who keeps up a constant supply of the best goods and can fill an order at the market value when the goods are needed. In nearly all lines the merchant must make the greater part of his profits in buying, not, however, by selecting a cheap class of goods, but in getting the very best at the lowest inside figure, so that first-class goods may be supplied at reasonable prices.

Stoves We have a stock on hand of more than one hundred stoves of all kinds, sizes and prices, running from a $10.00 Cook Stove to a $40.00 Steel Range, and Heating Stoves from $5.00 to $20.00. The above has been selected with the greatest care, not only in regard to price, but to the requirements needed for the trade in this part of our country. Stoves are manufactured for the section of country in which they are sold, and to suit the kind of fuel used, and prices are fixed by the manufacturer according to quality, style and finish. The stove business is a trade in itself and requires years of experience to know when you have the best goods that can be bought for the money, and best suited to the trade you are supplying. If you contemplate buying a stove of any kind, call and look our line over before buying. We think we can please any and all both as to price and kind.

Dishes This line we have given a great deal of time and attention to during the past five years, so that we have today a stock that cannot help pleasing any one, in both imported and American goods, running in prices from $4.50 for Dinner Set of American goods to a large decorated English Set that we are offering at prices as low as the same goods are sold anywhere. We also carry a very desirable line of Fancy China Novelties, that are equal to those found in many of our large towns and cities. Call and be convinced what we can do for you in this line.

Glassware Our counters are full of all kinds of glassware of the latest and most approved shapes including a line of heavy deep cuts that look so much like cut glass that one can hardly tell it from the genuine.

Washing Machines We are agents for the White Lily, which was put on the market some 18 months ago, and that stands today the largest manufacture of any one style of rotary Washing Machines in the world. This is a very broad statement when you take into consideration that they are practically a baby concern just 18 months old, but the company claims that it can back back up this statement with ample proof. At no time have they been able to supply the demand. The machine is sold on a guarantee to give satisfaction, and any ten year old child can operate it. Send for circulars showing cuts, styles and price of the most wonderful Washer ever made, and makes wash day what it should be, a pleasure instead of a drudge to the housewife. Price, $7.50; Wringers, $1.50 to $3.50.

Bread Maker The Universal Three Minute Break Maker is so simple in construction that the housekeeper's first thought is that the claims made for it are extavagant, but a trial will remove all doubts. No housekeeper who has once used it will ever be content to go back to the old, laborious, disagreeable way of making bread by hand. The reasonable price at which it is sold places it within the reach of every family.

Sewing Machines Two years ago we commenced selling the New Royal Sewing Machine, contracting direct with the manufacturer, and have the first one yet to find any fault with one of these machines, they are all guaranteed for 5 years, made with the latest improved attachments, and in style and finish cannot be excelled. We are offering these machines from $13.50 to $25.00, according to style and finish. If in need of a machine and you look into the merits of the New Royal, we are sure you cannot help but be pleased. And when you want needles or any little repairs, you can easily obtain them for you have a Standard Machine that is not put out under any fictitious name by catalogue houses or department stores.

Hay Tools To parties building barns and in need of a complete outfit for same of Hay Carriers, Forks, Fulleys, Barn Door Tracks, Hangers, etc., we can offer you a full line of these goods as manufactured by Mayers Hay Tool Co., who are today the largest and best Manufacturers of this line of goods in the United States. It burns common coal oil producing a powerful blue flame and cooks and bakes perfectly. The latest improvement is the Wickless. The burner is so constructed that no wick is neeessary and so simple that no one can help but appreciate it. Call and see sample at work.

Field and Garden Fencing If you are looking for a fence that will stand hard usage, that will not sag, that has stays that will not slip, that will conform to uneven ground, that has no slack wires, that does not require an expert to erect that is low in price, then buy the only electrically welded fence made, absolutely stock proof, we can save you money on fencing. Call and see it, or send for booklet showing size, style and price.

Kitchen Supplies Among the many lines found in our store none will please the house-keeper more than to look over our line of tinware, granite ware—5 and 10 cent goods that are always wanted to complete a well regulated kitchen. A dollar spent along this line will greatly help to lighten the every day work of the kitchen.

REMEMBER We do not canvass to sell goods, as the cost of canvass and salary to agents is usually paid by the purchaser, but we will cheerfully send circulars and prices, quoting the very lowest market prices at the time, as we try to keep in touch with the ruling markets of the country.

COLONEL MONROE

The Lincolnville Philosopher Explains to Postmaster Jenkins the Effects of Extravagance

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick Upham Adams

"THAT was a great wedding at New York the other night," remarked Flannagan, the brakeman, after Colonel Monroe had invited him to join the little group which regularly meets on Saturday evenings in the rear room of Lincolnville's post-office. "One hundred thousand dollars for flowers!"

"Why shouldn't they spend their money any way they want to?" demanded Jenkins, with a defiant look at Flannagan. "It's their money, and they have a right to do what they want to with it. There's a lot of people in this country that have an idea that they should have something to say as to how rich people must spend their money. And you are one of them, Flannagan. You don't know enough about such subjects to know that the more money the rich spend the better you are off. Suppose they kept all their money locked up and kept adding to it, what would become of you? If it wasn't for the extravagance of the rich the poor would starve."

"I don't notice you squandering much of your enormous wealth," retorted Flannagan. "The only way I can get money is by working for it. I can't figure out how the extravagance of those New York dudes adds one dollar to my payroll."

"Of course you can't," said Jenkins scornfully. "Just because you do not get it directly you cannot understand how you are better off. You are not the only man who works in this country. There are other jobs besides railroading. Look at the work that that wedding made and the money that it put in circulation. The flowers cost $100,000, so they say. Well, that was a good thing for the men who raise flowers for a living, wasn't it? For all I know or care the dresses cost another $100,000. That's a good thing for the dressmakers, isn't it? The presents cost $250,000. That's a good thing for the jewelers, isn't it? In other words, that wedding put more than half a million dollars into circulation where you and I will have a chance to get some of it. Do you understand now, Flannagan?" asked Postmaster Jenkins, who was mollified by his own eloquence.

"I don't," said the brakeman stubbornly. "I don't raise flowers or make dresses or sell jewelry. I twist a brake for a living, and not one cent of that money will come my way. What do you think about it, colonel?"

"It's an involved question," said Colonel Monroe after a pause. "Our friend Postmaster Jenkins has stated the popular view, which is to the effect that the extravagances of the rich are a blessing to the community at large by reason of the fact that their excesses put idle money into general circulation. Thousands of papers, edited by intelligent men, and as many public orators have recently expressed the same views. I can imagine no more scathing indictment of existing conditions of society than an admission that such a statement is true. If extravagance, excesses and wastefulness have become virtues, then it is fair to assume that economy, temperance and frugality have become vices. I cannot believe this. It is generally conceded by political economists that there is no compensation for extravagance. It means an absolute loss either in money or in labor."

"But how do you refute what the postmaster claims for the florists, dressmakers and jewelers?" asked Judge Sawyer. "You surely must admit that they receive a direct benefit from these extravagant expenditures. Mind you, I am not defending such excesses, but it seems to me that certain individuals are gainers in the process."

"No subject is less understood than this one," explained Colonel Monroe. "There is a popular belief that the spendthrift millionaire is doing his full duty to the community and that the miserly millionaire is a burden by reason of the fact that he withholds his money from circulation. That is your idea, is it not, Jenkins?"

"Exactly," answered the postmaster. "The more a rich man spends the better the working classes are off."

"In other words, the more a man costs the community in labor and service to administer to his comforts and luxuries the better it is for the community?" suggested Colonel Monroe.

Jenkins looked doubtfully first at Judge Sawyer and then at the colonel, but made no reply.

"Let's see if I can make this clear," mused Colonel Monroe. "We will take two very wealthy men as examples. We will call one of them Rockefeller and the other—well, we'll call the other Castellane. We'll suppose that each of these men is worth $500,000,000 and that Rockefeller is a man of modest personal habits and that Castellane is the reverse. Rockefeller is content to live in a fairly good modern house and employs four servants. His expenses are $10,000 a year. Castellane lives in a number of palaces, retains an army of servants and expends $1,000,000 a year in receptions, entertainments and luxuries. When the Rockefeller daughter marries the wedding costs $1,000. When Castellane's son takes a bride the ceremony costs $500,000. Each of these men has his money invested in gilt edged stocks and bonds. Each has an income of $25,000,000 a year. Rockefeller saves practically all of his and reinvests it in various ways. Castellane spends $1,000,000 on himself and reinvests the remaining $24,000,000. Our friends Jenkins and Judge Sawyer claim that by reason of spending $1,000,000 on himself Castellane has benefited the community to that extent and is therefore so much the better citizen. I suppose that he would have been more of a patriot had he squandered his entire half a billion in one wild orgy of extravagance."

"I do not claim that," declared Judge Sawyer. "You have not yet shown to my satisfaction that certain persons were not the gainers through Castellane's liberal expenditures."

"Let us suppose that a time comes," continued Colonel Monroe, ignoring this interruption, "when Rockefeller absorbs all of the wealth that once belonged to Castellane. Later a time comes when he gains possession of all of the wealth of the world and all of the machinery of production and distribution. He is now the only man living who can indulge in extravagances. But he has no taste for luxuries and continues to spend on himself not more than $10,000 a year. Every one works for him, and each man receives a salary proportionate to his ability. Rockefeller does nothing. Capable superintendents take all responsibility and leave him free to play golf or amuse himself in any way he prefers. He is the only idle, nonproducing person on earth, and the tax for his support is $10,000 a year. Do you grasp my meaning?"

"I do," said Judge Sawyer, with a smile. "And I think I see the sequel of your argument."

"There are yet dressmakers, florists, jewelers, actors, artists and others whose work is not absolutely necessary to existence," resumed the colonel, "but their products are generally distributed. All of them are directly dependent on Rockefeller, but he demands little of their services. All are busy but this one multimillionaire. Each worker receives all that he produces, with the exception of his share in a common tax of $10,000 a year for the support of Rockefeller. I have pictured this capitalist as a very stingy man, and yet I have not the slightest doubt that under such a system there would be work for all at good wages, and it is possible that the people would be satisfied and happy."

"In the fullness of time," continued Colonel Monroe, "Rockefeller dies and is given a modest funeral. When his will is read it is found that he has bequeathed the earth to 100,000 members of the Castellane family and has divided it unequally among them. Some he has made millionaires and some multimillionaires. Rockefeller kept all of his money, with the exception of a few thousands, busy in general production. He received less benefit from his world wealth than did many of his employees. Not so with the Castellane heirs, who now assume control of affairs. Instead of one frugal idler there are now 100,000 spendthrift millionaires. The men who were at work building houses for themselves are set to work on Castellane palaces. The work of a very few persons was sufficient to provide all the comforts and luxuries demanded by Rockefeller, but the Castellanes draw from field, workshop, mill and studio and from all the haunts of industry an enormous army of men and women and pay them wages for their exclusive services. Thousands of florists spend their lifetime in cultivating flowers that bloom only for the Castellanes. Other thousands search for diamonds and pearls to be purchased with the money of the Castellanes. Other thousands fashion dainty ornaments which are seen only by the Castellanes. All of this furnishes work, so our friend Jenkins declares. Very true, but I wish to call your attention to the fact that under the parsimonious regime of the departed Rockefeller the people had plenty of work. There is just this difference: In the former instance the people worked for themselves; in the latter they work for the Castellanes."

"But no such thing ever happened," objected Jenkins.

"We have the 100,000 and more Castellanes," said Colonel Monroe, "and perhaps some day we will be wise enough to find something to take the place of my imaginary character 'Rockefeller.' One thing is certain, and that is this: A citizen is of value to the community not in proportion to what he spends, but in proportion to what he produces. The man who performs great services for the community and who demands small services from the community has added to the sum of human wealth."

At Odds.

Brown stopped at the farmer's front gate.

"Paw at home?" he asked of the boy at play in the yard.

"Nop," drawled the boy. "Gone to the canyon."

"Gone afoot?" asked Brown.

"Nop," answered the lad; "about a mile."—Lippincott's Magazine.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The National Republican Convention, which met in Chicago Tuesday practically agreed yesterday to place in nomination today Theodore Roosevelt for President, and Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana, for Vice President.

The nominations will be made this afternoon.

THE contrast between the prosperity of to-day and the adversity which marked the four years of Mr. Cleveland's last administration is about the best answer that can be given to Maryland Democrats, or Democrats of any part of the country, who undertake to arraign and condemn the Republican party, which has administered the government and done much to make the country great, as well as prosperous, during the last seven years and more. And the people are not likely to forget it.

IT is said that the Democratic organization in this State is seeking diligently to discover some agency by which it may persuade Governor Warfield to call a special session of the Legislature, to get rid of a Republican administration in the city of Baltimore. If J. Walter Smith was governor they might persuade him to call an extra session but there will not be any while Warfield occupies the chair.

STARTING IN LIFE.

School days are over this month for many young men and young women. This event has been appropriately called the Commencement for at this period the graduates starts out on their serious life work. These fresh young lives have received the priceless blessing of a good educational foundation, but they have yet to learn that the acquiring of knowledge has only just begun and that day by day and year by year they will learn something new and this development will go on until the close of the earthly career. Experience now will be the great teacher and many hard knocks will have to be endured. The young man or woman who starts out with merely intellectual attainments with out a full understanding of their spiritual and religious obligations is but poorly equipped for a life of usefulness and power. It is a great thing to achieve success in the world of art, science, literature, commerce and State craft—but the life is an ignominious failure unless noble character rounds out the other accomplishments. "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches" and a good character is of more value than all the combined glory of fame and wealth. It is the glory of human kind that both are attainable. The world furnishes many examples of men and women whose lives have been rounded and molded into the most attractive characters who have achieved notable success in all departments of human activity. But many must walk in lowly paths and narrow spheres but if we fill our little place nobly it is worth while to live and strive.

THE PACE OF PROGRESS.

It seems impossible to accurately estimate the pace of human progress.

People still talk about the invention of the cotton gin and the sewing machine, for those things came at an age of the world when progress was slow and the people had time to think.

Marconi's latest achievement, brought to a higher stage of usefulness, attracted little comment. People said, "Wonderful," and forgot it, or else they failed to notice it at all.

Do you realize that you can cover the 3000 miles of water that separates Europe from America, and during every minute of the time be in speaking distance of the world? It can be done, for it has been done. A newspaper is published on board the Cunarder Campania. Bulletin boards keep the passengers informed of the big news of the world, and it is now proposed to supply stock quotations and racing results on board trans-Atlantic steamers

Think what the improved wireless telegraphy would have meant to the matter of saving lives had it been an invention of 20 years ago. Vessels by the score have been wrecked, with no message to tell of the disaster. Help might have been within reach had there been any method of sending out an appeal for aid.

Supposing the Campania should break down, and the disaster reach such proportions that it would become necessary to take to the boats.

Marconi's invention would be worth millions a minute. Messages would tell the news to America and England, with latitude and longitude of the ship's boats. Other messages would sweep the sea, to intercept steamers that might be near enough to carry hurried aid to the shipwrecked.

And a great disaster would become merely a property loss, and human lives would be saved because of the tireless and wonderful brains of this one man.

All the money that he ever can reap from his invention will not repay the debt humanity owes him.

With wireless telegraphy in general use, the Atlantic is no longer an ocean, but a great pond. We can talk across it; some day, perhaps, we shall see across it.

AS TO STIMULATED EMIGRATION.

The Hungarian Government contracted with the Cunard Company to carry emigrants from the port of Fiome. At the same time, the Government placed restrictions on emigration by way of German ports, and it is believed that the object in view was to stimulate emigration among the unruly Croatian and Slavonian subjects.

It is a safe wager that subjects who are so little desired by their own Government that the Government is willing to go to considerable expense to get rid of them are not desirable in any other land.

Speaking of this induced emigration, which from the port of Fiome is estimated at over 2000 a month, Consular Agent La Guardia says that the people are not a help to the country of their destination, but a drain.

They work, they earn money, they live more frugally than an American citizen will, and they send their money back home. This feature has developed abnormally. Every mail carries thousands of dollars to the banks of Hungary and Croatia-Slavonia for deposit, and there are many small villages that depend entirely upon the American dollars.

The great objection to the Chinese is their failure to become citizens in fact. It seems impossible to Americanize them. They come to this country for what they can make out of it, and they live on little, save nearly all and ship their wealth to the place that is and always will be considered home, no matter how long they remain in America.

For this the bars have been put up against China.

It would seem that there is an element in Europe fully as obnoxious to Americans as the Chinese can be.

There is room enough in this glorious country for all who possess within themselves the germ that can be developed into good citizenship, no matter from what nationality they have sprung.

And it Would be wise to close the doors on all others.

Colored Porters Spared.

July 1 is the eventful day when the new "Jim Crow" law, enacted by the last legislature, goes into effect, and considerable speculation has been indulged in as to how far-reaching in effect the law will be.

Of course the moment the state's boundaries are passed it will be the privilege of any colored person to leave the hated Jim Crow and ride in the cars with the whites, although it is doubtful if any such migration will be generally carried into effect the moment the line is cross.

The law does not apply to uniformed employes of railroad companies, so that the mighty czars of the Pullmans will be undisturbed. However, in the opinion of the legal department of the B. & O. railroad it does apply to colored servants of white passengers and colored nurses so the small babies must be Jim-Crowed too, and within the boundaries of Maryland they cannot ride in the same cars with their employers.—Hagerstown Mail.

DEER PARK.

Again we sit in our mammoth Deer Park sanctum, called jestingly by the late Judge Edward Stake, "The High Court of Deer Park," and with the rain pattering on the tin roof creating a sleepy sensation and causing us to be more or less stupid, but we will try to throw off the lethargy, and in our humble way, give the readers of THE REPUBLICAN some "jottings" from this "Mecca" of Garrett county that may, and we feel assured will be of interest to many of your subscribers.

Among the first of the many arrivals for the summer, we were pleased to meet Mr. John H. Tarbell, of New York, who is and has been the guest of the popular "Fair View Cottage", for the past ten years or more.

This is one of the most substantial and pleasant homes of the many summer hostelries of the town, and is conducted by Mayor E. F. Droege and presided over by his accomplished wife, whose genial bearing toward her guests brings scores of patrons year after year from New York, Baltimore, Washington and other cities of the east and west, and also from Europe. But I wish to speak of Mr. Tanbell, the first guest of this resort. He is a brother of Prof. F. B. Tarbell, of Chicago, Ill., and prominent in educational work in that great Western City and a contributor to many of the leading periodicals of this country. Mr. Tarbell is one of the leading photographers of this country, as a visit to his studio and an examination of his skilled work in this art will prove to the most artistic eye. His many views from all parts of this country, both North and South, attest his efficiency as a landscape photographer and an expert in his line. He will take pleasure in showing you as he has the writer, specimens of skill and with the privilege of your space I would like to call the attention to scenes such as the dining room of Prof. Tarbell referred to above and the home of George W. Vanderbilt, at Biltmore in North Carolina, Girl and Kitten, General Sherman's headquarters in Savannah, Ga., and hundreds of other and more famous scenes of Civil war times, but space forbids.

Mr. George Marley, who made such a narrow escape from death last week as noted in your columns, has with his usual English tenacity, purchased a new wagon and harness and with the horse which by some mysterious circumstance saved his life, hired another horse and continued his contract on the stone work of Mr. Walter Engle's new residence and this morning it is complete and the contractor Mr. Wm. B. Miller, says it is the best stone work in the town. We congratulate Mr. Marley and also Mr. Clark who did the finishing work on the masonary.

Prof. Drydon, wife and daughter, arrived yesterday from Baltimore and at their old favorite summer home, "Pleasant Rest."

Miss Josephine Hoye and her cousin, Miss Blanch Casiday, just returned from Philadelphia and Baltimore where they spent the winter, and are pleasantly entertained by their relatives of Five Gables, the post master of this place and at same time, calling on other relatives of this place.

Misses Florence and Sadie Thrasher, returned a few days ago from a pleasant visit to Horton, W. Va., where they attended the Epworth League Convention as delegates from the M. E. Church of this place. They report a splendid time visiting many points of interest among the West Virginia Hills. Chief of which was the "Sink." The writer remembers this grand scenery, both before and during a little commotion we had over 40 years ago. They also viewed the battlefield where the lamented Garnett fell, also the great Blackwater Falls, and other points of interest..

Rev. Mr. Faust, of the Baptist church is located here for the summer and will preach to his people, both here and Thayerville and other places where he feels that he may accomplish some good. This young minister is from Georgia and bids fair to be a credit to the church of his choice.

Mr. John Felty Jr., wife and little daughter, of your place visited friends and relatives last Sunday at this place. We soon found the young Miss Marion attracted more attention from the aunts and relations than either father or mother, but to the parents we say come again."

Col. John T. McGrow is again enjoying his palatial residence, the former house of ex-Senator H. G. Davis, and he has made it one the most attractive summer home of this famous resort.

Miss Nevins is entertaining her sister and two children from New York they expect to spend the summer. Nevins is one of our permanent citizens, having spent the past severe winter in her cozy home for the first time in the fifteen years of her sojourn on the mountain top.

We were glad to entertain our friends from four miles South of this place Mr. and Mrs. Menke, when they came to attend the Lutheran church of which they are members. Mr. Menke is a Russian, but liberal in his views as to the final issue of the Japanese and Russian war. We found he and his wife far above the average in intelligence of the many foreigners we meet and we extend a cordial invitation for them to come and hear our good paster, Rev. E. Manges, frequently.

The great B. & O. Hotel is open and in full blast, and visitors coming on every train. We feel assured Col. W. E. Burwell will have one of his most prosperous seasons, for he is worthy of all success, and he is the the most genial manager this hotel has ever had.

STRICTLY A MARYLAND AFFAIR.

St. Louis Delegates Will Depend Upon Their State For Water And Nominee.

"I am going to take 100 gallons of drinking water to the Maryland headquarters at the St. Louis Convention, remarked Chairman Murray Vandiver last week in Baltimore.

Several men who were sitting around and who expect to be in the Maryland party at the Convention fell back in their chairs aghast.

"W-what you want to do that for?" one of them finally found breath to ask.

"Oh! you won't have to drink any of it if you don't want to," said Mr. Vandiver, "but I drink about half a gallon of water a day myself, and I know what St. Louis water is."

"Yes," observed Mr. Frank A. Furst, "let a man take one or two big drinks of it and then shake him and you can hear the gravel rattle in his stomach."

This statement was accepted without contradiction, but another objector interposed with:

"What's the use of taking the water along; you can get plenty of spring water in St. Louis—Waukesha water; for instance."

"No," said Mr. Vandiver. "It's a Maryland party, and will drink Maryland water. From the crest of the Alleghanies gushes a beautiful spring of sparkling, limpid fluid which will lay way over any other drink in the world, and we will take 100 gallons of it along. Maryland may play a big part in the Convention, and we don't need to go outside the State for any product—even a Presidential nominee. We will drink Deer Park water—those who want to—and the thought of the granite masses from which it pours will remind us of the rock-ribbed Democracy of Maryland.'

The Piney Run Oil and Gas Company Sinking a Very Promising Test Well.

The test well being put down by the above named company in Greenville township, gives all indications of being a successful venture. We visited the place last Sunday and found an exceedingly fine drilling outfit there, and we learned that the hole was then a little over 200 feet deep. The bailings show a considerable quantity of oil, and the oil appearing on the surface of a spring near by has almost entirely disappeared since the well is down a considerable depth. The bailings from the well show far more oil than ever appeared on the surface of the spring near by, and the amount increases as the well is deepened. This, we think, is good evidence that the oil that appeared on the surface of the spring water for years, was forced up from a depth which is now reached by the well and cut off from the spring, indicating that a considerable quantity exists in the locality and was forced to the surface of the spring by gas pressure.

The drillers say that the prospect is as good as any they have ever seen, and they are men of wide experience in drilling oil wells. A government geologist who investigated the place also says it is as promising a locality for oil as he has ever seen. We saw his official report, and have great confidence in it.

We are under obligations to Hon. P. E. Finzell for a good dinner and all the information we wanted concerning the test well, and we think all of our people who can should go and see the well when the drillers are at work. To see the place is to have confidence in it, and a limited amount of stock can still be secured by applying to the general manager, Hon. P. E. Finzell, Finzell, Md.—Somerset Star.

Contracted for Heating Plant.

At a meeting of the official board of St. Paul's M. E. church held last Thursday the contract for installing a heating plant in the church edifice was awarded to Messrs. A. D. Naylor & Co. of Oakland, work upon which is to be commenced at an early date.

Oakland Model Steam Bakery

The Place to Buy the Best Bread Cakes and Pies.

Our aim is to make Bread "As Good as Mother made it," and we have been successful and have stopped all the drudgery of home baking with the use of Modern Machinery Have you ever experienced as the following reads:

Your wife has gone out in the country;
You're left alone; what a pity,
With nothing to do but to ponder
And read out aloud to the kitty.

You run out of bread in the morning;
But knowing 'tis easy to make it,
You swiftly adjourn to the kitchen
And silently start in to bake it.

Take two coffee cups full of flour,
And water sufficient to "dough" it;
A thimble of salt for the "season,"
Then roll it, and poke it, and blow it.

And blow it, and poke it, and roll it,
And pinch it, and push it, and flop it,
And punch it, and pound it, and pull it,
And monkey around till you drop it.

Then clean it off nice with a towel,
And sock in a yeast cake to "raise" it;
Now drop in some soda to "short" it,
And smear on some butter to "glaze" it.

Then place it 'way back in the oven,
(That is if you've moulded and "set" it);
Close up all the doors of the kitchen,
Go in and sit down and forget it.

Go set yourself down in the parlor,
And read from "The Science of Baking;"
Read on till you smell something burning,
Then think of the bread you are making.

Now hop, skip and jump to the kitchen,
And as you hop nigher and nigher,
You know by the smoke in the hallway
The blooming old bread is on fire.

Then hustle it out in the alley,
Juggle it, fumble it, shie it;
Then gently dig up a nickel
And go to the baker's and buy it.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

No. 1278 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garret County, Maryland.

John R. Ritchie, vs. Mary Ritchie.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff from the defendant a vinculo matrimonii.

The Bill states on the 14th day of December 1884, the plaintiff was married to the defendant, and lived with her until 1898, when without just cause or reason she abandoned and deserted him, and such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years and is deliberate and final; that five children were born to them as a result of said union, and that the defendant is a non-resident of the State.

It is thereupon, this 20th day of June, 1904, ordered the Circuit Court of Garrett County, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 22nd day of July, 1904, give notice to said defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning her to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of August next to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

To the Students of the Oakland Normal School.

The Normal School at Oakland was fortunate on Wednesday, June 22, in obtaining as instructor for the lecture period, Rev. Father Stanton, of Lonaconing. Owing to his inability to be here during the earlier part of the term, he did not lecture on the subject first suggested, but took as the basis of his remarks the one word "Graduation." In his talk he defined the word in many ways of life.

Among the first thoughts was the graduation from knowledge to the formation of opinions. Any one may have knowledge who have use of their several senses. To strengthen his argument he cited an incident in a railway car where several people were discussing the war now waging between Russia and Japan. The sympythizers of either side seemed to have knowledge of the facts hence they were able to graduate to opinions if they did enough thinking. Without "knowledge to opinion" we are nothing, for knowledge is only our own when we think facts

To prove that knowledge to opinion is necessary for success, he took the Civil War and by adroitly questioning he made them think why Fort Sumter was fired upon. The fact that the Declaration of Independence was not true until then because all men were not free, for a certain clause in that document reads in this wise: "All men are created with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and that there were people in the United States which were not free.

In order to succeed in life one must work without ceasing and our ideals should be high. The failure of so many promising young men may be said to be due to the lack of high ideals. The man who wins in the battle of Life is he who thinks clearly, acts boldly and speaks courageously.

The word "poet" was defined. In the original it means "creator," no matter whether in the building of a house or the writing of a verse, as we of the English origin interpret it.

Life needs originality and the original characteristics in each individual need to be developed in order to have different types of men. He urged the need of living a strenuous life, for concentrated energy is needed in the use of knowledge and formation of opinions.

So many weary of life because they have not the intellectual resource to pass a rainy Sunday or a dull evening without company.

He quoted from Longfellow's "Psalm of Life" to impress upon the minds of his hearers that "Life is real, Life is earnest," and to inspire them to nobler action he used this:

"Be not like dumb driven cattle,
Be a hero in the strife."

There is no need of going farther than the "Psalm of Life" for inspiration in life.

Life should be graded so as to be ever onward and upward. Each one should remember what he is and what others expect of him.

If we are not careful of ourselves the image of God in His likeness is broken and the fall of the high ideal is fearful.

He urged each to be helpful, for strength comes from struggle with and overcoming of difficulties.

He spoke of his own school days in Oakland and after commending all to the care of God, whom he serves, he withdrew. STUDENT.

Two More Divorce Suits.

In the Circuit Court of this county on Saturday a suit for divorce was instituted by John R. Ritchie against his wife, Mary Ritchie, the action being based upon statutory grotnds.

In Oakland This Year Upon A Large Scale.

Last Thursday afternoon and night the business men got together in Oakland and reconsidered the matter of abandoning the celebration of the Fourth of July, deciding to go ahead with the matter.

With this end in veiw committees were appointed to make arrangements for the amusements for the day and to advertise the celebration upon an extensive scale.

In the forenoon an extensive street parade and trades display will be the feature in which all business houses are expected to join as well as uniformed bodies and lodges of the town.

In the afternoon a trotting and running race will be one of the features which, with a balloon ascension, will surely be a drawing card. Band concerts will also be given. A game of base ball will be played and dancing may be indulged in by those inclined.

Excursion rates on the Baltimore & Ohio from all points will be granted.

Everybody will be welcomed. Come, bring your friends and family and enjoy a day of pleasure in this little city.

Arrested Charged With Burglary.

Edwin E. Butler, of Confluence, Pa., at which place he was arrested yesterday morning by Constable Liston, of Friendsville, was brought by that officer to the jail in Oakland, yesterday charged with burglary. It is alleged that Butler rifled Fike's pockets while the latter was asleep in his boarding house at Friendsville of a watch and $2 in money. After the arrest Butler was searched by the officer and the watch was found upon his person. He will remain in jail until the September Term of court when his trial will take place.

Last Sundaymorning Mr. Edward Shaffer, the gentlemanly and obliging operator at the Western Union office in Oakland, accompanied by Ray White, left on train No. 7 for Chicago where the latter went as a representative of the local commandery Knights of St. John to the National convention of that order. After the adjournment of the convention both young men will go to St. Louis where a week or ten days will be spent seeing the World's Fair.

SEVENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY and HISTORICAL SKETCH

Of the Founding of the Oakland Methodist Episcopal Sunday School Celebrated in St. Paul's M. E. Church Last Sunday.

WE are assembled here to celebrate the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday School of Oakland.

At the time of the organization of our Sunday School, this part of the State of Maryland was an almost impenetrable wilderness. Here and there could be found the homes and clearings of those hardy pioneers who were brave enough to attack the forest and level its giants and carve, as it were, out of nature itself, homes for themselves and families.

Prominent among these early settlers was Colonel Isaac McCarty, whose ancestors had faced the savages along the Potomac west of Fort Cumberland, about the time of the French and Indian War.

Colonel McCarty in the early dawn of the 19th Century had settled on what is commonly known as the Totten farm, now owned by Mrs. Helen Hesen, and which immediately adjoins Oakland on the south; his nearest neighbors were George Calamese, who lived on the farm now owned by Andrew Shartzer; Lewis Thompson, who cleared out the old Thompson homestead, upon which his son Charles and his daughter Cynthia still reside; George Loar, the paternal grandfather of the late David H. Loar's children, who owned the property now occupied by Mr. George Shartzer; William Armstrong, who lived at the Little Yough bridge, near Washington Spring; Stephen Thayer, the founder of the Maryland branch of this family, who owned the Abraham Spiker farm; Henry Lower, the maternal grandfather of Mr. William White of Joseph, who lived on the farm now owned by Mr. Henry Smouse; Robert Swan, who lived at Swan Meadows; George Rinehart, who resided at the Sunnyside Farm, Nicholas Gauer and Adam Hauser, who lived in the vicinity of the Red House, John Hammond, who had cleared out the farm now the property of Mr. Moses Wensell; John Steyer, who lived on the farm now oned by Mr. E. E. Sollars; John Spiker, who lived on the farm now owned by his grandson, J. G. D. Spiker; John Arnold, who lived on the Stephen Browning place; William Ashby, the son of William Ashby, who was the first white man to settle in what is now Garrett county, and who resided on the Wonderly farm, one mile east of Mountain Lake Park, now owned by Mr. Joseph B. Meese.

COL. AND MRS. ISAAC M'CARTY.

The above named, so far as is known, comprised all the settlers in this part of the country, and with their families constituted the entire population of what is now about one-fifth of Garrett county. Persons acquainted with the location of these places will at once realize how sparsely settled the country was. Oakland did not exist and where now stands its happy and hospitable homes, beautiful churches and busy stores, nothing but forest prevailed, and the deer stalked through its shade and game of all kinds held high carnival where now hundreds of people daily move through its paved streets and thoroughfares.

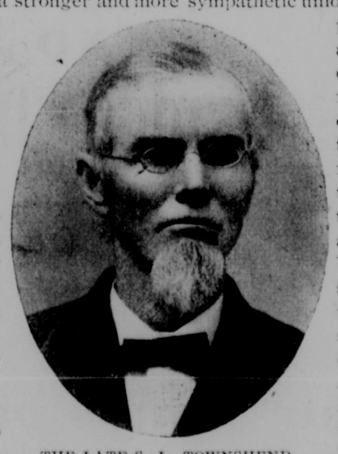
No railroads were in existence and the only means of travel was by two or three cross-country roads, the marks of which can plainly be seen to this day.

The Beverly road started at the Calamese place, and crossing through Malott's Glade, traversed what is now Mountain Lake Park, crossing the Little Yough river at Ruckle's ford, and then on to the Lewis Thompson place and Chisholm's mill.

The old Moorefield road ran from the Armstrong hotel at the Little Yough bridge, by way of the Red Gate at Swan Meadows, crossing the mountain at the Henry Beckman place to Hoyesburg, and then by probably what is now the present location of the Northwestern pike to Moorefield.

No churches had been built but these fathers of our people imbued with a deep sense of their dependence upon Almighty God, gladly welcomed to their humble homes the itinerant preacher and circuit rider, who at long intervals, passed through the country giving instruction to the parents and their children, baptizing old and young, ministering to the needs of the sick, burying the dead and celebrating the rites of marriage when requested.

The desire to form a stronger and more sympathetic union than that resulting from an occasional meeting at a farm house and listening to the Word, as delivered by some faithful Soldier of the Cross, was stimulated in the breast of Isaac McCarty, by meeting two ladies in Cumberland in the fall of the year 1828. These ladies were from New York city and were enthusiastic workers in the Sunday School cause. Colonel McCarty eagerly inquired as to the methods to be pursued in organizing and conducting a Sunday School. Upon returning home he called his neighbors together and conferred with them as to the advisability of establishing the school, and it appears to have been the unanimous sentiment of the settlement that the school should be opened. In April, 1829, a meeting was held at the home of Mr. George Loar, in the large double log house, part of which is still standing, and there the school was formally organized, under the name of "The Yough Glade Sabbath School, Auxiliary to the Sunday School Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church." Colonel McCarty was elected superintendant, and held the position for twenty consecutive years.



THE LATE S. L. TOWNSHEND.

Certain rules were adopted for the government of the school and the conduct of its members, among which were the following:

"Any person may become a member by paying twelve and one-half cents a year at the time of joining, or become a life member by paying one dollar."

"Only persons of good moral character will be received into membership."

The records of the school do not disclose the names of any officers or teachers, other than the superintendent, until the year 1837, when an election was held with the following result:

Superintendent, Isaac McCarty; Secretary, Edward McCarty; Librarian, Hannah McCarty; Treasurer, George Loar; Managers, James D. Armstrong, Lewis Thompson, John Spiker, William Chambers, Stephen Merrill; Committee of Solicitation, James D. Armstrong, Clement Smith, Margaret Loar, Sophronia Thayer, Elizabeth A. McCarty, Lewis Thompson and Ellen Devecmon.

Classes were organized as follows:

Teacher, Elizabeth A. McCarty; Scholars, Mary A. Chambers, Susanna Steyer, Sarah A. White, Rebecca Merrill, Winifred White, Eliza Thayer, Helen Thayer.

Teacher, Johnson White; Scholars, William White of Jos., William White of Wm., William McCarty, Thornton White.

Teacher, William Warren; Scholars, George Steyer, George Hammond, Jonathan Loar, David McCarty, George Loar, Nicholas Merrill, Stephen Merrill.

Teacher, John M. Armstrong; Scholars, Andrew Chambers, Philip Merrill, Jacob Loar, Peter McCarty, Edward McCarty.

Those now living who attended the school in 1837, are William White of Jos., Helen Ashby, nee Thayer, Nicholas Merrill, George Steyer, Cynthia Thompson, Sallie Spiker, nee Thompson, Charles Thompson, Margaret Brooke, nee Loar, Elizabeth White, nee Loar, Sarah A. Fitzwater, nee White, David McCarty and Eliza Dixon, nee Thayer.

THE LATE RALPH THAYER.

It is not recorded that the school was continued throughout the year, and the assumption is justified that it opened regularly in the spring and closed in the fall. Colonel McCarty continued as superintendent until 1849, when shortly thereafter he removed with his family to the West, and was succeeded by the Rev. Thomas Sampson, who occupied the position until 1856.

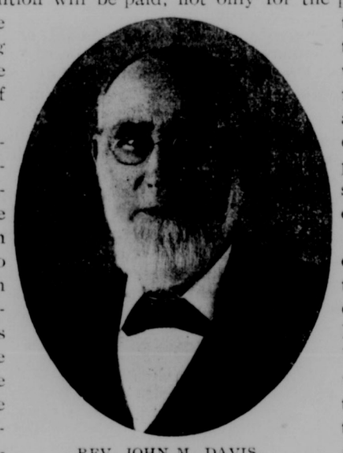
A few years after its organization the Sunday School was moved to the school house on the McCarty farm, and about the year 1840, the first church in this section of the country was built near the school house, and the sessions of the Sunday school were held in the church until its demolition in 1852, at which time the best timbers were used in the construction of the first Methodist Episcopal church in Oakland, which was also the first church edifice to be erected in the town. The original church was built of logs, with a puncheon floor; no plaster except the chinking between the logs, and upon entering the rude door, one had an unobstructed view of the under side of the roof, which served the double purpose of a covering and ceiling.

In 1852 the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was built through this section, and simultaneously with its coming Oakland was laid out by Colonel McCarty and and is now the metropolis of the Glades.

The Sunday School came with the church to Oakland, and since 1852 it has regularly convened each Sabbath, and from its ranks have gone forth men who have attained high position in Church and state, and women who have blessed many happy homes.

Rev. Thomas Sampson was succeeded in the position of Superintendent by Mr. William Lohr in 1856, who served in the same capacity in the years 1857, 1863 and 1864. Mr. S. L. Townshend was Superintendent in 1858, 1859, 1860, 1861 and 1862. Mr. Ralph Thayer was Superintendent in 1865 and at the election in 1866, he was succeeded by Rev. John M. Davis, who for thirty-eight consecutive years has rendered faithful and efficient service in the same relation, and who today is the only survivor among the six superintendents this school has had since its foundation in 1829.

Colonel McCarty with Christian liberality donated the site whereon the church now stands, and also presented to the congregation the lot where the old parsonage stood, which was subsequently sold and the funds arising from the sale were applied towards the building of the present rectory of the church. Not only did he provide a home for the living members of the congregation, but in 1857 when he sold the farm whereon he had lived for so many years, reserved by most careful description a burial ground for the use of this church, to the care of which special attention will be paid, not only for the purpose of protecting the supulchres of the dead, but in loving remembrance of the donor and founder of this church.



REV. JOHN M. DAVIS.

This present edifice, beautiful in design and finish, a fitting temple for the worship of God, is in striking contrast to the first church which was erected and dedicated by the fathers to a similar service more than three score years ago, but the piety and self abnegation which they practiced and the devotion to the cause of Christ which actuated them may serve as an example to us of this day with so many privileges and blessings they did not enjoy.

Grateful acknowledgment is made of the invaluable aid rendered by Mr. David McCarty and William White of Joseph in the preparation of this little booklet. To their unfailing memories is due the collecting together of the data upon which this historical sketch is based, and without whose assistance it were impossible to present this record.

Mr. McCarty is now living and enjoying the declining years of a long and well-spent life at Fairfield, Iowa, while Mr. White is one of our most prominent and respected farmers, whose hospitable home is located three miles South of Oakland.

Mr. McCarty has preserved the first records of the school, and through his courtesy the same are now in possession of its Official Board and will be preserved among the archives as one of its most precious treasures.

The Sunday School now, after an existence of seventy-five years, is in a prosperous and healthy condition; the interest taken in its welfare and growth is constantly increasing, and the lessons inculcated here make their impress upon the lives and characters of its members, and ultimately lead them into their proper stations in the church, whose growth and power for good is so largely dependent upon the school.

Members of the school in 1866 when the present Superintendent was first elected and who still retain an active relation thereto are Rev. John M. Davis, Mrs. Lou. Thayer-Waters, James W. White, David T. Enlow, Chas. S. Davis, Arthur Townshend and Fred. A. Thayer.

Those who are scholars today are teachers and officers tomorrow, and those who have so faithfully stood by the school in the past are gratefully and affectionately remembered, and while their work is engraven upon our records here, their names are inscribed upon the Lamb's Book of Life yonder, where the voices of countless thousands sing praises to Him who has washed them white in His own precious blood, and who is ready when the time comes, to receive each and all of us into the City not made with hands, eternal in the Heavens.

OFFICERS OF THE PRESENT SCHOOL.

REV. JOHN M. DAVIS, SUPERINTENDENT.

MR. F. A. THAYER, Assistant Superintendent; COL. A. G. STURGISS, Assistant Superintendent; Mr. J. W. WHITE, Secretary; Mr. J. C. PEDDICORD, Treasurer; Mr. JUDSON LOAR, Librarian.

That the said defendant committed the crime of bigamy when he married the plaintiff, and that at the time of said marriage to the plaintiff she believed and was assured that said defendant was an unmarried and single man and had no knowledge of such prior marriage and that previous to the coming of said defendant into Garrett county the defendant was a resident of the State of West Virginia and that he was unknown to her until she met him in this county, where she resides. That she learned of said previous marriage some time in the month of March, 1902, that the defendant had a lawful wife living in the State of West Virginia and that she had left him and refused to live with him any longer. That one child has been born to them from the said marriage, viz: Raymond, who is three years of age. That she is advised that said marriage of the defendant is null and void. That the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant, that the said marriage of the defendant to the plaintiff be judicially decreed null and void, for the guardianship of said infant child, Raymond, and for general relief.

It is thereupon ordered, this 31st day of May, 1904, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 1st day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 18th day of July, 1904, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

The International Sunday School Lesson.

Second Quarter. Lesson XI. MarK xv, 21-39. June 12, 1904.

Copyright, Davis W. Clark.

The Quarterly Review.

The person around whom all these events are grouped is pledge of their importance. The epoch in His life when they occur is an extra guarantee of their transcendance. It is Jesus who is the towering personality, and the time is the last six months of His life. Geographically, these events transpire in Galilee, Perea, and Judea—more specifically in Cæsarea-Philippi, Mt. Hermon, the trans-Jordanic region, and Jerusalem. In rapid and cumulative order these pictures flash out. The confession, transfiguration, "the seventy," parables concerning prayer, watchfulness, the prodigal and humility, the Last Supper, Pilate, Crucifixion, Resurrection. No page in all the volumes ever written is worthy of closer attention. Aside from religion as purely a biographical study, it would command respect. For it contains the ultimate teaching and the last events in the life of one who without question has effected the human race more universally and permanently than any other; affected them, too, not in the superficial accidents of life, but in the deepest realm of ethical and spiritual being.

The Teacher's Lantern

(For Lesson I, see Lesson XII.)

In his last year, Jesus turned from the multitude and concentrated His energies upon His disciples. His ministry to the throng had proved a failure. His pearls of word and deed had fallen before a brutish people.

To perpetuate His Church after His departure, He turns to trim and square and polish His apostles—as the foundation-stones that are to bear aloft the superstructure. With this in view, He led them to Decapolis and Tyre and Sidon and Cæsarea-Philippi, localities where He was comparatively unknown. In such places His course of private instruction would be least interrupted by public demands. Philip's Cæsarea was in what has aptly been called "the Switzerland of Palestine." There was the ever-startling contrast between Arctic white and tropic emerald. As they walked amid the oleanders and beside the gushing fountain, source of the Jordan, they could lift their eyes to snowclad Hermon and Lebanon. It was a schoolroom worthy Once of teacher and taught. It was this glorious sanctuary of nature which first rang with the simplest, sublimest credo of all the ages, as the "mouth of the apostles" cried, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." In that word, Peter burst the shell of an hereditary and universal misconception of the nature of the Messiah. He first spread the wings of a true Messianic faith, and soared above the temporal ideas of throne, army, and conquest.

Lesson II.

The transfiguration is the heavenly Amen to the earthly confession of the Divinity and Messiahship of Jesus. Hardly had that comprehensive creed framed itself on Peter's lips, and been consented to by the apostles, than they were all shaken by the revelation of the ignominious death in store for the Messiah. That ineffable scene on Hermon fixed and settled a faith that was tottering to its fall. It nerved them for Gethsemane and Calvary. It was fitting that they should see the celestial evidences of His eternal Godhead and glory on the hither side of the cross. Before they saw His visage marred, they were privileged to see it transfigured.

Lesson III.

In the last six months of His ministry and life, Jesus made a systematic and determined effort to announce His Messiahship to the whole nation. Evidence is not wanting that He had a well defined plan of operation and that the thoroughly Oriental and consequently spectacular "triumphal entrance" to Jerusalem was the denouncement of the whole. In this plan the mission of the Seventy is an important feature. There is an undoubted significance in the number. As Jesus had the twelve patriarchs in mind when He appointed these evangelists. It is also an old tradition (see Genesis x) that the number of the nations was seventy as the number of metallic substances is also supposed to be. The time of this circumstance was also the Feast of Tabernacles, at which seventy bullocks were offered. As the Talmud says, there were seventy bullock to correspond with the seventy nations of the world. Some trouble, however, it must be admitted, has arisen from regarding the seventy as a fixed number, and as a constantly active circle, besides the twelve and exclusive of of them. As St. Luke is the only one who tells of the appointment of the Seventy, it had been inferred that he himself was one of the number. It is gratifying to know that Jesus had so large a number of men attached to His cause who were competent for such a commission. It is a gauge of growth in the kingdom.

Lesson IV.

The appostles observed Jesus in the act and attitude of prayer. In some oratory of nature, perhaps, they saw cessity of eternal vigilance. It remains, however, for the Divine Teacher, divesting the subject of quaint fiction, to define the ethical principles involved, and ground the necessity upon a moral basis. This Jesus does when He reveals the truth that man is God's servant. What he has he holds in trust for his Maker. He is not an original, independent proprietor. He holds nothing in fee-simple. He is to occupy, use, and increase. But an account of stewardship is ever impending. This accounting-time is the assize of the soul. It is to be kept always in view. One is to be instantly ready for it.

Lesson VI.

The primary use of the parable of the Prodigal Son must not be lost sight of in its evangelical and modern applications. By it Jesus sought to justify His kindly and familiar bearing towards publicans and sinners, at which the Pharisees and scribes were so outraged. He showed the veriest renegade of Israel as still the object of Divine compassion, his restoration possible—a thing He earnestly sought. In its universal, gospel application this "pearl of parables" pictures sin as a revolt against a benificent Heavenly Father, whose law is right and just and good. Here is mirrored the freedom of the will. The son has his own way. He is not let or hindered, except by the pleadings of love and its faithful warnings. The folly of sin has no more startling exemplification. True as startling; drawn to life! How swift the "descensus Averno!" How soon the fool and his money are parted! How irrevocable the last estate! Remediless! In the mire with swine! Who shall ever number the sinners to whom this parable has been the "open sesame" to a new life? Blessed be the day in which it was spoken! "I will arise!" "Father, I have sinned!" The Heavenly Father meets the returning prodigal in the way.

Lessson VII.

This sad incident of James and John's ambitious request illustrates vividly the small progress Jesus had made in teaching them the new ideal of life. Three years' instruction seemed to go for nothing. They thought "the kingdom" something objective and material. They were hungry for the spoils of office. With infinite patience Jesus began to teach the lesson all over the again, and unfold the essential principles of His kingdom. He could be charitable to His tardy disciples, for He was founding a commonwealth, absolutely unique—the like of which the world had never seen before—a kingdom of the heart, entirely subjective, ethical, and spiritual. Well could Jesus say, "Ye know not what ye ask." Within a month they saw those coveted places at His right and left hand occupied indeed, but by crucified thieves! "Can you drink of My cup?" So far from being able to drink of the cup of His calamity, they did not even dream, in spite of all His teachings, that such a cup was soon to be pressed to His lips. There was no room for the cross in their conception of His kingdom. Again, the ethical and spiritual nature of the new commonweath make the arbitrary distribution of position and emolment among favorites an utter impossibility. In point of fact, "lordship," in the common sense of that word, is entirely ruled out. The only greatness is that of love, obedience, humility, and service. And there can be nothing capricious in this. To the fit seat the fitted person only can come, Those nearest the King can reach their station only by the path the King Himself has taken.

Lesson VIII.

Perhaps we emphasize disproportionately the sadness of the Last Supper. Jesus, as host, would not allow the occasion to wholly lose its festive character. It was a goodly scene that the well-trimmed lamps shone down upon. The fresh turbans of blue, crimson and yellow, the animated faces, the table covered and well supplied, make a study to delight a painter. The feast extended over several hours, and only the somber incidents are recorded. There must have been much joyous converse as well. All that remained of the paschal ritual was the blessing of praises with which it was always closed. They were all expecting it. The invocation could not but be noticed by those who had followed one program annually from the time when they were ten years old. Instead of lifting His hand in benediction, Jesus reached over to the dish of unleavened bread upon the table, and taking up a piece, He rose from the mat, and blessed it, and, as He passed from one to another, He broke it, giving each a morsel, saving, "Take eat: this is My body." Then He filled a cup, and, again giving thanks, and passing it from one to another, He said, "This is My blood of the new covenant, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Then followed His words of institution, "This do in remembrance of Me."

Lesson IX.

Jesus before Pilate is without question the most remarkable scene ever witnessed in any court of law. Pilate's chief business as a Roman official was to keep peace during the great convocation of the Passover week. Imagine then his feelings when the feast, being at its height and the city crammed to its utmost capacity with a heterogenous throng from every quarter, there appeared at the portal of his palace a mob headed by the high priest and all worked to the highest pitch of religious frenzy. The colloquy between Pilate and Jesus and between Pilate and the Jews is an anatomy of the human heart. The vacious emotions of which it is susceptible, good and evil, are all laid bare as with a scalpel. Pilate's racial prejudice, his sense of justice, his timeserving spirit, his superstition, are exposed. The malignant hatred, fierce devotion to the existing ecclesiastical establishment, self-interested antagonism to the innovator, willingness to expatriate themselves if they can only compass the death of Jesus—all are portrayed true to life. The absolute self-possession of Jesus, His dignified indifference to the proceedings, the bearing of who had already appealed His case to the courts of heaven; His courtesy toward Pilate, in which, however, there in an independence which Pilate himself does not fail to see; physical endurance of the scourge, moral fortitude in enduring the scourge of the human tongue—in it all, "behold the Man."

Lesson X.

The narrative of the crucifixion is surprisingly condensed. There is no spinning out of details, no obtrusion of personal opinion and sentiments of the narrators. Here is an incidental suggestion of how Calvary should be approached. It is not a theme for volubility. There should be no striving to magnify its painful horrors or to compare the physical sufferings of its victim with those of others. A spiritual interpetation is the thing desirable. A personal appropriation by faith is great riches.

Lesson XI.

Had the evangelists laid down their pens before narrating the resurrection, it would not be a passing sensation regret which the universal human heart would feel. It would have been torn asunder between faith and doubt. There is so much upon the sacred page to indicate Divinity, but the glorious seal to it would be lacking. The unfinished mystery of Jesus would have plunged each succeeding generation of readers into grief and despair. The lament of the disciples on the way to Emmaus would have been the world's refrain, "We thought it had been He who would have redeemed us, but how can an unrisen Savior save?" We turn with joy and confidence, then, to this fourfold narrative of the resurrection No unfinished mystery is here. That last event essential to the symmetry of the Diyine person is told with incontestable truth.

Grant Before Petersburg

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

June 15-18, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

GRANT opened the ball at Petersburg with the desperate charge of "Baldy" Smith's corps June 15. This was followed by charges of the Second and Ninth corps June 16 and 17. In ten minutes on June 18 the First Maine heavy artillery won immortal renown in one of the bravest as well as one of the most hopeless charges of the war. The regiment went in alone and lost more men than any other regiment in any single engagement during the war. The circumstances were peculiar. The First Maine belonged to Hancock's corps (the Second), that had borne the brunt of the hard fighting of the previous six weeks in Grant's Wilderness campaign, including the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania and Cold Harbor, and had lost in these conflicts over 13,000 killed and wounded out of a total of 36,000 engaged. At Petersburg, on the 16th and 17th of June, the corps lost heavily and on the 18th was ordered to push forward where the Confederates had, as it transpired, planted their "last ditch."

The point where the First Maine charged was a salient built by General Colquitt's troops, part of Beauregard's defensive force, and known as Colquitt's salient. It was a bare ridge called Hare's hill and was in front of the site of the Hare house, where the Union Fort Stedman afterward stood. A Union officer has said that he did not believe another spot on God's green earth of equal size had drunk up the blood of so many men slain in battle as the field in front of Hare's ridge.

Several attempts had already been made by troops of the Second corps to carry the salient, but notwithstanding the fact that repeated trials and failures had been noted at army headquarters word came to General Gershom Mott to try again with his Third division. Mott protested to his superior, General Birney, then commanding in Hancock's stead, that it was sheer murder, a repetition of the slaughter of Cold Harbor. "My orders to you are to assault," said Birney.

"I knew," said Mott, explaining his conduct afterward, "that it was useless to expect suicide en masse from my old troops who had seen the wolf, had felt his teeth and bore the scars. All I could hope was that a heavy artillery regiment, the First Maine, innocent of the danger it would incur, would lead off with a dash, carry the works with a rush, and then it was my duty to take care that old, steady regiments were on hand ready to support, press and profit by any advantage won by the gallant forlorn hope from the green woods of the Penobscot." During the Wilderness campaign the Second corps had been re-enforced by several regiments of heavy artillery acting as infantry. These regiments had not seen much service in the field previously and on account of the extra number enrolled were very large organizations.

The First Maine at the time of the order lay some distance back from the scene of the charge, and the men learned that they were to go in where other troops had failed. Every man on extra duty was called on to handle a musket, and the total roster was 832 men. The regiment was formed in three battalions of four companies each, each battalion led by a major, and had what is called a battalion front—that is, there were three lines of two ranks each, one line leading and the others following successively, each line composed of a battalion. The First was in McAllister's brigade, and several other regiments of the brigade were formed behind it in the same order.

The key to the Confederate line lay in front of the First Maine, about 500 yards distant. The intervening space was an open field, slightly rising toward the enemy. The Confederate batteries on both sides of Colquitt's salient and the infantry as well could rake the ground over which the column was to charge. General McAllister was at the time temporarily commanding another brigade, and on attempting an assault with this command over the very ground where the First Maine was to lead his men "fell like forest leaves under a hailstorm," and he gave it up. When he learned what was on foot with his own brigade he said: "God help them! They cannot advance on those works. They cannot live. The enfilade fire will cut them down."

In the full knowledge of all this, all excepting the fact that they were to go forward alone and that the regiments behind and each side were not to move one foot until the forlorn hope had broken through the enemy's line, the Maine boys made ready for the terrible work. Major Low says: "When the men saw what was expected of them I shall never forget what took place. Knapsacks were taken off and thrown into a pile and bayonets fixed. Orders were to remove the caps from the muskets and rely entirely upon the bayonet. The men's faces had grown very serious. We knew many, very many, of us were to die. Men turned to their comrades, bidding each other goodby, and, with tears trickling down their cheeks, dictated messages to wives, fathers, mothers, sisters and sweethearts in case they should be among the slain."

On the receipt of the word to go the Maine men sprang forward at double quick, and the moment the first battalion line appeared above the embankment where the column formed the slaughter began. "Men were shot dead within the first five feet," says Captain F. A. Cummings, another survivor. "The crash of 2,000 muskets rent the air as a long line of flame leaped from the works in our front, and the well known yell of the Army of Northern Virginia mingled with the roar of the rebel batteries on our right and left as their canister followed the musket balls of the infantry and tore enormous gaps in our ranks.

"The First battalion melted away before this fire and lay in a heap, officers and men, except now and then a scattering one who had miraculously escaped. Before the Second or Third battalion reached its place the regimental formation had been almost obliterated, and two-thirds of the First Maine lay stricken upon the field. Still, without firing a gun, but in blind obedience to orders, the remnant struggled on toward that pitiless line of fire that never ceased or slackened. The reader must understand that the regiment was alone."

Major Low thinks that some of the men went within fifty yards of the enemy's works. General Mott says: "They charged nearly up to the glacis, or what would represent it in a regular fortification, * * * but could not attain the barrier before them, submitted like heroes to the tempest of canister balls and bullets and were arrested under close fire only to cover the ground with their dead and wounded.

"The wave of heroes was shattered against that rampart of earth and blown to pieces by that whirlwind of death."

There were three flags carried in the charge by three sergeants, and six corporals acted as color bearers. Of the nine, seven were shot down, and one, a corporal, was killed. One of the corporals, W. A. Nason of Company B, received seven wounds. Nason took the colors from a wounded sergeant and went ahead until he fell with a wound through the body and in both legs.

"Nason's body showed nine openings made by the enemy's missiles," said Major Fred C. Low of Company B, "and he was the worst cut up man I ever saw. After Sergeant James M. Smith, the color bearer of our battalion, was shot down Nason seized the flag and carried it forward until he fell with bullets through the head, chest and each leg. He was the last of seven to fall out of the nine sergeants and corporals with the colors. He lay where he fell until he was found some time in the night by Colonel Chaplin, who was searching the field for the colors. Nason was unconscious, and his fingers were firmly clasped about the flagstaff. As he was supposed to be dead, no further attention was paid to him then, but the next night, when we tried to recover and bury the bodies, Nason had disappeared. He had recovered consciousness and crawled off the field during the day, and at night some of the men took him into the cellar of the Hare house, where I found him. He of course did not return to duty and never knew the particulars of his rescue until twenty-six years afterward, when I explained it to him at our reunion."

The losses in the regiment are variously stated, as is also the number engaged. Some accounts place the number in the ranks at 950, others at 900. Major Low places it at 832 officers and men in line. The official loss reported was 580 killed and wounded, but fuller details swell it to 632. The killed and mortally wounded were 210. The regiment was as good as wiped out. Colonel Chaplin, the leader, went up to General Mott after the charge was over and, offering him his sword, said: "Take my sword, general. I have no further use for it." Then, pointing to the ground between the lines, he continued, "There is my regiment lying on that field." Colonel Chaplin had trained his men to the idea that, being soldiers, they must obey orders. "Boys, always obey orders and never flinch," was the message he sent to the regiment as he lay dying some weeks after this charge.

The First Maine had not only the highest loss of any regiment in one engagement, but the highest in killed and mortally wounded during its term of service. It was in fourteen bloody engagements and had 400 men and 23 officers killed or mortally wounded. Its percentage of killed and mortally wounded was exceeded by only one regiment, the Second Wisconsin, which lost 19.7 per cent against 19.2 of the First Maine. The First Maine saw but ten months of fighting. In its first battle, Spottsylvania, May 19, 1864, it lost 476 killed and wounded out of about 1,600 engaged.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCHELLE, GA., Jan. 30, 1902.
Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.

DIRE PROPHECIES FOR YEAR 1904.

Predictions of Seers, Astrologers, Sorcerers and Clairvoyants of Europe.

A special cable dispatch published recently in the New York World told of the unanimity with which astrologers, seers, sorcerers, clairvoyants and trance mediums predict a year of horrors in 1904

Ahmet, a noted astrologer, adds to predictions by others this sinister prophecy:

"There will be a frightful conflict between labor and capital in America. Capital's enemies will find incendiarism, causing wholesale conflagarations in the great cities, the earliest and safest tool for their purpose.

"Insanity, due to alcohol and immorality, will assume frightful proportions, owing to the degrading influence of the French stage in making light of women's virtue and man's honor, ending in crimes of passion. France will be stricken with disasters on all sides.

"The Finns will attack Russia, while the Boers will plot against England.

"Kruger will die.

"Japan will humble Russia.

"There will be horrible massacres in China.

"Korea's Emperor will be assassinated.

"Europe will face the 'yellow peril.'

"A celebrated aeronaut will be killed at St. Louis."

Joubert, the weather expert of the Eiffel Tower Observation Station, makes this meteorological forecast:

"The year will witness great atmospheric phenomena, terrible storms at sea, violent volcanic eruptions and unheard-of extremes of heat and cold." Ange Gabrielle, a clairvoyant, predicts:

"Two heads of European States will perish.

"There will be awful holocausts in New York and Paris places of amusement.

"It will be a year of terrible marine disasters.

"The Czar will become a mental wreck, leaving no hope of a male heir.

"There will be another slaughter on the Paris Metropolitan Railway.

"An American archmillionaire will be killed in an automobile accident."

"Sister Marie" sees visions in which God strikes down French Premier Combes and those of his supporters who drove priests and nuns out of France.

Astrologer Jacob points out in the horoscope the forecast for 1904, these dreadful things:

"Roosevelt will fall sick; a conspiracy against him will be hatched. There will be great financial disasters in America. The United States will have grave quarrels with Russia.

"There will be serious dissensions between Russia and Austria. There will be a panic in a music hall, terrible accidents and riots in Russia.

"An attempt will be made to poison the Czar.

"The Emperor of Japan will meet with a severe accident.

"An assassin will seek the life of the Emperor of China. Women in China will be massacred.

"England will lose prestige. Her campaign in Thibet will fail.

"The Viceroy of India will abdicate

"Spain will have trouble with the anarchist and her government will be threatened.

"The French Cabinet will fall.

"There will be earthquakes in the Philippines, Chili and Constantinople

"Tremendous failures will occur in the Transvaal and in Calcutta.

"Great immortality will mark the year in London.

"Everywhere it will be a year of unwholesome literature and unrestrained materialism, accompanied by crimes of passion, mysterious death and extraordinary phenomena.

"A wonderful child will be born, one with a high destiny, showing its power in 1624, (at the age of 20.)"

The pesky fly is with us again. Not quite as numerous yet as he will be, but just as frisky and insistent as of old. He will keep the house wife busy. He has his good points the principal of which is, that he is a scavenger. He keeps down the death rate. A summer without the fly would mean an unparalled death crop, therefore, if you cannot be kindly, tolerate him as kindly as you can.

TRAIN NO 7. WRECKED.

Jumped the Track at Thornton Yesterday Morning.

The westbound Chicago express No. 7, which passes through Oakland about midnight, met with a mishap at Thornton, forty miles west of Oakland yesterday morning.

The train was going at terrific speed when at the point above indicated the baggage car jumped the track, following by the two day coaches. But one passenger was injured and he slightly.

The damaged cars were placed upon the rails yesterday and taken east through Oakland last night.

Considerabee excitement was caused last Saturday evening about 7:20 o'clock by an alarm of fire caused by the burning off of the insulation on the service wires leading into the residence of Mr. D. E. Offutt on Second street thereby setting on fire the woodwork under one of the windows. No damage resulted.

Mr. C. W. Frantz, of Fearer, whose store building and stock of goods at that point was burned some weeks ago, has purchased the building and stock of merchandise belonging to Harry Hinebaugh at the same place and has re-entered business. He will rebuild his burned building, however. Mr. Frantz was in Oakland yesterday, accompanied by Mr. C. T. Hoff, also of Fearer, both gentlemen making this office a business visit.

Messrs. Wm. H. H. Friend, accompanied by his son Harry, and C. V. Guard, all of Friendsville, were business visitors to Oakland Monday when a meeting of the West Virginia and Pennsylvania Telephone company was held. The Oakland office of this corporation will be removed within a few days from its present location on the first floor of the opera house to a room on the second floor.

Ex-county Treasurer Thomas B. Wiley, of Bittinger, was in Oakland last Monday when he made this office a pleasant visit. Mr. Wiley reports the damage done by the storm which passed over the Bittinger section one day last week, as being one of greater extent that first reports would indicate. Whole fields of growing corn were washed out and the young fruit just maturing was cut from the trees by the hail. Fields badly damaged have been re-plowed and sown in buckwheat.

Mrs. Elizabeth R. Townshend has issued invitations for the wedding of her daughter, Miss Edith, to Mr. Charles Dorsey Smith, which will occur next Wednesday evening, June 29th, at 8:30 o'clock in St. Paul's M. E. church, Oakland. The bride-elect is a daughter of the late S. L. Townshend, of Oakland, where her friends are innumerable. Mr. Smith, until a few years ago, was a resident of Oakland when he removed to Parsons, W. Va., where he is practicing law and at present State's Attorney for Tucker county. To the young couple this paper extends congratulations and trust that their journey through life may always be pleasant and prosperous.

Mine Inspector Murphy is going through the mines in Garrett county on the line of the West Virginia Central railway this week. Mr. Murphy says this will complete his first round of the mines under his charge, considerably under the sixty days allowed by law for the work. He will have a little time left for the necessary office work and special calls. It will take several visits to familiarize himself with actual conditions and methods throughout the region. There is a wide difference between the work of some mines and others, and much variation in local methods.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

When a man prefers walking to riding he may own a bucking broncho.

All trusts but the cigar trust should be smashed. It should go up in smoke.

It does not cause you so much distress if the lies that are told about you are not true.

No candidate for office believes that mud baths are healthy.

A bookkeeper in a bank should be a well balanced man.

The average young man cannot notice any difference in the spring. His fancy is turned that way all of the year round.

If she would but own up to it, a woman would rather go to a matinee than to a club meeting any day.

It takes a long pocketbook to keep a summer girl interested in a man all through the season.

A careful student of current events declares that the signs of the times are dollar signs.

Spring's Drawback.

The sigh of the zephyr is sweet to the ear;
The lark sings aloft in the blue;
Rings bold robin redbreast his song of good cheer
At sunrise, when sparkles the dew.
In rapture supreme could I list to the tune
If we didn't have to clean house pretty soon.

The daffodil wigwags its blossoms of gold,
The breath of the crocus is sweet;
The apple trees, groaning with all they can hold,
Fling down their sweet blooms at my feet—
My feet, bunion covered and large as a park,
Where chilblains from winter have still left their mark.

The rain softly falls on the blossoming trees,
The mold in the garden is wet,
And in the damp onion bed down on my knees
Pneumonia surely I'll get.
A crick in the back or a pain in the chest
Abstracts from spring pastimes about all the zest.

The blue grass is growing like weeds on the lawn
The seedsman's indorsement to win,
But I must arise at the peep of the dawn
And push the lawn mower like sin.
How jolly the springtime would be for a chap
Were labor and worry not always on tap!

He Was a Bird.

"I hear you are going to get married, Florence."

"Who told you?"

"Oh, a little bird."

"The jay is so proud of it that he had to go and tell."

Stumbled on It.

"How are you getting along at school, Johnny?"

"I'm about the smartest in my class. The teacher asked me today where the sun rose and I got it right in four guesses."

Better Then.

"Is it better to have loved and lost?"

"If you were engaged to a girl about whom you had changed your mind and couldn't lose her you would think so."

Her Escapade.

As the rosy light of day
Fades into the evening gray
Bessie saunters down the way.

From the shadow of a tree
Turns her head as if to see
If at last she's really free.

Does she wait a lover true
Coming in the evening dew
With the story old and new?

No. She wanders free from care
In the chilly evening air—
Would you think it?—on a tear.

Bessie, under mamma's thumb,
Can't be reckless, like her chum,
So she's out there chewing gum.

Not Prepared For It.

"Don't be alarmed. The gun isn't loaded."

"Then take it away. I am not carrying any accident insurance."

Could Be Excused.

"Wasn't it awful the way they used to stone prophets in olden times?"

"I don't know. Perhaps they were weather prophets."

Violated the Rules.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1279 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Franklin P. Stremmel, vs. Mildred E. Stremmel.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce of Franklin P. Stremmel from his wife, Mildred E. Stremmel, a vinculo matrimonii.

The bill states that on the 21st day of December, 1898, the plaintiff and defendant were married and lived together in Garrett county until December, 1903. That the said Mildred E. Stremmel on divers days and times since said marriage has committed the crime of adultery with certain men and that the plaintiff has not lived or cohabited with said defendant since he has become convinced of her adulterous acts.

The bill further alleges that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, and for an order of publication.

It is thereupon this 21st day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, in each of four successive weeks before the 22d day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of August next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Order of Publication.

William A. Harvey and William H. Ridder, copartners trading and doing business under the firm name and style of Harvey and Ridder, and The Wilson Lumber Company, a corporation, Plaintiffs, vs. Datesman Coal Company, and John Wills, assignee of Joseph W. Gross, assignee of Mary E. Clauson, Mortgagee, Defendents.

No. 1280 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of a certain real estate in Garrett county, Maryland, against which the plaintiffs have filed mechanic lien claims. The bill states that within the last six months the plaintiffs contracted with the defendant, Datesman Coal Company, to furnish certain materials to be used in building six dwelling houses and the said Harvey and Ridder contracted to erect and build said houses for said defendant at Steyer, Garrett county Maryland, and that said materials were to be paid for when and as each of said houses was completed: that said materials have been furnished and said work done and said houses completed on the 13th day of June, 1904; that said claims for materials furnished and work done are over due, and that the said defendant, Datesman Coal Company, although often requested has failed to pay the same; that plaintiffs have filed, in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County their respective claims as liens against said buildings, the ground upon which they are erected, and so much other ground immediately adjacent thereto and beloning to said Datesman Coal Company, as is necessary for the ordinary and useful purposes thereof, which claims contained an accurate description of said property, the kind and amount of materials furnished and work done by the plaintiffs for or about the construction of said buildings and the time when and the prices for which the same were agreed to be furnished and done, and the amount claimed to be due on each of said houses, it appearing that there is due to Harvey and Ridder the sum of $1689.13 and to the Wilson Lumber Company the sum of $428.37.

That John Wills is made a defendant to this proceeding on account of being the assignee of a certain mortgage made by Datesman Coal Company to Mary E. Clauson, on the 7th day of October, 1903, and in order that all parties interested in said property may be before the Court and be bound by its decree in the premises and that the said defendents are non residents of the State of Maryland.

The bill then prays for a decree for the sale of said property, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose, and out of the proceeds to pay the said mortgage and then the claims of the plaintiffs and for general relief.

It is thereupon, this 21st day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county in Equity, that the plaintiffs by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 22nd day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them and each of them, to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th of August next to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS.

This is to notify the taxpayers of Garrett county that the annual levy for 1904 has been made and published, and to call their attention to the following abstract, Section 45, Chapter 566, Acts of 1890, relating to the discount to be allowed and the interest be be charged on all tax bills:

"All county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of the levy thereof, and on all county taxes paid on or before the 1st day of September a discount of 3 per cent. shall be allowed, and after the 1st day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the tax bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt given for taxes so paid. But the discount shall not be allowed unless the whole amount of State and county taxes are paid when same is made.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1273 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Isaiah Fuller, Plaintiff, vs Mary E. Fuller, Defendant.

The oject of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff, a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant.

The bill states that the parties were married in the year 1891, and that the defendant almost immediately deserted the plaintiff. That the desertion of the plaintiff by the defendant has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years before the bringing of this suit, that it is deliberate and final and beyond hope or expectation of a reconciliation.

The bill further states that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and prays for an order of publication against her.

It is thereupon, this 26th day of May, in the year 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county, give notice to the defendant, who is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, of the purpose of this suit, by publishing said notice once a week for four successive weeks before the 1st day of July, 1904, and warning the defendant to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 18th day of July, 1904, to show cause, if any she may have, why a decree ought not to be issued as prayed.

STATE AID TO ROAD BUILDING.

Under Operations of the Law Garrett Will Receive $12,163,56.

As a means of explaining easily and clearly the principal features of the new law for state aid to road building in Maryland which becomes operative January 1, 1905, a concise brief pamphlet is to be issued by the Highway Division of the Maryland Geological Survey for the use of Boards of County Commissioners and residents throughout the state. The large interest which has been taken in many parts of the state in the new State Aid Road Law has made it advisable to embody in this pamhlet all the information necessary for county commissioners and individuals who wish to proceed under the act, and it also contains, in a form readily accessible, information of greatest interest upon the state fund available for this purpose to secure scientifically constructed roads at one-half the cost.

Information concerning the state aid appropriation is undoubtedly of liveliest interest at this time and the Maryland Geological Survey has gone to no little pains to supply a quantity of detailed information upon this particular topic, especially a table, hitherto unpublished, which has been compiled to show the exact allotment which each county of the state will receive under the new law. The latter which becomes operative on January 1, 1905, makes available for State aid in road building $200,000 annually, to be apportioned according to the ratio that the miles of road in each county bear to the total highway mileage of the state and in each case a considerable sum is at the disposal of the residents of the county to defray half the expense.

Garrett, Baltimore and Frederick counties are entitled to the largest appropriation by virtue of their respective large highway mileages, 1,119 and 1,151 miles respectively. Baltimore county will have $14,479.81 and Frederick county $14,893.89.

Of the other counties Garrett will receive $12,163.56; Harford, $10,636.65; Montgomery, $10,326.09; Prince George's, $11, 542.44, and Worcester, $10,766.05. If all the counties do not take up their full allowance the balance is to be reapportioned among the remaining counties which are ready to undertake road building.

The allotment of each county is shown in the table as follows, and is governed by the mileage of each:

COUNTY	MILEAGE.	ALLOTMENT.
Allegany	393	$ 8,967 39
Anne Arundel	521	6,741 72
Baltimore	1119	14,479 81
Calvert	335	4,334 89
Caroline	547	7,078 16
Carroll	770	9,963 77
Cecil	638	8,255 09
Charles	465	7,017 08
Dorchester	600	7,763 98
Frederick	1151	14,893 89
Garrett	940	12,163 56
Harford	822	10,636 65
Howard	413	5,344 20
Kent	427	5,525 36
Montgomery	798	10,326 09
Prince George's	892	11,542 44
Queen Anne's	602	7,789 85
Somerset	464	6,004 14

Washington	693	8,966 27
Wicomico	772	9,989 63
Worcester	832	10,766 05
Totals	15,456	$200,000 00

The pamphlet is to be published in an attractive form similar so the reports of the Maryland Geological Survey, and will be sent to all persons interested who will apply to the Survey at the Johns Hopkins University.

DIED.

MOSSER—Mr. Amos S. Mosser was born near Wilsonia, Md., May 29, 1861, died June 21, 1904, at Hauser, Maryland.

Mr. Mosser, after a lingering illness of about three weeks succumbed to the strong hand of death. His death was caused by a complication of diseases—acute Bright's disease together with pneumonia.

Dr. J. Gilbert Selby, of Eglon, W. Va., was the attending physician, and deserves very great praise for the skillful manner in which he handled this most complicated case.

Mr. Mosser is survived by wife and four children, and goes to meet an infant son who died thirteen years ago.

The children are—Ray, aged 13 yrs; Earl, aged 12 years; Hazell, aged 8 years; and Lelah, aged 5 years.

Mr. Mosser also leaves a father, five brothers and four sisters. All reside near here except James, who lives in Ashland, Ohio; and Priscilla, who lives near Cumberland. They were all present at the funeral.

A father is missed in the home; a christian citizen is missed in our community a most zealous worker is lost to the Sunday School; a noble christian life is gone out from the church; and a place is left vacant in the church council.

The very high esteem in which Mr. Mosser was held by the entire community; was well manifested by the large crowd that attended the funeral services.

The whole community is filled with grief. Never has a deeper cloud of sorrow surrounded us. It seems hard to submit, but a law higher than man's law must govern.

We close with the wish that Mr. Mosser's relatives and friends might imitate his noble christian life.

THE INMAN MINING COMPANY

Is Making a Big Showing of Expenditures.

COMPANY HAS THIRTY CLAIMS

Fifteen of Them Adjoin the Ft. Hall Mine—Building Improvements at the Property—Observations by a Press Representative.

A representative of this paper had the pleasure of making a visit yesterday to the property of the Inman Mining company, which is situated six miles south of the city near what is known a "The Narrows" of the Portneuf.

It may as well be state at once that the first impression of this company and its pretentions were not favorable, but after a thorough inspection of the properties and the work being done, it must be confessed that the impression were erroneous.

The company has thirty claims divided into three groups, all of which were visited. The Black Chief consists of nine claims and the Creed Group of fifteen claims, five of which were originally owned and located by the company and the other ten have recently been purchased. All of them have been surveyed and properly recorded and belong to the Inman company, with no bonding proposition or mortage against them.

The reporter found just a dozen men at work on the property when there, but learned that the force has recently been reduced from about eighteen and will soon again be increased to this number. The reporter went out accompanied by Treasurer Seaver and Vice-President Shaw of the company, and Mr. Shaw personally conducted him over the property permitting him to make his own inspection and observations.

At the Black Chief it was found that a tunnel has been run into the mountain a distance of about 200 feet. With this tunnel it is expected to tap a quartz ledge running in width from 20 to 40 feet on the surface. The tunnel will have to be run about 150 feet further to strike the ledge, but ore has been encountered that has given good assays and which, it is stated, would pay to handle if the company was provided with a concentrators, which will be put in after awhile. Assays were obtained at the mouth of the tunnel that gave over one dollar in gold. The men now are working in a vein of decomposed quartz and talc that looks as though if it would run well in values, though, Mr. Shaw stated, no assay had been made.

On the Reservation Group, the tunnel is in to the depth of 170 feet and a drift has also been run 80 feet. The outcroppings on these claims shows rich values in copper, gold, lead and silver. Some very rich gray copper specimens were seen.

The Creed Group with the claims recently purchased, are on the west side of the river from the other two groups of claims and joined directly up to the Fort Hall Mining company's property where so much money is being spent in developing work and where a true fissure vein, carrying rich mineral has been encountered. All of these claims lie in the same ledge as the Fort Hall property and there can be no question but that all will carry rich mineral if any of them do. The surface indications of these claims are also most excellent and the development done so far has only served to indicate that the veins widen and grow richer with depth. A part of these claims are the ones purchased recently from the former Lieutenant Governor Terrell.

A tunnel will be begun on these claims at once as soon as the mining engineer employed by the Inman company shall select the most suitable place. The man is expected here today to choose the site for this tunnel. A new tunnel will also be run on the Reservation Group at a place that will give several hundred more feet depth than the one now being run.

The officers of the company are also looking after the proper comfort and care of the men in their employ, and every thing is being constructed on a basis that insures permanence and indicates that the company is here for the purpose of developing the mineral resources of their property and, of course, incidentally, that of the entire district. The company now has a blacksmith shop, a bunk cabin for the men, an assay office, superintendent's office and a kitchen and dining hall. Besides this they are constructing, and have material on the ground for a two atory boarding house and general store thirty by forty-two feet. This building is now up to the second story and will be completed as rapidly as possible.

The company yesterday swung a foot bridge across the Portneuf, providing convenient passage for men going to and from the tunnel to be constructed on the Creed Group, and a well has been sunk near the boarding house providing excellent water for domestic purposes. A wind pump will be put up here and water forced into the house for baths and closet. The sewerage will be supplied by a pipe line under the railway to the river.

All of the tunnels are supplied with ore cars and iron rails and, in fact, everything that the company is doing, is on a permanent and safe scale and there can be no doubt but that their money is being spent to the best advantage, and with a reasonable certainty of bringing satisfactory returns to the company and stockholders.—Pocatello (Idaho) Advance, May 24.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

ROOSEVELT AND FAIRBANKS.

The Republican National Convention in session at Chicago, last week on Thursday nominated Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, for President, and Charles W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, for Vice-President. As to President Roosevelt, the action of the Convention was merely the recording of the will of the rank and file of the National Republican party long ago so plainly and emphatically expressed as to preclude the consideration of any other name for this high office. Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, the nominee for Vice-President, has been considered of Presidential calibre for many years.

The Republican party enters the campaign now opening with high hopes and absolute confidence in obtaining a verdict of approval by the people at the polls. The party has to its credit a record of achievement and of competency that challenges the admiration of the world. On the other hand the Democratic party has not been in recent years and is not now sufficiently agreed upon any political policy to be able to enact beneficial laws. On one side we have a sure, safe, vigorous, compact, united political organization that has demonstrated its capacity to govern; on the other side we see a weak, disunited, contentious and disorganized body, offering no reasonable ground for the belief that they are competent to undertake the responsibility of government.

The nominees of the Convention are the highest types of American manhood. Both are trained in the art of statesmanship and both enjoy the respect and confidence of their countrymen. With such candidates, standing upon the record of the Republican party and upon the strong platform adopted at Chicago, the Republican party can confidently invite the support of the best citizenship of the nation.

EXTRACTS FROM REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

The Republican platform sets forth clearly and distinctly what are the cardinal principles of the party. We print extracts from it relating to the condition of the country, the tariff, currency and combinations of capital.

EVILS FOLLOWING DEMOCRATIC RULE.

The Republican party entered upon its present period of complete supremacy in 1897. We have every right to congratulate ourselves upon the work since then accomplished, for it has added luster even to the traditions of the party which carried the government through the storms of civil war.

We found the country, after four years of Democratic rule, in evil plight and oppressed with the misfortune and doubtful of the future. Public credit had been lowered, the revenues were declining, the debt was growing, the administration's attitude towards Spain was feeble and mortifying, the standard of value was threatened and uncertain, labor was unemployed, business was sunk in the depression which had succeeded the panic of 1893, hope was faint and confidence was gone.

We met these unhappy conditions vigorously, effectively and at once, replaced a Democratic tariff law based on free trade principles and garnished with sectional protection by a consistant protective tariff, and industry, freed from oppression and stimulated by the encouragement of wise laws has expanded to a degree never before known, has conquered new markets and has created a volume of exports which has surpassed imagination. Under the Dingley tariff labor has been employed, wages have risen and all industries have revived and prospered.

PROTECTION FOR INDUSTRIES.

Protection which guards and develops our industries, is a cardinal policy of the Republican party. The measure of protection should always at least equal the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad. We insist upon the maintenance of the principles of protection, and therefore rates of duty should be readjusted only when conditions have so changed that the public interest demands their alteration, but this work cannot safely be committed to any other hands than those of the Republican party. To entrust it to the Democratic party is to invite disaster. Whether, as in 1892, the Democratic party declared the protective tariff unconstitutional or whether it demands reform or tariff revision, its real object is always the destruction of the protective system. However specious the name, the purpose is ever the same. A Democratic tariff has always been followed by business adversity, a Republican tariff by business prosperity. To a Republican Congress and a Republican President this great question can be safely entrusted. When the only free trade country among the great nations agitates a return to protection, the chief protective country should not falter in maintaining it.

We have extended widely our foriegn markets and we believe in the adoption of all practicable methods for which further extension, including commercial reciprocity wherever reciprocal arrangements can be effected consistent with the principles of protection and without injury to American agriculture, American labor or any American industry.

TO UPHOLD GOLD STANDARD.

We believe it to be the duty of the Republican party to uphold the gold standard and the integrity and value of our national currency. The maintenance of the gold standard established by the Republican party cannot safely be committed to the Democratic party, which resisted its adoption and has never given any proof since that time of belief in it on fidelity to it.

CAPITAL AND LABOR.

Combinations of capital and of labor are the results of the economic movement of the age, but neither must be permitted to infringe upon the rights and interests of the people. Such combinations, when lawfully formed for lawful purposes, are alike entitled to the protection of the laws, and neither can be permitted to break them.

Mary's Wicked Ram.

Maid Mary had a hard browed ram, as black as any crow, and everywhere that Mary went the ram was sure to go.

It went with her to Zion church one peaceful Sabbath day, and Mary thought it would behave in a religious way.

She wisely counseled it enroute, and begged it to be good, and rammy shook his whiskerettes as if to say he would (not).

A deacon met them at the door, and said it would be a sin to see a wicked beast at church, but rammy butted in!

The deacon got a plexus punch that stretched him on the floor, and the subsequent proceedings interested him do more.

The congregation rubbernecked with widely staring eyes, the superstitious thinking 'twas the devil in disguise.

A sister from her seat arose—she fain would hence depart—but got a chug behind her back that almost broke her heart.

"I will expel the sinful brute!" cried Brother Pettigrew, but in his midst the rammy's brow was buried p. d. q.

A choir man threw a prayer stool to crush the warlike ram, and landed it with vigor on poor Mary's diaphragm.

The preacher said that kindness would subdue wild beasts and birds, and moved toward the waiting pet with soft endearing words.

Then came a dull and sickening thud! The pastor, where was he? Go ask the sister in whose lap he lit ungracefully.

Then sent they for the butcher boy, who slew the aged ram, and fixed its meat with chemicals, and sold it for spring lamb.—Denver Post.

General Wilson's Famous Raid

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

June 22-29, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

ONE of the boldest operations in the history of the cavalry corps of the Army of the Potomac took place in connection with the movement of the Second and Sixth corps against the Weldon railroad. General Sheridan was at this time, June 22, 1864, absent on the expedition to Lynchburg, which resulted in a cavalry battle at Trevillian Station, on the Central railway, north of Richmond, between Sheridan with the divisions of Gregg and Torbert and the Confederates under Hampton and Fitz-Hugh Lee. Sheridan left the division of James H. Wilson to accompany the Army of the Potomac, and it took the lead from the field of Cold Harbor to the James river.

After crossing the river and taking a short rest Wilson was re-enforced by Kautz's division, belonging to Butler's army, and the column started on the 22d with general instructions to cross the country south of Petersburg and strike the intersection of the Petersburg and Lynchburg and the Richmond and Danville railroads. This would cut communications from Petersburg and Richmond south and west.

Wilson's combined force was less than 6,000 men. He crossed the Weldon road without opposition, dashed across the Lynchburg road and struck it fourteen miles below Petersburg, sweeping south thirty miles to the crossing of the Danville road. The railroad track, the depots, bridges and all the rolling stock were completely destroyed. At the crossing of Staunton river, twenty miles farther south, Wilson found the bridge guarded by earthworks, garrisoned by infantry and supplied with artillery. The river was not fordable, and a brave attack, led by General Kautz, failed to carry the position. At this moment W. H. F. Lee brought up his cavalry division and attacked Wilson in the rear and managed to divide Wilson and Kautz and to put his whole force between them.

The raiders were now 100 miles within the enemy's lines. The news of their destructive work had gone into Petersburg, and the forces there were scattering in all directions to intercept them. At every crossroad they found militia troops in position to oppose them, and often their scouting parties and pickets were surrounded and made prisoners. The cavalrymen of Wilson and Kautz were continually in the saddle, not daring to encamp for sleep or to cook rations. Their fare was anything that could be had, sometimes kernels of hard corn, which men and horses munched together.

Wilson sent word to Kautz to retire the best he could, and with his own force he traveled as rapidly as possible back toward the Weldon road. A rapid ride of eighty miles brought him to the Nottoway river, thirty miles south of Petersburg and ten miles from the Weldon road. From this point Wilson started northeast on a road that would carry him across the Weldon road and to Prince George's Court House, east of Petersburg and in rear of Meade's army. But W. H. F. Lee had sent word to Petersburg of the precarious position in which he had placed his enemies, and General Robert E. Lee at once recalled Hampton, who at that time was dogging Sheridan's column across the peninsula toward James river. Hampton brought up three brigades of cavalry and reached Ream's Station, on the Weldon railroad, on June 28. Here he met Chambliss' brigade of W. H. F. Lee's division and also found two brigades of infantry from Petersburg, under command of General Mahone, posted to cover the railroad. This point was Wilson's crossing place, and he expected to meet here the infantry of Meade's army sent out to seize and hold this road. Hampton now deployed two brigades across the road where Wilson was coming up, and he attacked the moving column, keeping up the battle until night. Wilson's men, aided by Kautz, who was again with him, fought desperately. But Wilson learned what force was behind Hampton, and he now determined to push north again up the Weldon road toward Petersburg, where he expected to find some of Meade's men. Wilson withdrew in the night, leaving Kautz in position.

At the time of the separation of General Kautz from the main command that daring commander found himself surrounded on three sides by the enemy in overwhelming force. On the fourth side was the steep embankment leading to a cut in the Weldon railroad, beyond which was a supposedly impassable swamp. Kautz had but two regiments. Most men would have surrendered, but not he. Spurring down the embankment amid a plunging fire, he led his regiments up the opposite embankment, rode boldly into the swamp, which a drought had fortunately rendered passable, and escaped with nearly his whole command.

One of General Wilson's staff officers had remained with the party cut off from Wilson's moving column when Hampton intercepted it, and General Kautz sent him with a small bodyguard to cut his way through the enemy and report to Meade. This officer, Captain Whitaker, made a bold dash and got through the lines himself, though he lost all of his escort in the melee, and he reported to Meade at army headquarters within a few hours. Wilson had meanwhile wheeled his column around on the back track to succor Kautz, and, having made a circuit compassing the Weldon road and found no Union troops in possession, he determined to destroy everything that could impede the movements of his men and fight his way out at any cost. The enemy was east, north and west of him, but a wide circuit south and then east might carry him far enough from the enemy to enable him to reach some Union force which he supposed would be sent south to aid him. His ammunition was given to his men, his wagons and cannon caissons destroyed.

Before the column could get away, however, Mahone's infantry attacked the line in front and Fitz-Hugh Lee assailed the flank. Mahone cut through, separating Wilson's column again, but there was confusion on the Confederate side as well as with Wilson's men, and Kautz, by a rapid march, dashed off across the flank of his enemy, and, riding hard, abandoning and spiking his cannon on the way, he succeeded in reaching the Army of the Potomac without further opposition. Wilson, with his party, kept on in the southerly course.

Meantime Captain Whitaker had reached Meade's headquarters and brought to the army the first intelligence from Wilson since he set out on the raid. The Sixth corps, the one lying nearest to the Welden road on the south of the Union army, was sent out toward Ream's Station, where it was now known that Hampton and Wilson had fought on June 29. Arriving there, it was found that Mahone's infantry had withdrawn.

After crossing the Nottoway river and moving east and north Wilson came to the Blackwater river, a deep stream having the same course as the Nottoway, to the north and east of it. Here the bridge was gone, having been destroyed in a previous cavalry raid by Kautz. There were no fords, but by cutting stringers in the woods and gathering boards and planks around the country he succeeded in crossing; but he was not a moment too soon. His roundabout course had brought him nearer to the Confederate forces that he had left behind on Stony creek, and Hampton and Fitz-Hugh Lee were close up to him. Wilson destroyed the bridge within sight of his foes and finally galloped up to the protection of gunboats on James river some distance below the army depot at City Point.

It was now July 2, and the raiders had been out ten days. They had traveled in direct line over 300 miles and had not halted except to work or to fight. The men and animals had no rest and but partial supplies of food. Much of the time the stars and their compasses had been their only guides, and at no time after crossing the Weldon railroad to the westward had they knowledge of the whereabouts of their enemies. Under such circumstances only a sharp vigilance at all times, the capacity for endurance and personal gallantry could save the expedition from total disaster and the men from death or imprisonment.

WHITAKER MADE A BOLD DASH.

General Kautz reported that his command became so much worn out physically that they fell asleep in their saddles while under the fire of the enemy in battle. In many cases men were seized by the enemy while man and horse were both drowsing on the tedious picket watch.

Regarding the results of this raid General Grant says in his official report of the campaign: "The damage done to the enemy in this expedition more than compensated for the losses we sustained. It severed all connection by railroad with Richmond for several weeks."

The actual railroad destruction amounted to sixty miles of track and all the equipment along the road.

The losses on the Union side amounted to 240 killed and wounded and 1,261 missing. Twelve guns had been abandoned, one battery of six having been spiked by Kautz and then overturned in the swamp.

The Place to Buy the Best Bread Cakes and Pies.

Our aim is to make Bread "As Good as Mother made it," and we have been successful and have stopped all the drudgery of home baking with the use of Modern Machinery Have you ever experienced as the following reads:

Your wife has gone out in the country;
You're left alone; what a pity,
With nothing to do but to ponder
And read out aloud to the kitty.

You run out of bread in the morning;
But knowing 'tis easy to make it,
You swiftly adjourn to the kitchen
And silently start in to bake it.

Take two coffee cups full of flour,
And water sufficient to "dough" it;
A thimble of salt for the "season,"
Then roll it, and poke it, and blow it.

And blow it, and poke it, and roll it,
And pinch it, and push it, and flop it,
And punch it, and pound it, and pull it,
And monkey around till you drop it.

Then clean it off nice with a towel,
And sock in a yeast cake to "raise" it;
Now drop in some soda to "short" it,
And smear on some butter to "glaze" it.

Then place it 'way back in the oven,
(That is if you've moulded and "set" it);
Close up all the doors of the kitchen,
Go in and sit down and forget it.

Go set yourself down in the parlor,
And read from "The Science of Baking;"
Read on till you smell something burning,
Then think of the bread you are making.

Now hop, skip snd jump to the kitchen,
And as you hop nigher and nigher,
You know by the smoke in the hallway
The blooming old bread is on fire.

Then hustle it out in the alley,
Juggle it, fumble it, shie it;
Then gently dig up a nickel
And go to the baker's and buy it.

CUPID AND THE COMET

By ANNA S. RICHARDSON

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

It had been bad enough, said the cowboys, to have Buena Vista county turned into a rendezvous for invalids in various stages of hay fever, bronchitis and consumption. It was an outrage to have one's favorite barroom remodeled into a sanitarium, but it was heaping insult upon injury to have a twenty-five horsepower French racer flashing over roads—and good roads, too—long sacred to the festive cow pony.

With Harvey Thatcher, owner of said racer, the good roads surrounding Fort Norton, the county seat of Buena Vista county, had been the main attraction. When his physicians had ordered Colorado air, Thatcher had stipulated that section of eastern Colorado where the roads would permit him to break the already brilliant record of the Comet. And so it happened that he and his machine, his valet and his chauffeur, were thorns in the flesh of the cowboy element, even as the latter had worried the respectable faction among the early citizens of Fort Norton.

The cowboys had barely become accustomed to the presence of the Comet in their midst and had decided that it might prove dangerous to shoot up a gasoline engine when there arose fresh cause for dissatisfaction. Nan Bearce took to riding in the Comet. And Nan was the prettiest girl in Buena Vista county, or all the adjoining counties, for that matter. She had been the toast of every camp on the range, the belle at every ball, the queen of every county fair tournament in which the cowboys had fought for honors after their own peculiar fashion. Her favors had been evenly distributed, and her devotion had gone to her worthless father, who ran the one shoe shop of which Fort Norton could boast. A dilapidated, evil smelling den he kept at the end of the street leading north from the postoffice, but the three rooms behind the shop were as fresh and sweet as Nan's stout arms and sunshiny nature could keep them.

There were men, dozens of them, in Buena Vista county who would have been willing to overlook the father, miserable, drunken wretch that he was, for love of the girl, but she seemed too proud to foist the old man on any of her anxious suitors. The only favor she had ever been known to accept was at the hands of Ben Heth, a stolid, almost morose young ranchman, who had started into the stock raising business in a small way and who held himself aloof from the rollicking, roistering element which had terrorized Fort Norton at regular intervals. When old Bearce had been smitten with smallpox Heth, under cover of darkness, had removed him to his own ranch because of Nan's horror of the pesthouse, and the three had endured the relentless quarantine together. Then the intimacy had apparently been broken off, old Bearce going back to his bench, Nan to her poverty stricken life and Heth to his lonely existence on the cattle range.

All this was before Thatcher and the Comet came to Fort Norton. After old Bearce had skillfully mended some rents in Thatcher's leather robes the friendship between the dashing young automobilist from New York and the humble and beautiful daughter of the village shoemaker became town gossip. Women discussed it over their back fences and at the sewing circle of the Union church. Men shook their heads around the stove at Gilbert's general store, and the news spread out on the range. Thatcher was making a fool of Nan Bearce, and there were mutterings that boded ill for the owner of the Comet. The only man who declined to discuss the situation was Ben Heth and that even after Nan and young Thatcher had ridden out to his ranch twice in the devil's wagon, as one old woman called it. To be sure, the chauffeur was in attendance, but what was a chauffeur perched up in the back seat with Nan—enticing, alluring Nan—her soft, brown hair tossed by the wind, her eyes dancing with the excitement of the run, urging the young New Yorker on to higher speed?

Once they had been seen coming back to town at a slow pace, with Ben trying to keep his astonished pony within talking distance of the machine. Parties who had witnessed the scene reported it variously. Some said that Ben appeared to enjoy the proceeding, more fool he, while others maintained that he was berating Nan for unfaithfulness, even in the presence of his rival.

But Ben's love affair was utterly forgotten in the face of more momentous events which came with the roundup. The H. O. Cattle company, with which Ben had worked before branching out for himself, discovered what it chose to designate as a shortage in H. O. calves and a corresponding and suspicious increase in calves with the Heth brand. The H. O. brand was a bar with an O on the end. The Heth brand was a dumbbell. Rumor—and rumor in Buena Vista county is an ugly customer—declared that it was easy to change the bar-O to the dumbbell. The air around Fort Norton became rife with things other than mere rumors, including some very bad whisky. And justice, as drink crazed cow punchers sometimes see it, works with appalling suddenness.

Rumors travel faster than half drunken cow punchers who stop at each saloon to drown their threats in bad whisky, and a twenty-five horsepower machine will travel faster than either. That was why the mob that had started out to hang Ben Heth as a sort of climax for the annual roundup came upon the Comet, its owner, his valet and his chauffeur two miles beyond Heth's ranch. They were still hunting for Heth, after having razed his ranch cabin. The Comet was piled high with luggage, a couple of dress suit cases showing above the boxes, and rubber blankets, which filled in the body of the machine. Thatcher explained in a casual way that he was trying some new roads and might be gone a week or more. The cowboys sent him on his way with a volley of shots. They were bent on more serious work.

The Comet shot along the country road, through the soft twilight and the limpid moonlight, straight across the state line into Nebraska. At precisely the same time the Overland limited was carrying a white faced but determined girl over the same state line.

Thatcher insisted upon giving away the bride and receiving the first kiss after the ceremony. He said it was due for excess baggage on the best run the Comet had ever made. Then the great red machine, its owner, his chauffeur and his valet rolled back to Fort Norton without the impressive array of luggage, and Harvey Thatcher, tenderfoot, from New York, announced that when a certain bunch of unmitigated fools had finished their annual spree and had recounted their blankety blank calves the bride and groom would come back to Fort Norton, at which time the damages claimed by said groom for injury done his property and his reputation would be paid or the sheriff of Buena Vista county and one Harvey Thatcher, Esq., would know the reason why, whereupon said Harvey Thatcher promptly rose in the estimation of the cowboy element, and his horseless vehicle was forgiven him.

What We Find In Old Schoolbooks.

Along with the writing in old schoolbooks there is more or less drawing. The very early books sometimes have fly leaf sketches of Indians and log houses. The later books, says Leslie's Monthly, have houses of more modern sort, and you find rude drawings of steamboats, horses, birds, flowers, faces and the like. Often a penny or other coin was slipped under the fly leaf and the surface of the paper covering the coin was rubbed with a piece of lead from the schoolboy's pocket or the blunt end of a pencil.

The children had numerous methods for defacing their schoolbooks, and they also had certain devices for keeping them in good order. Many of the older books are protected by an outer cover of sheepskin neatly folded in at the edges and sewed in place with homespun tow. After 1825 this outer covering was apt to be calico, and sometimes there were tie strings attached to the sides. The girls were addicted to the use of a "thumb paper" folded and slipped in where the thumb rested when the book was in use.

Her Opinion.

He was very badly gone in love indeed, as may be judged by the fact that he sat up till the wee sma' hours and nibbled two inches off a pen in composing the following epic:

Beautiful one with eyes so blue,
Oh, how my fond heart sighs for you!
Sweet spirit, listen to me now,
Hear once again my ardent vow!

There was about two feet six inches of this soul inspiring verse, and he sent it to the object of his adoration, with a request that she would express an opinion on its merits. He got it.

Dear Mr. Theodore Hopkins—You ask me for my opinion of your verses. I do not like to hurt your feelings, but if you will read the initial letters of the first four lines downward I may say that you express my sentiments exactly. Yours very truly, MABEL BROWNE.

And when Theodore strung the first four letters together he pondered bitterly.—London Telegraph.

The Harm Noise Does.

Noise is an undoubted factor in impairing the tone of the nerve centers. Whether we are conscious of it or not, it hurts the brain and has a deafening, dazing, bewildering effect on the mental processes. It tires the brain and tends to produce cerebral hyperemia. To live in a noisy atmosphere is to shorten one's day. Irritability, neurasthenia, insomnia, are common effects. The tympanum, or drum membrane, of the ear is injured, the circulation of the cerebro spinal fluid is disturbed and the nerve cells themselves suffer as though subjected to mechanical violence.—Family Doctor.

COLONEL MONROE

Judge Sawyer Deplores the Disappearance of Party Lines

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick Upham Adams

"IT'S a long time since I have had the pleasure of listening to an old fashioned political argument," remarked Judge Sawyer, laying aside his favorite paper. "And it's a long time since I have read an editorial with the familiar political ring. When I first subscribed for this paper it never had a word of censure for a Democrat or a kindly statement about a Republican or his party. In those days—and they were not long ago—a Democrat would not allow a Republican paper to come into his house, and a Republican never saw the inside of a Democratic journal. It is not so in these prosaic times."

"When I was first elected to congress," observed Colonel Monroe, "party feeling ran so high in and around Lincolnville that persons of opposite political beliefs had as little to do with one another as possible. Young women marched in torchlight parades and signed agreements pledging themselves never to marry men who did not vote as did the fathers and brothers of these young women. All members of each of the two great parties firmly believed that the rival organization was bent on ruining the country. Shootings and murders for political causes were common. As a rule, Democratic merchants depended for their patronage on Democratic customers, and it was seldom that any but Republicans entered Republican stores."

"I remember very well," mused Judge Sawyer, "what a row was created when it was discovered that the new minister of our church was not in political accord with the majority of his congregation. He was an eloquent, able and God fearing man and never tinctured his sermons with the slightest hint of politics, but he was compelled to resign and seek a call from a community which imagined it voted as it prayed."

"I haven't changed my political opinions in forty years," declared Postmaster Jenkins proudly. "I have never voted for a man who wasn't on my ticket and never will, and I think that a man who is always flopping around from one party to another is not to be trusted."

"How do you account for this increasing lack of partisan feeling?" asked Judge Sawyer, addressing Colonel Monroe.

"There are no clearly defined political issues and have not been in recent campaigns," answered Colonel Monroe. "It is no longer possible for an intelligent man to give cogent reasons for allegiance to either of the leading parties. Our elections are decided by appeals to the commercial instinct of the community or nation and by the personal popularity of the respective candidates. Great principles of abstract justice are no longer involved in political campaigns. It is impossible to name an issue which fairly divides Republicans and Democrats. The tariff question comes as near as any to forming such an issue, and yet each party contains in its ranks men of all shades of belief on the subject of tariff regulation."

"How about the trusts?" suggested Judge Sawyer. "Are there not indications that party lines will be drawn on the question of the regulation or suppression of these monopolies?"

"Not the slightest indication," was the prompt reply. "Both platforms will assert that the trusts must and shall be suppressed, but neither will contain rational suggestions as to how this suppression is to be brought about. The so called trusts are within the domain of business and commerce, and modern business men do not allow politicians to seriously interfere in their affairs. Do you suppose for one moment that it is possible to utilize the machinery of either party to elect and install an administration seriously bent on the destruction of the various combines which are commonly classed as trusts?"

"There certainly is a strong popular sentiment in favor of some move against these combinations," asserted Judge Sawyer.

"I don't believe it," declared Colonel Monroe. "There is a lively public curiosity as to what will develop from the present trust form of industry, but the people are as much in the dark and as little inclined to make a radical move against the trusts at the present time as are the politicians. The people don't like trusts, neither do they like cyclones or droughts, and they are as powerless to suggest remedies for the latter as for the former. The business interests will select the candidates, their representatives will write both platforms, and the people will make their choice. The task of consolidating industries and eliminating competition will continue the same after election as before. The trust is an issue, but the time has not come when it can be made a political one. It is an economic problem in process of evolution. Political parties can neither hasten nor retard the processes of evolution. It is their province to carry into effect the results of evolution, and the trust is not yet a finished product."

"It seems strange to me that the people take so little interest in matters which years ago would have stirred the nation from ocean to ocean," said Judge Sawyer after a pause. "I thought the Philippine question would arouse intense interest, but it did not. No one seems to care very much about the alleged disfranchisement of the negro in the south. There is more genuine public interest in a city election than in a national one. Why is this?"

"It is because manufacturing, financial and commercial interests are in complete and undisturbed control of the situation," was the reply. "More than at any time in the history of the world its inhabitants are engaged in the pursuit of wealth. We have all the liberty we seem to need, so that question does not worry us. A serious quarrel with a nation worthy of our prowess is impossible. With peace assured at home and abroad it is inevitable that everything becomes subordinated to business. When our liberties were menaced patriots and statesmen were selected by the people to represent them. When sectional strife divided the nation men of violent partisanship filled the seats in congress and in our legislatures. An era is always fittingly represented by those selected by the electorate. This is a business era, and our lawmakers represent finance and trade. Our national senate safeguards the interests of business enterprises national in their scope, while the lower house of congress attends to the commercial requirements of the various districts."

"Is not that too severe an arraignment of our representatives?" asked Judge Sawyer.

"I do not intend to reflect in any way upon the character of congress or of the various legislative and municipal bodies," declared Colonel Monroe. "I am simply attempting to make plain my belief that this is an era of business and trade and to point out the fact that it is only natural that these dominant interests should control legislation. Nothing more important than business occupies the public eye and ear. Of course there are honest and dishonest business interests, but it is always safe to assume that any legislative body is fairly representative of the prevailing sentiment and the average honesty of its constituents. But here is the point I am driving at—business problems do not make attractive or spectacular campaign issues. The people as a mass take little interest in the discussion of business problems which have been injected into political campaigns. In the second place, the divergence of opinion between the business interests which control the respective parties is so slight that I can see no necessity for the expense and turmoil of an election."

"In other words," suggested Judge Sawyer, "you hold that the business interest is dominant in both parties and has practically consolidated them into a trust. This, you hold, accounts for the lack of public interest in political affairs."

"Exactly so," continued the colonel. "And, in my opinion, this consolidation ends the conflict between these two great parties which under different names have existed more than a century. All of the issues which called them into existence have been settled for all time. There is as little difference between the principles of the two great parties as there is in the meaning of the words 'Republican' and 'Democrat.' There is no clearly marked division of opinion on such great questions as the construction of the constitution, state rights, slavery and other issues which once inflamed the public mind. You cannot draw party lines on any of the minor new issues which are being discussed. Both parties are pledged to 'conserve the interests of honestly invested capital,' and both are devoted in their love and admiration of the 'working classes.' There remains only the personality of the candidates."

"I believe you are right in your analysis of the situation," said Judge Sawyer, "but it is one which, in my opinion, is not to be desired. A republic such as ours needs two aggressive and evenly matched parties. When a nation is making real progress there is no lack of great issues on which there may be honest difference of opinion."

"Like all calms, political ones are followed by storms," observed the colonel. "Though the surface of the political sea is unruffled, there are clouds in the sky which predict rough weather ahead. The perfection of machinery, the concurrent organization of the forces of capital and labor, the piling up of enormous fortunes, the suppression of competition by fair and unfair methods, the corrupt use of money in elections and in influencing legislation—these and other forces are at work. New issues will give birth to new parties, and I am so confirmed an optimist that I feel sure the coming contests will result in national good. I thoroughly agree with Mr. Carnegie, who holds that the American people have it in them to justly settle any problem arising from existing conditions."

"Carnegie is all right," declared Postmaster Jenkins, with sudden enthusiasm. "He's going to give Lincolnville a $15,000 library."

Rev. E. Manges, who officiated at the wedding of his son near Hummellstown, Pa., last Wednesday, returned to Oakland Thursday morning, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Anna, who taught school during the winter at York, Pa., and who will remain here during the summer.

Mr. E. J. Hamill, of Blaine, one of the members of the new coal corporation which was recently formed under the laws of this state and known as the Hamill Coal and Mining Company of Garrett County, was here Monday on business connected with the enterprise. The new company expects to begin active operations upon the opening of their mine and the installation of the requisite machinery as soon as possible. The corporation has a paid-up capital of $25,000 and is composed of the Hamill brothers.

FIREWORKS ON THE FOURTH.

An Order Issued by the Mayor Prohibits Firing of Certain Kinds.

Tuesday Mayor McComas issued the following order governing the firing of fireworks on the Fourth within the city limits:

"The large fire cracker will not be allowed on any street or alley in the city limits.

"Cartridges and dynamite caps, canes and toys pistols will also be prohibited ourtide of private premises.

"The usual night fireworks within the city limits, such as Roman candles, sky rockets and the like will not be prohibited when used with discretion. They must be aimed into open space and directed above pedestrians' heads.

"Any person shooting Roman candles at people on the streets will be promptly arrested.

"The small boy and the small fire cracker will be permitted after 12:30 p. m., or before 10 a. m. From 10 a. m. until noon, or after the parade, all fire works, crackers, toy pistols of any description will be positively prohibited, and arrest will promptly follow any one violating this order.

"HENRY W. MCCOMAS, Mayor."

Mr. W. A. Smith, of Hoyes, arrived here this morning from Chicago and St. Louis. In the former city he was one of the doorkeepers at the National Republican Convention and after the adjournment of that body went to St. Louis where he visited the Fair.

Mr. William Boughner, of Fairmont, West Va., who was at Webster Springs, W. Va., for several weeks where he went for the benefit of his health, arrived in Oakland yesterday morning and went down to Mr. G. W. Delawder's, on Deep Creek, where his family has been for for a week or two. Mr. Boughner's health is very much improved.

Mr. George T. Brew, who resides at Ronceverte, West Va., where he has been engaged in the manufacture of lumber and shingles since he left Oakland about two yeaas ago, was here a day or two last and this week seeing his many friends and also visiting his nephew, Austin Brew, of Pittsburg, who has been at The Rest during the past several months.

Elsewhere in this paper today we republish an article taken from the Pocatello (Idaho) Advance describing the workings of the Inman Mining Company in which considerable local capital is invested. From the report above referred to and from reports received from private sources it is safe to presume that the mines of this company are sure to become dividend payers to the stockholders.

Mr. Daniel Miller, of the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., came up to Oakland last Friday night, being summoned here on account of the extreme illness of his niece, Miss Percy Brady, whose life at the time was almost despaired of but who since has rallied and is now much better. Mr. Miller returned to Washington Tuesday night.

Mr. Daniel Willink, of near London, England, who with a party of his countrymen came to this county some thirty years ago where they engaged in agriculture on what is now known as the Goat farm, and who returned to England some ten years later, is again in Oakland renewing old acquaintances, having arrived here from St. Louis and San Francisco, where he has business interests, last Saturday. Mr Willink is much impressed with the improvements made in the town and surrounding country. He will leave here tomorrow and sail for England from New York on Friday of next week.

Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in the mammoth double production of "Uncle Tom,s Cabin" will appear on Monday, July 4th, at the lot corner Third and Pennington streets in Oakland. The renditoin of Uncle Tom by this well-known and well-liked company will never grow old. The management evidently believes in the maxim: "What's worth doing is worth doing well." There runs the through this grand story a pathos peculiarly touching and sweet. It speaks the universal language of the heart. It reflects like a mirror the innermost phases of the human emotions. It is more than a play—it is a moral classic. It argues for two of the greatest themes that can engage the mind—human liberty and the immortality of the soul. Notwithstanding the frequent production of this play, it is never produced in the sumptuous manner by other companies as it is in Stetson's. It is like meeting and old friend after year's absence. In his theatric offerings, Manager Washburn has brought together all the requisities that may go to make up a really great production and one it will be a real loss to miss.

LILLER—Martha, aged three years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Liller, died on last Friday evening at the home of her parents in Oakland. The funeral took place Sunday, being conducted by Dr. Scott, with interment in the Oakland cemetery.

REPLY TO "UNIQUE METHODS."

The Teachers of the Oakland School Have Something to Say in Reply to the "Journal".

To the Editer of The Republican.

Inasmuch as the Journal's malicious but rapid utterances last week, anent the festival held by the undersigned teachers of the Oakland public school, are not only misleading but positively and inexcusably false, so far as coupling our honorable Board of County School Commissioners with the movement is concerned, we deem it meet and proper, and but an act of simple justice to those worthy officials to state most emphatically that the idea of holding a festival originated with us and us alone, and that the School Board was in utter ignorance of the project until after the plans had been matured. And we desire right here to enter our vigorous protest against the Journal's contemptible attempt to strike at the county school officials over our shoulders and cast aspersion upon innocent parties on account of acts for which we were wholly responsible and for which censure was due us, if at all.

It seems to us that an editor who is actuated by sincere and honorable motives would at least be desirous of obtaining facts in any particular case before undertaking to pass an opinion upon its merits or demerits, but it appears that in this instance the facts which could have been easily obtained, were not what was wanted, because they would not have served the purpose of the picayunish editor who never fails to take advantage of the slightest excuse to vent his petty spleen against the present Board of County School Commissioners, of whom he seems not only insanely jealous but impotently envious because of the notable fact that they have made a signal success of the schools of the county where he did nothing but make a miserable failure of school affairs when he was president of the School Board and conducted things to suit himself during his incumbency of that office and under whose direction and manipulation the present school edifice was built in 1894 and on account of whose erection we only had seven weeks' school that year, whereas the coming scholastic term under the present board will consist of seven and one-half months. Besides, the amount expended for the building was amply sufficient to have afforded us an up-to-date structure, modernly and sanitarily arranged, such as would not have needed remodling so soon as now imperatively demanded. And in this connection the question naturally suggests itself to the inquiring mind why did'nt this contentious and fault-finding editor demonstrate his worth as a school official when he had the opportunity? Because he lacked the ability to make the schools a success he evidently imagines it to be his just duty to malign those who are making them among the best in the State, an act worthy only of the small and envious mind and which forcibly reminds one of the words of the poet—

"Base envy withers at another's joy
And hates that excellence it cannot reach."

Furthermore, and to his discredit, be it said, an increase from a seven weeks' term during one of the years of his administration as the leading school official to a seven and a-half months term under the regime of the present Board of School Commissioners, dosen't seem to be worthy of anything but condemnation in the estimation of this remarkable exponent of "unique methods" in journalism, but envy and jealousy, the twin weaknesses of human nature, seems to have proved too much for his frail mentality and he feebly succumbs to their baneful influences and makes an exhibition of driveling idiocy painful to behold.

Again, we are exceedingly astonished to learn from the same "unique" source that churches are charitable institutions, but public schools are not. Shades of departed philosophers, what an anomaly is here presented! Churches, which get their support mainly through the voluntary contributions of their members are charitable institutions (and in a certain sense this may be so); but (and here is the rub) public schools, which are wholly dependent upon the public for their support are hot, according to this eminent (?) and "unique" authority! The veriest school boy can see the absurdity of such a proposition and consequently an intelligent public have no difficulty in doing so, nor in deciding that the public school is mordmuch of a charitable institution than a church.

Again, upon the grounds that opposition to school improvements is unpatriotic, which is now generally conceded, the adverse criticism of our efforts by the "unique" journalist shows that he is lacking in patriotism and that he is not the friend of the public school that he vainly professes to be.

In conclusion, we beg to say that our aim as teachers in the public schools of Oakland is to make the school rooms as attractive and healthful as possible by removing as far as we are able, the harbinger of all manner of disease germs which was placed in the building according to plans of that infallible (?) ex-School Commissioner, ye editor of the Journal.

Behind the Sweet Peas

A Memorial Day Story
By DAVID LOWRY

Copyright, 1903, by David Lowry

THE Widow Lacey loved sweet peas, and it is of her great bank, her monster wall, of sweet peas I am thinking now as the locusts' song swells, grows faint, rises again stronger, then suddenly ceases. Just so it rose on that July morning when the earth trembled under the tread of the armed hosts that marched toward Gettysburg.

There was a time when the widow neglected her flowers; when she sat on her porch with her sewing or knitting unnoticed, her hands lying motionless in her lap, while she seemed to be gazing at nothing, unless it was the line where the earth and sky met in the west.

The broad road crossed the hills there. Perhaps she was thinking of her son Jack, who was away somewhere. She never knew exactly where.

AN OFFICER RODE THROUGH THE VILLAGE.

Jack was marching with the hosts that swelled the ranks of the Union armies. But one day the widow received a letter that brought tears and brightness to her face again.

Jack was promoted. It wasn't the money, he wrote. It was the honor. He was the youngest captain in his division. But above everything else it was the certainty that he would obtain a few days' furlough. If it was only for one day he would hasten home to her.

So the widow resumed life again where it had apparently snapped off when Jack marched away. Everything appetizing and healthy grew apace in her garden. Her flowers were the envy of all her neighbors. But her sweet peas! They were the marvel of all who passed that way. In height, thickness and beauty they surpassed all that eyes had ever witnessed.

It was Archie Ray, an old flame of the widow's, who said one day:

"Dashed if I ever see anything like them vines, Mrs. Lacy! Must be an uncommon growth you've got. Why, a man coming along the lane back there can't see your house till he gets bang up against it. I'd given all I was paid for fighting in Mexico just to get behind a screen like that at Monterey. Why, it 'd mask a battery nicely."

Twenty good yards across the end of her lot the sweet peas stretched. The travelers on the great thoroughfare saw a mass, a blaze of lovely, variegated color. The widow's senses told her that they were as delicate, those flowers, as sweet and as fragile as the babes that had lain in her arms a brief time and then were recalled by the Giver of all bounty. She rejoiced now that Jack had laughingly put the trellis higher even than she had desired.

One morning (it was about a month after Jack was promoted) his mother was stooping, scissors in hand, in front of her sweet peas.

As she looked lovingly on the wall of green dashed with the spray of unfolding buds and full blown flowers a low rumble fell upon her. It was like the rumble of a dying storm. The widow listened attentively. Yes, the sky looked dull over there where the sound came from; there was a something that foretold a change.

By the time her tables and mantels were adorned with fresh flowers the rumbling sound was more distinct and so regular and frequent that the widow walked out and looked up and down the valley. The meaning of the sounds she heard dawned upon her. The mighty armies had met in battle. The thick sky was only the dust made by countless feet as men marched in battle array. The rumbling sound was the boom, boom of cannon.

A strange hush fell over nature. The cows stood anxious eyed in the brook, the chickens moved about uncertainly in a wary manner, while the geese stood stupidly in the middle of the dusty road with uplifted heads.

Long before noon the rumble of artillery was distinct. The dust rose in clouds; dull red pillars ascended slowly, bulged and swayed, reflecting the sun's rays, warped and twisted themselves, then melted away.

A strange sound, a muffled sound like the faint snapping of sticks, was wafted across the hills to groups of listeners gathered on the knoll opposite the widow's house. Then a fringe, the merest fringe, of men appeared on the horizon.

Fifteen minutes later a stream of wounded Federals limped through the village. The villagers were beside themselves with fear when the adjutant of a brigade, a handsome young man in a new uniform, rode through the village ordering the inhabitants to retire or be "caught between two fires."

The widow looked on composedly. She refused to leave her house. No arguments, no remonstrances, no inducements or threats affected her resolve. If the Federals were coming perhaps she would see her son.

The sun's rays on slanting muskets resolved themselves into shafts of white fire as wave after wave of men passed in undulating billows with muffled tread in dust ankle deep. The sheen of bright buttons, the glitter of scabbards, the glare of bright steel, danced along innumerable waves of infantry and cavalry. It seemed as if the coil steadily rounding the hill would never end.

This coil, this relentless coil, was indeed the leash, the rapidly loosening leash, that held the dogs of war. They were freed from the mighty strain imposed by long inactivity. Soon they would be at the enemy's throat. The fire that tipped their guns, leaping from file to file, would soon be dimmed by the awful glare of battle.

Suddenly a flash split the air in line with the widow's vision. A shriek that rent the heavens startled her. She stood on her feet. Two more flashes—two awful shrieks, followed by a crash that seemed to lift the house from its foundations succeeded so swiftly that the widow shut her eyes. And then—his presence was simultaneous with the flashes—a man with angry eyes and a bearded face pushed her out among the soldiers now rushing past in a trot.

They paid no attention to her. They were looking forward; every man there had his head well up. Their eyes were fixed on something distant. The bursting shell high overhead solved the riddle. They were moving in the direction of the enemy's cannon. The widow cast one look at her house. An immense hole was torn in the gable. The roof yawned over the cavity a shell made in its murderous mission. In terror the widow sped to her low springhouse. It was scarcely higher than her bake oven. Standing there, she strove to regain her self command. The clamor of battle filled the summer air.

Out of the dimness and vagueness of confused masses twisting in tangled lines wherever she looked the widow slowly discerned a stream of wagons returning with the Federal wounded They moved slowly at first, so slow that the road became blocked. Then the cries and oaths of the suffering, the awful groans and moans of the dying, drove the widow into the farthest part of her springhouse in an ecstasy of fear and horror.

But the imagination of a terror stricken woman is greater than contemplation of actual suffering. Soon the widow emerged from the springhouse again. God's sunlight, stained as it was; God's beautiful earth, blasted, torn ruthlessly as it was by wicked men, was a blessed relief from the sensations she experienced while seeking refuge in the earth.

So, standing there in the door of her springhouse, with the never ending chill of fear at her heart now, the Widow Lacy looked and listened like one in a day dream more frightful than a nightmare.

She could hear and distinguish voices now as question and answer followed. Vague apprehensions of defeat communicated themselves to the throng of men gathered on the roadway near her house. A single expression aroused her—"Battery B." With strained ear she hung on the response that followed.

"Captain Lacy's battery will be here in an hour. Our orders are to remain here and support him."

"Is Lacy all right?"

The widow clinched her hands. Oh, for the strength to pierce that crowd of men and horses!

"He was all right fifteen minutes ago."

Jack—her son Jack was alive!

Suddenly a cannon shot fairly cut its way through the throng, leaving a quivering mass lying on the ground where sturdy, brave men stood a moment before.

The widow was shading her eyes with her hands, trying to banish the horrible vision, when the earth trembled under the sound of horses' hoofs, and a battery crossed the slope like a whirlwind, to be checked behind her bank of sweet peas.

An officer rode rapidly along the edge of the broad road. The way was now clear. What expostulations and pleading and threats had failed to accomplish was accomplished only too well by the shot that maimed and killed scores. The distance was not great. The widow beheld her son.

While the horses pawed and snorted the battery that had leaped up the hill behind the sweet peas as if sped there by Jove sent shell after shell into the very midst of the Confederates.

But long before the earth rocked under the explosions of Battery B the widow's flying feet carried her swiftly toward her son. A trailing vine—or was it a rein?—caught her foot, and she stumbled and fell.

When she sat up and looked around her she was shielded by a huge bowlder. Its gray face rose out of the emerald greensward like a wall, behind which she now cowered, trembling, quivering in every nerve.

The tops of distant hills were all crowned with batteries. In every direction as far as the eye could reach the woods were flecked with flashes. They leaped from the haze of low lying smoke like lightning. Straight across great fields long lines of men moved until the guns on the top of the hills vomited fire. Then the lines wavered, swayed uncertainly and disappeared in the woods from which they had emerged.

They came out of the woods in even lines. They sought cover again in ragged, disordered masses. Sometimes they came out again, advanced, were torn apart and melted away in a haze.

The battle raged all around her. As far as eye could see the flash and sound of bursting shells met the eye and smote the ear. Gazing now wild eyed at the rain of missiles that filled the air, shrinking, clinging to the rock in the midst of that chaos of terror spreading sounds unparalleled in history, the widow stared as one who saw not, who heard not, like one to whom all sounds were a terror.

The struggle had been in progress five mortal hours when a mass of men and horses emerged from a fringe of woods just below her. The guns near the widow's house belched fire, the mass of men and horses advanced steadily. Another and another mass came after them until the entire slope was covered. An arc of fire from the batteries above them smote the seething, surging waves of humanity, men and animals dashed against each other in wild dismay, and the declining sun, seen through a veil of smoke, seemed to hang motionless in the west as the wavering, mutilated lines of assault faded away in a mist.

Then a silence, a grim silence as fearful as the uproar of all the battle sounds, fell on the scene. The stillness was oppressive. Birds' notes were hushed; the shrilling of insects ceased. All the earth was as silent as a burned out planet.

As far as the eye could see the widow looked on broken fences, crushed wagons, horses lying in uncouth shapes, vague specks that looked like broken and twisted fence posts. These last lay singly and in groups far apart from each other and at all angles. They covered the slopes whichever way she looked.

She was gazing now across the hill where Gettysburg lay when another gust of musketry swept up the slope. Another followed and yet another fainter still. Something pattered on the bare rock. The leaves of the tree near her trembled, then the rain that came to quench the thirst of the wounded and dying descended.

Was it the sweet relief from the steady roar, the confusion, the multiplicity of shifting scenes and sounds and from that crushing silence that soothed and calmed the widow or did nature send solace and blessed sleep with the rain?

At all events the widow slept.

When she awoke with a start the earth was dripping. She rose on the instant, all her faculties sharpened. There was no rain of iron or lead now. It was God's merciful gift to man that refreshed and sweetened the slopes once more.

She experienced no difficulty in passing the weary, battle worn guards. They scarcely turned to look at the silent figure flitting past them.

She turned a bend in the road. There, not 200 yards distant, she saw her house. A dull gleam of dying embers told her some one was lying there. Perhaps it was Battery B. As she neared the house shadowy forms resolved themselves into tired men buried in sleep, the embers into neglected camp fires.

But where were her sweet peas? Great rents were cut through the vines; half at least had been trodden into the ground by men's and horses' feet. Yes, and there was a cap. She picked it up and beheld the letter B.

Now she was seized with a horrible trembling. She put a hand over her heart and pressed on, on through her ruined plots and vines. Not a sound was heard but the gentle plash, plash of the early morning rain.

What if Jack were lying here! Sleeping men were huddled near the dead and dying fires.

She moved cautiously now. There, just behind a clump of vines left standing—yes, merciful God, a human form lay there. She ran toward it. The face, pressing the wet grass, was turned up quickly. There was no cry, not a moan, as she rained kisses upon the cold lips, the eyes and cheeks of the dead man she found lying behind her sweet peas.

The widow had found her son.

Took the Hint.

"She said if any man kissed her without warning she'd scream for her father."

"What did you do?"

"I warned her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Gentle Art Of Sympathizing

By Mrs. FRANK LESLIE

I DON'T know any circumstance of social life so "trying to men's souls" as the circumstance demanding pity. Death is bad enough, but it is BY NO MEANS THE WORST. Most of us have been through the dark and terrible hour when that which seemed our all has been laid away from our sight and from among men, and our friends have come dressed in somber clothes and have one by one insisted upon LAYING BARE THE WOUND we would fain hide under our mourning garb and expressing more or less crudely, more or less delicately, the sympathy of which they have come to assure us. It is a SOCIAL NECESSITY that they should come.

Bereavement is bad enough, and to very few, if to any, is it given to speak the words of comfort or reassurance. But there are sorrows far more cruel than death; there are bereavements more hopeless than those of the grave, and it is in these that sympathy may indeed DESPAIR of fitly expressing itself.

A man in some prominent position becomes a defaulter and runs away, leaving his wife and family to bear the shame and notoriety of HIS crime. Now, what sympathy can one express to such a mourner as that wife? What word would seem other than presumptuous and intrusive to such bereavement? And yet we all do feel sorry for her; we all do long to let her know it and to comfort her.

But yet again there are griefs even deeper and more sensitive than that of the insulted and deserted wife; there is an agony of shame not to be shifted to other shoulders; there is a bereavement known to all the world and yet which the sufferer would fain hide from even her own eyes, and this is when a woman has too readily yielded up her affections to one who simply amused himself with her easy credulity, and when her devotion began to pall "he kissed and rode away." EVERY ONE in her little world knows the story. The malicious whisper, "Well, she threw herself at his head." The kinder hearted ones murmur, "Poor thing!" And the sharpest sting of her mortification is that she knows that THEY ALL KNOW and are scorning at her or pitying her. Still she can bear it as long as nobody says anything, but THEY WILL!

But there is no need of swelling the list of cases where the truest sympathy is expressed by apparent ignorance of any cause for sympathy. Every person of delicacy or a sensitive organization will recognize such cases for themselves, and to those who are not delicate or sensitive in their own personality no amount of teaching will effect the object. Most people and most things die very much what they were born, and the CLUMSY SYMPATHIZERS no doubt will exist when the world ceases, just as it did when it began to be.

IT IS, IN ONE WORD, A VERY DANGEROUS AND DELICATE MATTER EITHER TO GIVE OR RECEIVE SYMPATHY, AND ALL I CAN SAY IS, REMEMBER, LIKE FIRE, WATER AND GUNPOWDER, IT IS A GOOD THING SO LONG AS YOU KNOW HOW TO MANAGE IT. BUT IF YOU DON'T, FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE LET IT ALONE!

There Is No "Yellow Peril"

By Prince PU LUN, Heir Apparent to the Throne of China

THE yellow peril is an EMPTY ALARM. The yellow race menaces none but those that go to its part of the world to harass it. I do not believe there is a man in my country who is ambitious to see China have a great army and navy.

Why should an awakened China imperil any one? Northern China is as sparsely settled as the western United States. The people of China have room to stay there, and THEY HAVE WORK TO DO THERE. There are railroads to build in China, schools and colleges and factories. The mineral wealth of China remains virtually untouched. Would it harm the world did we embrace progress and do these things that we have to do?

So many of the white people seem to think that civilization and progress consist wholly IN SOLDIERS AND BATTLESHIPS.

IN CHINA WE HOPE TO BECOME SO FAR CIVILIZED THAT WE WON'T HAVE EITHER SOLDIERS OR BATTLESHIPS.

Loss of Life Is Not War's Greatest Cost

By WILLIAM HAYES WARD, D. D., Editor New York Independent

WAR is a terrible thing in the loss of life which it brings, and yet we do not look upon it aright when we put THE LOSS OF LIFE FIRST. We often speak of life as being the most precious of all things, and yet we sacrifice life for a half cent profit on a pound of codfish or on oil from Africa for making soap. Gloucester is full of widows and orphans, made such by the importance of getting a little more fish AT A LITTLE CHEAPER PRICE. If we send our ships to the ends of the earth all for a little money, a little comfort, is life then the most important thing?

THE IMPORTANT THING IS SOMETHING OTHER THAN THAT. PRINCIPLE, SENTIMENT, IS MORE THAN LIFE.

A man will give his life for a sentiment, and he OUGHT to do it. When there comes danger of war, what we are to think of is not wholly the question of the lives that are endangered, sad as that is for many households; we are to think of the suffering, THE INJURY TO THE PRINCIPLE OF LOVE, to the principles of fellowship and kindness, and to all the Christian virtues. War is terrible, but the spirit of cruelty and hatred which underlies it is something much more terrible. When we labor for peace it is not simply that another year or two of life may be added to the life of a thousand men, but that the spirit of heavenly peace may rest within the souls of men that Christ may be formed in us, that the love of man may dwell within our souls, that we may become like God and that "TRUTH AND JUSTICE" MAY "DOWN DESCEND TO MEN."

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1256 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Mary Johnson, Plaintiff, vs. Alonzo S. Ellis, Defendant.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant, and to decree the marriage of the said plaintiff to the said defendant null and void.

The bill states that on the 24th day of December, 1900, the plaintiff was married to the said defendant, in Garrett county, with whom she resided until the month of March, 1902. That previous to said marriage to the plaintiff the said defendant was married to a certain Laura S. Jefferson, at Huntington, W. Va., on the 6th day of March, 1888, with whom the defendant lived until some time in the year 1900. That at the time of said marriage of the defendant to the plaintiff the defendant was previously married to the said Laura S. Jefferson, now Ellis, who is still living and from whom no divorce was had and that the said Laura Ellis was then and still is the lawful wife of said defendant. That the said defendant committed the crime of bigamy when he married the plaintiff, and that at the time of said marriage to the plaintiff she believed and was assured that said defendant was an unmarried and single man and had no knowledge of such prior marriage and that previous to the coming of said defendant into Garrett county the defendant was a resident of the State of West Virginia and that he was unknown to her until she met him in this county, where she resides. That she learned of said previous marriage some time in the month of March, 1902, that the defendant had a lawful wife living in the State of West Virginia and that she had left him and refused to live with him any longer. That one child has been born to them from the said marriage, viz: Raymond, who is three years of age. That she is advised that said marriage of the defendant is null and void. That the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant, that the said marriage of the defendant to the plaintiff be judicially decreed null and void, for the guardianship of said infant child, Raymond, and for general relief.

It is thereupon ordered, this 31st day of May, 1904, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 1st day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 18th day of July, 1904, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

The Kingdom Divided.

Solomon left a splendid empire. His rule extended far beyond the boundary of Palestine, and covered a populations of 6,000,000 and a territory of 60,000 square miles. He also had an alliance with Egypt and Tyre. His revenues was $20,000,000 per annum. The current proverb was that he made cedar as plentiful as sycamore, and gold and silver as stones. But the upbuilder of the empire was the overthrower of it. His own hand sowed the seed of dissolution. He disregarded that natural and persistent cleavage between Judah and Ephraim which David had bridged by his statesmanship. He taxed the northern tribes excessively and lavished the reyenues on Jerusalem, forgetting entirely time-honored Shechem. All tokens of the impending national calamity, greatest in its history, were apparent before Solomon's death, yet he seems to have taken no steps to avert that calamity. His life, too, gave the lie to all his well turned ethical phrases —and all the exemplary power incident to higher office was lost.

A crisis hour in the history of the Hebrew commonwealth had surely come when Solomon died. Tribual jealousies, popular discontent, threatened invasion, created a state of affairs calling loudly for a man of ability, courage, and patriotism. It is said that Solomon had a thousand wives, but one son, and he a conceited fool. So to meet the grave situation there came shambling out of the luxurious environment of the harem the shallow, effeninate, inexperienced Rehoboam. There is a pitiful irony in his very name, which signifies "enlarger of the people." It is an added stain on the character of Solomon that he did not train his son for statecraft, or if he was incapable, did not find another to reign in his stead.

Rehoboam went up to Shechem to meet a body resembling in its composition and powers the State-General of France, before which Louis XVI appeared. The historic scenes, sundered by three thousand years, have some points in common. The Hebrew National Assembly was resolved that the new king should plight his faith as a constitutional monarch. Had he consented rebellion would have been nipped in the bud. There was a three days' truce. It was the pause before a great catastrophe which is always solemn. During this time Rehoboam was taking counsel chiefly of the his fellows, the gilded youths of the empire. Then came the king's recklessly insolent answer to his subjects on the very edge of revolt, in which he threatened to add to his father's yoke and exchange his whips for scorpions. The war cry arose at once, "To your tents, O Isreal!" which has been aptly called "the Hebrew Marsaillaise." Even David's sacred name had lost its spell at the cry. "See to thine own house, David."

With the inveteracy of a prince of blunderers Rehoboam sent a tax-gatherer to placate tax-registers. At the sight of "Adoram, who was over the tribute," the first overt act was committed and the first blood of the revolution shed. Happily it proved the only blood.

Hebrew history parted into two streams that day, never to be reunited. Ten tribes, carrying with them two-thirds of the population and territory, flowed off into the channel of the kingdom of Israel, to continue for three centuries, until swallowed up in the Assyrian captivity. The tribes of Judah and the half tribe of Benjamin, and later the tribe of Levi, formed the other stream of Hebrew life, flowing on for four hundred years until ingulfed in the Babylonian captivity.

The Teacher's Lantern.

A new literature is opened to us. The Books of Kings and Chronicles. They are of great antiquity, dating back in round numbers 2,500 years. They are made up of documents still older—official annals and state records. Their divisions are arbitrary and unhappy. For example, the Books of Kings were originally undivided, and had one compiler. The same is true of the Books of Chronicles, in which Ezra and Nehemiah were included. The Hebrew name of the compilation is almost equivolent to our word diary. Some think the writer to have been Ezra.

These six ancient books are in point of fact but two books. They have a noble purpose. They are written for the exiles about to be restored to Jerusalem. They are intended to quicken the national spirit, to outline the principles of civic righteousness, which are also the principles of peace and prosperity.

It is worthy of notice in passing that Chronicles names more sources of material than any other book in the Bible. For example it cites Samuel and Kings, and other documents now lost: chronicles of the Kings, last words of David; monographs by Nathan, Samuel, Gad, Abijah, Iddo, Jehu, and Isaiah.

Shechem was a "city of refuge." But it certainly did not prove such to Rehoboam.

The historical associations of the city were important and sacred. The names of Abraham, Jacob, Joseph, and Joshua were linked to it.

On the dull background of Rehoboam's inanity, Jereboam's forceful character stands in lively contrast.

Parentage counts for much. Rehoboam's mother was an idolatrous princess and his father a sensualist.

The vascillating incompetence of Rehoboam is strikingly illustrated by the readiness with which he substitutes the office of a mediator for his insolent ultimatum.

There are certain idiomatic phrases, the meaning of which must be sought. For example, "What portion have we in David?" The reference is to the dynasty as represented in Rehoboam. The language is in striking contrast to the saying, "We have ten parts in the king." 2 Sam. xix, 43. "To your tents!" The reference is to the wilderness life when the tribes camped in fixed relation to each other. It finds its modern analogy in the military term "assembly."

The points of analogy and contrast between the two kingdoms now formed may be followed with advantage. Israel survived three centuries, had twice the territory and population of Judah. Most of the historic sites, and most of the prophets. It ended in the Assyrian captivity. Judah had the temple, the priesthood, and Isaiah among the prophets. It was interrupted by the Babylonian captivity, but survived until A. D. 70.

A Musical Triumph.

[Recent reports from somewhere in New England state that caterpillars have been killed by the playing of a brass band. People who have heard brass bands of the village variety will have little difficulty in crediting the reports.]

"MUSIC has charms to soothe the savage breast,"
At least so we have often heard it said,
And yet for soothing savages out west
We always had a preference for lead.
We had a notion, it must be confessed,
A savage is most soothing when he's dead,
Which same is why we never tried to fill him
With harmony, but figured how to kill him.

Yet this does not disprove the adage, for
If we had tried on him a modern chorus
We might have saved the shedding of his gore
And changed to wholesome dread the hate he bore us.
He would have found our music worse than war,
And to escape he would have fled before us.
By taking thus an opera along
We might have had the country for a song.

"Music has charms."' 'Tis wonderful the sway
That it has held o'er warriors, bards and sages.
Across the past we hear it far away,
Its sweet strains wafted down from distant ages.
Yet it has shown a greater power today
Than has been chronicled in history's pages.
The erstwhile charmer now becomes a killer
And knocks the tar out of the caterpillar.

The forest waltzed when Orpheus played his lute;
The devils, charmed, forgot their devilhood.
When Pan upon his pipes began to toot
There fell a panic through the fearsome wood.
Such skill had the Pied Piper with his flute
That even rats the music understood.
Our players show a magic still more fetching.
The worms succumb unto its spell bewitching.

A Firm Stand.

The mild business man was calmly reading his paper in the crowded trolley car. In front of him stood a little woman hanging by a strap. Her arm was being slowly torn out of her body, her eyes were flashing at him, but she constrained herself in silence.

Finally, after he had endured it for twenty minutes, he touched her arm and said:

"Madam, you are standing on my foot."

"Oh, am I?" she savagely retorted. "I thought it was a valise."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Appropriate.

"And so the minister delivered a sermon especially for the baseball team this morning, did he?"

"Yes, and the services were arranged so as to appeal to the audience."

"How's that? Did he make grand stand plays?"

"Something on that order. The choir had only a first, second and third bass, and the sermon came to a short stop when the players saw the plate."—Judge.

His Duty.

"Whenever our crowd goes fishing," said Guzzel, "and the fellows begin to think of having a drink they invariably have to call upon me."

"Get out!" replied Frankley. "You never bought a flask in your life."

"No, but I always carry a corkscrew."—Philadelphia Press.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCHELLE, GA., Jan. 30, 1902.
Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.

A STUDY OF HIS

APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

DEER PARK JOTTINGS.

Again, on the 28th day of June, with the rain coming down in corrents, we are seated in our usual place, scribbling, unmindful of rain or sunshine, having lived long enough to accept conditions as they come—especially the weather, feeling that the One who rules the elements has our best good in view.

We are now looking forward to that day in the history of our own loved land that we all delight to honor, and as this scratch will be the last we can give your weekly paper before that day of all days (except the Sabbath and Christmas) ushers in to gladden the hearts of all true Americans, and realizing that your columns will be filled with your own demonstration at Oakland on this glorious Fourth of July, we shall withhold any "Jottings" for next week.

The first item that claims our attention is a letter from Col. Geo. Truesdell, written from Paris, France, in which I find I was misinformed as to his buying blooded sheep, but that he went to Paris to have his wife treated for heart trouble. He says she has been greatly benefitted, and that the ocean voyage was enjoyed by her. His manager, Mr. W. H. Chadderton, informs me that he will have some two or three car loads of sheep sent to the St. Louis Fair and that Col. Truesdell expects to carry off some of the large prizes, and quite a number of this magnificent flock will be sold there. Mr. Chadderton states that Col. Truesdell does not expect to purchase any more blooded stock for the present, as he has the finest imported sheep in the world and thus far they have proved a success, many of them shearing from 25 to 28 pounds of the finest wool over grown by sheep raisers in this country, and he has the efficient service of one of the best shepherds on this continent in the person of Mr. Hugh Calderwood, a native of the Highlands of Scotland, and one of the most courtly in his bearing, reminding one of the days of the gallant William Wallace and his "Scottish Chiefs."

We were pleased to meet and greet our relatives from Wheeling, Mr. and Mrs. Rev. Joseph Lee and family, on Saturday last. After spending Sunday, they started to Grantsville to spend their vacation at Englewood, the home of Mrs. Lee's mother and brother.

Rev. Mr. Clary, of the U. B. Church, filled the M. E. pulpit on Sunday evening last, in the absence of the pastor of that church, and the many friends of Mr. Clary were delighted to again hear him discourse on divine things, reminding them of the days and years past when this good man ministered to his people and was greatly appreciated.

Our young minister of the Baptist church preached to an attentive audience at 11 a. m. in the Union church, taking for his theme "The Optimist and the Pessimist," and quoting scriptural convincing arguments in favor of the Optimist. His musical southern voice and graceful jestures add so much to the force of his preaching.

Our young friend Ray Jones, son of W. C. Jones, is rapidly recovering from his critical attack of typhoid fever and other complications, at the West Virginia Seminary at Buckhannon. He will be brought home as soon as he regains sufficient strength to bear the trip.

Col. Burwell is happy. Hotel filling rapidly, cottages about all rented and, after the 4th of July, the famous Deer Park Hotel will be a blaze of beauty and culture from all over this continent. Foreign ministers and families are here now, and soon the famous "Naval Academy Band" from Annapolis will be here, with its polished and accomplished leader, Prof. Zimmerman, a warm personal friend of Capt. Richard Hobson, one of the heroes of the Santiago campaign.

Report says our Philadelphia friends, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Williams, will not come to their palatial suburban summer home this season. After seeing them each succeeding summer for the past twenty-two or twenty-three years, and the much good Mrs. Williams has done in elevating the youth and even adults of this place she, at least, will be sadly missed.

We are favored with a barber in town in the person of Mr. Wayne, of your city, and as he has his sign out in the large and commodious room just beneath our sanctum, we shall take pleasure in calling the attention of our patrons to his place, and if we can't "shave" them enough we will let him have a second chance. And as the saloon is a thing of the past, we assure all patrons of the "upper" or "lower" place of business that you will be treated with the greatest courtesy, and if you are cash customers we will not summon you back, but kindly ask you to call again.

Trusting that you and all your readers may have a glorious Fourth of July, in the good year 1904, I am

Yours, truly,
MORE ANON.

JACOB BEECHLEY COULD NOT DIE

Old Man Cut his Throat, Stabbed Himself and Tried to Batter Brains Out.

Jacob Beeghley, aged 75, residing near Terra Alta, W. Va., made a desperate attempt to end his life. He mysteriously disappeared a few days ago and was found four davs afterwards covered with blood and almost starved. In explaining his conduct he said life seemed a burden and he thought he would kill himself.

Beeghley tried to cut his throat with an old knife, only succeeding in making an ugly gash. Next he tried to serve an artery in his arm. He then attempted to drive the blade into his heart. The wound bled freely. He next tried to drive the blade in his skull with a stone. Failing in this, as a last resort, he attempted to knock out his brains with a huge stone, which he brought down many times with both hands on his head.

Failing in all, he decided to live, emerged from his hiding place and ask for assistance. Many stitches were required for his wounds.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

No. 1378 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garret County, Maryland.

John R. Ritchie, vs. Mary Ritchie.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff from the defendant a vinculo matrimonii.

The Bill states on the 14th day of December 1884, the plaintiff was married to the defendant, and lived with her until 1896, when without just cause or reason she abandoned and deserted him, and such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years and is deliberate and final; that five children were born to them as a result of said union, and that the defendant is a non-resident of the State.

It is thereupon, this 20th day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett County, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 22nd day of July, 1904, give notice to said defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning her to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of August next to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

POSTPONED SHERIFF'S SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE

Under and by virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland, and to me directed as Sheriff of Garrett county at the suit of Philip T. Garthright against Sherman A. Howell, the same being No. 5 Judicials, July Term, 1904, I have seized, levied upon and taken in execution all the right, title and interest of the said Sherman A. Howell, both at law and in equity, of, in and to all that lot or parcel of ground situated, lying and being in Garrett county, in the State of Maryland, which on the plat of Mountain Lake Park is known and designated as

LOT NUMBER 1277,

and being located on M street in said town of Mountain Lake Park, and which said lot of ground was conveyed to the said Sherman A. Howell by Alonzo D. Naylor and wife by deed dated April 21st, 1903, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 44, folios 432, etc., one of the Land Records of Garrett county, Maryland. And I hereby give notice that on SATURDAY,

The 2nd Day of July, 1904

at the hour of ten o'clock a. m., I will offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash, in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, all the right, title and interest of the said Sherman A. Howell of, in and to the above described lot of ground, said interest being his equity of redemption therein.

EDWARD J. FRANTZ,
Sheriff of Garrett County.

Order of Publication.

William A. Harvey and William H. Ridder, copartners trading and doing business under the firm name and style of Harvey and Ridder, and The Wilson Lumber Company, a corporation, Plaintiffs, vs. Datesman Coal Company, and John Wills, assignee of Joseph W. Gross, assignee of Mary E. Clauson, Mortgagee, Defendents.

No. 1280 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of a certain real estate in Garrett county, Maryland, against which the plaintiffs have filed mechanic lien claims.

The bill states that within the last six months the plaintiffs contracted with the defendant, Datesman Coal Company, to furnish certain materials to be used in building six dwelling houses and the said Harvey and Ridder contracted to erect and build said houses for said defendant at Steyer, Garrett county Maryland, and that said materials were to be paid for when and as each of said houses was completed; that said materials have been furnished and said work done and said houses completed on the 13th day of June, 1904; that said claims for materials furnished and work done are over due, and that the said defendant, Datesman Coal Company, although often requested has failed to pay the same; that plaintiffs have filed in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County their respective claims as liens against said buildings, the ground upon which they are erected, and so much other ground immediately adjacent thereto and belonging to said Datesman Coal Company, as is necessary for the ordinary and useful purposes thereof, which claims contained an accurate description of said property, the kind and amount of materials furnished and work done by the plaintiffs for or about the construction of said buildings and the time when and the prices for which the same were agreed to be furnished and done, and the amount claimed to be due on each of said houses, it appearing that there is due to Harvey and Ridder the sum of $1689.13 and to the Wilson Lumber Company the sum of $828.37.

That John Wills is made a defendant to this proceeding on account of being the assignee of a certain mortgage made by Datesman Coal Company to Mary E. Clauson, on the 7th day of October, 1903, and in order that all parties interested in said property may be before the Court and be bound by its decree in the premises and that the said defendents are non residents of the State of Maryland.

The bill then prays for a decree for the sale of said property, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose, and out of the proceeds to pay the said mortgage and then the claims of the plaintiffs and for general relief.

It is thereupon, this 21st day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county in Equity, that the plaintiffs by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 22nd day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them and each of them, to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th of August next to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

SHERIFF'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

Under and by virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland, and to me directed as Sheriff of Garrett County, at the suit of J. H. Cramer against Benjamin F. Broadwater, the same being No. 18 Judicials to March Term, 1904, I have seized, levied upon and taken into execution by an actual entry upon the premises, all the right, title and interest of the said Benjamin F. Broadwater both at law and in equity, of, in and to all that lot or parcel of land situate, lying and being in Election District No. 12 of said Garrett county, Maryland, the same being an undivided one-half interest of the said Benjamin F. Broadwater in and to all that piece or parcel of land containing which was conveyed to the said Benjamin F. Broadwater and Rachael B. Broadwater by Constantine H. Myer and wife by deed dated November 28th, 1898, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 36, folio 79, one of the Land Records of Garrett county, Maryland, and therein described as follows, to-wit: Beginning for the same at a bounded red oak tree standing on the brow of Red Ridge, with a cucumber tree and a small red oak tree marked as pointers, and running thence with an allowance of 2¼° for variation, South 75 degrees west, 77 perches to a stake; south 30¾° West, 120 perches to a stake near a white oak tree, South 78¾° East, 190¾ perches, north 14½° West, 158 perches to the place of beginning.

102 1-4 Acres,

The above described land is situated on the road leading from Bittinger to Frankville, and improved by a log house, a small barn and other necessary buildings.

And I hereby give notice that on Saturday, the 23rd day of July, 1904,

at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., I will offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash on the day of sale, in front of the Court House door in the town of Oakland, all the right, title and interest of the said Benjamin F. Broadwater of, in and to the above described parcel of ground.

Terms of sale—Cash on day of salé.

17-4t Sheriff of Garrett Co., Md.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS.

This is to notify the taxpayers of Garrett county that the annual levy for 1904 has been made and published, and to call their attention to the following abstract, Section 45, Chapter 566, Acts of 1890, relating to the discount to be allowed and the interest be be charged on all tax bills:

"All county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of the levy thereof, and on all county taxes paid on or before the 1st day of September a discount of 3 per cent. shall be allowed, and after the 1st day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the tax bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt given for taxes so paid. But the discount shall not be allowed unless the whole amount of State and county taxes are paid when same is made.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1279 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Franklin P. Stremmel, vs. Mildred E. Stremmel.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce of Franklin P. Stremmel from his wife, Mildred E. Stremmel, a vinculo matrimonii.

The bill states that on the 21st day of December, 1898, the plaintiff and defendant were married and lived together in Garrett county until December, 1903. That the said Mildred E. Stremmel on divers days and times since said marriage has committed the crime of adultery with certain men and that the plaintiff has not lived or cohabited with said defendant since he has become convinced of her adulterous acts.

The bill further alleges that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, and for an order of publication.

It is thereupon this 21st day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, in each of four successive weeks before the 22d day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of August next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not not to be passed as prayed.

An enthusiastic exponent of Democracy was entertaining a group of loafers with a lengthy discussion of the merits and demerits of the Republican party, charging that party with advocating principals that savored of taxation without representation. At this point an equally zealous Republican, who had been an attentive listener, ejected about a yard of tobacco juice into the center of the dusty highway, and addressed the speaker saying "Say, Tom Jones, do yer known Deacon Slocum over to Buck Hill"? "Yep". "Waal, does ye know the size of his tax bill". "I reckon the Deacon pays purty nigh $500 taxes every year". "If you Democrats be so bloomin anxious ter allow representation war thar is taxation, why in the blazes do yer keep that poor critter from votin, just because he has no book larnin; Just then Tom Jones happened to remember that Sally Ann Jones had sent him over to "Jims" to borry some rasin.

The little people celebrated the 4th by holding a juvenile picnic in Ellithrope's Grove, and the merry laughter that rang through the grove was a sufficient evidence of the happy hearts that were there and harmonious and filled with genuine enjoyment than was this, and the kind motherly hands that helped to make the children happy have the gratitude of children and parents alike.

CITY COUNCIL MEETING.

Order passed Directing Policemen Not To Interfere With Tramps Riding Trains.

Tuesday evening the City Council held its regular July meeting when the monthly bills presented for payment were passed and orders issued for the same.

Recently considerable complaint has reached the town authorities by reason of the police making arrests of tramps passing through Oakland on freight and passenger trains, thus placing the county to useless expense in maintaining them at the jail and in transporting those who are unable or refuse to pay the fines imposed upon them by the police magistrate to the House of Correction. The amount expended during the past few months for this purpose has been enormous and it is thought that the council took the right view of the matter when an order was passed requesting the Mayor to instruct the police not to make any arrests of tramps caught on trains hereafter but to attend to their duties as conservators of the peace for the citizens of the town and not as protectors of the rights of the railroad company in unloading their undesirable and uninvited passengers upon the tax payers of the municipality and county.

It is understood that the Mayor will issue an order in accordance with Council's request in the matter.

No other business was transacted.

A Welcome Visitor.

The first big show of the season will visit this place on Tuesday, July 19.

Surely this item of news will please the young folks, the children and the elder ones also. Sun Bros.' World's Progressive Railroad Show is one that has a standing record for presenting a good performance in one big ring, in the good old style. Sun Bros. run their show strictly on business and moral principles. Nothing is permitted to mar the pleasure of the skeptically inclined. Neither are the usual army of fakirs (often seen following in the wake of shows) allowed to follow this organization. The long standing reputation of the Sun Brothers throughout America and the Dominion of Canada shall not be jeopardized by allowing any catch-penny affair to be connected with their show. Fifty great celebrated artists will appear at every performance. Fully two hours and one-half of enjoyment is afforded. Let all attend. Afternoons at 2 o'clock. Evenings at 8 o'clock.

ALONG PATHS OF PIONEERS

The Old National Road and B. & O. Railroad.

THE ROUTE OF EMIGRANTS

From East to Wilds of West Before Days of Railroads—Then Came the Steam Engine and Baltimore and Ohio Route.

The Eastern tourist to the World's Fair over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will travel amid scenes where history was made, and along the route of the pioneers to the West long before the days of railroads, for the old National wagon road was but the predecessor of the Baltimore and Ohio steam route. Indeed, the wagon route demonstrated to those Baltimore pioneers of another generation the absolute necessity of a steam route to the West in order that Baltimore might open up travel and trade with the West. It was the steam road, and the possibilities of wealth which it opened, that attracted to Baltimore from their New England homes, Peabody, Pratt and a host of others who have done so much to build up the metropolis of Maryland.

When a Marylander is whirled over the B. & O. through the fertile lands of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, and when he views the cities and thriving towns, and when he contemplates the broad fields of waving wheat, he little realizes how great a part his state played in the opening of those Western states to settlement. It was Maryland's representives in the constitutional convention who stood out against an acceptance of the document framed by that body until the vast unknown and unexplored Northwest, then a part of Virginia, had become a part of the national government, to be allotted to settlers, to those who had borne the brunt of the Revolutionary War and who had not received compensation. All the lands were not allotted. Thousands upon thousands of acres were sold. To me it has always remained a mystery why Maryland has made no concert and determined efforts to secure from the national government her share of the proceeds of the sales of these lands, amounting to over $10,000,000.

Almost within sight of the Baltimore and Ohio traveler from Harpers Ferry to Cumberland is the old trail which Braddock and his army followed on their ill-fated march to Fort Du Quesne, now the site of Pittsburg, where they met the allied Indians and were almost exterminated.

At Broadway and Wall streets, in this city, the cobblestones of civilization are the tombstones over the grave of the great Indian chief Pontiac, who waged merciless war against the British and who led the tribes in their attack at Braddock's defeat. In the Southern hotel where the Maryland commissioners to the World's Fair stopped, the visitor will view a modern structure which stands on the site of the stockade, the headquarters in 1769 of St. Ange, the French colonial governor of Louisiana at that period. A tablet in the corridor of the hotel marks the burial-place of Pontiac, chief of the Illinois. James Fenimore Cooper in his tales of the Prairie and the Pathfinder describes this great Indian nation.

It was at Braddock's defeat that the military genius of General Washington, which wrested an empire from England, was first developed. It was in the war against the Indians and the French that the colonies became acquainted with each other, and in those wars were formed the friendships which paved the way to the rebellion and to the organization of the armies which won independence for the colonies.

In its route to the West the old National road wound through valleys and over hills and mountains. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad followed the Valley of the Potomac to escape the expensive grading which any other route would have entailed.

I wish that I had had time to come to St. Louis over that old National road, of which the Frederick pike, beginning at Baltimore, is a part. It was along this road that the early immigrants slowly sought their way to the Western wilds and prairies. It was along its dusty path that Revolutionary patriots and soldiers with their families and household effects in wagons, wearily plodded their way to their new homes in the faraway forests. It was along that road that the Western products were hauled to Eastern markets. If was along that road that "Appleseed Johnnie," one of the queer characters of early Ohio, plodded with his bag of appleseed which he gave to the early settlers. Yearly he made the journey to "the States," returning with a bag of seed, which he distributed among the farmers without any other charge than a "a bit to eat" and a night's lodging. Those seed were the foundation of the hundreds of apple orchards upon which the travelers gazes while coming to St. Louis.

It yet remains for a romance writer to travel along that old National road, to tell of its wayside inns, with tragedies and comedies, and words of wisdom uttered by statesmen of early days—Clay, Jackson, Webster and others—who made these inns their abiding places for the night.

The time came when the old National road had to give way to the locomotive, and its former glory departed. It played an important part in the early development of Baltimore, as that city by connection by the old Frederick pike, to a great extent, was its eastern terminus. The old road was one of the most important steps in the evolution of modern trade and travel. At at time when the great tide of emigration was pouring into the Mississippi Valley it was, more than any other institution, the means of hastening the development of the great West. This grand old highway was instrumental in turning the course of emigration from the South to the West. Over it were carried an almost endless population and millions of actual wealth, and the Middle West was by its clasp linked to the new and boundless acres of the North.

It was the first and only highway that was built by funds from the national Treasury. The question of internal land and water communication was in the minds of our fathers even before the Revolution. George Washington was one of those most interested in the matter and as early as 1770 he visited the West, examining the lay of the land and the trend of streams. There was then an Indian trail leading through the Southern Ohio section over which he was guided by a noted Indian, Nemacolin; and still later he cut a road through the same forest. This was called the "Braddock road," and was displaced at length by the National highway, which threaded its path over the same route.

The question of the construction of the highway came up at the first session of the Continental Congress. It was then decided upon, and operations at once planned. When Ohio was admitted as a state, in 1802, Congress set aside 5 per cent of all moneys received from the sale of public lands within the state to be used in the construction of a road from the navigable waters of the Atlantic to the Ohio River, and this was a nucleus of the great highway. Early in 1806 Congress passed a bill authorizing the appointment of commissioners to lay out a road over the mountains, and President Jefferson appointed Thomas Moore and Eli Williams, of Maryland, and Joseph Kerr, of Ohio. These men did noble work, and by the close of the year had laid out definite plans. The road was located on exactly the route they first selected. It ran from Cumberland to Wheeling, a distance of 130 miles, and thence extended through Ohio and Indiana, and finally was lost amid the prairies of primitive Illinois. It was constructed under direction of the War Department, the work was let in sections to contractors with Brigadier General Gratiot in charge of it. The road was cut through the forest four rods wide, graded and piked with stones, which covered the road bed from 12 to 18 inches. It original cost was more than one million dollars, which was then thoughs a vast sum to be spent on public improvements.

As soon as it was opened it became the great link between East and West, and conquered the mountain barrier between the states. It continued under the care of the national government for many years, but finally it was put into good repair and turned over to the several states through which it passed. Then they built tollhouses and tollgates along the route, and many anecdotes are told about these oldtime conveniences. Every kind of cattle or beast was taxed, all sorts of vehicles and freight. Persons going to church, or to the mill, or to election were exempt from toll, as well as those going to school, to funerals, or from one part of the farm to another.

What the overland mail route became to the West in later days, the old national road was in the first of the century to the Mississippi Valley. Freight and passengers were conveyed in Conestoga wagons with great white canvas tops, and immense, slow-moving wheels. They were usually drawn by six stout horses, and could carry a heavy load. The drivers of these teams were called "turnpikers", or "pike boys," and a hardy, good-natured class they were. The wagon beds were long and deep, and painted in gay colors, while bells were fastened to many of the teams, and the tinkling could be heard long before they came in sight.

Stage coaches were also a favorite means of conveyance. These were run in trains, and the business was kept in a close corporation. They had no springs, and but one door, but as time passed there were some improvements in their makeup. The fare between Cumberland and Wheeling was $5 or $6, and two days were required to make the trip.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was the successor of the old National road, and over its rails thousands upon thousands came to seek new homes in the West. It was over that road that armies from the West were hastened to the theater of war in Northern Virginia, thousands never to return. It was guarded zealously by the federal government during the war period. Pickets were stationed only a few yards apart at different times as far west as Cumberland to guard against the ruthless Confederate destroyer seeking to close the main avenue of communication and travel between the West and the East.

In the huge Transportation Building on the World's Fair grounds are original locomotives used by the Baltimore and Ohio in the pioneer days of railroading in the United States. It is one of the most interesting and insrtuctive exhibits in the World's Fair grounds.

At Harpers Ferry, on the Baltimore and Ohio, occured two events which, more than two similar events in modern times, hastened history. They were John Brown's raid, which brought the threatened war between

Will-o'-the-Wisp

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

"Me? I'm going to be will-o'-the-wisp," Margery said airily to the horror of every soul but one in her mother's sitting room. Elwood's social leaders were gathered there, deep in discussion of the fancy dress lawn party to be given at St. Chrysostom's for the benefit of the church guild. Since the rectory adjoined the church proper there was quite a stretch of turf and shrubbery available. Therefore Mrs. Lawson, head of the broad faction in St. Chrysostom's, had been for having daylight, with tennis and archery, of course for prizes. But Miss Gerard, the leading spirit among the high church folk, had outgeneraled Mrs. Lawson and won over the powers that were to her pet scheme of lighted greenery, booths, flower girls and fortune telling.

"H'm! What will you do?" Mrs. Lawson asked severely. "It has been my impression all along that the—er—costumes should be subservient to the—well, the general effect."

Margery laughed happily. "You are quite right," she said. "Never fear, but I shall be busy enough. It will be my province to lure in unwary travelers and lead them on to financial destruction."

"Margery, how can you?" Mrs. Chase's eyes rested on her daughter full of severe reproof. Mrs. Lawson sniffed hard, but Miss Gerard came gallantly to the rescue, saying: "You must have been born for the part, Margery. I don't know anybody—at least, any masculine body—who could possibly refuse to follow if you wanted to lead him—and we all know it's the men and their money we are after."

"Disgusting!" Mrs. Lawson said aside to her echo, Miss Clare, under cover of the general laughter. Margery flung a kiss at Miss Gerard, saying sweetly: "Thanky, ma'am! You have no need to dress up. You've been everybody's fairy godmother so long you can't possibly be anything else."

"Come home with me! Ned must design your costume. I want him to begin right away," Miss Gerard said, rising to go. Everybody else stared. Ned was her artist nephew, rich withal. She could not possibly be willing to match him with an Elwood girl, yet here she was giving Margery Chase, the greatest flirt of the town, almost impossible opportunity. Ned had come to Firstanes, the Gerard homestead, only two days before. As yet Elwood folk had hardly more than seen him—in the family pew Sunday morning and later driving with his aunt. Some mysterious excursion had taken him away early Monday morning. It must be he would be back before nightfall. Was Miss Gerard thus bent upon flinging Margery at his head? That was a puzzle so absorbing nothing else was talked of all the way home. Margery was neither rich nor of distinguished family. Even as to her beauty there were more than two opinions.

Adverse opinions wavered when at last the lawn party came to pass. A slender, floating, misty shape in trailing vapory white, bearing a slender black wand whose tip gave out intermittent flashes, nobody could deny her charm. Now and again the flashes came from the silver crescent above her forehead. They were rose red or spectral bluish or greeny yellow, according to her humor. Whatever the color, they drew mightily. There was not a man on the ground but followed them joyously and lamblike to slaughter in the booths.

Still it was not surprising. In daylight and everyday clothes Margery had beforetime captivated every marriageable man in town. The rector even had not escaped. What wonder that Miss Gerard was almost her only stanch woman friend?

Miss Gerard was radiant over the party's success. "You're my lucky angel," she said, patting Margery's cheek as they came together for a moment just as the lamps began to dim and the lanterns to sputter out. "The affair is a gorgeous success, thanks to you. And I have been so nervous over it. Thank heaven, that woman kept away!"

"What woman?" Margery asked under her breath. Miss Gerard answered in the same key: "The Rickman woman—a semiadventuress, separated from her husband, but not divorced. Ned came down here because he was bewitched with her and knew she was staying at Belmore. You know that is just six miles off. You have charmed my boy into forgetting her, I do believe. If you will really do that you shall have half my fortune."

"I'll do it for nothing," Margery flashed back with a laugh. Her lights were out. She had used them so prodigally the tiny battery cells were exhausted. Ned had been very happy over contriving them and slinging them in a silver lantern from Margery's waist. He came toward the two women now without seeing them—they were sunk in a deeply embowered nook of the shrubbery. Miss Gerard gave Margery's hand a caressing pat, saying affectionately as she nodded toward her nephew, "He's a good fellow, Margery, and good looking—besides, you know you'll really like being mistress of Firstanes—after me."

"I suit that place better," a voice harsh and hoarse with anger said behind them. The shrubbery parted violently, letting through an overblown blond in gorgeous Greek costume, who ran on as she shouldered between the other two. "I know all about your plot—also that Firstanes is entailed. Ned Gerard will marry me—nobody else! Marry me just as soon as my beast of a husband dies, and he cannot possibly last another year. Try as you may, madam, your will-o'-the-wisp shall not lead him away from me."

The last words were shrieked out. At the sound of them Ned hurried toward the group, flushing with shame, yet his mouth setting hard in the obstinate Gerard line. He took hold of the woman and made to lead her away, saying almost roughly: "So this is how you keep your word! You promised me on honor to stay at the inn. Get back there! At once, do you hear? Otherwise—you will not see me again."

"If you come with me," the woman said defiantly, wrenching herself from his hold and folding her arms, her large eyes fast upon him in a hypnotic stare. Miss Gerard stepped between them, her face very white. "Get this—creature—away—anyhow—Edward," she said very low, the words coming hard. "Let us have—no blatant scandal—for the sake of—the Gerard name."

"Come!" Ned said imperatively, not even holding out a hand to the woman. She made one step after him, then sprang furiously at Margery, who stood apart with averted eyes, clutched the lantern at her waist, tore it loose, swung it high above her head and brought it crashing down with all her force, aiming to strike with it Margery's crescent crowned forehead. Ned was too quick for her. With a wheeling swoop he interposed his own person and caught the blow fairly between the eyes. It sent him down like a log, breathless, senseless, inert. After one look at him the woman who had struck him ran screaming away. People rushed in from every hand, but Miss Gerard waved them back. "Fetch the doctor—quickly! There has been—an accident!" she said. "Not serious, I think. The—the strange lady who saw it is—easily frightened."

Margery knelt beside the prostrate figure, dabbling its face with water and crying softly. So Ned saw her when he came back to consciousness. He tried to rise, but she made him lie still until the doctor came. He was not very rebellious. The scales had fallen from his eyes. As he lay staring into the darkness, listening to the subdued stir and bustle roundabout him, he saw how near he had come to shipwreck in his worship of an unscrupulous woman.

If he had been a hero of romance he would have made it up with sweet Margery then and there. Being a manly mortal, deeply abased by the crowding sense of his own folly, he did not speak until three years later, when by hard work he had proved himself a man among men. Of course she said yes. Was he not her fairy prince? And, whether or not they will live happy ever after, this much is certain—the world outside will hear no news of disagreements.

The English Vocabulary.

The ordinary English vocabulary may be said to contain from 30,000 to 50,000 words, the latter estimate being large. Shakespeare, whose vocabulary is larger than that of any other English poet, unless it be Browning, used about 15,000 words, while Milton, whose range was narrower, employed only about half that number. The common estimate of the average vocabulary of educated people is from 5,000 to 6,000, but in this case the number of words which are known, but not used, is enormously increased. A well read college graduate should be familiar with perhaps 100,000 words, while in the course of a year he might not use 5,000 of them in his writing or conversation. Shorthand reporters find about 2,500 word signs and contractions ample for representing the words which are commonly used in public speaking.

Flying Lizards of Borneo.

According to the testimony of our most reliable naturalists, the only genus of "flying serpent" now known to inhabit the earth is a family of reptiles which make their homes in the great forests of Borneo, known as the "flying lizard of the south seas." The best known species of this flying saurian is Draco volens leekii, a striped, snakelike lizard about fourteen or sixteen inches in length when full grown. The primary colors of Draco are red and yellow, in bands, dots, crescents and stripes, the red predominating to such an extent that the creatures appear as a carmine rocket when sailing through the air. Some have declared that his wings are "sails," like those of the American flying squirrel, but it is also said "they approach true wings and can be used by the little saurian to guide himself at will."

Battleships Are As Necessary As Ever

By GEORGE MELVILLE, Rear Admiral U. S. N., Retired

NEITHER torpedo boats nor submarine craft in the present state of development can make the battleship an affair of the past.

IT IS UTTERLY PREPOSTEROUS TO TALK OF THE ELIMINATION OF THE BATTLESHIP. The fact that several of this sort of craft were destroyed or badly damaged by torpedoes or submarine mines in the actions between the Russians and Japanese off Port Arthur means nothing so far as the efficiency of the BATTLESHIP is concerned.

It is fully understood by all naval men that the torpedo, in itself a comparatively inexpensive contrivance, may put a battleship out of commission. But this proves nothing in the general discussion of naval power.

THE TORPEDO BOAT AND KINDRED CRAFT ARE DANGEROUS JUST IN PROPORTION TO THEIR SCOPE OF OPERATION. TO DELIVER CRUSHING BLOWS TO AN ENEMY THESE VESSELS CANNOT BE DEPENDED ON.

What is needed is the battleship for the main line, and they must be big enough to stand hard knocks and swift enough to seek and find positions of advantage. Then there must be the swift armored cruiser that can either fight or show a clean pair of heels, and last, but perhaps as important as the others, a goodly supply of scout ships—light cruisers they may be called—for these are THE EYES OF THE FLEET.

It is a very good principle of warfare to know what the enemy is up to. The battleship cannot find out, but the light, swift cruiser can, and THEN comes the time that the crushing force of the heavily armed and armored ship is needed. Once the vessels of the enemy are located and in a measure their movements learned the scouts can readily turn the real fighting over to the big fellows and at the same time protect them from the attack of torpedo boats, for the latter cannot stand any well directed fire from the quick loading and automatic guns of today.

THERE IS NO QUESTION IN MY MIND THAT THE REAL CONTROL OF THE SEAS RESTS ENTIRELY WITH THE POWER THAT CONCENTRATES ITS FORCE IN A REAL LINE OF BIG SHIPS.

The question of cost is not to be discussed, even though a torpedo boat, costing perhaps $200,000, can, under certain favorable conditions, destroy a battleship worth $5,000,000.

The principal question is to provide a means of protection for the more costly engines of war. THIS IS SOLVED BY THE SCOUT SHIPS. They must be fast and so armed as to prevent the passage of a torpedo boat flotilla. If the scout fleet is properly handled the battleships are comparatively safe and are ready to deal the really CRUSHING blow when the opportunity offers.

Labor Should Be Protected Against Immigration

By JOHN F. MOORS, President Immigration Restriction League

ECONOMICALLY Americans are more prosperous than the residents of any other country in the world, partly because our standard of living is higher, partly because our land is less crowded in proportion to our resources. Consequently there must be, without restriction, a constant flow of people hither, UNTIL AN EQUILIBRIUM IS ESTABLISHED—that is, until our surplus resources are exhausted and our land is as crowded as that of other countries. This is as inevitable as that water will seek its own level.

To protect laborers some sort of tariff should be placed ON LABORERS. In other words, they should know how to read and write, as our own citizens are obliged to, or show tangible proof of saving habits or be in some way so selected that good will come to this country with them sufficient to offset the constant tendency to reduce economically our national well being. For, economically, 1,000,000 immigrants a year are rapidly CONSUMING THE VERY ADVANTAGES WHICH WE PRIZE.

Far more important is the effect of immigration on the American race. We are today taxing severely our powers of assimilation. With the example of the old world staring us in the face, we are developing in all our great cities NEW FOREIGN SLUMS, as if the fundamental character of our new world were of no consequence.

Even the horrors of the old slave ships are almost forgotten in the American problem of today. The million immigrants a year now coming are in the foreground, but it is the millions upon millions INTO WHICH THEY WILL GROW which should most make us stop and think.

LET US NOT BE FURTHER MISLED BY A CHARITABLE INTEREST IN THE GOOD EFFECT OF EMIGRATION ON FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The South's Obligation to the Negro

By Governor NEWTON C. BLANCHARD of Louisiana

THE negro is here. He is a man and a citizen. He is USEFUL AND VALUABLE in his sphere. Within that sphere he must be guaranteed the equal protection of the law, and his education along proper lines—mainly agricultural and industrial—is at once A DUTY AND A NECESSITY.

No approach toward social equality or social recognition will ever be tolerated in Louisiana. Separate schools, separate churches, separate cars, separate places of entertainment will be enforced. RACIAL DISTINCTION AND INTEGRITY MUST BE PRESERVED. But there is room enough in this broad southland, with proper lines of limitation and demarcation, for the two races to live on terms of mutual trust, MUTUAL HELP, good understanding and concord.

Oakland Model Steam Bakery

The Place to Buy the Best Bread Cakes and Pies.

Our aim is to make Bread "As Good as Mother made it," and we have been successful and have stopped all the drudgery of home baking with the use of Modern Machinery. Have you ever experienced as the following reads:

Your wife has gone out in the country;
You're left alone; what a pity,
With nothing to do but to ponder
And read out aloud to the kitty.

You run out of bread in the morning;
But knowing 'tis easy to make it,
You swiftly adjourn to the kitchen
And silently start in to bake it.

Take two coffee cups full of flour,
And water sufficient to "dough" it;
A thimble of salt for the "season,"
Then roll it, and poke it, and blow it.

And blow it, and poke it, and roll it,
And pinch it, and push it, and flop it,
And punch it, and pound it, and pull it,
And monkey around till you drop it.

Then clean it off nice with a towel,
And sock in a yeast cake to "raise" it;
Now drop in some soda to "short" it,
And smear on some butter to "glaze" it.

Then place it 'way back in the oven,
(That is if you've moulded and "set" it);
Close up all the doors of the kitchen,
Go in and sit down and forget it.

Go set yourself down in the parlor,
And read from "The Science of Baking;"
Read on till you smell something burning,
Then think of the bread you are making.

Now hop, skip snd jump to the kitchen,
And as you hop nigher and nigher,
You know by the smoke in the hallway
The blooming old bread is on fire.

Then hustle it out in the alley,
Juggle it, fumble it, shie it;
Then gently dig up a nickel
And go to the baker's and buy it.

ELSIE'S GRAY HAT

By Maravene Kennedy

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

"The gray hats aren't a very pretty shade this year," said the saleslady. "Brown would look well with your hair. Here's a beauty."

"I'll take this gray one," said Elsie, heeding.

In her own room she put the hat on and studied herself intently in the mirror. Brown would have been more becoming, she decided. She was too pale for gray now.

It had been six years since she had made that promise. It was just as she bade him goodby. "You look like a pink rose in that gray hat, darling," he had said. "I shall expect to see your dear face under just such a hat when I come home." So for six years, summer and winter, she had worn a gray hat—six years in which she had heard from him but twice and that shortly after he left.

But she believed in him, loved, excused him. Aweary sometimes, but never despairing, she remained steadfast. He had gone to Africa; that was so far away and offered so many fine excuses. She feared always for his safety, but never his constancy.

It was a pretty face the mirror held, a sweet, womanly face, with a happy girlish smile. She turned away with a little sigh and went lightly down the steps into the street. It was a holiday, and school teaching was serious work with conscientious Elsie Wentworth. She was glad of the rest, the day outdoors, the sunshine and pure air.

"Where are you going, Elsie?"

It was a man's voice and a man's eyes that gazed into hers, both telling their love for the slender creature in the gray hat.

A rich glow came to her pale cheeks. So stalwart and determined, she felt afraid of him, afraid he would make her love him, make her faithless to poor, absent Dave.

"I'm going to see Mrs. Young," she faltered.

He laughed. "It's too bad, dear. Go on to the woods, Elsie. I won't insist on going. I was on my way to your place. I had hoped for this day with you."

THE NEXT ONE CAME IN SLOWLY, A SLENDER, GRACEFUL CREATURE.

She laughed tremulously. "I wish you wouldn't hope, Jack. I'd like to have you—for—for a friend if only"—

"I'd be content with that. Well, I won't. I want you for my wife, want to have a home with you in it, want to have you to go home to, want to work, plan, save, spend, for you. It's all you, Elsie. Are you really going to Mrs. Young's, dear?"

"Jack," she said firmly, "I don't love you. I will never marry you. This talk of yours makes me unhappy. Will you please not repeat it?"

"Not till I see you again," he said good humoredly. "Another gray hat, by Jove!" his eye catching its freshness. "I believe those gray hats are my hoodoo. Something is. You love me all right, my darling. Get a white hat, Elsie; white, trimmed with blue cornflowers, just the color of your eyes. I think you'd say 'Yes' then."

"I should—then." The strangeness of her voice held him. "Goodby," she said lightly and hurried away.

Her eyes grew troubled, piteous. She did so want to see Dave. It came over her with a rush just how unhappy she was, how lonesome. Her heart ached almost to bursting. The woods no longer attracted her. She turned toward Mrs. Young's listlessly.

"You're all worn out," said that lady, with concern. "That gray hat takes the color out of your face too. Gray's not becoming, Elsie. Get a blue one next time."

"Or a green one," said Elsie irritably. Brown, white, blue, had been recommended. Why not green, red, purple? she thought desperately.

"You are worn out, that's sure," said Mrs. Young.

Elsie took off the despised gray hat and held it lovingly in her slim hands. It comforted her. She was soon chatting away gayly, but her head ached, and there was a strange heaviness weighing her down. She wanted to cry instead of laugh.

"Wait," said her friend as she was going. "I got a picture yesterday of Frank and Annie and a friend of theirs and her husband."

She handed Elsie the picture. There sure enough were Frank and Annie Young and—Elsie clutched wildly at the little cardboard—Dave Brady, with a woman sitting archly on his knee, his eyes gazing at her adoringly.

"They had them taken that way just for fun," explained Mrs. Young. "Annie and Emma were friends years ago, and they came across each other last month at Manila. They've both been married the same length of time—three years—and there's not a month's difference in the ages of the children. Emma's is a girl, though."

Elsie rushed blindly out of the house. Dazed, she made her way home, the pretty head sadly drooping under the faithful gray hat. She laid it off and sat down beside it and gave way to tears, tears that pride had held back till she was away from prying eyes.

Three years! And she waiting, watching, hoping, loving. Wife and baby, home, love, everything to fill his life! And she? An orphan, living alone, no one to care whether she came or went, was glad or sorrowful. She sobbed on pitifully. All night long she lay awake, going over, year by year, the time between.

It was almost morning before she could believe that Dave was actually out of her life and—and—

She sat up in bed and laughed and cried all in a breath. It was most wonderful. She climbed out of bed, found the little gray hat and bit by bit tore it into shreds. She laughed again, then cried again and, all flushed and rosy, lay down and slept peacefully till long past sunup.

John Stewart sat in his office listening gravely to his patient recount his ills. He gave him a prescription, smiled, asked him about the children, bowed him out, smiled again and sat down to wait the next patient. They came oftener now. A few years before they had been few and far between.

The next one came in slowly, a slender, graceful creature, with fair, flushed face peering out shyly from under a soft white hat covered with blue cornflowers, the color of her eyes.

"Jack!"

He turned quickly, gave one swift look and caught her in his arms.

"Elsie, my darling!"

Dr. Stewart was certainly not slow witted.

"When—how?" he questioned, kissing her all in a breath.

She put her arms around his neck and hugged him tightly.

"Ever since I knew you," she whispered. "I've wanted you—you—you! Oh, Jack, I can never love you enough to make up for what I've missed."

He laughed, puzzled, but blissful.

"Then why?" he asked.

She answered his kiss first, smiling and dimpled, then a frightened look flashed over the happy face. What—oh, what if Dave had been true, had come back! She hugged the doctor again frantically.

"It was the gray hat," she cried. "It was a hoodoo. I tore it up last night. I was never so happy as while pulling it to pieces."

And that was all the explanation she ever gave him, but he had the woman he loved and was as happy as is good for mortal to be.

As for Elsie, she wrote Dave a nice, friendly letter after she was married and sent his baby a present. She was so afraid he might have fleeting moments of remorse, and she felt that would hardly be fair. Which goes to show that a woman's reasoning is rather complex.

All Ready to Mourn.

Lucy is a smart young colored woman who officiates as maid of all work in a Brooklyn family. She is much esteemed by her mistress and the rest of the family, and all take a very friendly interest in Lucy and her affairs. When, on a recent "afternoon out," she appeared in a complete suit of mourning, several inquiries were made with regard to her bereavement, as she had said nothing about the recent death of any relative.

"How long have you been wearing mourning, Lucy?" asked her mistress.

"Well, 'm, this is just about the fust time Ah's worn this yere suit, and it ain't egzectly mohnin'."

"Not mourning!" was the reply. "Unless you were swathed in crape you couldn't wear much deeper mourning."

"Yass'm, Ah know de color's all right black enough, but Ah isn't really in mohnin' yet 'cause he isn't daid yet. You see, Ah's engaged to marry Clarence Jones, an' he's dawn right low with an oncurable disease. No'm; cahn't possibly git better. An' seein' as Ah had to hev a new dress Ah reckoned Ah might as well git mohnin' right now, then Ah'd be sure to hev it when Ah needed it."—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Meaning of "Mews."

Pennant, the naturalist and antiquary, in his "Account of London" (1790) says that "on the north side of Charing Cross stood the royal mews, where the king's falcons had been kept since the time of Richard III."

"Mews" is thought to be derived from the French muer, Latin mutare, to change or molt, and to have been used of a cage for molting birds, as muette is used in France for a place in which horns shed by stags in the forest are kept by officials of the chase.

As time went on horses were kept in the inclosures used at first for hawks, and the old name was retained.

In this connection we may quote Dryden's line.

Nine times the moon hath mew'd her horns, and Milton, who speaks of the eagle as "mewing its mighty youth"—i. e., fresher from its molting, and Shakespeare, who adopts the secondary meaning, "More pity that the eagle should be mew'd."

Bowser's Geography

The Conflict In the Far East Causes Him to Get Badly Mixed Up as to the Exact Location of Korea and Japan.

[Copyright, 1904, by C. B. Lewis.]

THE dove of peace and good will hung over the Bowser household during the dinner hour and for fifteen or twenty minutes after, and it was Mrs. Bowser who chased the bird away at last.

She saw that Mr. Bowser was on the raw edge and inclined for a row, and she decided to touch on nothing of a personal nature. This was wise of her in a sense, and yet it brought about just what she was striving to avoid. He was smoking his cigar and reading his newspaper and wishing he could scrap with the butcher or grocer when she quietly asked:

"Any news of the war between Russia and Japan?"

"Lots of it," he replied.

"And do you think Japan will succeed in holding Korea?"

"What's Korea got to do with it?"

"Why, she was one of the causes of the war, wasn't she? Russia objected to Japan holding the island after it had been ceded to her by China, and"—

"Woman, what on earth are you talking about?" he interrupted. "The Japanese have had about as much to do with Korea as the Quakers of Pennsylvania. Korea an island? You'd better study up on geography a little."

"Well, it is not surrounded by salt water on all sides, but the river Yalu on the west makes it an island, and it is so referred to by all geographies and encyclopedias."

"Then the people who write such books are jackasses. Korea, as any child ten years old ought to know, is a country lying south of Australia. If you are going to talk war, then talk sense at the same time."

Mrs. Bowser knew that he was wrong and that she could prove it, but she quickly decided that it was better to leave him so than to have any hard feeling for five minutes when he said:

"Come now, don't sulk over it. You aren't to blame that you didn't get more schooling. I am glad to see that you take an interest in such things and am ready to answer any questions you may ask. I suppose you know where Japan is, don't you?"

"It is a string of islands nearly 2,000 miles long, with the Pacific ocean on one side and the Japanese sea on the other, and the largest of them lie to the east of Korea. There is only the Japanese sea between Japan and Korea."

"What? What's that? Didn't I tell you that Korea was as far off as Australia?"

"You did, Mr. Bowser, but you are mistaken. Korea was once the sea coast of China for 500 miles."

"And—and you say Japan is a string of islands?"

"I do."

"Then there is no need of wasting time on an idiot. Japan is a part of Persia, and if you don't know it you'd better ask the man who carries out the ashes."

At this moment the Bowser cat, who had been eating a late dinner and taking lots of time over it, came up from the dining room with a grin on his face and sat down to hear the argument out. Again Mrs. Bowser decided on silence, but again it was broken by Mr. Bowser. He felt that his collegiate career had been called in question and that he must make it good or suffer humiliation. After pretending to read for awhile he said:

"How did you get so mixed up about Japan?"

"Let's say no more about it tonight," she replied. "I thought I was right, but if I am not we'll let the matter drop. Do you think the war will extend to"—

"Mrs. Bowser," he said as he brought his fist down on the table with a crash that lifted the cat and broke his purr short off, "you started in to ask me about the war. I was ready to give you all information. You got the map of Europe all mixed up like peanuts and beans, but now is the time to set yourself right. Suppose that some of our friends dropped in and heard you say that Korea was west of Japan? Suppose you went blundering along and put her in the Pacific ocean? Suppose you should mix China and Korea up the way you have? They wouldn't laugh in your face, but as soon as they got outdoors they would fairly whoop. Ye gods, but what an escape for you!"

"Mr. Bowser," she replied as she turned on him, "do you ever talk war over at the office?"

"Every day."

"And with educated men?"

"Well, I don't call in the janitor."

"And in talking with them you put Korea away off by Australia and make Japan a part of Persia, do you?"

"Of course I do. Where would you have me put them?"

"Well, if they haven't laughed at you they must be very nice men indeed. Why, you are all wrong—a thousand times wrong. Mrs. Green's little girl Bessie is studying geography at school, and if she don't tell you"—

"Who am I?" hoarsely demanded Mr. Bowser as he rose up and stood with folded arms.

"Mr. Bowser, of course."

"And where am I?"

"In your own house."

"And do I run my own house or does Mrs. Green's little daughter Bessie run it?"

"You do."

"Then listen to me. In order to cover your ignorance of geography you have made certain charges against me. In fact, you claim that I am even more ignorant than you are. Mrs. Bowser, you must prove these charges."

"I said that Japan was a long string of islands lying between the Japanese sea and the Pacific ocean," she replied.

"You did, madam—you did."

"And that Korea was west of the larger islands."

"Exactly. Don't get it north or south now."

"And that only the Japanese sea was between Japan and Korea."

"Only the Japanese sea. Don't try to get away from that."

"Well, then, I humbly apologize."

Mr. Bowser began to grin with delight and the cat to look dubious, and Mrs. Bowser was hoping it was all over, when his grin suddenly faded and he said:

"No, you don't, madam. You are not the apologizing kind. You think you can prove it, and now I demand to see the documents."

Driven to the wall, Mrs. Bowser heaved a sigh and went into the library for the atlas. She turned to the right map and showed that things were just as she said, but Mr. Bowser waved her aside and shouted:

"Do we know who made these maps? Do we know that they are within a gunshot of being correct? You can't work any such rubbish off on me."

There was an old school geography in the house as well as a globe, and Mrs. Bowser brought them both out.

"I don't care what you say," replied Mr. Bowser. "What I know I know, and you can't beat it."

"Well, there's a war map right there with your paper."

"But it might have been made by a drunken man, Mrs. Bowser. You have insulted me and spoiled my evening, and if I now go over to a saloon and fill up you cannot blame me."

Mr. Bowser was downed, and he knew it and took this way of saving the pieces. He did not mean to get full, but he meant to take a walk, and ten minutes later he was pacing the street and wondering how he could ever have made such a blunder of things, when a couple of tramps passed him and one said:

"That's the old crank who booted me out of his yard one night."

"And he flung me over his gate for askin' for a nickel, and let's go for him!" added the other.

It was a hot race, and Mr. Bowser wasn't ten feet ahead when he burst into the house and locked the door behind him.

"Well, have you filled up?" asked Mrs. Bowser as she heard him breathing hard.

No answer.

"Was it the Russians or the Japanese that were after you?"

No reply.

"I forgot to ask you what is the capital of Korea. Is it Seoul?"

Getting no answer to her third inquiry, she rose up and looked into the hall, but it was vacant. Mr. Bowser had taken his knowledge of geography and tramps and made a sneak upstairs, and the cat solemnly winked both eyes and decided that the bout was in Mrs. Bowser's favor. M. QUAD.

THE NOMINEES.

The history of President Roosevelt has become too well known to the people to need repetition at length in the columns of the newspapers. He was born in New York City, October 27, 1858, and is therefore in his 46th year. He has accomplished more, in that time, than most men in a long lifetime, but the most important of his acts have been those of his administration of the office of President of the United States. It is by his course as National Executive that he will be judged and in this respect he has proven himself a statesman and patriot in whom the people and the country can place implicit trust. His continuance in the high office which he has filled with such signal ability since the death of the lamented McKinley, will maintain the confidence of all classes of people in the security and successful progress of the country in all its material interests.

Charles W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, who has been nominated on the ticket with Mr. Roosevelt, as the Republican candidate for Vice-President, was born in Ohio, May 11, 1852. Like so many of our prominent statesmen his early life was one of toil and comparative hardship. He worked on his father's farm until he was fifteen years old, attending a country school in winter. Then he attended a college not far from his home and after his graduation spent some time in Pittsburg, Pa., as agent of the Associated Press. He studied law, settled in Indiana, and gave his attention almost solely to his profession, until about ten years ago. In 1897 he first entered the United States Senate and has been re-elected for a second term. He is a man of marked ability and high character and is equal to any responsibility that may come to him through his nomination for the high office of Vice-President.

LEARN TO COOK.

According to Mrs. Lawrence Hodgkinson, of the Chicago Progressive Health Club, "A husband will eat anything his wife wants him to, if he loves her." She announced that to an admiring audience of women.

Maybe Mr. Lawrence Hodgkinson is that kind of a man. It is possible that he can consume burned biscuits and tough steak and murmur "sweetheart" and "ducky" the while. If so, he deserves a halo.

Man is a creature of good resolutions. He breaks them because he is a man. He marries because he loves, and, being in love, he views the girl through rose-colored glasses. He knows he has faults, and he imagines that he has married an angel. The first few months of married life love covered a multitude of sins, both omission and commission. It is right that they should. But there comes a day of reckoning for the girl who never learned anything about housework, and whose mother always does the dishes and the cooking.

Ethelbert suddenly discovers that there is something lacking. Home doesn't seem like the home he has been used to. His digestion bothers him, and he likes to sneak over to mother's just to get a bite to eat. If he is unwise he makes cutting remarks, and a woman cries. If he has sense, and Helen is blessed with a generous share of brains, both will discover that romance can never take the place of solid food, and on the long journey of married life there must be a fair amount of equipment, or else shipwreck will follow.

So she learns to cook as quickly as she can, and he helps, sometimes, by donning an apron, and more often by simply keeping his mouth shut.

The average woman doesn't want a husband built on the lines described by Mrs. Hodgkinson. She would know that about three-fifths of the time he was lying, and the rest of the time getting ready to perjure himself. Such men can never be popular with modern women.

This much advice can be safely be given to the girls who are contemplating matrimony: "Don't bank on a man's disposition too much." Learn to cook.

No woman was ever loved less because she was a good housekeeper.

THE official vote of Oregon, at the recent State and Congressional election, does not lessen the extent of the Republican victory reported by the first returns. The total vote cast was 99,315. For Congressman in the First district Binger Hermann (Rep.) received 6,818 majority over R. M. Veatch (Dem.); Second district, J. M. Williamson (Rep.), 14, 353 over J. E. Simmons (Dem.). For State Supreme Judge Frank T. Moore (Rep.)received 24,217 majority over Thos. O'Day (Dem.). Oregon was formerly a doubtful State, but now begins to approximate Vermont in its Republican majorities. The people are sensibly determined to "let well enough alone."

A Big Fishing Party.

The labors of N. B. Browning toward a big fishing party for this season culminated Tuesday morning at about six o'clock when the party, comprising more than forty members, started for the banks of the winding river Cheat. They took with them enough eatables to provision a fair sized army and intended to enjoy themselves for the next two weeks. Their camp will be pitched at Gabriel Pulliam's about eight miles above Rowlesburg and if any fish are left in that part of the old Cheat in two weeks from last Tuesday it will not be the fault of the more than forty members of the party.

We could not secure the names of all the members of the party, but following are some of them:

N. B. Browning and wife; J. F. Browning, Meshach Browning, Stephen Browning and wife, Ralph Browning and wife, E. R. Browning, John F. Browning and wife, Able Browning, Thomas J. Browning and wife, Wm. Browning, J. D. Browning, B. F. Browning, A. J. Elliott and wife, Dr. M. L. Fichtner and wife, Wesley DeBerry and wife, Thomas DeBerry, Lois DeBerry, Elmer Forman, W. T. White and family, Wm. Barnard, Mrs. Rebecca Feathers, Mrs. Sue Parsons, Mrs. Mary Kelley, Claude Parsons, Fuller Kelly and wife, Roy Fichtner and wife, Bruce Fichtner and wife, Charles Fichtner and wife, Nina Painter, Harry Fichtner, Neil Garlet, Jno. Fraley, A. F. Chidester, J. M. Buckner, Rev. E. P. Idleman, E. D. Benson, Richard Browning, Bruce Browning, T. A. Kimmell, Blaine Schanke, James Kernes, and George Kernes.

This trip has a deeper significance than a mere fishing trip as it is a family reunion as well. There are seven violinists in the party—the Browning brothers—and a good time is assured to all who went.—Preston Republican.

The Show is Coming.

Greater than any other is the Sun Bros. new Railroad Shows, Trained Animals Exposition. This is the ideal show the public have eagerly awaited for. No false pretenses and no misrepresentations of any kind to tempt the patrons of amusements, but on the contrary every promise is faithfully kept.

Our motto has always been to "Excel" not only in presenting to the American public an exhibition at once pure and instructive, but in grandeur and completeness in its arenic, zoological and special features; in addition to all this there are presented numerous sensational feats, awe inspiring acts, 20th century girls as clowns, object holders and novelty performers, male and female champion arenic celebrities, always at every performance, appearing in the ring comprising a triple centaur, eclipsing riding, beverly of skill, dexterity, beauty and strength. Double, triple and quadruple bareback riding acts, on the unclothed backs of running, racing, galloping and trotting horses. Those availing themselves of attending will see some of the best talent, features, acts, etc., that brains and money can secure. The Sun Brothers new Railroad Shows will exhibit in Oakland on July 19. Two performances, rain or shine at 2 and 8 p. m. Doors open one hour earlier. Don't fail to see the great street pageant day of show at 11 a. m.

Done Half of His Journey.

Rev. J. B. Shoup, of Fitzgerald, Ga., who started out on June 11th from the beginning point in Cumberland of the old National Pike, or road, to traverse the whole line to the end, at East St. Louis, has been heard from at Dayton, Ohio, by a letter to his old comrade, George J. Shultz. So far he had footed every rod of the historic road, and noted every important point, particularly the old remaining iron mile indicators. He took with him for his assistance "Brown's Miscellaneous Writings," which contain much on the subject that he has so greatly at heart. He writes that he stood the tramp quite well and enjoyed it, though he is about 75 years of age. He is now, no doubt, upon the last half of his long tramp, which is something over 800 miles.—Cumberland News.

IN THE TALL TIMBER.

Knights Templar Entertained By Mr. N. U. Bond.

A message, couched in the language of Ancient Syria, came up to Frostburg one day last week from Antioch Commandery, No. 6, Knights Templar. Interpreted, it was this:

Wanted—All Knights Templar residing in Frostburg one day—Tuesday, June 28—for a tour of the tall timber, afar from Jerusalem.

Accordingly nine reported at 5:30 o'clock a. m. to take the special electric car, the only unmarried one without his collar and tie.

At Cumberland the list was swollen to nearly 40, or a comfortable filling for the special car provided for the party

At Piedmont, about 8 a. m. several more entered the train, mainmost N. U. Bond, the host.

There had been some fun already; more now. At Bloomington J. H. Holzshu appointed a committee of Woodchoppers to go ahead, spy out and clear the land—George W. Snyder, chairman; John N. Benson and Harry E. Kenah, auxiliaries.

The Journal had never seen Snyder before, but learned from Otto Hohing that when very young Snyder was named, First, after Georgetown, and, second, after Washington city.

Just at this stage of the story the first tunnel was reached. Benson yelled "Sand Patch!" A second later Kenah howled in contradiction—"Doe Gully!"

At last the car reached Bond, the seat of a lumber-mill the most complete in equipment and thorough in result ever seen by any of the party.

The structure occupies nearly or quite an acre of ground, covering machinery which takes hold of the log in the pond, drags it to the 45-foot saw, and turns it into lumber with the least possible human effort. Each log is seized up by the sawyer and the most of big and little lumber made of it—sills, studding, boards, etc., and pickets, laths, etc., from the slabs.

Nothing seems to be lost except the dust the refuse going into the fuel heap.

The saw is a 45-foot steel belt running with a speed which turns out an average of 900 feet a minute and 60,000 feet a day.

Logs weighing a ton are handled by the machinery with an ease and precision instinct with almost human intelligence. Boards to one point, sills to another, slabs to another, etc., by quick changes of the roller equipment. The largest maximum of handling is thus done, the least minimum by human hands.

On the car again, the last destination was reached shortly afternoon—the home of the woodsmen. The Journal asked Mr. Bond—"where are we at?

"Right here!" said he, pointing downyard.

"But how far are we from some place designated on the map?"

"About six miles from Grantsville!" and instead of pointing northward, as the Journal thought toward Grantsville, his finger went to what seemed about south-west. The sun was invisible the entire day; hence, loss of sense of direction.

Dinner followed—a plentiful, substantial, unwritten menu ranging from baked beans up to punkin pie.

At its close ex-U. S. Senator Wellington, chairman on the part of the visiting Sir Knights, arose and spoke forcibly and eloquently. He called successively upon Sir Knights Snyder, Drecher, Beall, Hammond, Benson, and several others.

In introducing the speakers Mr. Wellington was most happy. He is a born chairman, endowed with a versatility of speech which frames itself into compliment separately just to each individual.

Mr. Bond responded to the tributes paid his enterprise and his hospitality as a host. He evidently appreciated highly the many good things said, and when he resumed his seat there was a chorus which sounded like "he's a good fellow," etc.

After music and singing, now 3 p.m., the first step toward return was made.

The rain which had fallen intermittently during the day made the air cooler than its wont even at this elevation just below the summit of Meadow mountain. But all could see the tall, straight trees, in almost innumerable number, which had invited even a railroad to this altitude.

The lumbermen, in homely dress, were here, apparently content, and, smoking around a stove at times red-hot, told their adventures, laughed, lounged and slept.

DuBois and Bond Bros., owners of 13,000 acres of this tall-timber tract, have been 80 years in the business. They are machinists as well, with a large plant at DuBois, Pa., wherein all this elaborate equipment, excepting boilers, engine and dynamo, was constructed. They have been operating here about two years, and with 200 men in their employment, a long era of active and profitable work lies ahead.

About half-way down the mountain the car stopped for the crowd to see a logging train loaded. A locomotive, with all its propelling apparatus on one side, came on pushing a big derrickcar. Reaching logs scattered near by, a pair of grab-hooks placed near the middle of each, swung the huge timber from ground to car, "easily as a lion shakes the dew-drops from his mane in the sunlight of the morning."

The ride homeward was without startling incident except at Piedmont, where Mr. Bond left the train amid the grateful chorus—

For he's a jolly good fellow, etc.

To the vast majority of the Sir Knights it was a day crowded with delightful events.—Frostburg Journal.

LIVES WITH HOLE IN HIS FACE

Floyd Sprigg Survives An Unusual Operation in Baltimore.

A living man with a hole several inches square in his face is the result of an operation which was performed at the Franklin Square Hospital Baltimore, over a week ago by Dr. John H. Branham, one of the visiting surgeons. The patient was Floyd Sprigg, 38 years old, of Davis, W. Va. The whole upper jaw on the right side of the frontal bone and the right eye was taken out, as well as half of the hard, or forward part, of the plate and the roof of the mouth.

This man with half of his head cut away, is going home in a few days and expects to come back later and have a gutta-percha cast made to take the place of the bone, while the skin from the forehead and neck will be grafted over the spot, which is now but a hole.

Mr. Sprigg was suffering from sarcoma or cancer. The growth began last February and at first Mr. Sprigg thought it was merely some affection of a tooth. It continued to worry him, and, thinking that it was an abcess of the tooth, he had several teeth drawn. Still the growth spread and when he finally came to Baltimore little hope was entertained for his life.

The operation was an extremely difficult one on account of the location of the cancer. It had made its way back to the base of the skull, and it was necessary to cut this and to tie up the main artery of the neck to prevent the patient from bleeding to death. Then the use of the knife began. There have been untold operations for cancer of the face, but few in which such a large quantity of bone had to be removed. The work occupied more than an hour.

Mr. Sprigg rallied well from the anesthetic, and considerably to the doctors' surprise, was able to take liquid food almost immediately afterward, it being expected that he would at first find much difficulty in swallowing. It has not been necessary to feed him with a tube at any stage of the proceedings, and he will soon be able to eat everything that anyone else can. It is believed that the germ of the cancer has been thoroughly removed and that he will have no further trouble with it.

The operation for covering the aperture in his face will consist of drawing the skin of the forehead down and grafting new skin on the spot. The socket of the eye will be covered as though no eye had ever been there.

One of the effects of the operation has been to stop all blood supply to the head from the body. It was impossible to release the artery, which the physicians found it necessary to tie it up before beginning the operation and Mr. Sprigg will live in more or less danger from the bursting of the blood vessel.

Mr Sprigg is a son of the late Randolph Sprigg, who was connected with the operation of the Chesapeake & Ohio canal, and a brother of Mrs. Chas. A. Tower, of Oakland.

Jeroboam's Idolatry.

The genesis of a new empire is always fascinating, but a special interest attaches to the rise of the kingdom of Israel. The cleavage between Ephraim and Judah seemed inevitable. It was postponed by the statesmanship of David, but it began under the abuses of Solomon, and was precipitated by the insolent incompetence of Rehoboam. In point of territory the new kingdom included the ten tribes with the tributary portions of Moab, Syria, and Ammon. The population is believed to have been not far from three and one-half million. The country was marked for fertility and studded with places sacred in Hebrew annals. It was more exposed than Judah, but survived for three centuries, finally falling under the Assyrian invasion.

The first king of the new nation, Jeroboam, was a man of brilliant genius. His specialty was military architecture. Solomon discovered his marked ability and employed him in the fortification of Jerusalem, so that he came to be known as the "man who inclosed the city of David." Solomon afterward feared him as a rival and caused his exile to Egypt, where the reigning Pharoah probably used his talents in the same way and regretfully allowed him to return to his native land. Over against the dreary incompetence of Rehoboam, the practical and forceful spirit of Jeroboam appears to the best advantage. The moment he took up the scepter he began the fortification of the key cities of Shechem, Terzan, and Penuel, well earning the title of "fortress-builder of Israel."

A pathetic incident shows the human side of this rugged warrior, and links these scenes of a dim antiquity with the experiences of today. It is the story of the sick child and the mother's hasty visit to the blind prophet; his harrowing answer and the child's death as the mother puts her foot on the threshhold.

There is a dash of color, too, in the incident which records the prophet Ahijah as lying in wait for Jeroboam while he was still in the employ of Solomon. The seer pulls him aside from the black-paved road running out of Jerusalem. They stand alone in a sheltered spot. Without a word the prophet pulls off his own new robe and tears it into twelve strips, keeping two and givingte n to Jeroboam. By this speaking sign he knows he is to have ten tribes for his kingdom.

But the most significant incident is that which describes the means which Jeroboam took to alienate his subjects permanently from Jerusalem. Humanly speaking it was imperative that he should take steps to preserve the autonomy of the new kingdom. The thing most threatening to this was the rule of the Hebrew religion which required the presence of every male three times a year in the temple. It was evident that if the new kingdoms were to be kept separate politically, they must first be separated religiously. No one can dispute the cleverness of Jeroboam's device. He set up symbols of religion at the most sacred shrines within his own territory which happened also to be most conveniently located. He excused his subjects from the long and expensive journeys to Jerusalem. In the place of the Levites who had deserted to Judah, he created a new priesthood in which all sections and classes were represented.

As a pure piece of statescraft this was a master stroke. It confirmed the separation of the two kingdoms for all time. Without it, to all human appearances, Israel would ultimately have been reabsorbed by Judah. By this device Jeroboam buttressed his throne and perpetuated his dynasty, and for doing so current opinion would certainly commend him.

But this whole transaction must be viewed from a standpoint absolutely extraordinary. If the supernatural elements of Hebrew history are admitted, then Jeroboam was at fault in throwing himself dead against the fundamental principles of the Mosaic law and ritual. He carried his worldly policy into a sacred realm and poisoned the stream of national life in its very fountain.

The Teacher's Lantern.

The key to Jeroboam's character is found in the word "policy." He allowed it to carry him too far when he set aside the fundamental principles of the Mosaic law and worship.

"Who made Israel to sin," is a menancing refrain repeated twenty-three times concerning the successive kings of the Northern kingdom. The few interruptions to the dolorous monotony are greeted with pleasure.

To the Oriental mind a young bull is the symbol of creative energy or power to bring into being. For this reason it was adopted to represent the Deity. By this means Jeroboam wished the people to keep God in mind while they omitted their pilgrimages to the temple at Jerusalem. He broke the second commandment in his effort to keep the first.

In order still more completely to break with the ritual of Judah, he changed the harvest feast from the seventh to the eighth month. A modern analogy is found in the attempted abolition of the seven-day notion in order to obliterate Sunday—a decimal system being substituted. This was done by the French Revolutionist.

A wrong sense is conveyed in the authorized version of the translation "he made priests of the lowest of the people." He did not elevate "Tom, Dick, and Harry" to the priesthood. He was too shrewd for that. What he really did was to buttress his throne by chosing for ecclestical order "from among all the people" (as in the Revised Version); that is, capable men, whenever he found them.

The Levites living in Israel showed themselves self-respecting men. They curried no favor. With one accord they surrendered their livings and made an exodus to Judah. A modern analogy to this is found in the Scotch clergy. The loss sustained by Israel was very great. It was like the exodus of the Huguenots from France.

The stories of "the Palsied Hand," the "Rent Altar," and the "Lapased Prophet," which cluster here, are vivid, and each has a moral. They are well worth repeating.

July Term of Court.

Tuesday Chief Judge Boyd accompanied by Associate Judge Henderson came up to Oakland to be present at the July Term of Court.

The several dockets were called over and judgments entered in uncontested cases.

The suit of W E. Brown vs. S. L. Allen was tried and a verdict rendered in favor of the plaintiff. This was the only case determined by the court, which adjourned Tuesday afternoon.

Judges Boyd and Henderson returned to Cumberland yesterday morning.

The great international and interdenominational camp meeting at the Park opened on last Friday with a fair attendance from all sections of the United States. Since the opening of the meeting the attendance has increased steadily and the interest manifested in the success of the gathering has materially developed. The Sunday services were edifying in the extreme. Large crowds were present at all times and strong sermons were delivered. The meeting will continue until next Monday night.

THE FOURTH IN OAKLAND.

A Large Crowd Present—The Street Parade and Trades Display.

The great National holiday, July 4th, which this year commemorated the 128th anniversary of the birth of the American nation, passed off with remarkable serenity in Oakland not withstanding the great crowd present in town from the surrounding country and county villages.

Early in the day the townspeople decorated their residences and places of business with the national colors, all the buildings thus presenting remarkably fine appearances.

The accommodation trains as well as a number of the through trains, brought countless hundreds to town and these in addition to the county people who came in wagons, buggies and on horseback swelled the number of strangers in town to several thousand, the crowd being variously estimated from five thousand to eight thousand peo

The festivities began with the parade and trades display at 10.30 o'clock which was headed by mounted police, followed by Chief Marshall Mayor Henry W. McComas. The parade was formed practically in the order as published in these columns last week. In it were represented nearly every business place of the town, among the most notable displays being those of the Oakland Steam Bakery, D. E. Bolden & Co., Dixon & Kelso, Green's Bottling Works, A. D. Naylor & Co., 'Gene Baumgartner, Liller's barber shop, Schley Hotel, Cumberland Brewing Company, Thomas Little and several others. Benny Anderson, the horse dealer, was also in the parade with his sleeping van handsomely decorated and furnished. Stetson's Uncle Tom's Cabin Company brought up the rear of the parade with a band and drum corps.

The Keyser, Moscow Mills and "rube" bands, the latter composed of some of the Oakland band members, discoursed music during the morning and afternoon hours.

In the afternoon a picnic was held at the picnic grounds, head of Second street, where everything of a drinkable nature in the way of soft drinks, fruits, etc., was on sale, dancing indulged in by those thus inclined and many games of skill participated in by the visitors and towns folk.

A game of ball was played at the ball park west of the hotel grounds between the Oakland and Grafton nines, resulting in a victory for the visitors by a score of 6 to 0.

At night a balloon which was advertised to make the ascent could not be inflated and after several hours hard work by the manager and Mr. S. F. Herr, one of the committee, the effort was given up, much to the disappointment of the crowd. No blame can be attached to the management of the affair for the failure, however.

At night the Uncle Tom's Cabin Company gave a performance to the very large crowd present.

The small boy was in evidence during the entire day with the incessant crack of the small torpedo and firecracker and at night the display of fireworks from private residences was on an elaborate scale.

The visitors seemed to enjoy themselves and many expressions of approval on the manner in which the affair was managed by the committee could be heard upon every side.

Died.

LEE—On Monday, June 27th, at his home near Swanton, Abraham Lee, who was born near Blaine, W. Va., Sept. 1st, 1831, and resided in the county all his life. He was married March 8th, 1869, to Susan Margaret Demit, who with six sons and two daughters survived him. The funeral took place from the U. B. church at Swanton on Wednesday morning, being conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Johnson, after which the remains were interred in the Swanton cemetery. A large concourse of people followed the remains of the departed to the grave thus giving evidence of the esteem in which Mr. Lee was held.

BOYER—At his home in Accident, last Thursday afternoon about four o'clock after an illness extending over several months, Jacob Boyer, aged 87 years. The deceased was the father of Samuel Boyer, Esq., formerly of Oakland, but who recently removed from here to Fairmont W. Va. The deceased was a life-long resident of Garrett county and was for many years engaged in the mercantile busibusiness at Accident where he amassed considerable wealth and was the owner of a beautiful home. He retired from business some twenty years ago. He was a member of the Lutheran church at Accident from which edifice his funeral took place Saturday morning.

Prof. Lee Made Field Agent.

The Marvland Sunday School Union has employed Prof. Ephraim K. Lee, as field agent. Prof. Lee is well known in Garrett as a man of force and intellectual ability. At present Prof. Lee is in Cumberland arranging for a county convention. Later he will visit other counties in the interest of the work.

DEPUTY SHERIFF INJURED.

Struck on the Head With a Beer Bottle by Brother of Man Under Arrest.

Among the few disturbances occurring in Oakland on Monday the most serious was at the base ball grounds when Deputy Sheriff James Frantz, son of the Sheriff, was struck on the head and in the mouth with a beer bottle in the hands of a man named Fuller from Corinth.

The officer had placed Fuller's brother under arrest for an infraction of the law and was leading him from the grounds when Fuller drew from his hip pocket a bottle filled with beer. With this weapon he struck the sheriff first in the mouth cutting his upper lip entirely through and then on the back of the head, the latter laying the skull bare. The third Fuller then appeared and mixed in but it was less than half a minute until all three were under arrest and on their way to jail, citizens interfering with the assault upon the officer and taking the men in charge.

The preliminary trial of the Fuller boys was given them before Justice Gonder Tuesday evening and in default of $500 bond they were sent to jail.

The injuries of the deputy sheriff were dressed by Dr. Legge who placed several stitches in his lip and scalp to close the wounds.

Married.

WILEY-HOLIDAY—At the Lutheran parsonage in Oakland, by Rev. E. Manges, on July 4th, 1904, Mr. Silas Oliver Wiley, of Bittinger, this county, and Miss Lavinia Ella Holiday, of Elk Lick, Pa. THE REPUBLICAN unites, with their many friends, in wishing Mr. Wiley and his charming bride a happy voyage over the sea of time.

WILSON—RUSSELL—Even within the hushed walls of the beautiful Davis Memorial Hospital at Elkins Cupid has played some pranks. When Dr. Mark Stanley Wilson entered there less than a year ago, he was a confirmed bachelor of twenty-six summers. Thro' his college days and his course of medicine at the Maryland University—yes and thro' the more dangerous vacation days spent at his mother's home in old Garrett county, where his sister gathered numbers of pretty bright school chums from all parts of the country, he came "heart whole and fancy free." Of course he liked these girls but to him they were all alike. He had grown accustomed to the white robed nurse the year he had spent as House student at the University. Then why did one little nurse, more petit, more timid than all others at the Elkins Hospital creep into the affections of the young Resident Physician. No one noticed that he was partial in his conduct toward the nurses. No one suspected that Miss Virginia Russell of lamb like meekness, had won his heart. When in April Dr. Wilson resigned his position in the hospital their many friends were surprised and delighted over the annoucement of their engagement. The happy climax of their little romance was reached on June 29th when they were quietly married at the Wilson homestead in this county near Wilson, W. Va. After spending a few days with the bride's parents in Hampshire county, W. Va., Dr. and Mrs. Wilson will visit the Fair at St. Louis.

A Race For An Income

By HERBERT MONTGOMERY

Copyright, 1903, by Charles N. Lurie

"CAN you run over to Ireland, Mr. Catchem?"

"Certainly."

"Could you cross by to-night's mail?"

"I could. What must I do when I get there?"

"It's a painful case," said kind hearted Mr. Warmington, "but I'd best tell you the particulars shortly and let you judge for yourself what's best to be done."

Mr. Warmington was one of the wealthiest and worthiest lawyers in

MISS TRIXIE'S HEART WARMED TO HIM.

London, and Mr. Catchem was the cleverest detective in all England.

"You know my brother-in-law, the Hon. Mr. Burton?"

Mr. Catchem nodded grimly. He had heard of the gentleman, not to his advantage.

"Just so. He was always, I am sorry to say, a trouble to his family. My wife—though only a child at the time—remembers some stormy scenes before he went abroad. After our marriage I did what I could for him, but it was very little use. Though then well on in his fifties, he was as wild as a young colt—wild, not vicious, I'm bound to say. Well, eight years ago he had the good luck—for him—to marry an heiress who was young, beautiful and passionately in love with the elderly scapegrace. He kept as straight as a die while she lived and was terribly cut up when she died about a year ago. She showed her perfect confidence in him by her will, bequeathing to him her whole property, real and personal, 'with perfect confidence,' as she wrote, 'in his loving care for our dear child, Florence.'

"Within two weeks after his wife's death he came to me to prepare a deed, 'as tight as they draw them,' he said, assigning his whole property, a clear £5,000 a year, and a beautiful house and grounds, to his daughter, reserving only a moderate yearly allowance from his wife's personal property for himself. 'I cannot trust myself, Warmington,' he said, 'that's the truth of it. If I have money, I must splatter it.' You may be sure the deed was as stringent as the lawyers could make it, and he signed it without winking.

"Then, I suppose from loneliness, the Bohemian broke loose in him again. In an evil hour—one of the small hours in the morning, most likely—he fell in with Miss Trixie Mordant, the liveliest and at the same time the cutest young lady that graces the boards of the Empire.

"Well, I needn't tell you, when a man of sixty falls in love he comes a cropper. The cunning little baggage quickly coaxed him into an offer of marriage and then stood out for handsome settlements. She put her eye on the property, but he thought he had no power to touch it, and I didn't enlighten him on the subject, you may be sure.

"He was wild with himself for his 'folly' in having assigned it to his daughter. But Miss Trixie consulted lawyers on her own account, Sharkey & Snippit, sharp fellows as you'll meet with in the city.

"They were not long putting my precious brother-in-law up to his legal rights. As the law now stands under an old statute of Queen Elizabeth, if the property is granted to Miss Trixie in consideration of her marriage with the grantor, the deed to poor little Florence is not worth the parchment it's written on. Sharkey & Snippit are now, I have reason to know, preparing marriage settlements and making over the whole property to Miss Trixie, who is in a seaside village in the west of Ireland."

"We have introduced a quiet little bill in the house of lords which will repeal the old act of Queen Elizabeth, which allows a man to defeat his own grant, and will make voluntary conveyances absolute against what we call in law a 'purchaser with notice.' The bill is halfway through the lords. The lord chancellor has promised the royal assent—by deputy, of course—the day after the bill passes the third reading in the commons."

"It's a race, then, between your bill and their deed for a five thousand a year stake?"

"Exactly."

"But I don't see where I come in."

"I want you to run over to Mount Eagle, where Miss Trixie hangs out, and keep a sharp eye on her till the business is through. Sharkey & Snippit are as sharp as scissors and shut as tight. They are in constant communication with Miss Trixie. If you go to Ireland you may be able to tap the wire at that end. Miss Trixie is as loose and lively as they are close."

"I'll go. I'd like to do the little girl a good turn if I can.

* * * * * * *

Miss Trixie Mordant felt particularly dull during her voluntary exile in County Clare. The passionate appeals of her elderly adorer were monotonously dismal. Nothing to do and no one to talk to—that was her trouble.

"If I only had somebody to laugh with me at these yokels I could stand it," she muttered disconsolately.

Then her eye wandered from the sea in front to the tennis ground on the left, and at a glance she knew that fate had been kind and her prayer was answered. A young man dressed in the extreme of fashion lounged across the ground carelessly swinging a tennis racket. His blazer blazed hot crimson and yellow in the hot sunshine. Miss Trixie's heart warmed to him at once as a kindred spirit. In five minutes she, too, strolled out on the ground. She was quite flustered at first when she found a young man on the ground and glanced at him—oh, so bashfully!—from under her long lashes when he dared to speak to her.

But in two minutes they were in the midst of a lively single of tennis; in two hours they were "Trix" and "Jer," as if they'd known each other all their lives. It was the day after when the lively young lady was planning a bicycle expedition that a waiter brought her a telegram. A monosyllable escaped her as she read it. Then she pettishly tore the pink paper into pieces and flung the fragments into the "turf bucket" that stood by the empty fireplace.

"Now what have I done?" she cried repentantly the next moment. "And old Sharkey specially warned me to be careful. Pick up the bits for me, Jer."

Jer instantly buried himself—head and shoulders—in the turf bucket. He quietly slipped an old telegram of his own from his pocket and, under cover of the bucket, tore it to pieces before he rescued the fragments of Miss Trixie's.

She took the bits he gave her, lit a match and burnt them in the empty grate.

Half an hour afterward Jer, in his bedroom, with the door locked, made a puzzle map of bits of pink paper on his dressing table, and this is what he read there:

"Just discovered child's friends putting bill through parliament to secure her in property. Hope to put spoke in their wheel yet. Must hurry up with deed. Is old man willing? Sharkey."

As he finished reading he saw with the corner of his eye through the window Miss Trixie on her wheel, sailing down the lawn in front of the hotel.

In a moment he was out and after her, making his bike fly. He drew abreast about a quarter of a mile from the postoffice.

"On for a spin?" he said.

"When I've sent a wire."

She slipped off dexterously behind her wheel at the postoffice and stepped up to the telegraph counter.

Jer stood at the open door dutifully holding the wheels. The telegraph instrument in the office was one of the old fashioned affairs that conscientiously tap out their messages. Among his manifold accomplishments in another condition of life Mr. Jerome Blood-Smith had learned to interpret these taps. This is what they told him:

"To Sharkey & Snippit, London. Send deed at once. Old man has consented to execute. Mordant."

As they went down the slope together on their wheels Jer suddenly remembered. "By Jove," he said, "I want to send a wire, too, if you don't mind. Back pedal, Trix. I'll be with you in a minute."

He wheeled sharp round on the face of the slope and flew back to the postoffice. He scribbled five words to Warmington.

"Bill blown on. Look alive."

* * * * * * *

Next morning Miss Trixie was up early and restless. She was at the telegraph office before it opened, with the inevitable Jer, of course, dancing attendance. This is the message that was ticked out as he stood holding the wheels at the door:

"All serene. Bill blocked last night. Snippit starts by the morning mail for Rathcool with deed engrossed for execution. Sharkey."

"Hooray!" shouted Miss Trixie, but when she went to the door she caught a back view of Mr. Blood-Smith's head well over the handle of his wheel, flying up the hill back to the hotel.

"My eye!" she exclaimed in amazement. "What's come to Jer? Did a wasp sting my pet, just as I was in humor to flirt with him too? Five thousand a year and a castle, all to my own check. I must have a downhill scorch all by my own little self to work it off or I'll bust!"

Meanwhile Blood-Smith was strangely occupied in his locked bedroom. There was a timetable open beside him, and a big railway map of Ireland was spread out on the quilt of his bed, at which he was busy with a pair of compasses and a blue pencil.

"A little over a hundred," he muttered. "There is time enough to do it. But it's deuced risky work and dead against the law. Well, I've helped the law so often that it must make allowances this once. So here goes."

He fished out a strong bicycle bag, fitted with straps to be carried on the handle bar and packed in a very singular fashion. The two cans which held the oil for his lamp and lubricating oil for the bearings were his sole baggage on his projected expedition. These two greasy cans, both quite full, he wrapped up carefully in a couple of large silk handkerchiefs and stuffed into the bag.

Quietly and quickly the bag was fitted to the bars, and Blood-Smith slipped into the saddle at the hotel door and was off at a good, steady twelve miles an hour. All day long on his high geared wheel he pushed on at the same steady, unchanging pace. Evening began to close in. His cyclometer marked eighty-four miles already covered. "In good time," he muttered and slackened speed a little. At last! He could just distinguish the steep slope as the road rose abruptly and leaped off the railway. He dropped off at the foot, lifted the wheel over the wooden railings and stood it carefully in the shadow of the bridge wall. He took the bag from the handle bars and walked with it down to the rails. A few stars showed tremulously through the haze. A faint metallic gleam came from the rails that stretched, two threads of light, away into the darkness.

He took one of the silk handkerchiefs from the bag and shook out the folds. He drew the cork of one of the oil cans with his teeth, soaked the silk as full as it could hold, and then, bending down over the near rail, he began smearing the smooth metal thickly with the oil. So he worked steadily and swiftly for over a hundred yards down the steep gradient until one can of oil was exhausted. He crossed the line and came up mopping and daubing the other rail from the other can in the same plentiful fashion. Then he took his stand right between the rails at the head of the gradient under the bridge.

"I hope I am safe here," he muttered, "right in the track of the mail train. We'll soon see."

Almost as he spoke there came right before him a steady, white star, distant and low. The star all the time grew bigger and brighter. Then came a curious vibration in the air and the roar and rattle of the mail train. Low at first, it grew and grew like a strong tide of sound forcing itself against the wind. Under a full head of steam the engine of the Lightning Express, with a long train trailing behind in the darkness, came thundering up the incline, slacking speed a little, like a horse out of breath, as it climbed toward the top. Then all of a sudden the wheels struck oil. There was an instant change in the roar of the train. The rough jar and rattle died out of it.

THE ENGINE CAME ON SLOWLY.

But the acquired momentum still forced the huge weight forward, the wheels sliding like a horse's hoofs on a slimy pavement and taking no grip on the greased metal. The engine came on slowly and more slowly until it was within twenty yards of where Mr. Blood-Smith stood at the end of the greased slope. It wavered, stood still for one second and then began silently and slowly at first to slip back down the slope, gaining speed as it went. Far away down at the foot of the gradient the train came at last to a dead halt. Then he knew the train was safe for the night. So he drew his wheel from its shelter with an easy mind and with the wind at his back went sailing away swiftly and smoothly along the road he came.

Next day at half past 3 o'clock, while Mr. Snippit, with the deed in his black calfskin bag, was still a long five miles from Rathcool, a very curious performance was in progress in the house of lords. The lord chancellor was seated on the broad scarlet woolsack. Two other lords were beside him. This combination represented the absent majesty of England. A short man was reading a list of bills which had passed through the storms of lords and commons and were now sailing peacefully into port.

"The voluntary conveyance bill," read the short man.

"La Reine le vent," jerked out a tall man.

In that second the bill was an act and an integral part of the law of the land, and the rights of little Miss Florence Burton were secure.

All that afternoon at Mount Eagle Miss Trixie Mordant and Mr. Blood-Smith waited eagerly expectant of telegrams. It was well on in the evening when two arrived together at last.

There was but one word in each message.

Her word was "Lost"—and his "Won."

The Essence of Trade Unionism

By JOHN MITCHELL, President United Mine Workers of America

THE idea of the joint trade agreement is the ESSENCE of trade unionism. We have now 350,000 men working under conditions which are fixed by joint agreement. No situation has changed so much as the coal situation. Some time ago it was owner against owner and no one knew what the other was doing. All interests suffered; the wages of the men were cut until they were no longer sufficient to support live men. The owners, too, lost money. WE ADJUST ALL DIFFERENCES NOW BY AGREEMENTS; we leave no question to arbitration; arbitration is preferable to strikes—that is all. We take the position in our trade that we must settle questions ourselves. Only in Indiana have we called in outside arbitrators and there the arrangement has failed.

OUTSIDERS CALLED IN HAVE SAID THEY DID NOT UNDERSTAND CONDITIONS, AND THE RESULT OF THE ARBITRATION HAS BEEN UNSATISFACTORY TO BOTH EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEES.

I believe in strikes. I also believe in lockouts. Neither side must surrender either of these rights. But I believe neither thing should be resorted to until each side has exhausted every peaceful means for settlement.

Nothing can make so much for industrial peace as the recognition of the independence of labor and capital. The great associations of employers and employees have come to stay. WE WOULD NOT ALTER CONDITIONS IF WE COULD. None of us wants to return to the conditions existing fifty years ago. We believe the answer to all these questions is the trade agreement.

Under no circumstances would I consent to the arbitration of some FUNDAMENTAL question. I would never consent to arbitrate the eight hour work day or my right to belong to a union. As an illustration of my position in arbitration I can cite one instance: I have advised the men in Kentucky to accept a wage reduction of 4½ per cent RATHER THAN ACCEPT ARBITRATION, which the employers are perfectly willing to grant.

WE PREFER TO DO THIS RATHER THAN HAVE PEOPLE COME IN TO ADJUST OUR AFFAIRS WHO DO NOT UNDERSTAND THEM.

What Japan Is Fighting For

By MARQUIS ITO, Chief of the Board of Elder Statesmen of Japan

THE sympathetic attitude of the public opinion of the United States is a great encouragement to us in our faith that in fighting for our own future security and undisturbed enjoyment of the fruits of civilization we are to a certain extent fighting also FOR THE COMMON CAUSE OF ALL.

The supremacy of Russia in Korea would mean not only a constant menace to the VERY EXISTENCE of our island empire, but would also mean the wholesale destruction of our commercial and industrial interests already legitimately vested there in the past, not to mention the loss of natural outlet for our expanding people. The constant policy of Russia in this part of the globe has steadily inclined toward MONOPOLIZATION OF NATURAL RESOURCES of the country she conquers and annexes.

I am indeed very sorry that the negotiations carried on, on our side with sincere good faith, were not crowned with success so earnestly desired. If the Russian government were a little more inspired by the spirit of moderation and of TOLERATION FOR THE LEGITIMATE INTERESTS OF OTHERS, things would not have come to this pass. As it was, there remained no other way for us but to try to enforce by arms what we could not do by reason. And we had to do so ere it would have become too late, for Russia was steadily and rapidly augmenting her fighting forces available in this part of her empire, so that before long the sheer mass of her fighting power would have made it a folly for us to attempt to resist the unscrupulous march onward.

THE PRESENT WAR ON OUR PART IS NOTHING BUT THE RESULT OF A COOLLY THOUGHT OUT STEP IN THE CAUSE OF STATE NECESSITY.

Men and Women Cannot Be Taught by Identical Methods

By Professor ALBION W. SMALL, Chicago University

A THOROUGHLY good teacher would unconsciously give DIFFERENT INSTRUCTION to young men and young women in attempting to give the SAME COURSE. In teaching both men and women in college since 1881 my experience has invariably been that the things which interested men did not interest women in the same way, and vice versa, and I have always felt that if I were teaching them separately I should have to put the EMPHASIS at different points in order to do the best work for each.

I have always found that women in college, as a rule, have to be hounded into objecting to anything that the INSTRUCTOR says. One has to approach nearer to the point of absurdity to get them to take a critical attitude toward the instructor's authority than in the case of men. I have no dogma about the permanency of this difference, but so far as my experience goes it is the rule. This would also give me the cue to DIFFERENCES OF TACTICS in the two cases.

I WOULD NOT IN THE ORDINARY ARTS AND SCIENCE CURRICULUM MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE IN THE SUBJECTS OFFERED TO MEN AND WOMEN, BUT I WOULD VARY METHODS IN ADAPTATION TO TASTE AND MENTAL ATTITUDE.

HICKS FORETELLS JULY STORMS.

Weather Prophet Promises Tornadic Conditions With Thunder and Bluster.

This month begins in the last stage of a storm period central on June the 30th. Storms and perturbations of this period will be well on their way toward the Atlantic by the 1st and 2nd, with fair and cooler weather following from the west.

A reactionary storm period is central from the 4th to the 6th. As the moon is on the celestial equator on the 4th, we may reasonably calculate on a decided rise in temperature, ending in thunder and rain storms during these reactionary days. If the general tendency is to excessive heat and light rains from the 4th to 6th, and from the 9th to 14th, it will be safe to count on a predominance of such weather nearly or quite up to September. We fear there are good reasons to expect such results. Upon the other hand, should cooler weather and general rains and storms be the rule at these periods, much of the same kind of weather will characterize all the storm periods for the following six to eight weeks. The sneering, "lofty" criticism that "any body can predict hot weather in July and August," breaks down in the minds of sensible people, who know that, while this is true in a measure, the temperatures and rainfall are extremely different, one year with another, in these months.

About the 11th to 14th, the central dates of the second July storm period, no one should be surprised by a wave of excessive warm weather, culminating in many threatening storms and violent dangerous blustering. Some local cloudbursts are probable here here and there, but we do not believe that sufficient rains will occur at this time over wide extremes of the grain-producing regions. We shall be delighted to find that our opinion was erroneous, but we so believe and so make our forecast. Heavy hail storms, especially to the West and North, will most likely attend these disturbaces, in which with temporary change to much cooler may naturally be expected. The 12th, 13th and 14th are the days on which the culminating crisis of this period is to be looked for. Change to higher barometer, westerly winds and cooler would be the normal order, progressively, behind, or west of the centers of storm areas.

On and touching the 17th, 18th and 19th the temperature will greatly increase, moving like a wave from west to east. Barometric unsteadiness and final fall to low readings will accompany the warmth, and many threatening storm clouds with thunder and bluster will take up their march eastwardly across the country.

A regular Vulcan storm period covers the 21st to the 24th, having its center on the 22nd. The most casual observers and readers of weather reports will see that a wave of increased warmth, attended by falling barometer and other storm conditions, will organize in the west and pass eastwardly across the country on and touching the above days. More threatening, summer clouds, with thunder, some rain and severe bluster, will break out along the paths of actual storm areas.

On and touching the 27th and 28th reactionary storm conditions will return with more than ordinary intensity.

If by any means heavy and general rains should have fallen at previous July periods—a result we candidly do not look for—the same may be counted on at this last period. If violent, tornadic storms have been common during July up to this period—a thing we do not foresee—in all reasonable probability they will recur in added force about this time. Our decided opinion is, that sustained summer heat, with a minimum of storm and rain followed by seismic phenomena, will characterize this closing period in July.

It Was the Peddler's Turn to Have a Laugh

"MORNING, madam! Want any combs, brushes, hairpins or chewing gum?" asked the peddler, putting his hat on the floor and opening his pack.

"No, sir," said the woman sharply, "and I don't care for any dime novels, puzzles, lamp wicks, eye salves or corn plasters."

"Just so. And I suppose it's no use to ask whether you'd like to look at a bottle of wrinkle filling for the complexion?"

"Not a bit, sir, and I know you have not any book on good manners or you'd read them yourself occasionally."

"None of the people I call on would appreciate 'em, madam. And now, if you think you have no use for the celebrated invisible ear trumpet that you can fasten to a back window and hear all your neighbors say, or the famous long range telescope that will bring every kitchen within half a mile of your house so close to you that you can almost smell what the folk are cooking, I'll be going."

"Hold on!" exclaimed the woman of the house. "I'd like to see those two articles."

"All right, madam," replied the peddler; "if I see any chap who's got 'em to sell I'll send him around. Morning, madam."

And he picked up his hat, put it on his head sideways and went down the steps whistling.—New York Press.

A Peculiar Incident.

"When I lived in Raleigh, N. C.," said Philip W. Wiley of the government printing office, "one of the churches was about to receive a new pastor, and two of the trustees of the church, associating with themselves three other members, went to the railroad station to meet him. On his arrival one of them spoke to him:

"'The Rev. Mr. Black, I believe?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'We are the committee appointed to receive you. My name is Gray.'

"'I am glad to meet you Mr. Gray.'

"'And this is Mr. Scarlett.'

"'Delighted, Mr. Scarlett.'

"'And Mr. Brown.'

"'Mr. Brown, I assure you this is a pleasure.'

"'And Mr. Green.'

"'Mr. Green, permit me to grasp your hand.'

"'Also Mr. White.'

"'Mr. White, I love to meet so many of my brethren. But, Mr. Gray, is this a colored church to which I am called to minister?'

"'Why, no!' said that gentleman blankly.

"'Well, I see all the colors are represented in the committee,' said Mr. Black, 'and the idea occurred to me.'

"Such was the fact, though none of them had noticed it before."—Washington Post.

"Ah!" said the general. "It is well that we have the Transsiberian railroad. Have them shipped to me by freight."—Judge.

I MAY not sing the lavender of grandma's gentle prime
Or the hay that scents the meadows or the odor blowing thyme,
But the anguish of the moment fairly drives me to compose
Stanzas to the little moth ball that preserves my summer clothes,
The marble finished moth ball,
The safe and useful moth ball,
The unpretentious moth ball that preserves my summer clothes.

She laid my suit so tenderly upon the shelf last fall,
And in each pocket, crease and seam she dropped one tiny ball.
I durst not groan, I durst not moan; I only heard her say,
"'Tis the magic of the moth ball that will keep the moths away."
The germ destroying moth ball,
The hygienic moth ball,
The permeating moth ball that will keep the moths away.

Through winter's long and bitter days it weltered in its fume,
Like asphalt multiplied by tar it trickled through the room,
An odor so miraculous, so subtle, yet so strong
That neither moth nor man could live within its presence long.
It was the magic moth ball,
The highly seasoned moth ball,
The medicated moth ball—nothing could withstand it long.

Again I take the garment down with feelings strangely sad.
No moths have gnawed its flowing seams—oh, how I wish they had!
For with that unrelenting smell still clinging to the cloth
I turn and flee my summer suit as fled the little moth.
The fumigating moth ball,
The time defying moth ball,
The unforgetting moth ball—who can blame the little moth?

Why, Certainly.

"What would you say if I kissed you?"

"There's a better way to find out than asking me."—New York Evening Journal.

Considerate.

He came softly into the dimly lighted room where his wife lay—it was 2 o'clock in the morning.

"I am not asleep," came a voice from the bed, "so you need not go tiptoeing about, and," she snapped, "I know you have not been sitting up with your 'Brother Mason' Charlie Smith, who you told me was sick, for I felt suspicious after you left, and so I just called up his house on the long distance phone and was informed that you were not there and also that he was not either, and that he was perfectly well. Now, where have you been?" she asked sharply. "Why will you men not tell the truth?"

"Why, my dear," he answered suavely, "if we always did, the tears of you women would probably create another flood."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Soon Knew It.

"Just think, Harold," said the wife of the actor, "when you proposed to me I hardly knew my own mind!"

Harold thoughtfully rubbed some grease paint on his chin before answering. Into his meditations came a picture of her as she refused him permission to join some of the boys in a little penny ante game the night before.

"Probably you didn't know your own mind then, Hortense," he mused. "But I'll say this for you: You are a mighty quick study."

Why He Was Out of a Job.

"Why don't you get a regular job somewhere and stick to it?" asked the lady of the hand-out.

"I can't find anything to do at me trade, leddy," replied Peripatetic Pete.

"What is your trade?"

"Blowin' nursin' bottles for young canary birds."—Chicago Record-Herald.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCHELLE, GA., Jan. 30, 1902.

Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.

ALONG PATHS OF PIONEERS.

the states to a climax, and the invention of the steamboat by James Rumsey. This invention, which history proves preceded those of Fulton and of John Fitch, near Doylestown, Pa., was the first practical application of steam as a motive power, and therefore, the beginning of the great changes in civilization and commerce which followed. Rumsey's home was at Shepherdstown, W. Va., though his experiments were conducted largely at Harpers Ferry, and it was at Harpers Ferry, that Thomas Jefferson crossed the Potomac River on Rumsey's boat, and there foresaw the great possibilities of steam navigation. Rumsey was a Marylander. The Bohemian Manor was his birthplace. He served through the Revolutionary War as a captian. The first successful trip was made by his boat on December 3, 1787, a year before the Fitch's crude effort proved successful on a Pennsylvania millpond.

All the way from Baltimore to St. Louis over the Baltimore and Ohio is a panorama of historical interest, beginning with Baltimore itself the starting point of Western immigration. Next is the Washington, the nation's capital, and no sooner is it out of sight than the traveler sees the Cheasapeake and Ohio Canal, which General Washington thought would supply the transportation since supplied by the steam roads. Then comes Williamsport, the home of Otho Holland Williams. Cumberland was the center of important movements during the Civil War, and it was here that the late President McKinley saw active service while wearing the blue.

And all along the route every farmhouse, every factory, every hill, every town has its history, written and unwritten, and in years to come the historian who follows the old National road and the route of the Baltimore and Ohio and writes of the stirring events which have remained hidden for a century will write an important and thrilling part of the nation's history.

Have You Ever Seen a Board Walk?

There will be a concert in aid of the boardwalk project held at Swanton, in May's Hall, on the evening of Thursday, July 14th.

The concert will consist of selections of the latest musical hits on the graphophone; Miss Lulu Jordan, reader, late of the Keyser Preparatory Schools, will appear and render some of her best selections.

Miss Mary Miller, who recently graduated with honor at St. Mary's Seminary, where she was noted for her remarkable talent for impersonation will give several humorous selections in a way that her friends predict will give great pleasure to the audience.

The Swanton talent will be assisted by Miss Carolina De Fabritiis of Boston, a graduate of the New England Consesvatory, who has won great success in the concert field, charming her audience not only by her sweet voice and artistic rendition of her selections but also by her magnetic personality which even wins for her a sympathetic audience.

The program will include the following numbers:

Selections, Miss Jordan.
Wisht I Wuz a Boy.
Nebuchadnezzar.
The Fate of Charlotte Russe, Miss Miller.
Violets. Ellen Wright.
Four Leaf Clover. Coombs
Annie Laurie.
Drink to me only with thine eyes.

The concert will begin at 7.45 and the people are requested to be on time and also to make it the financial hit of the season as its object is a most worthy one.

Admission to all parts of the hall, adults, 20; children 10.

Where The People Boost Their Town.

Baltimore and Ohio railroad officials were back in their offices today after making another inspection trip over the system. This trip took in Pittsburg and the Butler division and a part of the lines in West Virginia. The feature of the trip was a dinner given to the officials by the citizens of Clarksburg, West Virginia.

This town has an industrial company, to which the citizens, big and little, subscribed and raised a fund to secure new industries. The effect has been to multiply the population of the place.

They all feel proud of what the town is doing, and when anyone of moment comes along the leading people see that they get a good idea of what the place is and expects to be.

The Baltimore and Ohio officials, who are hustlers in their own way, were delighted with the experience, and each came away thinking more of this wideawake West Virginia town. Those on the trip were President Murray First Vice-President Randolph, Third Vice-President Potter, General Superintendent Fitzgerald, Chief Engineer D. D. Carothers, Real Estate Agent J. D. McCubbin, Industrial Agent W. W. Wood, and Treasurer J. V. MacNeal.—Baltimore News.

HOYES AND VICINITY.

Mr. George E. Bishoff has been quite ill for some time, suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism. Dr. Mason is his attending phpsician.

Mr. Alvin Lowdermilk, who has been attending Pennsylvania State Nornal at California, is home spending his vacation.

Miss Ethel DeWitt, accompanied by her cousin, Mr. Glotfelty of near Crellin, spent a few days at her home the past week.

Mr. Morris Welch purchased a very fine horse of Harvy Speicher.

Among the visitors at Hoyes this week are: Mrs. Maude Brenneman and children, Mrs. Minnie and daughter and Miss Kate Kildow, all of near Crellin.

Mrs. Annie DeWitt, accompanied by her grandson Willie Collier, spent a few days at Oakland the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mattingly and children spent a few days at Oakland and Mt. Lake Park this week.

Mr. Emanuel Custer and son Arthur attended the camp meeting at Mt. Lake Park last Sunday.

The Young Folks' Social Club met at M. Mattingly's last Friday evening. All report a good time.

Miss Sadie DeWitt is visiting relatives and friends near Oakland.

Miss Auburie Smith is visiting her cousin, Miss Vera Ferguson, at Mt. Lake Park.

Messrs. Arthur DeWitt and Alvin Lowdermilk were callers at M. Mattingly's Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Wm. Bishoff returned to his home last Sunday from Frostburg, where he had been attending State Normal.

Mr. Dorsey Guard of Guard, Md., is teaching music in this neighborhood at this time.

The young men of this neighborhood organized a base ball team last Saturday evening.

The Hoyes Social Club attended the picnic at Accident the 4th. We are sure all enjoyed themselves as there were twenty-two in a four-horse hay wagon.

John R. Ritchie, vs. Mary Ritchie.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff from the defendant a vinculo matrimonii.

The Bill states on the 14th day of December 1884, the plaintiff was married to the defendant, and lived with her until 1890, when without just cause or reason she abandoned and deserted him, and such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years and is deliberate and final; that five children were born to them as a result of said union, and that the defendant is a non-resident of the State.

It is thereupon, this 20th day of June, 1904, ordered the Circuit Court of Garrett County, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 22nd day of July, 1904, give notice to said defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning her to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of August next to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

William A. Harvey and William H. Ridder, copartners trading and doing business under the firm name and style of Harvey and Ridder, and The Wilson Lumber Company, a corporation, Plaintiffs, vs. Datesman Coal Company, and John Wills, assignee of Joseph W. Gross, assignee of Mary E. Clauson, Mortgagee, Defendents.

No. 1280 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of a certain real estate in Garrett county, Maryland, against which the plaintiffs have filed mechanic lien claims.

The bill states that within the last six months the plaintiffs contracted with the defendant, Datesman Coal Company, to furnish certain materials to be used in building six dwelling houses and the said Harvey and Ridder contracted to erect and build said houses for said defendant at Steyer, Garrett county Maryland, and that said materials were to be paid for when and as each of said houses was completed; that said materials have been furnished and said work done and said houses completed on the 13th day of June, 1904; that said claims for materials furnished and work done are over due, and that the said defendant, Datesman Coal Company, although often requested has failed to pay the same; that plaintiffs have filed in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County their respective claims as liens against said buildings, the ground upon which they are erected, and so much other ground immediately adjacent thereto and beloning to said Datesman Coal Company, as is necessary for the ordinary and useful purposes thereof, which claims contained an accurate description of said property, the kind and amount of materials furnished and work done by the plaintiffs for or about the construction of said buildings and the time when and the prices for which the same were agreed to be furnished and done, and the amount claimed to be due on each of said houses, it appearing that there is due to Harvey and Ridder the sum of $1089.13 and to the Wilson Lumber Company the sum of $428.37.

That John Wills is made a defendant to this proceeding on account of being the assignee of a certain mortgage made by Datesman Coal Company to Mary E. Clauson, on the 7th day of October, 1903, and in order that all parties interested in said property may be before the Court and be bound by its decree in the premises and that the said defendents are non residents of the State of Maryland.

The bill then prays for a decree for the sale of said property, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose, and out of the proceeds to pay the said mortgage and then the claims of the plaintiffs and for general relief.

It is thereupon, this 21st day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county in Equity, that the plaintiffs by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 22nd day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them and each of them, to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th of August next to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1279 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Franklin P. Stremmel, vs. Mildred E. Stremmel.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce of Franklin P. Stremmel from his wife, Mildred E. Stremmel, a vinculo matrimonii.

The bill states that on the 21st day of December, 1898, the plaintiff and defendant were married and lived together in Garrett county until December, 1903. That the said Mildred E. Stremmel on divers days and times since said marriage has committed the crime of adultery with certain men and that the plaintiff has not lived or cohabited with said defendant since he has become convinced of her adulterous acts.

The bill further alleges that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, and for an order of publication.

It is thereupon this 21st day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, in each of four successive weeks before the 22d day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of August next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

BALLOON EXPLODED.

And Attempt to Inflate It Proved Disastrous.

The balloon which was brought here during the week of July 4th to make the ascent from the picnic grounds on that day and which could not be inflated on account of several unfortunate circumstances, exploded in the Oakland Hotel grounds last Saturday evening while being inflated and then caught fire and was entirely consumed.

The balloon had been advertised by Mr. S. F. Herr, the Schley Hotel proprietor, to make the ascent Saturday evening at 6.30 o'clock and in anticipation of the event quite a large crowd of men, women and children had gathered along Railroad street and in the hotel grove to witness it, and when it exploded with aloud report many were disappointed.

The balloon was being inflated with hot air generated by the combustion of kerosene oil in a pit or tunnel through which it was conveyed underground to a funnel with a damper into the bag. The damper was being manipulated by Bob Cropp, who was inside the balloon, and it is thought the heat from the burning fluid created gas. When more oil was added the flames entering through the funnel set the gas off and the explosion followed, blowing the top of the balloon entirely off and the sides falling inward were soon consumed.

Young Cropp had to fight his way through the fire to the open air and before being entirely clear of the flames his right hand was very badly burned and his hair singed nearly off.

BAD NEWS FOR FARMERS.

A Caterpiller Pest Over in Somerset County, Pa., Near Grantsville.

A strange worm, resembling somewhat a small caterpiller, some green and other striped, in millions, have within the past two weeks infested every orchard in Saltlick and Bullskin townships in that section along the Chestnut ridge, and every leaf of the fruit trees have been completely eaten off. Many acres of choice fruit have already been ruined by the very strange insect that came so unexpectedly that the farmers were unable to guard against the terrible destruction they are waging not only in the orchards in the neighborhood but in the forests as well, where the leaves of the young timber are being stripped until the saplings look like tall and slender skeletons.

No one in that locality is able to tell anything about the origin of the insect, or from where they came, although for the past two seasons a few of them have been discovered in different orchards on the ridge. The worms commence on the trees from the south side usually and within a few hours little is left of the tree excepting the bare limbs and the smaller of these are eaten off at the ends. As the insects eat their way over a tree they build webs similar to a spider's web and when the tree is shaken they hang to the little silken cords and thus avoid being knocked off the trees. With the exception of pear and popular trees, every tree is cleared of its foliage. Farmers haye done every thing imaginable to check the worms in their ravages upon the fruits trees, but the discovery of their presence was too late to save any amount of the fruit. Paris green sprinkled over the leaves of the trees has been the means of saving some of them.

In many cases not only the foliage of the trees has been cleared, but the trees have been killed. B. J. Nicholson, of Saltlick township lost five acres of fruit and some young trees have died since the worms made their appearance only a few days a go. A. S. Keifer, Robert White, Dennis Raymond, John Kingston, John Richter, and John Caldwell, living in Bullskin township have suffered severe losses to their orchards. The worms seem to be traveling in a path a few miles wide and extending the oyer top of Chestnut ridge. Several miles have been traveled over already and it is feared that all the fruit will be lost before the insects leave.—Meyersdale Commercial.

RAILROAD CONSTUCTION BEGUN

Preston Lumber and Coal Company Building a Line Twelve Miles Long.

Active work has been under way for a week or more on the new railroad being constructed by the Preston Lumber and Coal Company to tap its timber holdings on the west slope of the Great Backbone Mountain in Preston and Tucker counties, West Virginia, and Garrett county.

The route for the new road as surveyed by the company's engineers begins at Crellin, the base of the operations of the lumber company where a modern mill in every respect with a daily output of seventy-five thousand feet of lumber was but recently completed, and following Great Youghiogheny River southward to its fountain it will tap the timber holdings of the corporation twelve miles distant from Crellin.

About fifty laborers are now engaged in the construction work and the latter part of this week a hundred more men will be put to work.

The road is being put upon practically a level grade and the will be of standard width. Eventually it may be built to Parsons where connection will be made with the West Virginia Central Railroad.

Over the new road logs felled in the woods will be hauled to the mill on trucks of special design where they will be converted into marketable lumber and shipped in cars from Crellin to Hutton where the road already has a junction with the B. & O.

MAIDS OF GARRETT COUNTY.

Maids we are of Garrett County,
Girls to laugh with, and to love,
Fair recipients of bounty,
From gay Cupid's darts above.
We are merry maids,
Listen while we sing:
All our marshy glades
With our laughter ring.

Curious metallic luster
To our beauty we impart;
To our aid we wisely muster
Ancient lore and modern art.
Merry maids we are,
Listen while we sing;
Wooded hills afar
Shall with laughter ring.

When we go into old Preston,
We, the lovelorn swains appal
By the flippant way we jest on Subjects reverenced by them all.
We are merry girls,
And your hearts we bind,
Bound by Clifford's curls—
Fetters not unkind.

Garrett county girls, romantic,
Praised and petted by you all,
Even though one is pedantic
You remain at beck and call.
Raven fetters, wind
Round your willing heart;
Curls so tightly bind,
Never can we part.

The sleepy old town of Kingwood on-the-pike has come to life. They have a real live black snake inside its corporation limits. This snake stays at one of the hotels and seems to be educated. When the proprietor wants his snakeship to show off he plays upon a harp and his snakeship will come forth with a live rat in his mouth. As many as a dozen times a day the snake appears with a live rat in his mouth. Whether it is the same rat, a dozen rats, or Kingwood firewater has never been ascertained. It has been reported that several drummers have hurriedly left Kingwood in the past few days. When Kingwood becomes so far advanced as to have a live educated snake within the corporate limits it is time for the average outsider to take to tall timber.

Will Combs, Son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Combs, the Unfortunate.

Will Combs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Combs, of Mountain Lake Park, who entered the Marine Corps several years ago and after service for a number of months in Porto Rico, was discharged as an invalid and sent to the United States Hospital for the Insane at Washington for treatment where he remained until taken in charge by his parents and brought to his home at the Park, was adjudged insane last Friday afternoon by a jury summoned by Sheriff Frantz to examine into his mental condition.

The young man is about twenty-five years of age and up to the time of entering the Government service was apparently sound in every respect.

Following the recommendation of the jury the court appointed his mother as his committee to look after his interests and who will make an effort to secure from the Pension Department a total disability pension.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

THE instructive pamphlet upon the state aid road law to be issued about July 18th, by the Maryland Geological Survey to meet the requests for information which comes from various sections of the state, will show clearly to the County Commissioners and individuals interested, how to proceed under the law to early obtain the advatages of the act.

As stated in a previous publication, $200,000 of state funds will be available under this act to assist the counties to build good roads by paying one half the cost, each county receiving such proportion of this money as the public road mileage of the county bears to the total road mileage.

A feature of the law which has been much misunderstood and which will be explained with unusual pains in the pamphlet is the section regarding the payment of 10 per cent of cost by the property-holders. Many of the latter have been frightened by thinking that the two-thirds of the property-holders of any section of road can compel the remaining one-third property-holders to help pay the 10 per cent. levy, but such is not the case. In no instance does anyone who does not wish the road, have to pay any part of the cost.

The County Commissioners of a county petition the State Commission for aid to build a certain piece of road. If it is found upon examination by the Commission that the road in question is one of general public convenience and a proper one to construct, an estimate of the cost of the improvement is made, together with plans, specifications, etc. for doing the work. This is undertaken by the County Commissioners either by contract, or, if the prices for doing it in this manner are considered too high, then in other ways that they may deem best.

In the event that the County Commissioners fail to petition for state aid under this law it is provided that the owners of two thirds of the lands binding upon any public road or section of road, not less than a mile long, can compel the County Commissioners to petition for the construction of the piece of road provided that the owners petitioning have paid or pledged 10 per cent. of the work.

Those who have paid or have pledged to pay 10 per cent. of the cost cannot, however, compel any other property-holders along the road to bear any of the cost. The work then proceeds as already described except that the County Commissioners cannot be oompelled by this payment of 10 per cent. by property-holders to contract for work to an amount greater than one-fourth of the road levy of the county.

Any expense due to the payment for land that may be necessary to secure a proper location for the road or any damages that may arise through the construction of the road will not be paid by the state.

After the work is done according to the specifications and the State Commission has so certified to the Comptroller, then one half of the cost of constructing the road will be paid by the state to the county buidling the road; but in no case is the amount paid by the state to exceed one half of the cost as shown by the estimate of the cost of the work as at first made by the Commission.

Japan Will Fight Alone to The End

By BARON KANEKO, Ex-Cabinet Minister of Japan

JAPAN neither needs nor seeks the aid of China in the present conflict. SHE WILL FIGHT ALONE TO THE END and will never give up the struggle as long as she has either men or money left. We heartily indorse the course of the United States in taking steps to insure the neutrality of China.

When I left Tokyo the display of enthusiasm was remarkable. Even the boys and girls were wild with patriotism. The war was inevitable, and now that it has come there will be no yielding on the part of Japan. The war might have been delayed a year or two, but IT HAD TO COME.

KOREA'S PLACE IN THE STRUGGLE IS NOT TO BE OVERLOOKED. LET RUSSIA SEIZE HER, AND, TRUE TO HER GEOGRAPHICAL FORMATION, SHE WOULD PROVE A DAGGER PRESENTED AT THE HEART OF JAPAN.

Since my arrival in America I have been surprised to find that there is a class of people that regards the conflict as a religious war—as a struggle between paganism and Christianity. That might have been possible a few hundred years ago, but it is not today. Japan is fighting FOR HER EXISTENCE.

Personally I believe that the czar is opposed to the war, but he is in the hands of advisers who wish to plunge the nation into war. I visited Russia about a dozen years ago, and I found the Russians charming as INDIVIDUALS, but very different as a nation. Russia makes promises only to break them.

To whatever region Russia has extended her power she has brought the policy of the closed door. With Japan the reverse is true, and the present war from a commercial standpoint is a conflict between the "open door" and the "closed door."

I have found that there is considerable misconception in this country in regard to the purpose of the Japanese loan just floated in New York. These millions WILL NOT SERVE AS A WAR FUND, but will be left here to serve in maintaining the trade balance between Japan and America.

It was at the centennial exhibition of 1876 that Japan made her first display for American eyes, and it was from this beginning that the immense trade between our nations sprang.

TODAY JAPAN IS DEPENDENT UPON AMERICA FOR ALL HER COTTON. SHE GETS HER LOCOMOTIVES AND WARSHIPS FROM PHILADELPHIA, AND THE CROWN PRINCE IS HAVING A PALACE BUILT TODAY WITH STEEL BEAMS BROUGHT ALL THE WAY FROM PITTSBURG.

Social Ostracism as A Cure For Grafting

By WILLIAM KENT, Chicago Capitalist and Reformer

CHILDREN are not aristocrats because their fathers squirted water either into a bed of mortar or into the capital stock of a railroad, but BECAUSE THEY ARE BROAD AND TRUE. The quack doctor or the "smart" business man cannot be a good citizen.

In our great cities THE LINE OF LEAST RESISTANCE is followed in pilfering and looting. There are the corrupt capitalists of some gas, water or electric light concerns who want to work the public for exorbitant prices. Another set of parasites are the machine politicians, and then there are the officeholders. In practically every city public safety and comfort are sacrificed to political carelessness OR TO SOMETHING WORSE.

In Chicago, when I went into politics, the council was so corrupt that most of the members would steal a door mat or a milk can off the steps. The case looked hopeless, but it didn't prove to be, and we stopped boodling. The best advice given for bettering conditions in this respect was by President Hadley, when he advised SOCIAL OSTRACISM. I have tried it and seen its benefits.

ALL CITIZENS MUST BE HONEST, WISE CRITICS, AND NOT MERE FAULT FINDERS. IT IS THE PESTILENTIAL FAULT FINDING THAT MAKES THE HONEST CITY OFFICIALS SICK AT HEART.

Ministers Should Be Better Educated -:-

By Rev. Dr. CHARLES A. BRIGGS of New York

THE ministry is no longer what it ought to be—where the best educated man in the community is the minister. The public estimate of the ministry and the church declines WHEN THE CONGREGATION IS BETTER EDUCATED THAN THE MINISTER. We must have a much higher education than is given in the theological seminaries. These men will be useful in church work, but the choicest men must give three or four years to the HIGHER STUDY of religion, just as is done in the professions. Theology must have GRADUATE schools, or there will be a decline in religion itself.

French and American Newspapers Contrasted

By Professor ANDRE CRIDON, College of the City of New York

FRENCH newspapers don't spread over their first pages a lot of DISJOINTED articles about murder and arson and divorce and elopements. They treat such items briefly and place them on their inside pages. The French papers treat political questions and large financial questions very fully. They devote much more space and more thoughtful writing to the drama and the theaters than do New York dailies. They are more like American MAGAZINES than like the American newspapers.

A House Cleaning Carol.

WHEN the soap is on the stairway and the carpet's on the line,
Then I do not mope and long for any "Home, Sweet Home," in mine.
For I know the books are corded in the cellar by the coal,
And the pictures are reposing by the punch and salad bowl,
And the mops and rags and dusters in confusion intertwine
When the soap is on the stairway and the carpet's on the line.

The piano's in the kitchen and the feather beds are hung
On the fence above the flowers where the bric-a-brac is flung;
There's a heap on the veranda—crockery and jardinieres—
And a sound of mighty whacking in the back yard strikes my ears,
So I slope away discreetly, for some other spot I pine
When the soap is on the stairway and the carpet's on the line.

They would feed me on cold victuals; I would sleep upon a cot;
They might even say, "Get busy"—make me help them, like as not.
So I hover at a distance till I see them gather in
All the furniture and bedding, and complacently I grin
That a fellow's mighty lucky if he knows the mystic sign
When the soap is on the stairway and the carpet's on the line.

Woman's Crowning Glory.

It was just before the curtain rose. The great house was crowded. A small, nervous looking man, with a propitiatory smile on his face, leaned forward from his seat in the center aisle and whispered something to a tall woman who sat in front of him. There was a momentary silence like the lull before the storm. Then something happened. A human cyclone was let loose. People shrieked. Everything was in confusion. Ten minutes later the ushers carried out the nervous looking man, now hopelessly disfigured, and laid him tenderly in the waiting ambulance. Then it was the manager, with a look of intense sympathy, leaned over the prostrate form, his curiosity no longer able to restrain itself. "Would you mind," he asked, "telling me what you said to that woman?"

Even in his great pain the man shuddered as he feebly replied:

Oakland Model Steam Bakery

The Place to Buy the Best Bread Cakes and Pies.

Our aim is to make Bread "As Good as Mother made it," and we have been successful and have stopped all the drudgery of home baking with the use of Modern Machinery. Have you ever experienced as the following reads:

Your wife has gone out in the country;
You're left alone; what a pity,
With nothing to do but to ponder
And read out aloud to the kitty.

You run out of bread in the morning;
But knowing 'tis easy to make it,
You swiftly adjourn to the kitchen
And silently start in to bake it.

Take two coffee cups full of flour,
And water sufficient to "dough" it;
A thimble of salt for the "season,"
Then roll it, and poke it, and blow it.

And blow it, and poke it, and roll it,
And pinch it, and push it, and flop it,
And punch it, and pound it, and pull it,
And monkey around till you drop it.

Then clean it off nice with a towel,
And sock in a yeast cake to "raise" it;
Now drop in some soda to "short" it,
And smear on some butter to "glaze" it.

Then place it 'way back in the oven,
(That is if you've moulded and "set" it);
Close up all the doors of the kitchen,
Go in and sit down and forget it.

Go set yourself down in the parlor,
And read from "The Science of Baking;"
Read on till you smell something burning,
Then think of the bread you are making.

Now hop, skip and jump to the kitchen,
And as you hop nigher and nigher,
You know by the smoke in the hallway
The blooming old bread is on fire.

Then hustle it out in the alley,
Juggle it, fumble it, shie it;
Then gently dig up a nickel
And go to the baker's and buy it.

Suzette

By Frank H. Sweet

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

"It is like heaven, this Paris," monsieur said, his eyes shining. "The days are dreams and the nights are fairyland. It is dancing and feasting, lovemaking and flowers and music. Living on the boulevards and walking in the parks, beautiful women and gallant men, rich dresses and glittering jewels and languishing eyes. Ma belle Suzette, you do not know, you cannot understand, until I take you to see."

"It must be fine—fine," murmured pretty Suzette, clasping and unclasping her brown, industrious fingers.

"Very fine," assented monsieur, smiling down into her dreamy eyes. "You have told me some of your visions of beautiful things, but they all fall below Paris, far below. And why not? For you have not seen. No one can dream Paris. But you shall see, ma belle, very soon. My chateau is in the suburbs, and the whole city at night glitters before the windows. We will fly along the boulevards in our automobile or glide down the Seine in our cushioned boat."

"But when does the work come?" questioned Suzette curiously. "Do not people have to work there?"

"The people we hire do, but not us. We put our hands into our pockets and take out silver and give it to them, and they do everything."

Suzette shook her head skeptically.

"That is extravagant, monsieur," she rebuked. "It is cheaper to work than to hire. I know that. We never hire unless we have more work than we can do ourselves."

Her chin dropped upon her hand, and she gazed out among the great Canadian pines, her thoughts in her eyes.

"Beautiful, beautiful!" she murmured. "Oh, I should like to see your chateau, monsieur, and Paris glittering at night and the boulevards and automobile and all. I do not understand how you could leave so much."

Monsieur hesitated a little, then swung his hand in a wide imaginary circle.

"It was my people," he said. "They thought it best for me to—to go away a little while. They wanted me to see the world, you know. But now I shall return very soon. They write that it is all right for me to do so. And I will take you with me, ma belle, to my chateau and beautiful Paris. They do not have rough walking like this," kicking at a piece of broken limb contemptuously. "It is all like a smooth floor, no insects, no crackling leaves, no dirt. What is that?"

HE LIFTED HER IN HIS ARMS AND CARRIED HER TO FIRM GROUND.

It was the odd, whinnying call of a loon. Suzette heard it and smiled. Jean was down there by the river waiting for her. He had adopted that call when they were children together nearly ten years before, because Jean had said he was always a loon when in her presence.

For a moment a troubled look came to her face. She did not like to disappoint Jean, or to keep him waiting; he was such a good fellow. Then the trouble left her eyes, and she was again smiling. Jean did not know anything about Paris, and, what was more, he did not care to learn.

So an hour went by before monsieur rose gracefully from the stone upon which they had been sitting, and with many flourishes excused himself and went tripping daintily and disdainfully over the crackling leaves toward his boarding place. Suzette watched him thoughtfully until he was out of sight, then rose and walked down to the river.

Jean was waiting for her, as she knew he would be, lying upon the bank and gazing rather moodily into the water. But at her approach he was instantly upon his feet, smiling again and happy.

"You were talking with monsieur?" he said.

"Yes; he talked about such beautiful things. Oh, Jean, I would like to see that Paris."

"It is not more beautiful than this," said Jean, sweeping his hand along the broad course of the river, with its winding banks. "But never mind Paris and the river just now. I have something else to say. My cabin is finished," looking at her with joyous eyes. "I hung the last door this morning."

"Isn't that nice?" rather listlessly. She was thinking of Paris.

"Yes," eagerly. "And now there is nothing to do but furnish it. I have $42 you know. You must go down and help me select the things. We will want a cooking stove. That will be $12, for I went yesterday to see. Then six chairs will be $7, and a rocking chair for you will be $2 more. I do not know about the dishes and such things. You will have to select them. But there will be money enough."

"Yes, plenty," agreed Suzette absently.

The next day was a holiday, and everybody went into the woods on a basket picnic. Jean sought Suzette at once and kept persistently by her side, soon leading her into a shaded path in the deeper woods. As they moved away monsieur joined them. Jean looked at him challengingly. He was the first man to join Suzette and monsieur the second; if either left it must be monsieur. So the three walked on together.

Deeper and more shadowy the path became, and at length they arrived at a depression which had been a brook not so very long before, but which had now dried to three or four yards wide of soft mud. Monsieur looked at it discontentedly.

"We will have to mire through, I suppose," he grumbled. "That's the trouble with this abominable country—you're always running up against things like this. We must walk as carefully as we can, ma belle. Perhaps you can follow in my footsteps. See, I shall try to walk on my heels." And he stepped carefully into the mud, picking his way so as to get as little as possible upon his shoes.

Suzette was about to follow, but Jean was by her side, and in a perfectly natural, matter of fact way he lifted her in his arms and carried her to the firm ground beyond.

"There you are," he said cheerily, "with not as much as a splatter of mud on your shoes."

"But look at your own!" cried monsieur disgustedly. "You're muddy to the knees."

"Oh, it doesn't matter about me," responded Jean indifferently.

A little farther on they came to a broad, flat rock which looked so inviting that even monsieur made for it with returning good nature.

"This is better," he said. "I have rocks like this on the chateau grounds at home, with roses dropping over them. When you go there, ma belle, we"—

"Yes; I know it is beautiful," interrupted Suzette pensively, "but I shall never see it, monsieur."

"Ma foi, yes," eagerly; "just as soon as I get another letter we will start."

But Suzette shook her head, dropping her lashes to veil something which she was afraid might show in her eyes.

"No, no, monsieur," she persisted. "I shall marry Jean, and it is not so easy for two to travel as one. It costs more. I have been thinking it over, and I know I would never be able to take care of a chateau. You say we would not work; then things would get untidy, and I could not be so extravagant as to hire help for work that I could do myself. Here it is different. I can take care of a cabin, for I know how to sweep and cook. And—and there is another thing, monsieur," evidently forcing herself to say something which she found very difficult—"I like Jean better than any one else."

A Promising Young Diplomat.

There is a certain small boy named Bertie who will make a diplomat some day. He has a sister one year younger than he is. Last Christmas their grandmother gave them an aquarium containing two beautiful little goldfish. One morning Bertie went in to feed the goldfish, and he found only one fish instead of two. Sad to say, the other one had jumped out of the aquarium during the night and had died.

"Sister," Bertie announced at breakfast as soon as they sat down to the table, "your goldfish is dead!"

The little girl was terribly shocked and forgot that most goldfishes are exactly alike and that she and her brother had never made a division. But after the period of mourning was over she asked one day:

"Bertie, how did you know it was my fish and not yours that died?"

Bertie was nonplused for a moment and driven into a corner, so he took refuge in an air of superior contempt.

"How did I know?" he repeated scornfully. "Huh! Isn't that just like a woman!"

And the little sister meekly accepted her brother's decision.—Philadelphia Press.

The Hero.

The English schoolboy, like the American, adores his leader in athletic games just as the grown man prizes his chief in politics and war. Whatever may be a boy's shortcomings in scholarship, says Blackwood's Magazine, his athletic attainments will establish him as a hero.

One day, years ago, when a boy on his vacation from Harrow was walking with his father, a Cambridge youth who had just performed some feat in a university cricket match passed them and gave the lad a nod. The boy grew pink with excitement. He nudged his father.

"Look, father, look!" he exclaimed. "That was Cobden."

"What, my boy? Who was it?"

"Cobden."

"Ah, yes, to be sure, Cobden," said the father. Then, feeling that cordiality demanded his expressing some interest in the stranger, he added, "Now, I wonder whether he is any relation to the great Cobden?"

The boy spoke proudly, "He is the great Cobden!"

Bowser Runs House

He Charges Mrs. B. With Being a Poor Financier and Takes Hold of Managing Things Himself For a Week and Figures Up Profits.

[Copyright, 1904, by C. B. Lewis.]

It came upon Mr. Bowser all of a sudden. Mr. Bowser had come home seemingly pleased with the world at large, but at dinner he happened to observe that there was a good deal of bone in the steak, and as he kept his eye on it he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, have you and the butcher formed a little trust against me?"

"Do you mean the bone in the steak?" she queried.

"I mean nothing else. The infernal robber has made you pay for at least three pounds of bone to one of meat."

"It couldn't be. I only got two pounds in all, and I'm sure we have meat and to spare. There is considerable bone, but it just happens so."

"Yes, it's always just happening! I have paid that butcher a thousand dollars in cash the last year for backbones, thigh bones, shanks and ribs, and I tell you it has got to stop. If I was running this house do you suppose tradesmen would dare take such liberties with me? Not by a long shot! They know their customer. When a woman goes into a butcher's shop looking as humble as a cat and asks if they won't please sell her a tough old steak with a lot of bone in it, she'll get what she wants. I'll take that bone over after dinner and hit the infernal rascal in the head with it!"

"I'm sure I do the best I can," quietly replied Mrs. Bowser.

"Yes, I think you do," he admitted, "but, nevertheless, the fact stands out like a knot on a log that you are not a close buyer. In other words, you are no financier. It isn't your fault, and I'm not blaming you for it, but I often feel that something ought to be done. If I only had a little more time"—

"You'd run the house?"

"I would, and I'd make such a saving as would open your eyes. Where you save cents I would save shillings, and we'd get more and better for our money to boot. When I look over your house bills of a Saturday night I'm amazed at the way you have been stuck. I don't always speak of it, because what's the use? But you are not to be trusted with money, and that's a fact."

"If you are so smart, why don't you take hold and run things for a week and give me an object lesson?" she asked as the cat came in from the kitchen and nodded to her to "sass back."

"Mrs. Bowser, I do not claim to be 'smart,' as you call it, and there is no occasion for this conversation to drift into acrimony. I am only what I am, but that means that I can do more financiering in half an hour than you can in a year. No woman has a head for finance. When you read that Hetty Green or any other woman is worth $200,000,000 you just set it down that she has a man with a business head back of her. You ask why I don't take hold and run things and give you an object lesson. I will do so. I will take hold tomorrow morning and run this house for a week, and if I don't beat your figures all to squash then my name is not Bowser."

Mrs. Bowser held her peace as to further discussion, but the cat sat up and gurgled in his throat and said to himself:

"Some one is going to have a surprise party a week from tonight, and I'll bet dollars to cents that it won't be Mrs. Bowser!"

Monday morning Mr. Bowser took hold. He got up half an hour earlier to do it. In twenty minutes he had left his orders at the butcher's and grocer's and returned smiling, but he did not tell Mrs. Bowser that he had had a row with both of them and been called a crank by each.

During the week he changed butchers four times, changed grocers three and ordered butter and milk from three different creameries. As for the baker, he had to change every day. He had a way of calling them robbers and cheats and scoundrels, and of threatening them with dire pains and penalties, and in reply they told him to take his custom elsewhere and be hanged to him.

It had become necessary during the week to buy half a ton of coal for the kitchen. He had meant to make a saving of 50 cents on that, but by the time he had called the coal man a flint hearted vampire and hinted that he had never given over 1,800 pounds for a ton he was told to buy elsewhere. He spent nearly half a day and visited five different yards before he left his order. All this was on the outside, and he didn't think it necessary to say anything to Mrs. Bowser about it. What he did say when the week was up was:

"Now, then, we'll see how we have come out. I don't want to hurt your feelings, but if there is a balance in my favor over you I shall have to speak about it. Haven't we lived just as well during the past week as any during the year?"

"Yes, I think so," she admitted.

"We will take the meat first. During your last week we paid for at least three pounds of solid bone. Last week, under my espionage, we didn't pay for three ounces."

"But you are mistaken, Mr. Bowser. I have saved and weighed all the bone, and there is a little over four pounds."

"It can't be."

"Come down to the kitchen and see."

"Woman, don't fool with me! If you have gone out in the back yard and picked up four pounds of bones to weigh off against me it will be the worst move you ever made in your life!"

"The bones are fresh, and the cook will tell you that she cut them out of your meat day by day."

"We will see to that presently," he said as he looked troubled, and the cat grinned with delight, "and meanwhile we will go over the prices of vegetables. Here is my list for you to look at. I figure that I have made a saving of 90 cents over you in the week. Ninety cents won't buy a house and lot, but it is 90 cents saved."

"Let me tell you something," replied Mrs. Bowser after looking over the list. "You have paid 15 cents more than I did on your potatoes, 10 cents more on cabbage, 12 more on rhubarb, 8 cents more on tomatoes and 5 cents more on canned corn and peas. The total is 55 cents."

"Woman, you have become cross eyed!" he shouted.

"Don't worry about my eyes, Mr. Bowser. Here's 3 cents too much on maple sugar, 4 cents too much on pickles, 5 cents too much on honey and 6 cents too much on a can of cherries. That's 18 cents more. Wait a minute. Your meat bill totals up $4.20, while mine is 40 cents less. Your groceries total $6.40, while mine were only $5.70. The butter and milk are $2.25, which is 35 cents in excess of mine, and while I got coal at $6.25 a ton you seem to have paid $7. Mr. Bowser"—

"Don't Mr. Bowser me!" he interrupted as he walked up and down and gestured. "In my week of running the house I saved $2.80 over you, and there are the figures to prove it."

"But how can they?"

"Because they do."

"But they prove that you spent about that much more than I did, and the butcher also got three times as much bone off on you. I'm taking your own figures for it. You said you could"—

"Yes, I said I could run the house cheaper than you could, and by the living jingo I have done it! I knew it would be this way—you'd knock me out if it was a possible thing, and you are trying your best."

"But here are your figures."

"Figures be hanged! You have got possession of this book at night while I slept and altered the figures!"

"Why, Mr. Bowser!"

"You didn't want to give in that I was a better financier than you, and you"—

At that moment the front door bell rang, and Mr. Bowser answered it to find a tramp at the door. It would have been in his play under the circumstances to throw "Willie" down the steps and over the fence, but in his financial confusion he gave the man a dollar bill instead of a nickel and shut the door. Two minutes later, when the tramp was out of sight, it flashed over him that he had made a mistake, and he stood in the hall and waved his arms and jumped up and down and tried to get off swear words. Not one would come, however, and after hammering the wall with his fists he made a sneak upstairs and left Mrs. Bowser and the cat to smile at each other.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR CONGRESS:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

of Allegany County.

EVERY busybody who wants the wheels of progress blocked is convinced that President Roosevelt is dangerous.

NO organization in the history of the world has been so successful as the Democratic party in telling us the things that were not so.

THE Republican vocabulary is composed largely of words of encouragement; the Democratic is limited to words of woe and warning.

SUMMED up the Democratic platform reads "We know that we were wrong before and are not cocksure that we are right this time."

LIKE a man lost in the snow, the Democratic party spends most of its time traveling over its own abandoned trails, and praying for a way out.

THE Republican party fights things and conditions that threaten to tattoo the nation with indelible marks of calamity. The Democratic party welcomes them.

THE New York State banks have added $45,000,000 to their deposits in the last year. The people's savings are always represented by red ink figures under a Democratic administration.

DUN and Bradstreet report that the business interests of the country are recovering from the recent temporary depression and that the outlook is most promising for an exceptionally prosperous year. That will be good news to everybody but the Democrats.

THE Republican party seeks the vote of the farmer because it has furnished him better markets and better prices for his products than ever before. The Democratic party never expects the farmer's vote except when he has been ravaged by drought and the chinch bug.

HOW ST. LOUIS ANSWERED CHICAGO.

In the Republican National platform adopted at Chicago last month, appeared the money question:

"We believe it to be the duty of the Republican party to uphold the gold standard and the integrity and value of our national currency. The maintenance of the gold standard, established by the Republican party cannot safely be committed to the Democratic party, which resisted its adoption, and has never given any proof since that time of beleif in it or fidelity to it."

Here is an explicit charge against the Democratic party—the charge that the maintenance of the gold standard "cannot safely be committed to the Democratic party, which resisted its adoption, and has never given any proof since that time of belief in it or fidelity to it."

Now, with this declaration staring it in the face, there are two courses open to the Democratic party; and assuming it to be a party possessed of ordinary sense and ability, only two. It might have shown, in its platform of 1904, either that it continued to be opposed to the gold standard, as it was in 1896 and in 1900—in which case, along with the odium that went with such opposition, it would have got the credit of courage and outspokeness. Or it might have acknowledged the gold standard as an accomplished fact, and thus got rid of that odium. What it actually did was neither of these things. With the gold-standard men unquestionably in an overwhelming majority in the convention, the subject was naturally dealt with, in the first instance, by the adoption, by the sub-committee on platform, of this very carefully worded, but explicit plank:

"The discoveries of gold within the past few years and the great increase in the production thereof, adding $2,000,000,000 to the world's supply of which $700,000,000 falls to the share of the United States, have contributed to the maintenance of a money standard of value no longer open to question, removing that issue from the field of political contention."

Evidently this declaration was the irreducible minimum of what could be said by the party if it wished to claim that the gold standard was safe under its rule. Nothing in it to admit that the advocates of silver were wrong in the past; everything in it to indicate that it is owing solely to changed conditions is abandoned; a bare, bald acknowledgment of the gold standard as an established fact. Yet this plank was rejected and nothing whatever put in its place!

What will be the consequences? Throughout the campaign the Republicans will thrust their Chicago charge in the face of the Democrats, and will point to the pitiful failure to answer it at St. Louis. Failure to answer? Worse than that—the charge was confirmed. The Republicans had only alleged that the Democratic party had "never given any proof" that it accept in good faith, or can be trusted to maintain the gold standard, they can now say that it has conspicuously given proof of the opposite. And we shall be treated to the melancholy but familiar spectacle of Democratic orators and newspapers trying to make people believe that it makes no difference whether a party is or is not weak to the point of imbecility in dealing with a little matter like monetary soundness and sanity. But they can talk till they are black in the face before they will make any impression on hundreds of thousands of Demecrats and independents who have been disgusted by the performance of Saturday.—Baltimore News.

SIXTEEN STORY BUILDING.

Maryland's veteran newspaper the Baltimore American, now in its one hundred and thirty-first year, its first number having been issued Aug. 20, 1773, is about to erect a sixteen story building for its uses to replace the one destroyed by fire Feb. 7 last. It is to be erected at the southwest corner of Baltimore and South streets. The site cost $250,000, and the cost of the building is expected to be $500,000 and that of the new plant $250,000. It was in the American, as it claims proudly, that "The Star Spangled Banner" was first published.

JUDGE PARKER AND HIS PARTY.

The Philadelphia Press says: After a long and turbulent session the Democratic convention finally adjourned early Sunday morning with an angry acquiescence in Judge Parker's explosive proclamation of his own platform on the gold standard, and with the nomination of ex-Senator Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia, as the candidate for Vice President.

Judge Parker's unexpected telegram was a thunder-clap. It threw the convention first into passionate uproar and indignation and then into sullen and resentful helplessness. The immediate impulse was to throw overboard the presumptuous candidate who condemned and spit upon the convention and platform, and plunged into a wild struggle for a new standard-bearer. But it did not take long for even the embittered leaders who felt that they had been deceived, misled and put in a grotesque position to see that this would only aggravate their troubles, and that, galling as it was, they had better swallow their humiliation and find some way out of the dilemma. The result was an answer to Judge Parker which was equivalent to saying: "We have made fools of ourselves on the money question; we are hopelessly divided; we can't say anything, and you can do as you please."

It is plain from all reports and from every act that the convention was the most disorderly the most inept, the most vacillating and inconsequent of any within public memory. It was incapable in its speeches, riotous in its conduct, and double-faced in its action. Many able men participated in its counsels, but the deep seated taint of a reckless, irresponsible organization seemed to infect its whole being. The majority were half-hearted and uncertain in their beliefs and the minority were aggressive and defiant. They reached nominal harmony through violent discord only by finally agreeing on suppression and silence. The whole proceeding from beginning to end was typical of an ineffective party which is unfit for government and disqualified even for serious and competent opposition.

Alter commenting on Judge Parker's bold act in sending the telegram the Press says further:

It still leaves all the broad, commanding reasons for defeating him and re-electing President Roosevelt, and it impresses the duty of enforcing them. The country will not trust the party of Judge Parker which has shown its unregenerate qualified at St. Louis, and it will not forget that, though he himself accepts the gold standard, he represents and embodies the Democratic narrowness and misdirection of administration and the Democratic reactionary policies of government. He is against protection, against large Americanism, against the American spirit and achievements of the last eight years. His objection to the St. Louis platform on one point implies his acceptance of all others. We welcome his declaration on the one point and what it shows, but on the broad field of public issues he is a Democrat of Democrats, and the country in its march of progress does not want the paralyzing arm of any disbelieving Democrat.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINEES.

At the St. Louis convention held last week and which adjourned Sunday morning at 2.30 o'clock Judge Alton B. Parker of New York, was named for President, and Henry Gassaway Davis, of West Virginia, was the nominee for Vice President.

State Aid to Road Building.

The timely and instructive pamphlet compiled by the Highway Division of the Maryland Geological Survey is a comprehensive explanation of the principal features of state aid to roadbuilding, and which has in part been described in previous issues of this paper was ready for distribution last Tuesday and is now being sent to Boards of County Commissioners and residents in all sections of the state. An edition of 5000 copies has been printed of which 2,500 will be sent at once to organizations and individuals known to be interested and the remainder will be distributed to persons who made application to the Maryland Geological Survey at the Johns Hopkins University for the book.

Two principal features of the pamphlet have already been discribed in these columns,—namely, the table compiled by the Marvland Geological Survey showing the amount of state funds available for each county, and the method of proceedure to be followed by the people in the counties in order to obtain this money. There remains to be explained in this article the part which the Marvland Geological Survey will take in co-operating with the people of the counties to assist the work as largely as possible.

As the State Road Law does not become operative until January 1, 1905, there is an opportunity in the meantime for the varions Boards of County Commissioners to take up the preliminary work in connection with the selection of the road to be first built. There will also be required plans of the road in order to make the proper estimates of the cost. All of these preliminary arrangements takes much time and if they are delayed until the first of the year much valuable time will be lost and but little promptness will be made the first season.

It is with a view to saving much of this time that the Highway Division of the Maryland Geological Survey proposes to make the various Boards of County Commissioners such surveys and plans as may be necessary to draw up a correct estimate of the cost of construction, and so have everything in readiness to begin at the first available moment the actual construction of roads under the State Aid Law.

Any county applying in season to have its surveys made during the present year will gain the advantage of having the full cost of the survey paid by the State in the end, while one-half of the cost of the surveys made after January 1, 1905, must be borne permanently by the county as stated in sections 5 and 10 of the act.

An important feature of the pamphlet is a detachable page bearing a form of request to the Highway Division of the Maryland Geological Survey to make the required surveys for plans and estimates of the cost of any piece of road. This form is expected to be filled in by the Boards of County Commissioners who thereby signified their intention to petition for state aid under the provisions of the new law as soon as it becomes operative.

The pamphlet is published in an attractive form, similar to the reports of the Maryland Geological Survey, and will be sent by request to all persons interested.

POPULIST PLATFORM AND ITS NOMINATIONS.

Public attention has been so absorbed in speculation concerning the outcome of the Democratic national convention at St. Louis, last week, that another national Convention, also held last week, has been almost entirely overlooked. This was the convention of the Populist party, which met at Springfield, Ill., adopted a platform and nominated candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States.

The platform reaffirms adherence to the "basic truths of the Omaha platform of 1892 and of the subsequent platforms of 1896 and 1900." It may be remembered that the platform of 1892 favored a system of government warehouse for the storage of farm products, upon which advances or loans should be made from the national treasury, and other equally centralizing ideas, such as government ownership of railroads and telegraphs, abolition of child labor by national legislation &c. The adoption of these theories did not prevent a union of the Populists and Democrats in 1896 and 1900, on the issue of free silver, but their combined strength was not equal to that of the Republicans. The Populists have reiterated, in the Springfield platform, the doctrines referred to; have declared that all money should be issued by the general government; that the referendum should be resorted to on all public questions; that alien ownership of land should be prohibited; that corporations, being the creatures of the government, should be subjected to such governmental regulations and control as will adequately protect the public, &c.

On this platform the convention nominated Hon. Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia, for President, and Thomas H. Tribbles, of Nebraska, for Vice-President. Mr. Watson, the candidate for President, was formerly a Democrat and was a Cleveland elector at large in Georgia, in 1888. In 1890 he was elected to Congress as a Populist, and in 1896 was nominated for Vice-President by the Populist national convention, which endorsed Mr. Bryan, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency. Of Mr. Tribbles, the candidate for Vice-President, we know nothing.

Almost unheralded as these nominations have been they may have an important bearing on the result of the election in November and, it may be added, are not likely to draw support from the ranks of the Republicans.

An Oversight.

In the account of the trades display published in these columns last week which took place on July 4th mention was inadvertantly omitted of the display made by Mr. J. W. Whorton, the plastering contractor, whose float was among the most striking, consisting of a portion of a wall covered with the material used in his work, manufactured by the Fairmont Wall Plaster Company. The wall was built up of studding and lath and at the end of the parade all over town not a crack in the plastering appeared notwithstanding the jolting it received over the streets which speaks well for Mr. Whorton's workmanship and material.

W. M. O. DAWSON FOR GOVERNOR

Nominated By Republicans of West Virginia in Convention at Wheeling.

The Republican state convention at Wheeling opened Tuesday afternoon and W. M. O. Dawson, of Charleston, was nominated for governor, defeating Chas. F. Teter, of Philippi. The convention was the most demonstretive in the history of the state. Senator Stephen B. Elkins was chairman. At one time when he was out on a committee, the convention became so unruly that it was necessary to send for him.

The Dawson people forced through rulings dispensing with the committee on credentials. They then succeeded in nominating their man about nine o'clock by a vote of 467 to 325.

The bitterness of the fight was the result over tax reform. Dawson is a reform man.

Mr. Dawson who has been prominent in West Virginia politics in various positions of trust for a great many years, is a man of sterling qualities. He is a native Garrett countian having been born at Bloomington, where his sister, Mrs. Guthrie, still resides.

CROP BULLETIN.

Condition of Grain and Grasses, Fruit, Ect., For The Past Week.

The following is weekly crop bulletin, Maryland and Delaware section, for the week ending Monday, July 11th:

Wheat harvest is about completed in the southern counties and is well advanced as far north as Baltimore, and in Washington and Frederick counties; elsewhere in the northern half of the Section only the earlier fields have been cut. The work of harvesting has been seriously interrupted and in many districts delayed by frequent rains, but no damage to the grain in stack or in shock has resulted as yet. Some threshing was done during the week in the southernmost counties. Some fields have been injured by the high winds and wet weather in Western Maryland. The fly has been most active in Cecil county, apparently, and there the loss from this cause will be heavy in many fields. Many good fields are reported in the principal wheat counties, and the rains have aided the filling of the late wheat, but have caused the straw to break badly in some localities. The final yield is uncertain, but will be below the average. Corn has grown rapidly in all districts and is in splendid condition generally; though in Garrett county and other localities proper cultivation has been impossible on account of wet soil. The work of grubs and wire worms is still apparent in northern districts, the fields so affected having poor roots are making slow growth. The week was quite favorable for oats, which are filling well and beginning to ripen in the southernmost counties. In St. Mary's county the crop of winter oats was practically a failure, but the spring crop promises to be fair. Barley was good in north-central Marvland. Rye straw is in demand in Anne Arundel county. Haying has been conducted under adverse conditions; much of the cutting has been delayed and the actual loss from wet weather so far has been small. In Allegany county timothy is heavy; cutting will be general in Western Maryland next week if the condition of the weather permits. Pastures have been much benefited by the copious rains and are generally excellent. Millet is coming up well.

A good crop of apples is thought to be assured in Western Maryland. In some districts the crop has been unusually heavy, in others light; a fair amount of fruit remains on a majority of the trees in most parts of the section. Peaches are holding on well at present and a fair crop is anticipated. Cherries and plums are plentiful in Western Maryland and the prospect is good for a large crop of wild berries. Strawberries in that district were damaged by wet weather and are about gone. Raspberries give promise of a full crop in Southern Maryland. Some blackberries and dew berries have been gathered in southern counties and huckleberries are abundant in the southern part of the Eastern Shore.

Tobacco planting was finished under favorable conditions during the week, and the beds are doing fairly well. The early plants made satisfactory growth and good stands of the late settings were secured. Potatoes, tomatoes and truck generally did very well. Tomatoes are ripening and some early potatoes have been dug in Southern Maryland. The large acreage of potatoes in Southern Delaware will make up for the reduction in yield due to the droughty conditions. Late cabbage is being set out. Gardens are reported good to fine.

Tommy Visualizes His Idea of an Old Favorite.

IN a certain school out west means and methods of education are used which to the unenlightened mind appear little less than startling.

For instance, the children sing a song. Then each of them makes a drawing which is supposed to illustrate the song which has just been sung. In this way the power of the pupils to "visualize their conceptions" is fostered.

The other day the music of "The Old Oaken Bucket" was started, and everybody joined in the singing. Then they all sat down to make a picture of what the song meant to them.

Tommy, one of the youngest of the class, turned in a truly original sketch. He had drawn what might have been meant for a circle and within it had outlined what appeared to be three wastebaskets all in a row. Underneath this diagram was a sprinkling of fly specks, or was it a representation of microbes as they appear under a magnifying glass?

The teacher looked at the drawing for a moment and then admitted that she was puzzled.

She put her forefinger on the left hand figure in the row of three inside the circle and said, "Tommy, what is that?"

"Why, teacher, that's the old oaken bucket."

The teacher pointed out the right hand figure of the three.

"And that one, Tommy?" she asked.

"Pshaw! That's the iron bound bucket."

The teacher pointed to the circle which inclosed the three buckets.

"What's that?"

"That's the well they hung in."

"And what are these?" she asked finally, pointing to the ragged group of exaggerated fly specks below the rest of the picture.

"Those," answered Tommy, with never the ghost of a smile in his big blue eyes—"those are 'all the loved spots which my infancy knew.'"—Chicago Tribune.

A Test.

The telephone bell in an uptown residence rang a few evenings ago, and a young woman who was expecting a call rushed to answer it, being sure that one of her admirers had called her up.

"Is this ——?" demanded a voice, repeating the number of the phone in question.

"Yes," replied the girl.

"Well," continued the voice, "we are testing the wire. Will you please draw a long breath and say very plainly, 'I will be good?'"

She obeyed. "I will be good," she said.

"A little slower and a little more distinctly now, please."

"I—will—be—good," said the young woman, trying her best.

"No. That's not right at all, rected the voice. "We must fix wire, I guess. Now make one ext fort and say it again."

The girl caught her breath. "I be good!" she shouted.

"You will, will you?" laughed the voice. "Well, I'm glad to hear you say so. You were decidedly unpleasant the last time I called."

And just then the man at the other end of the wire "rang off."

Now the young woman is trying to discover just which of her admirers played such a detestable joke on her.—Philadelphia Press.

RURAL ROUTE ESTABLISHED.

Serivce Will Be Inaugurated Tomorrow Morning.

Recently an inspector visited this section and went over the proposed route for a rural free delivery beginning at Oakland and running south toward the West Virginia State line, ending at or near Brookside, Preston county. An examination for carriers followed and Tuesday Mr. Chas. J. Newman received from the Department a commission appointing him to the position, accompanied by a bond which he filled and forwarded to Washington.

Tomorrow the initial trip on the route will be made by the carrier, leaving Oakland at eight o'clock and following the main road as far as King's corner and on by the residence of Mr. E. E. Sollars, William White, Hopwood Kildow and others to Frush's mill and thence returning via Offutt's farm or the old Chisholm Mill place to Oakland.

The entire route covers twenty-six miles and one hundred houses with a population of about five hundred people will be served. The compensation amounts to $60 per month.

Orphans' Court Proceedings.

Tuesday the semi-mohthly session of the Orphans' Court, with Judges Wilson, Feik and McMillen, present, and Register Friend in attendance, met and transacted the following business:

Clara Colmer was appointed administrator of the personal estate of her late husband, Peter Colmer.

Lucien Teats was appointed administrator of the personal estate of his son, the late J. M. Teats.

Gilmor S. Hamill was appointed guardian of the minor children of the late William F. Schmidt.

The last will and testament of the late Jacob Boyer, of Accident, was probated and Samuel E. Boyer and John Shartzer confirmed as executors of the same.

Scholarships Awarded

At the recent meeting of the School Board for this county free scholarships were awarded as follows:

To the Western Maryland College, Ernest Ashby, son of M. M. Ashby, of Oakland; St. John's College, Howard Hutson, son of W. E. Hutson, of near Sunnyside; Charlotte Hall, Frank Palmer, son of Senator Palmer, of Hutton. The award to St. Mary's has not been decided.

Dr. E. H. Bartlett will leave for St. Louis next Thursday, in company with Mrs. Dr. Carr, of Cumberland, where they will remain several weeks as guests of relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Delawder and two children arrived here from Washington this morning and will go down to McHenry today where they will visit relatives a few weeks.

Mr. Alex Chambers, who spent a week at his old home in Wheeling, West Va., returned to Oakland Saturday and on Monday resumed his duties as one of Clerk Tower's efficient corps of deputies.

Calvin Anderson, Esq., of near Wilsons was in Oakland yesterday on business. Mr. Anderson is just able to about again after a month's suffering as a result of blood poisoning produced by a cut in his leg.

Mr. John H. Cunpet, of Friendsville after bringing his family from that town and seeing them comfortably settled in their new house at Mountain Lake Park for the summer, returned home Tuesday afternoon.

LOST—At the Gentry Dog and Pony Show on Wednesday afternoon, July 13th, a black silk tucked parasol with crook handle. Finder will receive reward by returning same to Mr. George Fleming, corner 6th and Alder streets, Oakland.

Among the many from a distance who attended the camp meeting at the Park Sunday Mr. and Mrs. William A. Smith and children, of Hoyes, and Mr. J. W. Harvey, of near Gormania, were noted.

The ice cream festival held Saturday evening in Offutt's Hall by the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church, was well patronized. Quite a sum was realized at the festival which will be devoted to church purposes.

The new electric lighting plant at the Oakland Hotel which was recently erected, was put into commission last Friday evening. The machinery works to perfection and furnishes an abundance of light for the buildings and grounds.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Allen Ison and daughter, of Washington, arrived here Monday morning and will remain during this month and part of August at the home of Mr. Ison's mother on Fourth street. The latter, who spent the winter in Washington, arrived here Monday evening.

Tuesday Mr. Ernest Townshend, electrician, installed in this office a very handsome desk telephone to take the place of the wall 'phone which did such excellent service for a number of years. The job was executed most scientifically and without interruption except for about two minutes to the current.

DR. RAVENSCROFT HAS RELAAPSE.

His Condition Is Serious but Hopes are Entertained for His Recovery.

Hon. R. A. Ravenscroft, surveyor of the port of Baltimore, who has been ill with typhoid fever at the Maryland General hospital, Baltimore, and who was recovering, has had a relapse. Although he is in a serious condition there are hopes of his recovery. Dr. Ravenscroft has been at the hospisal sometime, suffering with typhoid fever, and was getting along nicely until the relapse, which occurred several days ago,

LATER—A telegram received this morning announces that Dr. Ravenscroft's condition is most critical. Temperature 104.

Rev. Thomas S. Long, Superintendent of the Mountain Lake Park Association, was called to his old home in Baltimore county last Friday night which announced the serious illness of his aged father, and whose death took place Sunday afternoon about one o'clock.

Miss Kate Leary, of the West Penn Hospital, Pittsburg, who visited her parents in Oakland for two weeks, left this morning for the above city where she went to resume her duties as nurse. She was accompanied by Miss Sadie Cohen, of Connellsville, who was also the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Leary the past week or two.

Mrs. D. H. Loar accompanied by her sons and daughters, Messrs. Harry and Judson, and Misses Lottie and Grace, were called to Grafton Saturday owing to the death of her granddaughter, Lulu, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Loar, whose funeral took place Sunday, which was conducted by Rev. Lynch, assisted by Rev. John M. Davis of Oakland. The return was made to Oakland Sunday night on train No. 4.

The camp meeting at Mountain Lake Park, which was attended since its opening on the evening of July 1st by large crowds, closed Monday night. The attendance at the Sunday services was even larger than in former years when tremendous crowds were present from every section of the county. The interest in the meetings was manifest from the very start and during the continuance was kept up. The sermon Sunday morning was one of power and on Sunday afternoon Rev. Steele, who is the son-in-law of the Rev. George W. Bain, preached a sermon which reached the hearts and left its impress upon the minds of all present. Mrs John Thompson, widow of the founder of the Mountain Lake Campmeeting, wes in attendance Sunday for the first time since the death of Father Thompson and she was greeted from all sides with words of welcome

Serious Accident To The Editor Of The Cumberland Times.

Col. John W. Avirett, editor and proprietor of the Evening Times, Cumberland, while engaged about the printing press of his paper late Tuesday afternoon, was caught in the machinery and badly injured. He went into a narrow space between two fly-wheels of the driving shaft of the electric motor to tighten some machinery, when his coat was fanned into one of the wheels. In an instant his coat was wound around the shaft and his head was wedged against a piece of iron.

C. Mason Hill, of the business office, noticed the accident and went to Colonel Avirett's rescue, while John T. Taylor, business manager of the Times, shut off the power.

Colonel Avirett was unconscious when released from the machinery his clothes were torn from him from his waist up. He was immediately removed to the Western Maryland Hospital, where a surgical examination revealed two large holes in his head—one on top, the other on the side. His breast was also badly cut and his right arm torn. Several stitches were required to close a gash in his chin. He recovered consciousness later, and the doctors pronounce the injuries, although serious not necessarily fatal.

Since the strike of the printers on the newspapers Colonel Avirett has busied himself almost incessantly in getting matters straightened, and the accident is a result of his efforts to get out his paper. He had little sleep for 48 hours previous to the accident. He is widely known as the State Game Warden, having been recently reappointed by Governor Warfield. His wife was at the Times Building all day. She assists actively in getting out the paper having an office of her own in the Times Building. She rode in the ambulance to to the hospital with her husband.

At first it was reported that Colonel Avirett had been killed, and the news of the accident caused much concern and some excitement. Doctors William Wiley and James M. Spear dressed Colonel Avirett's injuries, which will preclude active work for many days. He is naturally of frail constitution and only recently recovered from a prolonged illness.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCHELLE, GA., Jan. 30, 1902.
Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.

Posing for Glory

...By C. B. Lewis...

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

Jocasta and his father and mother before him were true Mexicans. If you had lived in Arizona or New Mexico you might not regard this greatly to their credit, but they thought otherwise. How or why they drifted into the former territory and set up shop has nothing to do with this story. The old man followed the railroad men with dice and cards and fiery liquors; his wife followed him and prepared peppery dishes and sold them over a lunch counter, and Jocasta—well, he brought up the rear to pose and brag and lie and uphold the blood of the family.

Jocasta was twenty-five years old when these things happened. He was a dandy. He could put on more airs with a new red handkerchief than any other young man with a whole suit of clothes. He posed on foot, on horseback and when lying on his blanket under the shade of the sagebrush. If there were no women about he posed for the men; if men were scarce he posed for the family. Jocasta did no work except to draw his breath and gamble and drink. The old folks would have it so, and he was not fool enough to object to a good thing. They wanted him to represent the family as it once was—proud, haughty, arrogant and careless of money. The role suited him to a dot, and he represented.

No matter what Jocasta thought of himself or how proud his parents were of the strut, even the Chinese dirt diggers on the railroad bed held him in supreme contempt. He was a butt of ridicule with surveyors, bosses, cowboys and ranchmen and was not considered "game" enough to take seriously. He was generally referred to as "the Peacock" and was looked upon as harmless. Jocasta was a liar. His father and mother were liars before and after him. When he could get any one to listen to him he would descend from his pedestal and tell of the thousands of female hearts he had broken and of the hundreds of men he had had to plant by the wayside. He lied by wholesale and retail, and his hearers laughed at his lies instead of criticising. There was only one handicap—the first time he was caught cheating at cards the boss of that division took him by the ear and said:

"Don't try it again, my Jim Dandy. The boys are on to your little game, and next time you will be shot full of holes."

Things went wrong with the family after awhile. Other traders came in to divide the profits, the wife had a serious illness, and the father got hurt, and there came a day when the bitterness of death was upon the pair—that is, they had to call Jocasta into the shanty and say to him:

"My son, in your veins runs the blood of Castile. You represent what we were a hundred years ago. We have been proud and glad, and we would that you could keep it up; but, alas, you have to come off the perch and go to work at something. This family is dead broke."

"I, with these white hands, these small feet, this noble carriage—I go to work!" exclaimed Jocasta in reply.

"Alas, you'll have to or go hungry," they told him.

Jocasta couldn't tumble to the situation. He had posed so long that the idea of anything like manual labor was distasteful to him. He was a good rider and might make a good cowboy, but the descent from Castile to cowboy was too great to think of. He would die first. It came to be known in the camp that "the Peacock" must take a fall, and there was a great deal of curiosity as to what he must turn to. In a sarcastic way he was offered charge of the mule gang, the wheelbarrow gang and so on, but he held his head the higher and made no reply. He had made up his mind to be a high roller to the end. The old man managed to eke him along for a fortnight after breaking the news, but there came a day when not another claco could be raised, when father and mother must be shipped back to Tucson by construction train. Old Castile was in the ditch at last.

"Tomorrow," mused the old man as he sat with his son for the last time—"tomorrow, Jocasta, you will have neither father nor mother here, and to morrow, alas, you will have to go to work. Need I tell you that the thought breaks my heart? It is humiliation—disgrace—death. Don't you think, my son, that if you were to try some other locality you could do better with the cards?"

"I have been given away for a hundred miles around," was the reply.

"Then you will become a cowboy?"

"Never!"

"But you will not load carts with dirt?"

"A Castilian never yet handled spade or pick."

"True, my son, but"—

There was no more to be said. Next day Jocasta was left an orphan, as it were. His remaining behind was something of a surprise. He dressed himself with unusual care and paraded through the camp to show himself off. Never had his small feet and shapely calves shown to greater advantage; never had he held his backbone stiffer or his chin higher. When through with his promenade—and he did not seek to cut it short—he sauntered back to his shanty and sat down on a nail keg in the sun as his ancestors had sat on their baronial doorsteps. He knew that he was looked upon as a loblolly and a guy, but he forgave the men their ignorance. He knew that a crisis had arrived when he must either fish or cut bait, but he was meeting it as became a man of Castile.

The roadbed had reached the foothills, where there was cover for the Indians who had taken a scalp whenever there was opportunity. On this day a dozen of them, mounted on their war ponies, had been lying in ambush to pick up any straggler from the lines. There were twenty men scattered along the two miles of track as guards, but as noon came and everything seemed quiet they gathered around the rude campfires and cooking booths to eat their midday meal. It was then that Jocasta, busy with his own thoughts and casting eyes around him, saw the Indians gather for a swift gallop to cut off three men who had gone afar for a stick of timber. Without haste and without a word to any one he rose up. A hundred feet away was a pony saddled and bridled and standing in the shade, and in his own belt was the inevitable "gun," though no one could say that he had ever made use of it except as an ornament. Hundreds of eyes watched Jocasta as he sauntered down to the pony with that proud and easy gait of his, and there was neither surprise nor curiosity until he slowly took his seat in the saddle. Then men rose up to wonder if he was going to try horse stealing in broad daylight.

As the right hand gathered up the reins the left lifted the sombrero in dignified salute, and then Jocasta settled down in the saddle and rode straight away. There was a grand yell behind him, and out came a hundred firearms, but before a bullet had been sent whizzing after him the Indians broke cover. Then his plan was grasped, and he was cheered. Straight ahead, posing in his saddle as he had posed on foot, rode Jocasta, the reins now in his left hand and the revolver in his right, and the Indians caught sight of him too late to check up or gear off. He struck them with a crash and set his gun to work, and there was haste to re-enforce him. When a score of mounted men pulled up and dismounted they found the Jim Dandy lying dead on the ground with three bullets in his body, and lying around him within reach of his hand were four war painted bucks whose souls, if they had any, had gone over the great divide in company with his. Men looked and rubbed their eyes to look again. There was Jocasta and there were his dead. He had done what he had done. It was the poser's first and last pose for glory.

Only Natural.

"Speaking of animals, in my opinion the elephant is the cleverest of them all," said the old circus man. "I remember once, many years ago, when Jacko, who was then in my charge, showed me one day that he could read."

"Oh, come now!" said a listener.

"I'll prove it to you in about two minutes. Well, as I was saying, the old fellow got into a scrape with the royal Bengal tiger, and before we could get them separated he had his trunk pretty badly damaged. After the scrimmage was over Jacko broke loose and started down the street fast. 'He's goin' wild!' somebody shouted. 'Don't you believe it,' said I. Now, where do you suppose that elephant went to?"

"Went to the surgeon's, I suppose. Can't you get up a better yarn"—

"No, he didn't go to the surgeon's either. He went straight to a little shop where a sign read, 'Trunks Repaired While You Wait.' Of course he had made a mistake, but what do you expect of a poor dumb brute?"—Chums.

A Critical Moment.

The history of the casting of statues is one long story of patience. When Benvenuto Cellini cast his great Perseus, according to rules which his own genius had laid down, overwork and exposure had so undermined his strength at the critical moment that he was obliged to take to his bed and leave the rest of the process to some faithful workmen who understood his plans.

Finally, however, one of them came rushing into his sickroom, where he lay dazed and groaning with pain, and told him with many lamentations that the process was a failure and that the metal was caked.

Cellini sprang from his bed, ran across the street and rapidly dragged a load of dry oak wood back to his furnace. He made a roaring fire, and, finding that the base alloy in his metal had been burned out, he threw in all the pewter vessels of the household. Then the metal bubbled, the great Perseus was cast, and the maker and his faithful friends exulted.

How the New Foreman Showed His Authority

THE night after Mulhaney was relieved of the section foremanship the new boss came. The crew of the "Irish local" formed their silent conclusions at the supper table and later over their pipes agreed to start right by propitiating as far as possible Mr. Michael O'Brien.

On the following morning while that gentleman was yet stowing away vast quantities of eggs and bacon the men left a hurried breakfast and, proceeding to the car house, performed the unusual feat of placing the handcar upon the siding before 7 o'clock. Then they loaded up the tools and buckets and waited.

When O'Brien came, carrying his dinner pail and with his coat flung turgidly about his shoulders, he paused, with an inquiring look at the car.

"Who put that car on the track?"

The crew glanced at one another, at the car and back at O'Brien. Marty J. Flynn swallowed part of his chew and made answer:

"We did."

"Take that car off the track!"

The wheels crunched in the cinder, and the men straightened up.

"Now put that car on the track. I'll show you who's boss round here!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Out of Pocket, but Got Even.

A squire not a great distance from here was visited by a client who protested that a liveryman had "shaved" him dreadfully, and he wanted to come up to him.

"I asked him," explained the client, "the charge for a team to go to Dedham. He replied $1. I ordered the team and on my return offered in payment $1. He insisted on another dollar for coming back and made me pay it."

The squire gave him legal advice, which follows. Going to the liveryman, he asked, "How much will you charge for a team to Salem?"

"Five dollars," replied the stable owner.

"Harness him up." The client went to Salem, returned by railroad and went to the stabler, saying, "Here's your $5."

"Where's my team?" asked the liveryman in surprise.

"At Salem," answered the client. "I only hired the team to go to Salem."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Youthful Wisdom.

"Oh, mamma," she said, with a little burst of girlish confidence, "what do you think? Mr. Iddyot proposed last night."

"Ah, did he, my dear? And what did my little girl say?"

"Oh, I told him that an engagement was too solemn and sacred a thing for me to enter into without serious thought and consideration and that I would give him my answer in a week. And now, mamma mine, we must go to work and find out if he really and truly has a thousand a year."

"You dear, wise little girl!" cried the fond mother, folding her child to her bosom and weeping softly over her.

A Sinister Suggestion.

"Bliggins and his wife must get on very happily," said the gossip. "She says she never scolds him."

"That doesn't indicate happiness," answered Miss Cayenne. "It is sad. It shows that she considers him beyond hope."—Washington Star.

As Each Viewed It.

"He isn't in our social set any more."

"So I understand."

"Yes, he dropped out some time ago."

"Why, he gave me to understand he had climbed out."—Philadelphia Press.

His Recording Angel.

"Who was that stunning blond you spoke to?"

"That's my recording angel."

"Come again?"

"My typewriter."—Town Topics.

Uncle Ezra Wilkins—Hanged if these city fellers hain't queer. Thet young dude thet's with us didn't hev no complaint last summer, but this season he's allus kickin' 'bout the butter.

Uncle Ezra—Cussed if I know. It's the same butter we hed last year.—Leslie's Weekly.

Go Ahead!

Go ahead and lay the land out—make the furrow long and straight!
Ain't no fish in any river's goin' to bite without the bait.
Don't you see the birds are buildin'? Nuthin' stops 'em low or high,
And the lizard's thrown his blanket on the old fence rail to dry!

Go ahead! The woods are bloomin', and the fields are waitin' sweet
For the wavin' of the corn blades and the ripple of the wheat!
War ain't stoppin' all creation—pretty soon the shadow fades.
Hooray for the old plantation and the field brigades!

THE REAL MAN of CULTURE

By Rev. E. A. PADDOCK, President Idaho Industrial Institute

IF culture means the adornment of a tailor's dummy, I don't want it. If it means getting enough French to show off with, I don't want it.

I believe there is more genuine culture in being able to make a good loaf of bread and wash a man's shirt so he can wear it THAN IN JABBERING FRENCH and pounding the piano for hours. Culture comes from being useful to society and from the consciousness of usefulness. Abraham Lincoln was a more cultured man than Chester A. Arthur. Mr. Arthur looked better, and he knew just how many inches of a lady's fingers to take when he shook hands with her, but I believe Lincoln was the TRULY CULTURED gentleman.

We take a cowboy into our college. He doesn't change his shirt except when it wears out. He eats when he is hungry, works when he sees fit, amuses himself when he pleases. In three years we give him a good business education and a trade and turn him out A GENTLEMAN.

THE MAN WITH THE BIGGEST HEART, THE BEST HEAD AND THE MOST CULTIVATED HAND—HIM I CALL THE MAN OF CULTURE.

We Can No Longer Afford War

By Governor W. T. DURBIN of Indiana

WE CANNOT AFFORD TO GO TO WAR ANY MORE. Civilization could not afford the awful outpouring of blood and treasure that would characterize an armed conflict between two such nations as the United States and Great Britain. It is fitting that they should, by an agreement for the amicable adjustment of any differences that may arise between them, set an example for the emulation of the rest of the world. The settlement of the boundary dispute between Great Britain and the United States, a consummation which would have been utterly impossible even half a century ago, is a triumph for both nations greater than it would have been possible for either of them to achieve BY THE SWORD, no matter what the issue of such a conflict might have been.

OUR NATION STANDS FOR PEACE, FOR FRIENDLY RELATIONS WITH ALL THE WORLD. IT IS FITTING THAT OUR PEOPLE SHOULD LEAD IN THE MOVEMENT FOR THE RECOGNITION IN PRINCIPLE AND THE ADOPTION IN PRACTICE OF INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.

Woman's Intuition Is Incomprehensible to Man

By Mrs. FRANK LESLIE

PROBABLY of all the problems that puzzle the masculine student of woman the most UTTERLY INSOLUBLE is the matter of intuition. It is far easier for a woman to understand the formal and laborious methods of a man's mind than for him to grasp the idea of an intuitive process which cannot be formulated EVEN BY ITS OWNER. A man of intellectual nature and regular education bases his every argument, his every conviction, upon mathematical truths. He is fond of saying, "It is as certain as that two and two make four," and that to him is a perfectly unassailable standpoint. He perceives that, to the woman with whom he argues, the fact that two and two make four is of not the slightest importance. She says, for instance, that a perfect army of street roughs threatened her and it was hours before she could get through them. The man corrects her with:

"There were but four of the roughs, and it was not five minutes before you were out of their reach and quite safe."

"Only four indeed! More likely forty-four!" cries the woman, with scorn and indignation.

"I assure you there were only four—two on one side of the door and two on the other, and two and two make four, don't they?"

"NOT ALWAYS," by any means," retorts madam, with all the courage of her convictions—"not in this case, for instance. Two and two made a great deal more than four FOR ME, I assure you."

And she is actually more correct than the man is. Four street ruffians, inflamed with the lawless spirit of the mob and attempting to hustle and annoy a lady simply because she is well dressed and looks scornfully at them, become in her eyes and to her consciousness a great many more than two and two. They become a crowd, a mob, a phalanx, a terrifying and perhaps deadly force. She is quite right in saying that in this case TWO AND TWO DID NOT MAKE FOUR, but forty-four, and that the period of time during which she felt herself in their power was to her without bounds or limit, but a chaos of endurance answering to many hours of ordinary life. If the clock said it was but five minutes, why, all the worse for the clock, and it must have been a male clock, although they are generally called "she."

But you can't make a man see this. You, for instance—you are reading it. Tell me, aren't you saying to yourself:

"She means that to the frightened woman the mob SEEMED large and the time SEEMED long, but in point of fact two men and two men are only four men, and five minutes are but five minutes."

There! That is exactly the difference between a man's mind and a woman's. The man is fast bound, "tied and fettered in the chain," not "of his sins" perhaps, but of his mechanical makeup. He simply CANNOT take in the idea that an event is not what actually and literally happens, but is to each person THE RESULTS IT PRODUCES UPON THAT PERSON'S MENTALITY.

If some reader of the masculine persuasion asks me, How do you know this rather startling truth, and how do you prove it? I reply, with that grand simplicity characteristic of great minds and great truths, I know it by INTUITION, and I prove it by looking in upon my own convictions, which tell me it is a truth.

IF YOURS DOESN'T TELL YOU SO, IT IS NOT A TRUTH FOR YOU, AND WE CONTINUE GAZING, THE ONE UPON THE GOLD AND THE OTHER UPON THE SILVER SIDE OF THE SHIELD, EACH ASSURED THAT OUR OWN IS THE TRUE SIDE.

Asa's Good Reign.

Rehoboam, the first king of Judah, had a spasm of industry during which he fortified the key cities of the southern kingdom, but then he relapsed into idolatry and polygamy. He was soon forced to buy a truce from the king of Egypt, for which he paid the treasures of David and the golden shields of Solomon. Of Rehoboam's son and successor, the shameful record is, "he walked in all the sins of his father."

But Asa, the third king of Judah, in spite of his vicious ancestry and unfavorable environment, proved himself noble, heroic, and pious. A high and hopeful note is struck in the dolorous record when it is said of him, "He did that which was good." Instead of being effected by the tendencies of his times, he changed those tendencies. He burst like a cyclone upon the seats and emblems of idolatry and laid them low. He commanded Israel to seek the Lord. He showed his sincerity by dethroning his own mother and burning the idol and grove she had established. He began this blessed work of reformation at his very accession. The goodness of Asa was not of the negative kind. He was no contemplative recluse, but a forceful and aggressive man, and according to current standards, by which alone he can be fairly judged, he was pre-eminently correct.

He was not content with the moral reformation of his kingdom, he looked well to its military defenses, building fortress cities and mobilizing an army of upwards of half a million of well-armed and drilled men.

Humanly speaking, it would seem that Asa's piety and prudence ought to have been better rewarded. But hardly had his excellent reforms been effected before the invincible army of a great world power invaded his territory—Zerah, "the magnificent," led an army, the sheer weight of whose numbers seemed destined to obliterate Judah. A modern analogy maintains in the inexhaustible numbers available in Russia, as compared with those of Japan. Asa was not ignorant of the fearful odds against him, but he did not hesitate. He led his army in person. He chose the field of battle with consummate skill. The narrow valley gave him every advantage. Having first done everything that military genius could suggest, he then had recourse to that trusty weapon of prayer.

A finer form of prayer in case of national peril can not be imagined. It is brief, yet comprehensive. It is the drawing of a draft on omnipotence. The argument is that it is an indifferent matter to Almightiness that Asa's army is outnumbered two to one by this heathen horde. "That is nothing to Thee, Lord." The king's prayer is heard and answered. A phenomenal victory is won. The largest army of which record is made in Scripture, is irretrievably routed. One of the first of the world powers is defeated by the tiny kingdom of Judah and it is the only instance of its kind named in the Bible. Not for three centuries did Egypt venture to send an army into Palestine.

The Teacher's Lantern.

Less apology can be made for the idolatry of Judah than that of Israel. The temple was within its territory. It had all the priests. Yet in spite of these advantages Judah seemed to sink as deep in this sin as Israel. Three kings in succession fostered it.

Asa's name signifies "Healer." He was well named, for he certainly healed his country of their disease, though his methods were heroic. He took away the altars of the strange gods, broke down the images, and hewed down the votive pillars which stood around as thick as forest trees.

He seems to have met with but little opposition. It illustrates the fact that vice is naturally cowardly. A bold front need only to be presented to it and it sneaks away.

In time of peace Asa prepared for war. The current form of fortification is aptly described, "he built walls about the cities and towers, gates, and bars." Reproductions of this style of fortification are found in the bass-relief of that age.

The causes of the attempted invasion of Judah by Zerah may have been, (1) Asa may have declined to continue as a vassal to Egypt as Rehoboam had been; (2) He may have refused tribute; (3) Zerah may have wished to punish Asa for organizing such an army; (4) or he may have been in quest of spoil.

Peculiar interest attaches to the scene of the battle battle between Asa and Zerah, for on the very same ground Richard Cœur de Leon fought Saladin; and it is the scene of Walter Scott's Talisman.

The Bible delights to picture its heroes in the act and attitude of prayer. Abel beside his altar, Noah on Ararat, Moses' hands uplifted against Amalek, Daniel at his window in Babylon, Peter on the house-top, Paul in the street "Straight," few of many instances! Among them all, the picture of Asa is second to none in effectiveness.

The Bible is terrible in its fidelity. It pictures its heroes as they are. It does not gloss their faults. At the close of his splendid career Asa dimmed it all by making a foreign alliance.

He bribed the Syrians to attack Israel, and when rebuked by the prophet, he put him in the stocks.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, July 9, 1904

The President left today for his summer home on Long Island where he expects to remain until the middle of August. Before departing he held an au revoir Cabinet meeting and interviews at the White House with all sorts of persons—politicians, officeholders, Ambassadors, German princes, etc. Gen. Black of the Civil Service was one of the callers and the President congratulated him upon his healthy appearance. The General assured the President that he had no desire to play second fiddle on the Democratic ticket, whoever might be nominated for President at St. Louis. He is now well satisfied with the offices he holds. Naturally there has some curiosity at the White House concerning the Great Democratic riddle which is on the eve of solution. All admit that the Democratic situation is a hard nut to crack, and many fear that when the shell is broken Grover Cleveland will be found inside. Almost any kind of a rumor goes now-a-days, and the corridors of the White House echo that Judge Parker's name is not the one to conjure with; that Gorman is secretly for Cleveland; that Tammany is for McClellan; that Bryan will bolt and the sooner the better, etc. Even Chauncey M. Depew, when bowing to the chief Executive on the eve of his departure for Europe to snatch a catnap of rest before battling in the campaign, announced it as his opinion that Cleveland will be the Democratic nominee. Senator Hansbrough of North Dakota thinks the same. South Dakota still to be heard from. Lou Payn has had a satisfactory interview with the President, and as he came out of the front door of the Executive Mansion he said: "Grover Cleveland will be the easiest of all Democrats to beat."

In view of the revelations made by the coroner's jury in New York, regarding the Slocum horror, the President has ordered that a re-inspection of all passenger-carrying steamboats be made at once. Miss caused quite a fright among steamship owners, and they sent rush orders to Pittsburg, Pa., for all the new life-preservers which could be had. Pittsburg has been doing its best, sending off 1,500 per day by express. This incident shows how negligently the inspection in New York has been attended to. As many men have been indicted for manslaughter, the public can afford to wait and see if any are ever sent to jail at hard labor.

Your correspondent yesterday ran across the Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, ex-Senator Jones, who engineered the two brilliant Bryan campaigns. He has opened a law office in this city, and appears to be declined to go back to his native state, Arkansas. He is quite soured and very disgruntled over the Democratic situation, and particularly unhappy that he is so soon to be a "has been." He says many hard things about the Democratic party, which he has served for thirty years, receiving a very fair compensation therefor. It may be forecasted that he will not make a very enthusiastic speech at St. Louis, at the opening of the convention. If he should speak what is in his mind, some sharp things would be said. It is very hard for a man who has once been a Senator, and tasted the sweets of official life in Washington, to retire to political obscurity and his native town. He still clings to the sweet idea that he is just as big a man as ever he was. And perhaps he is.

Ex-Secrecary Cortelyou, upon the recommendation of the President, will take a little rest before plunging into the labors of the campaign. He will go into retirement until about the middle of July, when he returns to this city with Elmer Dover, and opens Republican head-quarters at the Arlington Hotel. Subsequently offices will be opened in Chicago and New York. It is announced that the heaviest work for the Republican ticket will be done in the States of the middle west.

It is sometimes unfortunate to have a distinguished brother; unfortunate for the one who is not distinguished. The strange disappearance of Mr. Kent J. Loomis, brother of Asst. Secy of State Loomis, and a messenger in that august department, causes some comment, although he was comparatively unknown in Washington. He appears to have been a "high roller," and stopped at the Raleigh, a swell hotel, and consorted with a wealty man named Ellis, who said he was going to Africa to hunt elephants, American bob-cats being too small game for him. It is supposed that Mr. Loomis fell over board en route to England, when in a condition of James preserves from indulging too deeply in the pleasures of the table and smokingroom.

Prof. Forster, the well-known meteorologist, who has a desk in the Observatory of the U. S., has given out a long range forecast for the months of August, September and October. He predicts a series of big and destructive storms during those months which will come from the Gulf of Mexico. He predicts three cold waves for July. This is much more to the point than "showers with increasing cloudiness."

If all the real and possible candidates for Presidential nominations are any criterion, the coming campaign is to be a speechless one. Judge Parker says not a word; Gen. Miles, who has long lived in this city, is accused of being the "silent Miles;" Cleveland is said to have "withdrawn into his shell;" and before he was nominated Senator Fairbanks went softly about, reserved, dignified and wrapped in the solit ude of his cloud capped stature. Even President Roosevelt, it is declared, will not make more than one more speech. Secretary Hay always hesitates when it comes to talking. But the situation is not altogether hopeless. The public still has left Taft, and Shaw, and Williams, and Root, and Cockran, et al., with no end of Senators who can say things at all times and places, and put to shame even W. J. Bryan.

The quiet and unostentatious marriage of Mr. Justice Brown of the Supreme Court, so soon after the marriage of his daughter to a son of Mr. Justice McKenna, came as a pleasant surprise to his wide circle of Washington friends. The ceremony took place at a little hamlet in New Jersey, and the honeymoon is being passed in romantic fashion on the board walk and at hotels at Atlantic City, the venerable Judge appearing in a suit of white flannel and blushing like a rose. The new wife was a close friend of the first wife, and is well known in Washington. The Justice would have taken the public into his confidence but for the dreadful news paper men who have been marrying him off to various women ever since the first Mrs. Brown died.

Piney Run Oil Co. Has Bad Luck.

The drillers employed by the Piney Run Oil and Gas Company to put down a test well had the misfortune one day last week to lose their drill in the well, and work on the same is therefore temporarily suspended awaiting the arrival of a set of fishing tools from Pittsburg to recover the drill. A depth of five hundred feet has been reached and the promoters of the enterprise are in high glee on account of the excellent prospects of striking oil. It is said that the drill has penetrated a vein of iron of unusualrichness which alone is more than worth the trouble and expense already gone to.

Died of Appendicitis.

Last Wednesday Miss Lulu, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Loar, was taked to Cook's Hospital at Fairmont, suffering, as Dr. Thayer stated, with appendicitis. The physicians there, after a thorough examination, claimed that the disease was probably typhoid feyer. Dr. McComas, of Oakland, Md., was telegraphed for, and, after a diagnosis of the case, agreed with Dr. Thayer that it was appendicitis. An operation was performed, but the disease had taken hold of its victim with such a firm grasp that death came to the sufferer's relief at 3:45 p. m. Thursday.—Grafton Leader.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCHELLE, GA., Jan. 30, 1902.

Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.

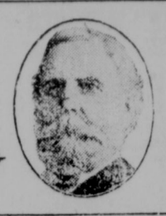
Wealth Does Not Injure Society



By LYMAN J. GAGE, Ex-Secretary of the United States Treasury

IF one is a believer in Divine Providence he is likely to inquire why the good things in life should be divided in such a partial manner. Wrong opinions give the mind a twist and affect the sentiment, and there have been teachers and philosophers who said that the possession of property is robbery. Tolstoi has said that no one has a right to anything that he has not produced by his own hand, and a more modern man, a preacher, has said that NO MAN ACQUIRES A MILLION DOLLARS HONESTLY. That sounds first rate for people who have not a million. That is the question I want to consider. There is a preliminary question, and that is, "How is wealth produced and how is it rightfully divided?"

We know all wealth comes from the earth and is increased by labor and that capital provides tools to support labor. Land, labor and capital are, therefore, JOINTLY INTERESTED in production. Land pays rent; labor gets wages and capital profit. This division is made naturally enough and not by convention, agreement or law.

We see certain persons accumulating wealth, and we call them capitalists. We see laborers going along the even tenor of their way. Then we ask: "Is the division fair?" "Is wealth an injury to society?" "Is it the robbery of somebody?" "Is it the exploitation of the poor?" I affirm to the contrary.

THERE IS ONE THING THAT IS MANIFEST TO ALL. IT IS THAT LAND, LABOR AND CAPITAL IN THEMSELVES HAVE NO POWER AT ALL. LAND IDLE GROWS WEEDS, LABOR UNEMPLOYED STARVES, CAPITAL WHEN NOT IN USE BRINGS NO RETURNS.

If you look at the matter fairly you will find that there is another faculty, and that is ABILITY. If any man by his ability, ingenuity, skill or knowledge so conserves the thing as to make it useful he is entitled to a share at least of the benefits he confers on society.

If we were to return to the old methods of transportation before the adopion of the trunk lines we would have to pay one billion and a half for freightage more than we pay now. We have more than a hundred thousand different things for our use and comfort that were unknown even to our grandfathers. Still, land has not become more fruitful, labor, as labor, no more efficient, and yet the power has been supplemented by machinery and scientific discovery. Wealth is being produced with a rapidity never before known in the history of the world, and EVERYBODY HAS PART of the advantages of the enormous increase in wealth.

The wealth of the country has increased six times since the civil war, while the population has increased but two and a half times. Deposits amounting to $2,500,000,000 in the savings banks is divided among 5,400,000 depositors.

There are people who do get rich and don't do anything to deserve it. They get it by the game of hazard, by fraud in dubious ways, and there are men who prefer violence and theft to industry. There are adventurers not only in low finance, but high finance in Wall street, but they constitute ONLY A SMALL PART of the people there.

There is a large class of men in Wall street whose words are as good as their bonds and who will account scrupulously for every cent of investment. Some lie for profit and rob widows and orphans, but they are a small percentage of the people in Wall street.

Those who believe in the doctrine of evolution see in the upward movement of man from a humble germ to what he is now a great advance. We are not living in the end of the world, but AT THE BEGINNING OF IT.

EVOLUTION WILL NEVER GIVE A MAN MORE MUSCLE, HEARING OR SPEED, BUT IT WILL CONTINUE TO MOLD THE MINDS AND HEARTS OF THE INDIVIDUAL UNTIL THEY BECOME STRONGER THAN THEY EVER WERE BEFORE.

A Man's Color Should Not Affect His Punishment For Crime . . .

By Rev. W. H. BROOKS (Colored) of New York

THE white man has in his hands the law, the courts, congress, the army, the navy, and IMMENSE RESOURCES OF ALL KINDS, and yet how is he superior to the Turk in the treatment of a colored culprit? If his Christianity does not restrain his bloodthirsty passion, in what is he superior to the half clad African? We are pointed out as lawless individuals of passions because in these forty years of freedom we have not come up to his expectations. But what of this man with thousands of years of civilization? What of the burning at the stake of a woman and fighting for her ears as savages? And what was the crime of this woman? SIMPLY HER LOYALTY TO HER HUSBAND. And what was the crime of this man? He gave shelter to his brother, and when the white men came to take his brother away he shot them.

I believe that every culprit should have the treatment that belongs to his crime, but that his punishment SHOULD NOT BE DETERMINED BY THE COLOR OF HIS SKIN. I appeal to the American people. I appeal to Caesar drunk to Caesar sober.

OUR REMEDY IS NOT IN RETALIATION. WE MUST BE STRONG ENOUGH TO RESIST EVERY IMPULSE TO RETALIATION.

If the white man's religion is defective, LET THE BLACK MAN SHOW THE WAY. Those who preach emigration have lost faith and heart. The ship is not to be deserted because of stormy weather. If we cannot go forward, let us mark time. Here we have toiled, here our dead lie sleeping, and we have no other home. But we claim here more than food and clothing—we claim THE RIGHT to be honest and industrious.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

No. 1278 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garret County, Maryland.

John R. Ritchie, vs. Mary Ritchie.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff from the defendant a vinculo matrimonii.

The Bill states on the 14th day of December 1884, the plaintiff was married to the defendant, and lived with her until 1900, when without just cause or reason she abandoned and deserted him, and such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years and is deliberate and final; that five children were born to them as a result of said union, and that the defendant is a non-resident of the State.

It is thereupon, this 20th day of June, 1904, ordered the Circuit Court of Garrett County, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 22nd day of July, 1904, give notice to said defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning her to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of August next to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

William A. Harvey and William H. Ridder, copartners trading and doing business under the firm name and style of Harvey and Ridder, and The Wilson Lumber Company, a corporation, Plaintiffs, vs. Datesman Coal Company, and John Wills, assignee of Joseph W. Gross, assignee of Mary E. Clauson, Mortgagee, Defendents.

No. 1280 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of a certain real estate in Garrett county, Maryland, against which the plaintiffs have filed mechanic lien claims.

The bill states that within the last six months the plaintiffs contracted with the defendant, Datesman Coal Company, to furnish certain materials to be used in building six dwelling houses and the said Harvey and Ridder contracted to erect and build said houses for said defendant at Steyer, Garrett county Maryland, and that said materials were to be paid for when and as each of said houses was completed; that said materials have been furnished and said work done and said houses completed on the 13th day of June, 1904; that said claims for materials furnished and work done are over due, and that the said defendant, Datesman Coal Company, although often requested has failed to pay the same; that plaintiffs have filed in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County their respective claims as liens against said buildings, the ground upon which they are erected, and so much other ground immediately adjacent thereto and beloning to said Datesman Coal Company, as is necessary for the ordinary and useful purposes thereof, which claims contained an accurate description of said property, the kind and amount of materials furnished and work done by the plaintiffs for or about the construction of said buildings and the time when and the prices for which the same were agreed to be furnished and done, and the amount claimed to be due on each of said houses, it appearing that there is due to Harvey and Ridder the sum of $1689.13 and to the Wilson Lumber Company the sum of $428.37.

That John Wills is made a defendant to this proceeding on account of being the assignee of a certain mortgage made by Datesman Coal Company to Mary E. Clauson, on the 7th day of October, 1903, and in order that all parties interested in said property may be before the Court and be bound by its decree in the premises and that the said defendents are non residents of the State of Maryland.

The bill then prays for a decree for the sale of said property, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose, and out of the proceeds to pay the said mortgage and then the claims of the plaintiffs and for general relief.

It is thereupon, this 21st day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county in Equity, that the plaintiffs by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 22nd day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them and each of them, to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th of August next to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1279 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Franklin P. Stremmel, vs. Mildred E. Stremmel.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce of Franklin P. Stremmel from his wife, Mildred E. Stremmel, a vinculo matrimonii.

The bill states that on the 21st day of December, 1898, the plaintiff and defendant were married and lived together in Garrett county until December, 1903. That the said Mildred E. Stremmel on divers days and times since said marriage has committed the crime of adultery with certain men and that the plaintiff has not lived or cohabited with said defendant since he has become convinced of her adulterous acts.

The bill further alleges that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, and for an order of publication.

It is thereupon this 21st day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, in each of four successive weeks before the 22d day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of August next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

PASSING OF C. & O. CANAL.

Vanishing Type of American Life—Must Share Its Fate So Decreed.

The old canal, as a writer calls it in the Boston Transcrip, must share the fate all other things out of date and cease to be. Its abandonment has been decreed. The wonder is that the evil day did not come long before, for with the modern facilities for transportation its time of imperative usefulness has long been over. The boats have run from March to October on a route from Washington to Cumberland a distance of 180 miles. They have taken from ten days to two weeks to make the trip. Their cargoes are coal and grain. A boat can carry one hundred and thirty tons of coal, and for this payment at the rate of fifteen cents a ton was made. When from this profit, the sum of $12, which the captain must pay for the use of the boat, is deducted, it doesn't seem to have been a profitable venture.

The line has been owned by a syndicate, and as the captain of the boat could not make it pay and the competition of the railways became keener the only thing to do was to discontinue the line.

Much as one must applaud the march of the progress, I can but feel sincere regret at the passing of the old canal, says the writer. To me its abandonment means the scattering of the picturesque little colony whose home is on the narrow strip of water which stretches along beside the Potomac for nearly two hundred miles. To one who has lived where canals are unknown, the great clumsy boats drawn by shaggy mules have a distinctly foreign look that makes them singularly attractive, so when I strolled along the tow-path of the Washington Canal and there met Mrs. Noah, it was a new experience to me.

Sitting in the cosy little cabin while the fire crackled in the little stove and the tea kettle steamed away merrily, Mrs. Noah told me her story. She is canal born and bred.

She was a bright, pretty, rosy cheeked young girl and the belle of the canal. Accordingly she was courted by every "single and unattached" boatman from Washington to Cumberland. But she was ambitious and longed for a life on land. At last Mr. Noah appeared upon the scene and agreed to give up boating and the canal and settle in a "real house" on land if she would become Mrs. Noah. And so they were married one autumn. Mr. Noah found employment in a Connecticut town and there they set up housekeeping.

However, the weeks went on and she grew used to the new life and was fast becoming content with her lot when the weather began to grow warmer, the birds came back and the trees were budded. Mr. Noah grew restless, she thought more and more of the canal. Her husband, too, had a dreamy, far away look in his eyes that was not inspired by a prosaic little New England town. May day came and Mrs. Noah could bear it no longer; she woke her husband early that morning and confided her home sickness to him. That settled it and before the week was ended their household goods were packed and Mr. and Mrs. Noah on their way back to the canal.

Since that time she has been perfectly contented. There are two little Noahs in the ark now.

Along the towpath between the canal and the river are scattered little white cottages and the owners of these are Mrs. Noah's neighbors and friends.

As I descended the narrow plank holding Mrs. Noah's strong hand, the wind had died down and the sun was setting behind the blue hills on the opposite bank of the Potomac, then the swiftly moving brown waters of the river, the towpath dotted with trees and little white houses, the brown ribbon of the canal winding as far as one can see and on the further side another path, behind which rises the rocky precipice.

With the scene in memory, I can't help feeling for Mrs. Noah now that the old canal must go. Seafaring people are proverbially poor landlubbers. And the march of progress is attended with many a heartache.

Oakland an Eary Victim.

The game of base ball between Kingwood and Oakland last Friday was one sided from start to finish. At no time in the game was Oakland able to show that she could play in Kingwood's class. Even when their new pitcher, Springer of the University team, was put in they were unable to stop the Kingwood sluggers from pounding the ball all over the field and piling up runs until the game closed. The score stood 16 to 4 in favor of Kingwood.—Preston Republican.

A Compliment.

The Kingwood Leader, speaking of the Oakland base ballists, says of them: "The boys of the Oakland base ball team are a fine lot of fellows, genteel and courteous, and made many friends while in Kingwood. We should be glad to have the Maryland boys with us again later in the season."

Oil Oozes Up In the Well—West Virginia Operations To Begins Soon—Price of Stock Increased to 60 cents a Share.

The directors of the Piney Run Oil and Gas Company met at Sand Patch, Pa., Tuesday, July 12, and decided to increase the price of the price of stock from thirty cents a share to sixty cents a share. They visited the well that is now being drilled on the Francis Lint farm, and inspected the machinery. They were highly pleased with the management and the progress that is being made. The well is down seven hundred feet. The drill has struck the "Big Injun" oil sand and the company have splendid signs of oil. Pittsburg oil men visited the well on Saturday and pronounced the prospects as being very fine. The company intends to put down several test wells in the locality. This is the first well that has ever been drilled in which the "oil sands" were found.

The company also decided to commenced operations in West Virginia, where they have secured twenty-two hundred acres of fine oil and gas lands in Gilmer county. The company is in receipt of a message from Gilmer county announcing that the South Penn Oil Company have drilled a well near their holdings which produces four hundred barrels a day. The company will commence active operation there at once.

BITTINGER.

There will be a festival, the first of the season, at this place on Saturday evening, July 23rd, to which the public is cordially invited.

The past week brought the visitors to our village: Mrs. Havener, of Baltimore, Mr. Daniel P. Miller and family, of Springs, Pa., Miss Nettie Brenninger, of Sunnyside, and Mr. Young Lohr, of Oakland.

Mr. Edward Wiley, a very successful photographer and a pleasent and agreeable young man, has fitted up a first class gallery at Jennings, where he will be pleased to have you visit him.

Rev. Stroup preached his farewell sermon in the Lutheran church here last Sabbath morning and will leave for his new charge in a few days.

Harvest times is upon us and as everybody is busy, news and politicians are scarce at Bittinger.

ONLY ONE MARK NEEDED.

Attorney General's Opinion Will Simplify Voting This Fall.

Attorney General W. S. Bryan, Jr., has given an unofficial opinion in which he maintains that cross-marks after the names of the President and Vice-President authorizes the election judges in counting the ballot for each of the Presidential electors whose names appear on the official ballot.

The letter was written to Mr. H. L. D. Standard, the law partner of Former Congressman Joshua Miles, who has engaged in a controversy with Attorney General Bryan over this point. The decision is important, as the possibility of erroneously marking ballots is greatly minimized by the opinion. In his letter to Mr. Standford, he says, in part:

I have submitted the point to four of the best lawyers in Marvland, and all of them, without hesitation, took the view that the vote for Presidential electors could be by a cross-mark, either opposite the name of each elector or by a cross-mark opposite the names of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates.

Mr. Charles H. Carter, who has been a member of the Board of Supervisors of Elections since the middle of Governor Lowndes' term, without consultation of any sort with me, came to the same conclusion, as did also Mr. W. Starr Gephart, the counsel to our local Board of Supervisors.

DEER PARK MAY BE THE MAGNET

Toward Which Democratic Hosts Will be Drawn for Two Months.

HON. H. G. DANIS TO LOCATE THERE

During August and September and Receive His Friends—The Watson Cottage Leased By Him For That Purpose.

A report is current, and coming from an authorative source which gives it the color of being well founded, that Deer Park will be the scene during the months of August and September of many pilgrimages of the unterrified Democracy from nearly every section of the United States who will visit there to pay their respects to Hon. Henry G. Davis, Democratic vice presidential nominee, who will occupy during the two months mentioned the cottage located within the grounds surrounding the Baltimore and Ohio hotel known as the Watson cottage.

Last Saturday upon the visit to that place by Mr. Charles M. Hendley, who registered at the hotel, and who occupies the position of private secretary to Mr. Davis, the report states that he contracted with the hotel management for the lease of the cottage for Mr. Davis, who will remain there and receive his friends as did President McKinley at his home in Canton during the campaign of 1896. It is well known that Mr. Davis' original plan was to remain at his home in Elkins during the campaign and address the crowds who will surely visit him from his porch at that place, but Elkins being located away from the main line of travel it is perfectly natural to suppose that he has changed his plans and adopted the one above outlined. This being true it is presumedthat at some time during the time he will be visited by his running mate, Judge Parker.

It will be remembered that for many years Mr. Davis resided at Deer Park where he had extensive interests and where he erected a handsome summer home which he sold a few years ago to Mr. John T. McGraw, of Grafton, West Va. Mr. Davis yet visits Deer Park occasionally where he has many warm friends and admirers, both Democrats and Republicans.

HER SENTENCE COMMUTED.

Woman Prisoner In Oakland Jail Freed by Order of the President.

President Roosevelt, Saturday commuted the sentence of Mary L. Kissner, convicted in Baltimore of passing altered Treasury notes and sentenced May 24th to serve a term of four months imprisonment in the jail at Oakland, and in accordance therewith and upon an order received by Sheriff Frantz from United States District Judge Morris of Baltimore, he released Mrs. Kissner who returned to her home the same day. The sentenced was commuted by the President principally on account of the ill health of the prisoner and the overcrowded condition of the jail.

THE PARKER CHRONOLOGY.

In 1896 and 1900 Judge Parker voted for Bryan and Free Silver.

The Democratic State Convention held at Albany, N. Y., on April 18, 1904, instructed the New York delegation to support Judge Parker's candidacy for the presidency. It adopted unanimously a platform which contained ten planks, including a demand for "reasonable revision of the tariff." On the question of the gold standard it was silent. The platform had Judge Parker's approval in advance.

For two months and twenty days, the candidate stood on that platform and said nothing while his friends hunted for delegates.

On the morning of Friday, July 8, the resolutions committee of the Democratic National Convention agreed unanimously, after a sixteen hours wrangle, on a platform which omitted all reference to the gold standard.

Dispatches received at Esopus during the day and evening contained this information and brought the news that the convention had adopted the platform as reported from the committee.

Judge Parker remained silent.

Judge Parker was nominated on the morning of Saturday, July 9. Martin W. Littleton, in presenting his name to the convention, referred to him as a man whose policy "will be that policy which finds expression in the platform of his party."

Forman E. Mack, the New York member of the Democratic National Committee and one of Judge Parker's supporters at St. Louis, made a statement over his own signature on Friday morning, after the nomination, as follows:

"The real simple truth of the failure to put a gold plank in the platform is this: It would have resulted in a minority report being presented to the convention, and if that had been done we would have been beaten and Judge Parker would not have been nominated."

On Saturday morning, July 9, the three leading Eastern Democratic newspapers, the New York Times, the New York World, and the New York Sun, contained editorials fiercely denouncing the cowardice of the convention, demanding that the candidate should make known his position in segard to the gold standard, predicting Parker's defeat, unless this was done, and threatening to bolt the ticket.

After reading these editorials Judge Parker, according to a statement given out at Esopus, sent the dispatch to Mr. Sheehan. It was then too late for the convention to name any other candidate.

Four years ago at the Kansas City Convention when Mr. Bryan was the candidate for nomination, the resolutions committee was sharply divided upon the question of excluding the money plank. "Instead of waiting until after the platform had been adopted and the nomination of himself had been made," says the Springfield (Mass.) Republican (Ind.), "Mr. Bryan promptly sent word to the convention before any action whatever had been taken that he must not be considered a candidate for the nomination in case the money question were ignored in the resolution. That was straightforward and it was dealing fairly with all wings and branches of the Dem ocratic party."

"It is a manly thing," said Mr. Bryan in his speech at St. Louis, after the reading of Judge Parker's dispatch, "for a man to express his opinion before the convention adjourns. It would have been manlier to have expressed it before the convention met."

BRYAN'S OPINION OF PARKER.

"I have nothing to take back. I have nothing to withdraw of the things that I have said against the methods pursued to advance his (Parker's) candidacy. It was a plain and deliberate attempt to deceive the party. The New York platform was vague and meaningless, and purposely so, because the advocates of Judge Parker were trying to secure votes from among the people who would have opposed his views had they known them. If he had sent to the Albany convention the telegram that he sent to the St. Louis convention he would have had very few instructed delegates from the South, and no possible chance for the nomination. But he and his managers adroitly and purposely concealed his position until the delegates had been corralled and the nomination assured. Then his friends attempted to secure a gold plank, which was overwhelmingly defeated in the committee. After the party had rejoiced over the harmony secured by the omission of the question, and after he had secured the nomination, he injected his views upon the subject at a time when he could not be taken from the ticket without great demoralization. The nomination was secured, therefore, by crooked and indefensible methods."

BETWIXT DAD AND JOE

By JOHN SEATON BLAIR

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

No one around the frontier town of Lewisburg knew much of Dr. Davy. He had come into the locality without ostentation, taken up a claim four miles away and built a sod house, half above and half below ground. For a year he had dwelt there alone and had only come into town once a fortnight for provisions. He was called doctor because he was a doctor, though not seeking to ply his art, and no one was able to say just how his title came to be known. His next neighbor was a mile away, and travelers who stopped at his house for a drink of water or to inquire the way were treated with scant courtesy. There was considerable gossip about the stranger, and many people shook their heads and whispered that the officers of the law would turn up in search of him some fine day, but after awhile, as nothing was heard against him, he was put down as a recluse and left undisturbed.

It was a year or more after Dr. Davy's appearance that he came to town one evening to meet a young woman who stepped off the train from the east. The family resemblance was so marked that it was agreed by all that the newcomer was his daughter. She was hurried away as if the father feared to let the townspeople get sight of her, but it had needed only a glance to show that she was good looking and about twenty years of age. Her coming revived the gossip, but as she was not seen in town during the next three months she was in time forgotten by all with one exception. That exception was young Joe Taylor, who had been made sheriff of the county a year before and who was being talked of as a candidate for the legislature. He had only to accept a nomination to be elected, as he was a general favorite with all. He made it his business while scouting the country for horse thieves to call at the Davy cabin, and he was the first and about the only one to see the daughter Mollie in her own home and to be hospitably received by the father.

If he had any curiosity to gratify as an officer of the law he was disappointed. The doctor was free to talk, but not about himself nor his past. He was made welcome by the daughter, but he could not question her as a suspect.

A RIFLE CRACKED, AND HE PITCHED FORWARD ON THE GRASS.

He called three or four times "by accident," but after that he was a weekly visitor from choice and invitation. In time he was quite ready to acknowledge to himself that he was in love and to hope that his feelings were reciprocated. He was feeding up his courage to speak his mind when something happened to make him turn pale and set his heart to thumping. As sheriff, he received an official document by mail one day in which he was commanded to arrest one Dr. James Bird as an embezzler. It was Bird instead of Davy in the warrant, but the personal description fitted the man who was living out on the prairie with his daughter. His offense had been committed many years before, but the complainant had kept the warrant alive and followed the embezzler's trail like a bloodhound. The demand was that he be arrested and securely held until extradition papers could be secured, and as even the locality in which he was in hiding was pointed out the sheriff realized that he must do his duty if it broke a woman's heart.

An hour after receiving the letter he was on his way to the doctor's place. All the way out there he was hoping that the doctor might have been given a hint and fled or, if he had not, then that he might have indisputable evidences of his innocence at hand. His face betrayed his perturbation of mind to the girl the instant he dismounted at the door. She was alone, and as she stood forth in the June sunshine and looked up at him she quietly said:

"Mr. Taylor, I know your errand here. You have come to arrest my father on the old charge."

"They—they have sent on this warrant!" stammered Joe, as he handed it to her to read. "But I'm hoping that your father is far away by this time."

"He is down at the lake fishing. We had hoped that this matter was dead at last, but it seems that the man desires a malicious revenge. It says embezzlement."

Joe nodded his head as he looked away over the prairie.

"But it is false. It was a partnership business, and the other man was seeking to cheat father and fell into his own trap."

"It was likely that way," nodded Joe.

"But father even restored the money after awhile, all but a paltry sum. He would also have restored that, unjust as it was, but he has been hounded and driven till he has become desperate and determined. Is that wretch to follow him to his grave?"

Joe sat down on the ground and dropped his chin on his hands and appeared to be thinking. The girl had put the warrant back into his hands, and there was a sob in her throat as she turned and entered the house. It was a quarter of an hour before she reappeared. Joe looked up into her face with eyes telling of sympathy and love, and a blush came to her cheek as she asked:

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"It's going—it's going to be the hardest thing of my life," he replied, "but I've got to do my sworn duty. I must do it or stand impeached. Girl, you don't know"—

"Joe," she interrupted, calling him by that name for the first time, "a girl knows when she is loved."

"Yes, she ought to, and you ought to know that I love you."

"I do, Joe, and I love you in return, and you will break my heart if you drag my old father to jail. Say that you won't do it—that you will leave the warrant unserved."

"Duty, girl," he whispered as he rose up and put his arms around her and kissed her for the first time.

"Then you will arrest him?"

He kissed her again and turned away toward the lake, looking at the paper in his hand through tears in his eyes. He had not taken a hundred steps, however, before a rifle cracked, and he pitched forward on the grass. His horse would have dashed off at the sudden report, but it was secured by the girl.

"How did it come about?" asked the doctor, who had hurried home at the report of the rifle and found his daughter standing over a wounded and unconscious man.

"He—he started to the lake to find you, and a gun went off!" replied the girl between her sobs.

"And—and did he have any legal paper with him?" queried the father in a whisper.

"If he had, it has been burned. Tell me, father, is he fatally wounded?"

"No. The bullet plowed along his scalp, and he will be all right in a week. I will load up the wagon, and we must move on and find another asylum."

"But the man—Mr. Taylor,—Joe?" she asked.

"We shall take him with us. He will need my skill and your nursing for some days to come."

It was two weeks later when the sheriff opened his eyes and saw Mollie Davy seated near his bedside. The old claim had been left a hundred miles behind and the abandoned cabin of a settler had been taken possession of. Joe Taylor had been nursed and tended through fever as the wagon rolled along.

"Mollie, I take it that it was betwixt dad and me?" he said as she saw that he had come back to earth again.

"It was, Joe," she replied. "But, now"—

"But now it's betwixt you and me, and as soon as I can shake myself together I'll fix things so that you won't have to do any more moving. Thanks, dear, that you shot a little too high!"

Mushrooms.

Mushrooms, even cellar grown ones, which are everywhere to be had in large quantities, however good and genuine they may be, may develop a violent poison a few hours after they are picked. They are generally safer, however, than the wild mushrooms. The latter, though the genuine article, will sometimes absorb poison from the spawn of dangerous fungi which lie in the ground they grow in and be as deadly as any toadstool; in fact, a great many of the deaths reported every year as caused by toadstools mistaken for mushrooms are caused by the true mushroom which has absorbed poison. Out of a single field one batch of mushrooms may be excellent and others not fifty yards away perfectly poisonous. Yet there will be no difference in appearance, and both will peel and show all the marks of the genuine article. There is one test which is generally safe—put a silver spoon among the mushrooms when they are frying, and if it turns black reject them; also if they show a yellow tint round the edges throw them away.—London Standard.

No Inventors Among Animals.

It has been said by a writer of nature books that a coon will amputate its wounded foot and treat the stump in a rational way to allay the inflammation. If one coon will do this, then all coons will do it under like conditions. The same writer avers that he has seen a woodcock with a broken leg mend the leg with a cast made of clay and dry grass. Then will all woodcocks with broken legs do the same thing. Exceptional intelligence of so extraordinary a character does not occur among the animals. If one fox has been known to catch crabs with his tail, then will all other foxes, under the stress of hunger, where crabs abound, fish with their tails. An animal will not do anything which necessity has not taught its progenitors to do.—John Burroughs in Independent.

He Obeyed His Daughter And Felt Much Pleased

"NOW, papa," said the self made millionaire's beautiful daughter, "when the duke comes to your office today to ask you for me you must be careful when you speak to him to always say 'your grace.' Don't forget. It would be a terrible breach of etiquette if you shouldn't keep saying 'your grace' whenever you speak to him."

The happy old man promised that he would not forget and hurried away. He was busy revising his annual report of the B., C. and W. when the young nobleman arrived.

"Ah, glad to see you, your grace," said Mr. Worthwadds. "Come right in. Here, Johnny, bring him a chair and then git out. "Well, your grace, it's nice weather we're havin'. Do you smoke, your grace?"

"Thanks," answered the duke, lighting a cigarette, "if you don't mind."

"Oh, throw that away, your grace, and have one of these. They cost me $30 a hundred, your grace."

"No, really, I prefeh this."

"All right, your grace, but them things is mighty dangerous, your grace. Did you want to see me about anything particular this morning, your grace? Say, you've got a black streak on your face, your grace."

"Aw, this beastly soot. I shall reprimand my man for failing to notice it. May I retire for a moment?"

"Never mind, your grace. Spit on your handkerchief and rub it off, your grace. I s'pose you want to ask me about my daughter, your grace, eh? Well, your grace, I'm ready to talk business, your grace. Name your price, your grace."

Having agreed upon terms the gentlemen parted.

"There," said the old man to himself, as he took up his report after the duke's departure, "I guess I've showed him that he's goin' to marry into a family that can go right in among the nobility and talk as though they'd been used to that kind of society all their life."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Giving It Away.

"Now, children," said the Sunday school teacher, bustling them into the street car, "you must all sit down and keep still, and when we get out to the picnic grounds we'll pick wild flowers."

"Honest, don't I have to pay no fare?" asked one of the children.

"No."

"Why don't I?" persisted the child.

"Oh, keep still, kid," spoke up the tough little boy in the rear seat. "Do you s'pose she wants everybody to know she's got the conductor on her staff?"—Indianapolis Sun.

Qualified.

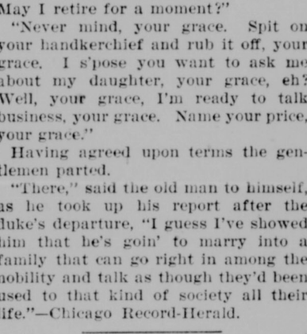
The young man was applying for a position as drug clerk.

"And you consider yourself competent to stand in a pharmacy?" interrogated the proprietor.

"I should say so," responded the young man. "I can smile at babies, hand out ten almanacs a second, understand the soda wink, paste stamps on envelopes, hunt up names in the directory and listen to every one's troubles."

"You'll do. Dust off the toothbrushes."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Important Omission.



"What books are those you are packing, Henry?"

"These? It's that set of One Hundred Best Books that fool agent got me to buy last fall."

"Oh, yes. I looked all through them this morning for something that would give instructions on how to pack books."—Chicago Tribune.

A Good Hand at a Bargain.

"I tell you," said the small boy admiringly, "my father is a mighty good business man."

"How do you know?" asked the other.

"He wants me to start in being good so that I can go to the next circus before the circus is even advertised."—Washington Star.

Oakland Model Steam Bakery

The Place to Buy the Best Bread Cakes and Pies.

Our aim is to make Bread "As Good as Mother made it," and we have been successful and have stopped all the drudgery of home baking with the use of Modern Machinery. Have you ever experienced as the following reads:

Your wife has gone out in the country;
You're left alone; what a pity,
With nothing to do but to ponder
And read out aloud to the kitty.

You run out of bread in the morning;
But knowing 'tis easy to make it,
You swiftly adjourn to the kitchen
And silently start in to bake it.

Take two coffee cups full of flour,
And water sufficient to "dough" it;
A thimble of salt for the "season,"
Then roll it, and poke it, and blow it.

And blow it, and poke it, and roll it,
And pinch it, and push it, and flop it,
And punch it, and pound it, and pull it,
And monkey around till you drop it.

Then clean it off nice with a towel,
And sock in a yeast cake to "raise" it;
Now drop in some soda to "short" it,
And smear on some butter to "glaze" it.

Then place it 'way back in the oven,
(That is if you've moulded and "set" it);
Close up all the doors of the kitchen,
Go in and sit down and forget it.

Go set yourself down in the parlor,
And read from "The Science of Baking;"
Read on till you smell something burning,
Then think of the bread you are making.

Now hop, skip snd jump to the kitchen,
And as you hop nigher and nigher,
You know by the smoke in the hallway
The blooming old bread is on fire.

Then hustle it out in the alley,
Juggle it, fumble it, shie it;
Then gently dig up a nickel
And go to the baker's and buy it.

A MEETING of ROYALTY

By SIDNEY H. COLE

....Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure....

Barbara stood at the gate drinking in the mountain air, which was like a draft of wine to her. The sun, hanging just above the crest of Bald Hill, had lifted the early morning fog and set the dew covered spider webs on the grass shimmering like so many clusters of crystals. Adown the road linnets and thrushes were chirping merrily in the woods, and occasionally the breeze wafted the scent of pines to her. The woods were calling her. She would not disregard such an invitation.

She ran lightly into the house and presently reappeared with a parasol and a small red volume. Accoutered thus, she started down the road, followed by her aunt's admonition to be back to dinner at noon and to remember not to cross the Johnsons' pasture, where rattlesnakes had been seen recently.

"PARDON ME, DOCTOR, BUT THEY'VE JUST GOT HER."

Barbara went briskly toward the woods with a feeling that on such a day it was indeed good to be alive. Well down the road she passed the great arched gateway of the sanitarium, and, looking up the steep driveway, she could see the buildings perched on the hill. She had not been down the road for ten years, but she suddenly remembered, with a little thrill of pity for its inmates, that the red brick building on the extreme left was the insane pavilion.

She took the little footpath which led across the lower end of the sanitarium grounds and into the pine woods. She found a place where giant pines towered many feet skyward and the ground was covered thickly with pine needles. Here she sat down and listened for a time to the tinkle of a tiny brook hard by and the sighing of the breeze through the pine tops. She had just opened the little red volume when the cracking of a twig warned her of some one's approach. She looked up. Before her, hat in hand, stood a handsome, well groomed young man, who regarded her with a steadiness of gaze decidedly disconcerting. As she looked up he bowed gravely.

"Good morning, Princess Louise," he said in a cheerful voice. "Really delightful morning, isn't it?"

Barbara's mouth curved scornfully. Then, all at once, the truth flashed upon her. This man before her was a strayed inmate of the insane pavilion. Her eyes opened wide in alarm and made her doubly charming—at least so thought the young man with a keen sense of pity.

"Charming spot here," he went on easily. "Let me congratulate you on your choice."

Barbara's heart was beating wildly. The man might be dangerous, and she was at his mercy. She remembered she had heard somewhere it was best and safest to humor lunatics. So, smothering a desire to scream, she faced the intruder with as much composure as she could summon.

"I should very much like to sit down here with you," he was saying. "It isn't every one, you know, who is favored with a morning interview with Henry IV."

"Oh, yes," Barbara said breathlessly. "Do sit down. I shall be very glad to have you sit down with me. Indeed, I'm awfully—awfully pleased to have you sit down."

He seated himself with a smile which in a sane person would have betokened unlimited patience.

"And what is Princess Louise doing this morning?" he asked.

"I'm—I was reading a book on birds, Mr. Henry IV.," she said.

He glanced at her quizzically. "Do you mind if I feel your pulse, your highness?" he asked quite humbly.

"Oh, no, indeed not," she assured him, at the same time extending her wrist to him. He pulled out his watch and took her wrist lightly in his hand. Presently he dropped it and returned the watch to his pocket.

"Ah, thank you," he said as he drew a tablet from his pocket and began writing rapidly on one of the pages with a pencil. He laid the tablet aside, and as it lay on the ground near her Barbara read in the round, full hand on the page:

"Janet Tolman.

"June 14. Tucker's Grove. Eyes unusually dilated. Conversation rational. Pulse 83."

"And now, Princess Louise," the young man was saying, "I think we'd better seek the banquet hall."

He rose and slipped the tablet and pencil into his pocket.

"I'm—it's very comfortable here," she said, and then as a forlorn hope she added, "but don't let me detain you."

"But really I insist," he said, with well bred firmness.

Barbara dared no longer hesitate. "Henry IV." assisted her to her feet, and as she gained them he slipped her arm through his own. She felt his arm pinning hers firmly against his side and realized that opposition was useless. Together they started through the grove, and Barbara was surprised to find they took the path leading to the sanitarium. They gained the grounds and started up the hill toward the buildings, "Henry IV." meantime conversing pleasantly and Barbara answering him as best she could. She breathed more freely now, for she was sure they would soon encounter an attendant, who would relieve her of her dangerous escort.

They had nearly gained the summit of the hill when an attendant in white coat came running toward them.

"Pardon me, doctor," he said, addressing Barbara's companion, "but they've just got her."

"Who?" said the other quickly.

"The Tolman woman. Found her in the laundry," said the attendant. "Here they come now," he added, pointing to two men who led a struggling woman between them.

"Good Lord!" gasped the erstwhile "Henry IV." "Who have I got, then?"

"Then—then you're not insane?" said Barbara, giggling hysterically with this sudden removal of the tension.

"I wasn't an hour ago," he said, rubbing his forehead in a bewildered fashion.

"A woman named Tolman confined here escaped, as we supposed, this morning," he explained. "You are the image of her, which accounts for my actions in the grove. She thinks she's Princess Louise and everybody else is some other celebrity. Henry IV. fell to my lot. I'm particularly interested in the case, and because I was wondering what effect the quiet of the woods would have I took your pulse and made those notes in the grove. It's a terribly absurd situation. I don't know how to apologize to you. I presume you thought me insane and tried to humor me."

"Precisely," said Barbara, and they both laughed heartily.

"At least, let me get my automobile and take you home," he said. "I presume you've had quite enough of the grove for one day."

"Thank you," said Barbara, "but it's only a step to where I am staying with my aunt, Mrs. Durgin."

"Mrs. Durgin's!" said the doctor. "Why, I spend half my evenings there."

"Oh, then you must be Dr. Dennett, my aunt's idol," said Barbara.

"A fallen idol, I fear," he returned, "when she hears of my latest escapade."

Three months later they sat one evening before the fireplace at Mrs. Durgin's.

"Really, Barbara," the doctor said, "I demand an answer."

Barbara lifted her downcast eyes and flushed becomingly.

"I suppose I should humor you, as I did once before, 'Henry IV,'" she said.

"I'm utterly uncontrollable when crossed," he laughed.

"Then," sighed Barbara, "for the sake of peace"— But at this point the sentence was interrupted.

Several Kinds of Sausages.

The Germans, in most instances, altogether discard bread crumbs for their sausages, and when they do use them moisten them with milk or water, but the Italians refuse to put any bread into their sausages, and they claim that their famous "Bolognese mortadella" is at once a more nourishing and a more economical sausage than the very best German wurst, inasmuch as the "mortadella" must be boiled three times before it is properly cooked, and the water in which it has been boiled constitutes a strong clear soup. The Romans make likewise a highly ambitious sausage, in which no kind of bread is allowed to enter. They call it "zampino," which is the foot and leg of young pork, the best of which is obtained from Modena.

A leg freshly salted is chosen and carefully skinned, the trotter being preserved; then the meat is finely minced and after being seasoned is replaced in the "zampino," which is tied with string and simmered in an oval pan for two hours. Wholly innocent of bread crumbs are also the renowned "cervelas" of Strassburg.

A View of Robespierre.

At the time of the destruction of the Bastille the most remarkable of the unfortunate wretches who had been confined within its walls was the Comte de Jorge, and he was brought to Mme. Tussaud that she might take a cast of his face. He had been incarcerated for thirty years, and when liberated he begged to be taken back to his prison. The people flocked in thousands to see the dungeons, and Mme. Tussaud was prevailed upon to accompany her uncle and a few friends for the same purpose. While descending the narrow stairs her foot slipped, and she was on the point of falling when she was saved by Robespierre, who held out his protecting hand and just prevented her from coming to the ground. "It would indeed have been a great pity if so young and pretty a patriot should have broken her neck in such a horrid place," said Robespierre, in his own peculiar complimentary style.—"Memoirs of Anna Maria Pickering."

Told In Jericho

Pap Perlins, Postmaster, Tells About a Tin Peddler and a Church Bell.

THE first meeting house built in Jericho had got along for five years without a bell when a tin peddler came along and had a talk with Deacon Sparrow and Uriah Goodspeed and others and got them excited over the subject.

"I'm telling you," said the peddler, "that nothing makes me feel so much like telling the truth and leaving off swear words as the sound of a church bell. It's the same with lots of other men. You want a bell on a church just as much as a man wants a hat on his head. If you don't have a bell you might as well put your preacher in a stable to preach. That same bell can also be rung for prayer meetings, fires, Fourth of July and funerals. It will come in handy to warn folks against mad dogs, and its wild notes will tell the people for a mile around when a savage bull has broke loose and taken to the roads. You can't make no mistake in getting a bell, while if you don't have one you'll be looked down on by the towns that have."

The peddler went his way, and there was talk and talk. After three or four days he came back, and there was more talk. Everybody had decided that it would be a good thing to get a bell, but no one knew just how to go to work to raise the money. It was for the peddler to show the way.

"It can be done as easy as falling off a log," he explained, "and you can have some fun over it at the same time. I'm going to lay up here for a couple of weeks while I paint my wagon, and I'll see you through."

His plan was to get a gallon jug and put a lot of beans into it. No one else should know how many. Everybody should pay 50 cents to guess, and when the guessing closed the one who came nearest to the number should get his half dollar back, and the rest of the money should go for a bell. Two or three of the deacons hung off a little, thinking the plan looked like a lottery, but after a day or two the thing was a go. Indeed Deacon Spooner, who was always considered a lucky man, planked down $2 and recorded four guesses, and the ball was started rolling. Inside of four days every man in Jericho had paid for at least one guess, and inside of a week most of the farmers for five miles around had caught the spirit. The peddler had charge of the money as well as the beans, and every evening there was a gathering at the postoffice to talk the thing over.

When you get a villager started he goes the whole hog. Deacon Spooner got enthusiastic and took three more guesses, and, not to be left behind, Deacon Harper and a dozen others saw the ante. Men who had taken only one guess went in for two and three, and every stranger who came to Jericho was pestered until he came down with a guess. If business flagged a little the tin peddler was on hand to say:

"Let the good work go right on and weary not in well doing. When that bell rings out of a Sunday morning it will be the voice of glad tidings, and you will all shout for joy. I never want to promise more than I can perform, but if Jericho real estate don't jump 25 per cent within a month after that bell goes dingdong then I'll never show my face here again."

After two weeks there were no more guesses to come in, and a meeting was arranged to count the money and the beans and send a committee up to Troy to buy the bell. Everybody turned out to the meeting. Deacon Spooner took charge. He didn't exactly know whether to open it with a Fourth of July oration or the singing of a hymn, but upon a hint from Silas Wigfall, who had just got over the measles and was feeling happy, he recited a poem and gave Christopher Columbus a certificate of character for sobriety.

Then the meeting waited for the peddler to show up, and while it waited Fearnought Pilgrim got up and started out to eulogize George Washington. He had been sorting over potatoes that day and had got things mixed. He said that Washington and Nero had gone down in history together and that the Father of His Country and Captain Kidd would never be forgotten while the fires of patriotism continued to burn. He was proceeding to compare Washington to Scipio when he was called to order and sat down with a jar that shook the hall.

Just about that time Lish Billings came sauntering in. It had been whispered around that he was the only man in Jericho who hadn't come with a guess, but nobody had dared to ask him. As soon as Deacon Spooner caught sight of him he said:

"I observe that Mr. Billings has just entered the hall. May I ask him to give us some information on the subject of church bells?"

"You may," answered Lish. "I've seen a dozen or two in my time, and they was always hung up in a tower or belfry."

"Well?"

"Well?"

"I am going to buy a bell for the meeting house, but I don't understand where you are going to hang it. Will it be to a fence or a post? There's no tower or belfry."

"By John, but he's right!" shouted the deacon after an awful silence. "We are getting a bell before we've got a belfry. Why didn't some of you thick headed people think of that?"

"Why didn't you?" replied a dozen voices in chorus.

"It wasn't my fault. I was bossing the bell, and I supposed some of you would look out for the other things. What are we going to do about it? It's no use to get a bell till we get a belfry."

"Perhaps the tin peddler can help us out," said some one, and there were shouts of "Peddler! Peddler!" from all over the hall. As he didn't stand up in response, Deacon Spooner held up his hand and said:

"Perhaps Mr. Billings will be kind enough to act as a committee of one to step across to the paint shop and bring the peddler over?"

"It wouldn't be any use," replied Lish with a grin on his face. "He left town half an hour ago, and he had a gait of fifteen miles an hour on him when he rattled over the bridge."

The people were benumbed for thirty seconds. Then they broke loose with a yell and began thumping one another, and it took some of them four weeks to get rid of their black eyes and skinned noses. Deacon Spooner lost four front teeth and most of his chin whiskers, and Fearnought Pilgrim had his nose knocked out of plumb and his ear bitten. Night closed down on a scene of carnage, and the sun came up on a picture of desolation, and it took the town ten years to recover its childish confidence in lightning rod men and tin peddlers.

Condensed Sentiment.

The English custom of abbreviating familiar phrases by using the initial letter of each word is one of the first to arouse the interest and occasionally the amusement of Americans.

"R. I. P.," signifying "Rest in peace," is frequently inscribed on monuments, and recently on a very old stone a tourist discovered an epitaph which read something like this:

TAKING STOCK OF THE SITUATION.

THAT it will be a lively campaign is generally conceded. Both republicans and democrats are already making preliminary arrangements for the systematic campaigning to follow later on. There is no lack of confidence on either side, and among republican leaders, especially, there seems to be a feeling of unusual hopefulness. While a wave of hope seems to be sweeping over the democrats of the eastern section of the country it is not causing a receding tide of confidence among the republicans by any means. After the first shock of surprise ever the outcome of their adversary's national convention the republican managers have been taking stock of the situation and outlook, and it is only truthful representation of the actual state of affairs to say that the republican leaders are not in a state of alarm. It will not only be an interesting but a vigorous campaign, and those best informed claim that there is no cause for alarm regarding either the republican national or congressional tickets. Republicans place their main reliance, as stated by a leading worker, to be mainly based upon these elements:

"The undoubted widespread popularity of Roosevelt with the masses, and consequently, the unlikelihood of the voters exchanging a known and approved candidate for an unknown, all other things being equal.

"Second, the fact that there is no vital question at issue between the parties, the differences being largely shadings of opinion on tariff revision, its extent and method of undertaking

"Third, the likelihood of our being able to convince the voters of the wisdom of letting well enough alone in these conditions, rather than to experiment with new men and uncertain policies.

"Fourth, confidence in our ability to show that the democratic party is still unsound at heart on the financial question, and that, notwithstanding the declaration of the head of the party, recent events have demonstrated that the rank and file are not weaned from their silver idols."

EVERY time the Democratic party is faced with its record on a living issue it pleads the statute of limitations.

THE Democratic party occupies much the same position as the man who has sold his body to the physicians for experimental purposes.

"MR. CORTELYOU has done nothing in his life for which he has to apologize," said one of his biographers. That finally disposes of the charge that he ever voted the Democratic ticket.

BRYAN predicts that a campaign with Parker as the candidate would "begin with a foot race and end with a rout." The country feels the same way and refuses to be alarmed over prospects of a change of administration.

THE Census bureau reports that there are 5,000 pianos in the farm houses of one county in Kansas. In Democratic times the Census takers find mortgages instead of pianos in the houses of the nation.

"THERE was a deficit of $38,047,247 during the first year of the Dingley tariff," shouts a Democratic organ. That's true, but since the Dingley schedules went into effect the country has paid the expenses of a war with Spain and produced a surplus of $125,000,000, exclusive of the $50,000,000 paid for the Panama canal franchise. It is never safe for a Democrat to quote figures.

THE Democratic platform demands that the army be reduced to "a point historically demonstrated to be safe and sufficient." The army having already been reduced from 100,000 to 40,000, the Democratic demand can be safely consigned to the pigeon hole labeled "specious flubdubbery."

A STRANGE SPEECH TO CHEER.

Captain Richmond P. Hobson, in addressing the Democratic National Convention, made these observations,

"When we face the great internal problems, with combinations affecting vast numbers of workingmen and corporations aggregating great quantities of capital, their interest seeming apparently to conflict, when local peace is sometimes affected, it is of the utmost importance that our public servants should legislate wisely and justly, so that no lawful person or combination of persons may be interfered with. Aye, there should be neither intimidation nor menace from labor, nor bribery or unique influence from capital. Aye, and when the laws are enacted there must be no wavering in their execution. They should be executed impartially and fearlessly. And yet in the face of this situation we find the party in power afraid really to take hold of the questions of labor. Tell me what President has ever been brave enough to enforce the law against a labor union violator? It was a Democratic President."

It is natural, perhaps, that Captain Hobson, educated to the profession of arms, should sympathize with the quick and ruthless employment of force as a solvent of the labor problem, but it is remarkable that his praise of Cleveland for invading a sovereign State, despite the protest of its Governor, in order to aid capital against labor, should be applauded by a national gathering of Democrats. The Pulishers' Press News Association says:

"Hobson was loudly cheered when he said it was a Democratic President who alone had been brave enough to enforce the laws against labor unions."

The one feature of President Roosevelt's administration which most deserves the approval of men of heart, judgment and patriotism was his settlement of the coal strike by consultation, conciliation and arbitration. That act shines out nobly in contrast with Cleveland's military raid into Chicago against the railroad strikers. A feat for which he won the lasting gratitude of every trust in the country

In charity it must be supposed that the St. Louis Convention did not hear exactly what Captain Hobson was saying. As for that heroic young man himself, it is to be regretted that he abandoned the fighter's trade. He is out of place in civil life, and particularly as a spokesman for Democrats.

PARKER THE TRUSTS' MAN.

The national campaign is very young, and yet signs multiply that the Standard Oil Co. and other great interests peculiarly indentified with trust finance are against President Roosevelt. The prominence of August Belmont, the banker, in Parker's behalf at [St. Louis speaks for itself. Then there is P. M. McCarren, another of Parker's managers, who is so zealous in his labors for the "money power" that Mr. W. R. Hearst is compelled to serve notice through his papers that while the latter papers will support the ticket McCarren is not a fit campaign manager for a Democratic candidate, being a lobbyist for the trusts and in the pay of the Standard Oil Co.

But this is not the whole story. A few days ago the Wall Street Journal the most representative Wall street paper published, asserted that "the hatred of high finance for President Roosevelt is undiminished," and that "very confident assertions are made by local Democratic politicians that there will be any amount of Standard Oil money for Judge Parker." And now, most significant of all, the New York Herald on Saturday stated that William G. Rockefeller, having been appointed a member of the campaign committee of the Union League Club, a Republican organization, whose president is Cornelius N. Bliss, treasurer of the Republican national committee, has declined to serve.

Taken in connection with President Roosevelt's avowed and unmistakable position that the trusts must be forced to obey the laws just as well as the humblest citizens, these indications leave no room for doubt that Parker is the trust's candidate. Can they elect him, with all their money? There is only one answer to this question in the mind of anybody who has faith in the honesty and intelligence of the mass of American people.

Quarterly Meeting.

Rev. W. R. Cunningham, of the United Brethren church, announces that quarterly meeting services will be held at Underwood church Saturday and Sunday, July 23rd and 24th. On the latter day a basket meeting will be a feature. Rev Cunningham extends an invitation to the public generally to attend.

MR. FINDLAY ON PARTIES' MERITS.

What Republicans and Democrats Stand For—Former Party of Deeds.

"I think that former Secretary Root's convention speech nominating President Roosevelt may be taken as a fair representative of the Republican party," said Hon. John V. L. Findlay Saturday, "and on the other hand the speech of Mr. Littleton nominating Mr. Parker is a fit representative of the Democratic party. One was a calm, dignified and logical appeal to the record of the Republicans, and the other, particularly in its opening, was a wild, hysterical and strained rhetorical rhapsody, standing for nothing but windy and wordy declamation.

"The Republican party is a party of deeds, and hence Mr. Root was in a large measure, an historian, whereas Mr. Littleton, as representing the Democratic party, which is simply a party of words, was nothing but a rhetorician, and by the limitations to which he was subjected could have been nothing more. Roosevelt as a man of deeds is a fit representative of his party, and Parker, as a man who has never done anything but write opinions, is also a proper representative of the Democratic party.

"When I say this, I do not forget Judge Parker's famous telegram, which has been so much lauded as an act of sublime heroism, more so than Roosevelt's charge up San Juan Hill or the late settlement of the labor strike, or the Venezuelan question, or any of the illustrious deeds with which his name is imperishably associated and all of which, according to the Democratic journals, have been thrown into the shade by this audacious telegram. I would be the last person to depreciate genuine boldness and straightforwardness in a public man, for of such characteristics there is a great dearth in the land, but was this a genuinely bold or straightforward act?

"I agree with Mr. Bryan in his comments on it, and think it it very clear that if he had made the announcement before the nomination was made he would not have been nominated at all; but once nominated he knew it would be death to the party to turn him down, and no new nomination under the circumstances was possible.

"I dont think that he can object to having Bryan quoted as an authority against him, because Bryan claims and by thousands of Democrats is believed to be the straightest Democrat in the party, besides, Parker voted twice for Bryan.

"The country has had too recently under Cleveland a taste of what Democratic rule means, and that taste is too bitter in its mouth yet for Parker to get the benefit of a desire for change which is the uppermost motive in the breasts of a certain class of voters. I look to see Roosevelt and Fairbanks elected by a large majority. The country is reasonably prosperous, and the Democrats certainly give no promises in their platform why it will be any more so if they should elect their ticket. They are not even agreed on the tariff, which the platform is foolish enough to denounce as robbery. Imperialism is a dead issue, and Parker has been nominated on the theory that more money can be collected out of Wall street for his campaign than Roosevelt can command.

"This stamps the Democratic party at once as the friend of the money power and the enemy of labor from the Democratic standpoint. The inconsistency and hypocrisy of it is manifest, and, therefore, the trust buscers have not much to keep their zeal warm for the ticket. The Republicans have had all of the 44 years since the war, with the exception of Cleveland's eight, and it looks to me that we were about to add four more to this brilliant record by the election of a President who is a worthy successor to any man who ever sat in the Presidential chair."

WHICH WILL BE THE PROGRESSIVE COUNTIES?

The Highway Division of the State Geological Survey has done well to issue, in attractive pamphlet form, a brief statement of the purposes and mode of operation of the State Aid Road Law passed by the Legislature at its last session. The pamphlet, after summarizing the objects and methods of the law, gives the law itself in full; and appended to it is a page, perforated for detachment, containing a blank form of application to the Highway Division for such surveys and plans as may be necessary for the purpose of making specifications and estimates of cost for any proposed road improvement, the application to be signed by the Board of County Commissioners. The Highway Division points out in its pamphlet that as the law "does not become operative until January 1, 1905, there is an opportunity in the meantime for the various Boards of County Commissioners to take up the preliminary work in connection with the selection of the road to be first built," and that "these preliminary araangements take much time, and if they are delayed until the first of the year much valnable time will be lost and little progress will be made the first season." It also calls attention to the fact that "any county applying in season to have its surveys made during the present year will gain the advantage of having the full cost of the surveys paid by the State in the end, while one-half of the cost of the surveys made after January 1, 1905, must be borne permanently by the county, as stated in Sections 5 and 10 of the act."

There should be a healthy rivalry among the counties of Maryland to avail themselves of the liberal, and yet not pauperizing, provisions of the road act. The question of its constitutionality should not be permitted to interfere with the taking of the preliminary steps suggested by the Highway Division; if the law should be pronounced unconstitutional, no harm will have been done, while if it stands the test of the courts the good work will have been but a step forward. In any case, moreover, there is every reason to believe that the constitutional amendment legitimating such appropriations as are called for in the law will be approved by the people at election of 1905; and, though the work will be postponed one year if it has to wait for this action, yet the fixing upon a define line at present will conduce to its prompt prosecution when the law does come into operation. There is no reason why any county interested in its own progress should delay in making its wishes known, and putting them in the way of fulfillment. In nothing can a county show its progressive spirit more unmistakably than in than in manifesting its readiness and eagerness to provide itself with that essential of a flourishing community, good roads.

The law gives every county an equal chance in securing the co-operation of the State. The amount of aid receivable by any county is in direct proportion to the public-road mileage of the county as compared with the total of such mileage for the State. If less than this quota is taken by any county, the remainder is put down again for the general fund, to be re-apportioned among the other counties that are willing to pay half the cost on all the improved roads they can get under the law may thus be benefited to a point beyond their original share, while less progressive or public-spirited counties will lose the corresponding part of their possible benefits. The operation of the scheme will result in great benefit, to the State as a whole, provided the various counties show the spirit that is to be expected. It must be remembered that the thing contemplated is not a mere local improvement here and there, but the gradual building of a system of good roads forming a network embracing the entire State. The application for State aid must in each instance be approved by the State commission on the ground that the road in question is "one of general public convenience." With the administration of the law thus in excellent hands, and with the clear purpose in view of making a genuine advance in the State's facilities for communication and transportation in its country districts, there should be an eager and general acceptance by the County Commissioners of the opportunity for public improvement offered by the road law. —Baltimore News.

Prof. Chas. E. Hoye Tells of a Summer Resort On the Island.

BAGIO, BENGUET PROV., P. I. May 1, 1904.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Perhaps a few lines from a Philippine "summer resort" will be of interest to the people of the famous resorts of Garrett county.

During March, April and May, our warmest months, the schools of the Islands are closed for vacation, so in April we sailed from Manila on the Government boat 150 miles north, then traveled ten miles east by carriage to the foot of the mountains; here we secured a chair and four Igorrote men to carry Mrs. Hoye and the baby and two men to carry baggage, while I rode a little native pony when the trail was not too steep. So equipped we began our 24 mile journey up to the top of the principal mountain range of Luzon where roads are unknown and almost all transportation is on the backs of naked savages.

Bagio is a new town, situated in a hilly pine and grass covered country 5000 feet above sea level—a 5000 foot rise within 30 miles makes a pretty steep climb.

The difference in climate! In one day we went from a sweltering tropical summer to a climate resembling summer time at Oakland, only much cooler. I sleep under two heavy woolen blankets, and my wife can't go out walking during the day without a wrap.

In the town is a Government sanitarium, constabulary post, a new Episcopal church, a hotel and a few American and native houses and huts. Rates at the Sanitarium to Government employes are $1.00 and $1.50 per day, and at the hotel $2.00; the former is full, so we are at the hotel. Bagio is the summer capital of the Islands and Gov. Wright and the Commission are here now.

This mountain country is thinly populated by a few American miners and a native tribe called Igorrotes, who the Spanish vainly tried to civilize and Christianize. The natives are interesting because they represent "humanity in the rough." They are remarkably strong and hardy, though like all Filipinos, small compared with Americans. When working the men wear no clothing except a gee string around the loins, but the women are better dressed. A man may wear a kind of coat or shirt when the weather is cool but it is a tribal custom to let the legs go bare; men never wear trousers. Each member of a family has a home made blanket in which he sleeps by a fire on the floor at night and wears over his shoulders in the daytime when he feels cool. They are the dirtiest people I have seen; the water in the streams is always rather cold so they never bathe.

Naturally the new educational system is rather backward here but I visited the school last week and saw one hundred and twenty boys busily studying English; these pupils come from all parts of this province; they are housed, fed, supplied with a red blanket each and books by the Government and taught by American teachers. Girls do not come to school because they do most of the work both in and out of the house.

Some of your readers perhaps think the Filipinos should be given independence or at least self government.

Well but—

Yesterday I saw a public town document granting a license; it was written by the town secretary, an Ilocano Filipino and signed by the Igorrote Presidente or Mayor; the signature was made by "his honor" putting his right thumb in ink and then making an impression on the paper with his thumb, leaving a blot.

All Igorrote officials sign with a thumb print as they cannot write.

Again, I was in court last week. Within fifteen minutes I heard five languages used, viz, English, Spanish, Ilocano, Tagalog and Igorrote, There were four interpreters.

Very respectfully,
CHARLES E. HOYE.

P. S.—I have been transferred to Pasay, Rizal, a suburb of Manila, where I shall be engaged as supervising principal of schools.

BLOOMINGTON.

Mr. James Green, Auditor of the Wabash Railroad company, with headquarters at Baltimore, arrived in town Sunday morning to spend his vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Green, of Brantsburg.

The members of the Sunday School of St. James P. E. Church, Westernport, Rev. Williams, pastor, came up on the accommodasion train Wednesday morning to hold their annual outing and pic-nic in Borderside grove. They had hardly gotten on the grounds when a severe thunder storm came up, dampened the grass and stopped all the fun and amusements of the little ones.

The announcement of the marriage of Mr. Herbert Price and Miss Daisy Elliott, which took place at Cumberland on the 7th of last February, was given to the public on last Tuesday morning and created a great surprise to the relatives and friends of the bride and groom. The marriage was a well kept secret as not one of their friends and acquaintances regarded the attention displayed by one for the other to be more than those of an ordinary friendly character. The groom, well known and popular, is a son of Rev. Price of Baltimore, who some years ago filled the M. E. pulpit at this place. The bride, a handsome lady, is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Elliott, and comes from a prominent family in this vicinity. The happy pair are now boarding with Mrs. Daniel Raley preparatory to housekeeping as soon as a suitable house can be secured.

The work at the Pattison mine is almost entirely suspended and times become so dull in the coal business that a number of the employes have obtained employment at other places.

Janie, the little four year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Portess, an English family living at Seldom Seen, while playing in the high grass near her home on last Thursday afternoon about 5 o'clock was bitten on the left ankle by a supposed copperhead snake. The reptile was not seen but the symptoms became so severe that the physician and friends concluded that the bite inflicted was of a very poisonous nature. The limb and entire left side commenced to swell immediately after the child was bitten and by the next morning presented a horrible sight. For a few days she was in a critical condition and life dispaired of, but we are glad to note a decided improvement since Sunday and her ultimate recovery assured.

Antonio Schleigheldo, an Italian No. 162 trackman on the B. & O., was bitten by a copperhead snake shortly after going to work on Friday morning. He was working about a mile west of town near Pattison's mine and was in the act of turning a crosstie when the snake, which lay coiled up near the tie, struck him fairly in the left hand. The Italian was frightened so badly he did not stop to kill the snake, but ran to a doctor. Notwithstanding prompt and heroic treatment his left hand, arm and side swelled to an enormous size. Thanks to a plentiful supply of snake bite remedies and a liberal and generous use of the same under the direction of Dr. Kemp, the Italy-man still survives.

The M. E. Sunday School will hold its annual picnic in Brydon's grove on July 28th.

THE JUDGE.

Judge Parker on a summer's day
Raked the meadows sweet with hay.
Beneath his bonnet buzzed the bee
Whose other name was Democracy.
Raking, he thought, and within him stirred.
Though—but he would not say a word.
Thoughts that he scarcely dared to own
Of something better than he had known.
But as he looked to the summer sky
A messenger came sauntering by.
"A telegram," said the kid. "By gee!
For A. B. Parker." The Judge said "me."
"Dear Judge: You're it if you don't object.
Please wire reply. [Signed] Hill. [COLLECT]."
"Thanks," wired the Judge. "Democracy:
I do accept it. [Signed] A. B. P."
"Aha!" said the sage of fair Esopus,
"I guess this is my magnum opus.
Proverbial silence must now be broke,
Though silence is golden—that ai no joke.
And of all glad words that e'er were writ,
The gladdest are those: "Boys, I am it."
Hooray for party! Hooray for Judge!
Hooray for the message that made him budge!

MOUNTAIN LAKE COMMUNITY.

Capt. James A. Hayden Elected Fifth Member of the Community.

The affairs of the Mountain Lake Park Community and the Mountain Lake Park Association over which there has been for two or three years past a contention between a portion of the lot owners of the Park and the Association, have been amicably adjusted and everything now has a rosy look for the future.

At the Community meeting held last Wednesday when the property owners elected two members of the Annual Committee and the following day when the Association elected two members of the Committee the way was paved for the settlement of the differences then existing. The Community members elected Dr. Laughlin and Truman Casteel and the Association chose as its representatives on the municipal board Messrs. L. P. Carr and A. D. Naylor. These four members met Monday evening and selected unanimously as the fifth member of the Annual Committee Capt. James A. Hayden, thus giving residents of the Park or those residing within the confines of the county a majority.

The Committee selected as its president Mr. Carr and as its secretary Dr. Laughlin.

The other officers who were elected at the Cummunity meeting last week were Mr. E. E. Friend, treasurer; J. L. Echard, street supervisor, and Mr. H. E. May, policeman.

Col. John W. Avirett has recovered sufficiently from his recent accident to sail for Boston via the M. & M. steamer Howard, which left Baltimore Monday evening. He is accompanied by Mrs. Avirett.

Mr. W. H. Spedden, of Fairmont, accompanied by his two little daughters, Ruth and Jane, came to Oakland Saturday and remained until Tuesday afternoon visiting Mrs. William Hinebaugh and other relatives.

Mrs. W. H. Harris and family of Washington, arrived here Saturday afternoon and are occupying the residence of Mr. G. A. Fraley on Oak street for the summer. Mr. Fraley and family will reside in the Presbyterian manse during the occupancy of their home by Mrs. Harris.

Mr. William T. Ravenscraft, of Denver, Col., arrived here from his home Saturday morning and is visiting his parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Ravenscraft on Third street. After a stay of a few days he with his wife and daughter, who are also visiting here, will go over near Pittsburg to visit other relatives.

Lupton Frantz, who came to town yesterday from St. Louis, says that Jim Lazelle, formerly of town, is boxing preliminaries at the West End Atheletic Club, St. Louis. "Lup" has been doing the same kind of work out there, and has a broken arm, the result of a hard fall in the ring.—Connellsville Courier.

A very handsome and massive monument has been erected on the Spedden burial lot in the cemetery here. The monument is dark granite with markers for the graves of the same stone and is a very handsome piece of work. The monument was erected as a memorial to Mr. and Mrs. Spedden by their surviving children.

Our Bloomington letter this week contains a number of newsy items among them being the miraculous restoration of a little child which had been bitten by a supposedly copper head snake and the account of a similar occurrence to an Italian trackman employed on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at Pettison's mine, a mile west of Bloomington.

Rev. S. M. Miller, who for two years served the Presbyterian congregation in Oakland, and Terra Alta as pastor, resigned his charge several weeks ago, taking effect on July 1st, leaving a few days later for his old home near Martinsburg to which point his family followed on Monday morning. Rev. Miller and his estimable wife and family leave behind them in Oakland many warm friends who regret their departure.

Long John Chaney, of the vicinity of Avilton, Garrett county, came down Monday, four days ahead, and at 2 o'clock yesterday his preparations to attend the show were complete. A number of people along his route had not heard that a show in Frostburg was impending until they saw him pass. —Misses May Wonn, of Milwaukee, Wis., and Josie Robinson, of Oakland, Md., were the guests of Mrs. Edward L. Betz this week. —J. O. Carey, of Hunterville, W. Va., who left Frostburg 20 years ago, is visiting his father Daniel Carey, of Garrett county, 92 years of age. Mr. Carey is superintendent of the St. Lawrence Lumber Co., one of the largest concerns in that section. The daily output is 125,000 feet of stock lumber. Company employs 300 men at the mill and in the woods. While in Frostburg Mr. Carey, with his wife and four charming daughters, are the guests of his brother-in-law, ex-Tax Collecter. John N. Layman. Mr. Carey is a prominent Free Mason of West Va. and held in high esteem by the St. Lawrence Lumber company.—Frostburg Journal.

AN IMMERSE METEOR

Found at Mountain Lake Park—Pronounced Genuine by An Authority.

A few drys ago Mr. R. G. Richardson, of Keyser, W. Va., who owns a cottage at Mountain Lake Park, arrived there in company with his wife and upon going to the house was surprised to see an object resembling a huge turtle resting upon his front porch. For some time he was at a loss to know what the object was or how it came there but was finally enlightened by a geologist from the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, who is staying at the Park, who pronounced it as being a meteor.

The meteor is steel gray in color, almost perfectly smooth and at night gives off a glowing light. It is as hard as flint and its weight is estimated at five hundred pounds.

The geologist in question explained also how the meteor came to be in the position in which it was found by saying that in descending it described a circular or spinning motion and the attraction of the earth upon it was counterbalanced by the attraction in the heavens and when about to strike the earth it had almost ceased moving, thus gently settling upon the porch with out doing the structure any damage.

The meteor is probably the largest that ever fell in this latitude. Further north, however, they became larger. Lieut. Peary, who explored the Arctic region, reported to the Washington authorities that he found one which he estimated to weigh a hundred tons.

An effort is being made by the Smithsonian authorities to get possession of the meteor at the Park and place it in the National Museum.

Died.

DEBERRY—After a protracted illness extending over a period of two years, Sarah Emma, aged 28 years, three months and three days, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark DeBerry of near Oakland, died on Friday, July 15th, 1904. The deceased lady had taught in the public school of the county for six years prior to her illness and had won the respect and high esteem of a large number of friends and acquaintances. She was a most excellent lady and a devout Christian. She leaves surviving her a father and mother, three brothers and six sisters to mourn the loss of this loved one. The funeral services were held at the home Sunday afternoon being conducted by Rev. Dr. Scott, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, assisted by Rev. John M. Davis. Miss DeBerry had been a consistent member of the church for ten years. As a mark of the respect in which Miss DeBerry was held the funeral was attended by a very large gathering of relatives and friends. After the services at the house the remains were interred in the family burial ground beside those of her brother Arthur who died a little over a year ago.

YOMMER—At the home of his parents at Jennings, this county, Martin Luther, aged 10 years nine months and eleven days, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Yommer, on July 6th. The funeral took place the following Friday, being conducted by Rev. E. S. Johnston, with interment at Grantsville.

Mr. M. H. McKinzie of near Finzel, Md., was in town Monday. "Mose" has become a farmer and finds that peaceful calling just suited to his temperament, but his interest in the mining situation is as keen as ever. He is adding to his poultry but has some trouble with the crows and foxes. One of the latter gobbled an entire brood of chicks and next day came back and dined on the old hen. "Mose" has had heavily loaded shot guns ready for that fox. On the whole he is better off now than he was as a miner.—Meyersdale Commercial.

The Rev. J. B. Shoup, who according to the newspapers, is now performing a walking feat from Cumberland, Md., to St. Louis via the old National Road, is well known in Somerset county. He served several Lutheran pastorates in this county in the early 80's. He is a pulpit orator of more than usual ability. While serving the Rockwood congregation he built a new church at Markleton. The subscriptions and dedicatory contributions did not cover the cost of the church by a considerable amount. The local membership did not exceed a half dozen, and the Rev. Shoup, who was then in the prime of life—of giant strength and cast in heroic mold—took a contract of cutting pulp wood to earn by his own hands the amount of the deficiency and prevent the sale of the church for the remaining debt, which he did by almost a year of strenuous labor. His St. Louis trip is a mild circumstance compared with the Markleton exploit.—Johnstown Tribune.

Shooting at Fairmont.

W. L. Protzman, a prominent business man, shot and then stabbed David Wilson for speaking insultingly of his daughter at Fairmont, W. Va. Wilson's recovery is doubtful. Protzman is under arrest.

VOICE AND VIOLIN

By W. W. Hines

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

Herman Muller was thrifty, very shy, very musical and very much in love. The fact that he was very shy and very much in love disturbed him greatly, and the fact that he was very musical disturbed other people, particularly the people in the house where he boarded. This house was in a very quiet part of Brooklyn, and from it Herman went to his work in New York every morning and returned in the evening. During business hours, from 9 to 5, he was Herman Muller, head bookkeeper for the importing firm of Drummond & Hart. After business hours he was "that moon eyed Dutchman who plays the fiddle."

Herman had tried one boarding house after another, but never had he found one where violin playing at night was encouraged either by landlady or the other boarders. Finally he had moved into this house and, in desperation, resolved to brave all the unkind remarks. The quiet part of the city suited him, and really the other boarders were not as entirely unreasonable as some others he had known. Opening on to his room was a small fire escape balcony, and he had secured permission to sit on this in the evenings and play his violin softly. The softness was stipulated by the concessionnaires. It was very cold on the balcony in winter time, but he was always cheered up by the society of his beloved "fiddle" and the knowledge that spring was coming.

And it was in the spring that he fell in love—not once, but twice. Now, it was grateful to his Teutonically sentimental soul to fall in love, but it is difficult even for a German musician to love two women at once with whole souled enthusiasm. Yet he was not exactly in love with two women—he was in love with a woman and with a voice.

The woman was the new stenographer in the office of Drummond & Hart. Slender, brunette and dainty, she was in every respect antithetical to the big, blond, untidy looking fellow who so admired her at first sight. But Herman was a handsome fellow despite the careless manner in which he dressed, and the new stenographer often glanced at him approvingly when she knew he was looking the other way.

HE WORKED HIS WAY ALONG FROM THE FIRE ESCAPE.

Mr. Drummond, the senior partner in the firm, introduced Herman to the new stenographer. He knew Herman's reputation for shyness and only by a great effort kept down a smile when he saw the big German blush conspicuously upon meeting the frank glance of the young girl. The introduction over, Herman promptly turned to his books, more for the purpose of letting the blush die away than for any other reason. As he pored over the books he reflected with delight that the girl's name, Helen Dumont, was a name that eminently suited her.

It was not until business hours were over, his dinner eaten and the violin and himself in close companionship on the little balcony that he decided he was at last in love. Then he took the violin into his confidence, cuddling it up to his chin and playing very softly a little love song of the Rhine country. It was a light thing, rippling and sunshiny, and it seemed to express his feelings. He wondered if Helen was musical. She must be, her face was so sensitive, he decided.

As he played he heard a window raised in the house next door and reflected uneasily that some one would probably shout across to him to keep his fiddle playing for the daytime. However, no protest came, and he changed the air he was playing to Schubert's serenade. Scarcely had he taken up the measure of this than he heard a voice accompanying him. No words were sung; it was a sort of humming, but in a voice of so pure a soprano quality that he was thrilled through and through. Then he played one of Sauer's peasant love songs, and the voice still accompanied him, this time singing the words very softly. But other windows in his own house were raised to protest at the music. From the window where the singer sat a silvery laugh floated out. The window closed, and the voice accompanied his music no more that night.

Next day at the office he stole many furtive glances at Miss Dumont and tried to decide whether he was in love with her or with the voice he had heard the night before. Already he was beginning to think of it as The Voice, mentally capitalizing the words. Before the day was over he decided that he was in love with Helen Dumont. The graceful turn of her head and the purity of expression in her big brown eyes seemed to him worth all the voices in the world. But in the evening The Voice again accompanied his violin playing, and for an hour he was near to forgetting Miss Dumont.

This went on all through the spring, and Herman began to lose flesh under the strain of trying to decide whether he was in love with a beautiful girl or a beautiful voice. Time and again he wrestled unavailingly with the shyness which prevented him from getting better acquainted with Helen Dumont. He often met her on his way home in the evening and knew that she lived somewhere close, but he could never quite get his courage up to the point of asking permission to call on her.

Then he made up his mind that he would see the owner of The Voice. He knew that she lived in the house next to the place where he boarded, but a projecting bay window cut off the view of this house from his window, and he had no way of knowing what room the owner of The Voice occupied.

One evening in June he made his opportunity. At the end of a waltz song which he had been playing he softly laid down his violin and stepped on to the next fire escape balcony. He was long armed and athletic, so it was with little difficulty that he worked his way along from one fire escape to another until he had rounded the point of the bay window. The bright moonlight made him easily visible on the fire escape, and he knew that he stood an excellent chance of being shot for a burglar, but physical danger was not half so terrifying as the prospect of continuing longer with his love divided between a voice and a woman.

As he reached the poiift of the bay window he peeped cautiously around it. He saw a girl leaning out of a window, and he instantly darted back. The girl was Helen Dumont. He had not known she lived so close to him, and he hoped she had not seen him. He resolved to wait where he was until the girl with The Voice should come back to her window. He had to wait only a few moments before he heard The Voice humming the refrain of the waltz song which he had been playing a few minutes before. Again peeping cautiously around the wall, he again saw only Helen Dumont. She saw him and laughed that sweet, silvery laugh he had heard before.

It struck him suddenly and very forcibly that he was a fool, a big German, musical, sentimental fool. The owner of the voice was Helen Dumont. Therefore he must be twice as much in love with Helen as he had thought it possible to love a woman. Very quietly he made his way back to his own balcony and picked up his violin again. If, stupid fool that he was, he could not speak for himself, he could make his instrument speak for him. The Voice was silent, but he did not care. He knew that she must understand. As a finale he played a composition of his own only in time to escape epithets hurled at him from half a dozen nearby houses.

And, once having told his love with the violin, he had less difficulty than he anticipated when he called on Helen Dumont the following evening and proposed in due form.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Muller live in one of New York's prettiest suburbs, in a cottage where violin music and singing can disturb no neighbors. The wife is just as happy as a woman can be who takes vast pride in her husband's talent and stupidity. She is even prouder of his stupidity than of his talent. Herman—well, he has never got over falling in love with his wife twice, a thing possible only to stupidity like this.

He Had Not Invested.

There is no more effective weapon against an evil minded man than ridicule. "I would sooner undertake to disperse a mob, could I get its ear, by ridicule than by the bayonet," wrote the Rev. T. P. Hunt, an old time temperance lecturer, whose own quick wit saved him frequently from rough usage.

At one of his lectures, when the cause of temperance was new, Mr. Hunt heard a gentleman, evidently of considerable influence, haranguing the crowd against temperance. As the lecturer passed the door he heard this man say:

"It is nothing but a money making scheme."

"Sir," Hunt replied quickly, "you do not believe that, and I can prove it."

The man defied him to do so.

"You are a stranger to me," said Mr. Hunt, "but I judge from your appearance that you pay close attention to your own affairs and are always looking for good investments. You are hunting for good bargains. Is it not so?"

The man admitted that it was, and some one in the crowd shouted, "He's a regular skinflint!"

"Well, gentlemen," resumed the lecturer, "I have been two days endeavoring to get him to join the temperance ranks. If he believed it to be a money making business, wouldn't he have taken stock?"

"Yes, yes," came a shout from the crowd. Mr. Hunt's opponent escaped as quickly as he could, while the listeners hailed him with laughter and cries of "Join, colonel! Join! Take stock! Take stock! We won't believe you if you don't!"

The Dear Little Things.

THE month of June
That's due quite soon
Will bring along commencement day,
And not the least
Of this great feast
Is she, the subject of this lay.
Though young and fair,
With sage an air,
The always sweet girl graduate
Will essays read
Some crying need
To preach in style elaborate.
She'll say, to boot,
The only root
Of evil is the thing called cash.
She'll tell us, too,
That China's blue
Because the powers o'er her clash;
Recite, besides,
How in the ides
Of March was Julius Caesar slain
And claim, will she,
That Italy
Across the Alps for aye has lain.
This girl in lawn
Will swear that dawn
The darkest hour of all precedes,
And on this day
All she may say
The gallant world as true concedes.

The Jolly Farmer.

When the farmer espied a little boy industriously collecting apples from the topmost branches of his best tree he stole back to the farmhouse and took down a stuffed image of Pongo, his greatly mourned sheep dog, from the cupboard, and in a few minutes the stuffed dog had been placed at the foot of the tree.

The farmer then proceeded with the business of the farm, and the men wondered why every now and then he chuckled to himself.

An hour went by, and the farmer was once more at the foot of the tree.

"Hello, there!" he cried. "What are ye doing up my tree, eh?"

The boy was pale and quivering with fright, but he had not altogether lost his presence of mind.

"P-please, sir," he shivered, "that great big dog down there"—pointing to the well preserved Pongo—"he chased me, he did, all over your meadow, an' I had to climb this tree to get out of his way!"—Kansas City Independent.

Property Recovered.

A family in Florida lost their little boy and advertised for him in a daily paper. That afternoon an alligator crawled out of the swamp and died on the front doorstep. In his stomach was found a handful of red hair, some bone buttons, a pair of bootheels, a glass alley, a pair of check trousers and a paper collar. The advertisement did it. —Mobile Herald.

The American Lover And the English Lover

By MRS. FRANK LESLIE

THE British lover and the American lover are about on a par, although the Englishman, as a general thing, assumes as soon as he is engaged a certain air of authority and PROPRIETORSHIP which the American never dreams of at any period of his career as a lover or EVEN AS A HUSBAND.

I feel sure that in the English marriage service the word "obey" is spelled with a big "O," for it seems the principal point of the bride's new duties, and the fiancee is cheerfully ready to begin to practice her obligations. If she tries to rebel, her mother and friends, perhaps her betrothed himself, call her to account with the threat that if she doesn't take care SHE WILL LOSE HER OPPORTUNITY.

Say that to an American girl, and what walls or roofs would contain her scorn? She would return that young man's rings and letters before the hour was out and not know him the next time she met him. But with the English girl a different heredity and a different training have produced an entirely different temperament. She also has insensibly gathered from the mutual demeanor of her father and mother the standard of matrimonial manners and obligations. She perceives that her mother's first duty is to defer in all things to her father; to provide for his physical comfort at the expense perhaps of her own; TO COAX, CAJOLE, PERSUADE OR DECEIVE HIM into consenting to an entertainment, an expedition, a new gown or a new visitor. The father is a little Jupiter, and the mother is an "ox eyed Juno" whose principal virtue is amiable submission, and whose principal study is how to circumvent the Thunderer.

Of course the girl accepts her father as the highest and noblest type of husband and her mother as the INEVITABLE type of wife, and her character molds itself insensibly to these limitations and upon these lines. She becomes another attentive, submissive, furtive wife like her mother, the charming English wife of an Englishman.

But make the marriage international, and the domestic machine declines to run in any such time honored ruts. A broad gauge engine will not, cannot, adapt itself to a narrow gauge road, and some fearful jolting, with very likely A CATASTROPHE AT THE END, will be the result of trying to make it.

THE ENGLISHMAN'S ESTIMATE OF WOMAN, HER RIGHTS, HER PRIVILEGES, HER DUTIES, IS ALTOGETHER DIFFERENT FROM THAT OF AN AMERICAN. WHATEVER HIS OUTWARD DEMEANOR IN HIS OWN OR OTHER COUNTRIES, HIS UNDERLYING CONVICTION IS THAT "WOMAN IS THE LESSER MAN."

If the woman is bright, keen and well educated, he looks upon her as a phenomenon and rather undesirable AS A WIFE.

Renew the Chinese Exclusion Act

By BISHOP HENRY C. POTTER

THE Chinese exclusion act, which expires in October, ought to be renewed. We think that we are a big nation. We have 80,000,000 people. China has 400,000,000. If one-fourth of the people of the Chinese empire came here THEY COULD CONTROL OUR LAWS AND OUR RELIGION. The influx would reduce wages, and our mechanics, who are now earning from $2 to $4 a day, would soon get only 30 CENTS, the same as is paid in China.

Japanese Successes Furnish No Argument For Torpedo Boats

By Admiral Sir CYPRIAN BRIDGE, British Navy

I SEE no new lesson from torpedo boats in the present war in the east. My view is there is only one way to defend yourself effectively against torpedo attack and that is to ASSUME A VIGOROUS OFFENSIVE. If you go hunting a squadron of torpedo boats, they will have quite enough to occupy them in looking out for themselves. The essence of a torpedo boat is attack by surprise, to get in unobserved, launch a torpedo and get away. If you simply remain quiet and trust in an obstruction which you put around you, an active, vigorous assailant is bound to find a soft place in it.

I do not regard the submarine as progress. In my mind it is a somewhat HANDICAPPED TORPEDO BOAT. As I said, a torpedo boat depends on suddenness, and it also depends on invisibility, by which suddenness of attack is aided. If it can leave its base, reach its objective, deliver its attack and get nearly back to its base before daylight it has a very great prospect of escaping with impunity. To do this it is obvious that IT MUST HAVE HIGH SPEED. The submarine becomes invisible only when near the object of attack. It is then more completely invisible than the ordinary torpedo boat, but it has to pay what I regard as the very high price of relatively extreme slowness in movement. I don't think a submarine has been constructed, or is likely to be, that can cover more than nine or ten knots per hour. Therefore the apparent advantage of TEMPORARY INVISIBILITY is neutralized by lack of speed.

BATTLESHIPS, WHEN VERY LARGE, ARE INEFFECTIVE. THE MODERN BATTLESHIP IS A FORTRESS AFLOAT, AND THE LAND IS THE PLACE FOR A FORTRESS. TO MY MIND IT IS INADVISABLE TO BUILD BATTLESHIPS LARGER THAN THE KEARSARGE AND KENTUCKY, AND EVEN THEY ARE A BIT LARGE.

I do not hesitate to say that the sanitary arrangements in the latest type of British battleships are disgusting. On the Kentucky it is as if one were in a private house. On the Glory, which is a fairly new vessel, there isn't a single bath, except one placed way down in a dark hold, where the middies bathe. I should say, in respect to her inside fittings, the Kentucky is A HUNDRED YEARS IN ADVANCE OF ANY OF OUR WARSHIPS.

Jehoshaphat's Reform

In that dim past, when Homer was singing the Iliad in Greek cities, Jehoshaphat started an educational embassy through the kingdom of Judah. This commission of prince, priests, and Levites is unique. Its methods were an advance upon those of the poet. It carried with it, and left behind it, a written literature. "They had the book of the law of the Lord with them, and went about throughout all the cities of Judah and taught them." This is said to have been the germ of the synagogue, an institution which played so large a part in later Hebrew history. This first recorded systematic measure of public instruction, partly accounts for the prosperity and strength of the kingdom. This was one of the means by which "the Lord established the kingdom." It was a peripatetic and popular seminary. In addition to this pedagogic merans, the king placed his country in the mo t thorough state of military defense. He garrisoned the fortified cities, created military posts, and formed the first standing army of which there is record. A final measure was the thorough organization of public justice. But in all this the personal character of the ruler, can not be ignored. His was an elevated spirit. "His heart was lifted up in the ways of the Lord." He was unaffected by the current spirit of idolism. "He sought the Lord, and walked in his commandments." He wielded the exemplary power of his high position to the uttermost. This was the man, these were the means, by which a genuine and substantial prosperity was brought to the kingdom.

No wonder then that in Hebrew epic Jehoshaphat's name is linked to Hezekiah,s like Lincoln's to Washington's. He is eminent among those who have ruled their fellows. But there is a blot on his otherwise bright escutcheon. It is the marriage of state which he effected between his son and the daughter of Jezebel. By this means he sought to make Jezebel's husband Ahab, king of Israel. his ally. Soon Ahab had Jehoshaphat involved with him in a war against Syria for the recovery of Ramoth Gilead, and this, too, in spite of the warning of a true prophet.

Our version makes a tame statement when it says "the king returned to his house in peace." What the original says is that he got home whole, and that by a narrow margin; by the skin of his teeth and nothing to spare. There were two kings on that field of battle, one was taken and the other left. For a while it looked as if both would be taken.

The crafty Ahab had induced Jehoshaphat to wear his royal insignia, while he himself went incognito. The Syrians naturally took the king of Judah for the king of Israel and were about to kill him when diverted by some exigency of battle.

The emotions of the king on his home-coming may be imagined. The boignancy of his shame was that it was so unnecessary. He had gone contrary to written law and oral warning, and so had given "the heathen" occasion for rejoicing. At the gate of his capital he was unexpectedly reigned up by a fearless prophet. The humiliated king was asked in hearing of his vanquished army why he had given the hand of fellowship to the Lord's haters, and the question had with it an ominous suggestion of impending punishment. Jehoshaphat took his rebuke better than his father had, who on a similar occasion, put Jehu's father in the stocks. It is true the bitter cup was sweetened by a word of commendation. "Nevertheless there are good things found in thee." It has been aptly said that this oracle of blame and praise inspired the king to attempt still further reforms.

The Teacher's Lantern.

Here is the dawn of Jurisprudence a thousand years before Christ. It is the passage of the administration of justice from the heads of families, as in the Bedouin of to-day, to officers especially designated and exclusively engaged in the hearing of cases. A gradation of courts is indicated. Petty, superior, and supreme. A discrimination as to cases is outlined, viz, such as come under statutes, such as are capable of arbitration and such as are criminal.

Jehoshaphat's charge to his judges might well be written on the walls of modern courtrooms: "Ye judge not for man but for the Lord. Fear and take heed. There is no iniquity with the Lord, nor respect of persons, nor taking of gifts."

It is an entirely indifferent matter the Bible is literally introduced into the courtroom or not. The old custom of having witnesses kiss the book and swear by it is purely a matter of form. The fact is that the Bible more than any other literature lays stress upon justice and judgment. It is the chief buttress of the court. It is the vademecum of the judge.

The moral earnestness of a true prophet commands the respect of the most ignoble. He never hesitates to confront wickedness although it be in high places. Jehu met Jehoshaphat.

There was a redeeming quality in the king's moral obliquity. He made no pretense at self-defense, extenuation, or excuse of his wrong doing. There is no literal record of repentance, it is true, but this may be safely inferred by his fresh devotion.

It is really a great mercy to be made sensible of our faults, however painful and disagreeable it may be.

Truth faithfully spoken wields an intrinsic force in its own right. Jehu's words to Jehoshaphat could not fall to earth.

A famous beauty broke her looking-glass because it showed the wrinkles on her face. Ahab showed that spirit when he said of Micaiah. "I hate him because he always prophecies evil." Arrant folly, that!

Jehoshaphat's name is bright and venerated—a worthy son of noble sire.

Good rulers are not able invariably to give prosperous times. But it does count for much whose hand is on the helm of state. When the wicked reign the people mourn.

God gave Judah prosperity. Not, however, by miracle, but through perfectly natural means.

The high and practical value of thorough and universal training in ethics and religion is here illustrated.

Unionism Has Made Trusts

By CHARLES S. MELLEN, President New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad

I YIELD to no man that he has worked harder, longer hours or for less pay, that he has had harder or longer taskmasters or more disagreeable, that he has been more apprehensive of the future or more bitter over injustice or that the spirit of discouragement has ever made the world darker than seemed possible to bear, so dark that ALMOST ANY CHANGE WAS A PROMISE OF IMPROVEMENT.

This is the age of the workingman. The captains of industry of the future are among them struggling at day's wages for recognition. Men of affairs are looking earnestly for them, for THERE IS A GREAT DEARTH OF MEN FOR THE HIGHER POSITIONS the modern industrial combinations are creating, and the duties of these positions are so exacting they wear out quickly those who fill them, causing constant changes.

But they are not looking for firebrands, for trouble breeders, for talkers, but rather for the quiet man who works while others do the talking, the one who is as much interested in his work as in his wages, and such men when found need no help from any source to secure either recognition or increase of pay.

To those who belong to unions I wish to say I believe they have accomplished much good, but they are nevertheless NOT AN UNMIXED BLESSING to the laboring man. They tend to the discouragement of individual effort and reduce man to a part of a machine.

THEY ARE A GOOD THING FOR THE DRONES, THE INEFFICIENT MAN, FOR THE WALKING DELEGATE AND THE OFFICERS, BUT ARE UNNECESSARY FOR THE MAN WHO HAS THE STUFF AND COURAGE WITHIN HIMSELF TO CARVE HIS OWN WAY IN THE WORLD.

There are many workingmen who can earn more than they do, whose employers would gladly pay them more, only they have become classified, and an advance to them means an advance also to their INEFFICIENT associates of a similar class, making it often too formidable a matter for consideration. When I say unions do much good, I mean they help the lame, the halt and the weary at the expense of the really competent.

Divested of all claptrap, the union is simply a means of averaging wages, and an employer views it as such. It is a device for making those who are willing to work care for those who want to soldier.

On the principle that every man must have a living somehow in place of making the community contribute support openly, to which process there attaches some discredit, the REALLY EFFICIENT workmen of a class receive less for their services and thus help support those who are unable to earn as much under normal conditions through establishing a scale of averages.

I REGARD THE UNIONS AS A CONDITION THAT HAS COME TO STAY. I HAVE NO PREJUDICE WHATEVER TO PROPERLY CONDUCTED ONES AND EXPRESS MY WISH THAT OUR MEN GENERALLY WOULD JOIN THEM.

Not that I would run a union plant as such, for I would not coerce my men or CONSENT TO DISCRIMINATION as between those who were and who were not members, but I would wish to have in the unions the conservative influence of many of the good men who are out, to counteract the floater, the anarchist, the man who has nothing at stake in the world, who WORKS WITH HIS MOUTH more than with his hands.

THE TROUBLE WITH UNIONISM IS ITS INTOLERANCE. To succeed in this world one must bear and forbear. The same spirit of intolerance that fills the union man toward the nonunion is what history shows us to have prevailed ages ago in religion, in race prejudice and in other ways. The cry of "THE UNION OR THE HOSPITAL" has its counterpart in that of the older one of "the church or the stake."

NO ONE INTEREST HAS DONE MORE TO PROMOTE THE TRUST OR COMBINATION, THE LARGER CORPORATION, THAN ORGANIZED LABOR. IT HAS FORCED THEM INTO EXISTENCE FOR PROTECTION FROM EXACTION.

And to what does it all tend? Given all your hotheads seek and there will be no one to employ you, and public corporations must be run by the government. Capital will not seek investment where nothing but loss and controversy is to result. THE RULE OF THE RADICAL WILL NOT PREVAIL. The hothead must be retired or in the contest in which he will involve you you will go down in defeat. The contest will not be determined by numbers. Education and brains will outweigh numbers and brawn. The spectacled student is to be the general of future armies; captains of industry may not always be those who have worked with their hands.

Resort to force gives the brute that is in us ascendency. You may achieve the temporary success at the cost of permanent loss, for you cannot drive a bad bargain with the man who knows his business, and to force for your services more than they are worth is TO INVITE ULTIMATE DISASTER.

THE RICH MAN OF TODAY CAN ACCOMPLISH LESS THAN AT ANY TIME IN THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD, AND THE RESTRICTIONS PLACED ABOUT HIM ARE GROWING GREATER WITH EVERY YEAR.

My advice to workingmen who have families, who have a stake in the world, is to join unions and make themselves felt in them. Be always a force for conservatism. It seems to me as much in their interest to do this as that they shall attend the caucus and nominate good men for office and vote for them at the polls. Their apathy is the opportunity of the demagogue, the anarchist, the floater, who has nothing to lose.

WHATEVER TENDS TO BETTER THE CONDITION OF LABOR MUST COMMAND THE EARNEST AND HONEST CONSIDERATION OF EVERY RIGHT MINDED MAN.

The Arizona Kicker

Some Lively Items From the Pen of an Editor Who Has No Fear of Anybody.

IT took just four minutes the other day to give County Coroner James a first class licking for calling us a liar, and we think the public will find him a changed and humble official.

A man named Saunders from Illinois is going to start a weekly paper called the Eagle at Lone Jack. If Mr. Saunders can shoot two handed and has got teeth like a grizzly bear he may succeed, but if not his Eagle will lose its tail feathers within a month.

The expense of making the postoffice in this town bullet proof has all been borne by us and not by the government. Uncle Sam simply puts us in charge and expects us to take care of ourself. The cost was $65, but we don't begrudge it.

As president of the common council we keep a gun on our desk during each session, but it is more for ornament than use. Since Alderman Finnegan resigned there has been no disturbance we could not quiet with a yell.

Mr. Thomas Jackson, who posed as a terror from Terrorsville, left town suddenly last Tuesday night and will probably not return. If this meets his eye he will be delighted to know that he was just fifteen minutes ahead of the vigilance committee.

We understand that Colonel Ransom's cowboys hung a stranger one day last week for horse stealing, and two hours after he was dead they discovered that he was an innocent man. Such mistakes are inseparable from a strenuous life and should not be made too much of.

It is our regular day for lying about the circulation of the Kicker, and we therefore proceed to announce that the figures have reached 4,500,000 and are humping along like a jackass rabbit pursued by a pack of wolves. If this thing keeps up for another year we shall have to buy another hand press and hire another boy.

We do not like to criticise any action of our esteemed contemporary, feeling rather to pity than condemn him, but we wish he would be consistent. He is howling just now for a war with China, and the reason thereof is because the local Chinese laundries refuse to wash his shirts and trust him for the pay.

HE REFUSED TO WASH HIS SHIRTS.

The editor of the Kicker travels occasionally, and all reports floating around to the effect that he blows out the gas in his room at hotels or is ever ready to buy gold bricks at a bargain are simply canards emanating from jealous minded contemporaries.

Mr. Williams, the hustling proprietor of the Green Front drug store, has had the misfortune to kill another Chinaman by giving him arsenic in place of salts. This is the third case within a year, we believe, and the druggist has the sympathy of the public. We all understand that no one can hustle in this country without leaving a dead man here and there on the trail.

The position of city marshal is vacant again through the resignation of Jim Adams. Jim decided after being wounded five times that there was too much shooting for the salary of $12 per week. Applicants for the place will file their names at the mayor's office. No cross eyed men taken, and all applicants will be required to pull a gun and open fire inside of four seconds.

Getting Back.

"Our competitor now has all his packages marked 'Beware of Imitations,'" said the senior partner of the new firm. "That's a slap at us."

"Well, we'll get back at him," replied the junior partner. "We'll have all our packages marked 'Beware of the Genuine.'"—Philadelphia Press.

SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER

By ELIZABETH McKEAN

...Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure...

"I wonder why Dora has so many suitors." From within the bow window Marguerite watched Dora tripping down the path attended by one of her most devoted.

"Envious?" asked Amy, with a laugh.

"Oh, I don't know," her chum answered, flinging her slender length into the Morris chair. "I certainly never think of wanting them until some football game which I would really like to see comes along. Now Dora is going, and I don't believe she either knows or cares about football."

"No; I suppose she knows and cares more about the suitor," replied the cynical Amy. "But do come back to work. We have 600 lines of this to review and more Odyssey."

Marguerite reluctantly took up her book.

"Yes; there's Penelope now," she remarked meditatively. "It's easier to understand why she should have so many suitors."

"Marguerite, are you out of your mind?" her friend asked impatiently.

"No, but I'm tired of working. Let's have some cocoa. You make it. Seriously, quite apart from football, I find this question scientifically interesting."

"Cocoa would be good," in a tone of concession from Amy. "But you cannot have more than a bare fifteen minutes for your scientific research."

She obligingly proceeded to busy herself about the tea table, while Marguerite went off into a brown study, supposedly about suitors.

"Well, what luck?" asked Amy when the kettle began to boil.

"I give it up," sighed Marguerite. "Why you, who combine all graces, especially those of the tea table—thank you," as she took the cup of cocoa—"you, who combine all graces with an infinite amount of cleverness, should apparently have no suitors at all, while little Dora, who is only tolerably pretty and who certainly has not much sense"—

"Has them by the dozen," interrupted Amy. "It is amusing, but please don't worry about me. I find you quite sufficient and a most appreciative admirer."

"I GIVE IT UP," SIGHED MARGUERITE AS SHE TOOK THE CUP.

"This is Dora playing the fascinator," and Marguerite sat up with an innocent, admiring expression on her face. "Oh, Mr. Brown, do you really think so? Do you think you could teach me to play pingpong?"

"And Mr. Brown thinks he would love to, of course," laughed Amy. "Marguerite, what a mimic you are! You are irresistible. I understand why Dora has suitors now. Only act Dora, and you will have a hundred."

"Well, I am going down to that house party at Asbury Park, you know, a week after college closes, and I believe I will try it. No one who really knows me will be there, so I'll just be Dora for scientific purposes."

"Beware, you may get into trouble."

"Well, if I do, I can get out of it just by being myself again, like Dr. Jekyll," Marguerite explained.

"Perhaps, but perhaps not," warned her friend. "You will come to me in August anyway to report, and I will get you out if you fall in."

* * * * * * *

In August Marguerite came to spend a week with her friend in the mountains. Amy noticed immediately a slight preoccupation in her manner, a difference from her usual blithe unconcern. Remembering of a sudden the house party and its possible consequences, she asked carelessly:

"How about the house party, Marguerite? Did you forget that you were going to make a scientific research there? You never spoke of it in your letters, and I am dying to know whether you played Dora."

"My dear, I did," Amy answered, with a momentary flash of mischievous merriment, "and with such effect! Before the end of the week I had three perfectly devoted—and another. But," more seriously, "I did rather get into trouble."

"What, Daisy, trouble you are not yet out of?" exclaimed Amy in alarm. "It is six weeks ago! Where are these three—and the other?"

"The three? Oh, they're all gone. I wish you could have seen how one after the other failed me as soon as I came out in my true colors. It was most uncomplimentary. They wanted to come to see me at home, but I was tired of playing, so disillusioned them. I said that I had to read some Greek this summer and invited the most persistent one, Jim Trubbleton—really a nice fellow—to come and do Greek composition with me. But he never even called. I think he was afraid I really did nothing else in my true character."

"Oh, Marguerite," Amy interrupted eagerly, "do drop them and tell me about the other one. He worries me from the start."

"Yes, me, too," replied Marguerite, looking troubled again. "I liked him from the first, and he liked Dora immensely. At the end of the visit I did not quite like to let him go, so I left him without disillusioning and asked him to ride over to Willowbridge to see me sometimes.

"Well, he did come; came often. I kept putting off disillusionment, playing a kind of modification of Dora, you know, and wondering whether or not to ask him to do Greek with me. Then one day only about a week ago I discovered that he was seriously in love with me, or Dora, rather. He told me so. And, what's worse, I find that I—not Dora at all, but I myself—am rather more than half in love with him."

"Marguerite, are you engaged? What did you say to him?"

"Engaged? Of course not! You don't suppose that I want to be Dora for the rest of my life. I asked him to do Greek with me."

"Well, what then? You don't mean to say he disappeared?"

"No. He said he would do Greek—would do anything. Then I proceeded to make myself out a fearful grind, told him I would not leave college. I asked him how he dared to ask me and finally told him the whole story. He looked so queer I even offered to introduce him to the real Dora, if he liked.

"But he got very angry then. He said he never wanted to see Dora and asked me if I did not suppose he had any sense and whether I could not be reasonable and believe he had seen through me all the time.

"I was sure he hadn't. Besides, I didn't like the slur on my acting. I know I did Dora perfectly. I simply told him that it was impossible for me to love a man who could fall in love with a girl like Dora. So here I am, Amy mine, still quite yours. Of course I will not marry him when he did not fall in love with the real me."

"But, Marguerite," cried Amy ungratefully, "you do not mean to say that you sent him off that way if you are really so much in love with him! Didn't you, couldn't you give him a word of encouragement?"

"Amy, how can you ask me? No, of course not. Although," she added falteringly, "I did tell him that if he really cared for me he might begin all over again in the fall, and I think, perhaps, he may."

Sin Eaters.

"Sin eaters" of the old days, like "mutes" of quite recent times, were hired performers at funerals. In consideration of sixpence in money, a bowl of beer and a crust of bread these sires, as they were called—"long, lean, ugly, lamentable rascals"—would by eating over the body take upon themselves all the sins of the deceased and so free him from afterward walking the earth as a ghost, so that his soul might rest in peace.

This custom prevailed all over Wales and the adjoining English counties and was observed in the strictest time of Presbyterian government even down to 1686. The usage is said to have arisen from a mistaken interpretation of Hosea iv, 8, "They eat up the sin of my people."

The more likely origin of this strange custom is the Levitical scapegoat. A much later remnant of this obtained at Amersden, Oxfordshire, where after every funeral a cake and a flagon of ale were brought to the minister in the church porch.

A Half Solved Mystery.

Detroit has a suburban grocer who is something of a joker, and, having bought a crock of butter of Uncle Reuben a few days ago, he slipped a five pound stone in the empty crock and exhibited it to the farmer and said:

"Uncle Reub, I've known you for the last five years, and I'd have sworn that you were an honest man. I'm sorry to see this."

"Waal, that half solves the mystery," replied the old man as he picked up the stone, hefted it and looked it over in a puzzled way.

"What mystery?" queried the grocer.

"Three or four days ago a strange dog came along by our place, and my son Bill heaved this rock at him. The dog and the stone disappeared like a flash, and, though Bill hunted around for half an hour, he couldn't find either. I can't say where the dog got to, but the rock must have come down on this crock of butter and sunk to the bottom out of sight!"—Detroit Free Press.

Both Correct.

A schoolmaster one day asked the dunce of the school some very simple questions in arithmetic. He was surprised to find that he got the right answers, and when he had finished he said to the boy, "Correct; sit down."

"Now," said the schoolmaster, "see if you have sense enough to ask me some questions."

The boy pondered for a moment and then said, "Please, sir, what would three yards of calico cost if cotton was tuppence a reel?"

"I think you take me for a fool," said the schoolmaster.

"Correct; sit down!" returned the boy.

A Little Girl's Loves.

Bessie, aged five, was accustomed to come to her mother's room before the family was up. One Sunday morning, while making the customary visit, the odors of breakfast in preparation managed to reach the sleeping quarters. Bessie, with her arms round her mother's neck, gave one or two vigorous sniffs, then, with an air of anticipation, announced, "Mamma, there's two fings I dess love mos' of enyfink in der world."

"What are they, Bessie?" asked her mamma.

"God and baked beans!" Bessie replied, smacking her lips.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Order of Publication.

William A. Harvey and William H. Ridder, copartners trading and doing business under the firm name and style of Harvey and Ridder, and The Wilson Lumber Company, a corporation, Plaintiffs, vs. Datesman Coal Company, and John Wills, assignee of Joseph W. Gross, assignee of Mary E. Clauson, Mortgagee, Defendents.

No. 1280 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of a certain real estate in Garrett county, Maryland, against which the plaintiffs have filed mechanic lien claims.

The bill states that within the last six months the plaintiffs contracted with the defendant, Datesman Coal Company, to furnish certain materials to be used in building six dwelling houses and the said Harvey and Ridder contracted to erect and build said houses for said defendant at Stever, Garrett county Maryland, and that said materials were to be paid for when and as each of said houses was completed; that said materials have been furnished and said work done and said houses completed on the 15th day of June, 1904; that said claims for materials furnished and work done are over due, and that the said defendant, Datesman Coal Company, although often requested has failed to pay the same; that plaintiffs have filed in the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County their respective claims as liens against said buildings, the ground upon which they are erected, and so much other ground immediately adjacent thereto and beloning to said Datesman Coal Company, as is necessary for the ordinary and useful purposes thereof, which claims contained an accurate description of said property, the kind and amount of materials furnished and work done by the plaintiffs for or about the construction of said buildings and the time when and the prices for which the same were agreed to be furnished and done, and the amount claimed to be due on each of said houses, it appearing that there is due to Harvey and Ridder the sum of $1689.13 and to the Wilson Lumber Company the sum of $428.37.

That John Wills is made a defendant to this proceeding on account of being the assignee of a certain mortgage made by Datesman Coal Company to Mary E. Clauson, on the 7th day of October, 1903, and in order that all parties interested in said property may be before the Court and be bound by its decree in the premises and that the said defendents are non residents of the State of Maryland.

The bill then prays for a decree for the sale of said property, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose, and out of the proceeds to pay the said mortgage and then the claims of the plaintiffs and for general relief.

It is thereupon, this 21st day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county in Equity, that the plaintiffs by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 22nd day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this bill, warning them and each of them, to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th of August next to show cause, if any they have, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

No. 1278 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garret County, Maryland.

John R. Ritchie, vs. Mary Ritchie.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff from the defendant a vinculo matrimonii.

The Bill states on the 14th day of December 1884, the plaintiff was married to the defendant, and lived with her until 1890, when without just cause or reason she abandoned and deserted him, and such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years and is deliberate and final; that five children were born to them as a result of said union, and that the defendant is a non-resident of the State.

It is thereupon, this 20th day of June, 1904, ordered the Circuit Court of Garrett County, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett County, once in each of four successive weeks before the 22nd day of July, 1904, give notice to said defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning her to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of August next to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1279 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Franklin P. Stremmel, vs. Mildred E. Stremmel.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce of Franklin P. Stremmel from his wife, Mildred E. Stremmel, a vinculo matrimonii.

The bill states that on the 21st day of December, 1898, the plaintiff and defendant were married and lived together in Garrett county until December, 1903. That the said Mildred E. Stremmel on divers days and times since said marriage has committed the crime of adultery with certain men and that the plaintiff has not lived or cohabited with said defendant since he has become convinced of her adulterous acts.

The bill further alleges that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, and for an order of publication.

It is thereupon this 21st day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, in each of four successive weeks before the 22d day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of August next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

PUNGENT REMARKS BY G. A. TOWNSEND

St. Lonis Convention Provokes Some Caustic Comments.

IT WAS AN IRRESPONSIBLE BODY

His Deprecates "Tampering With the Sacred Fire of the Judiciary"—Says Neither Party Has Done Such a Thing Before.

From The Hagerstown Herald

Mr. George Alfred Townsend being in Hagerstown yesterday, as it is his habit to attend market here, the Herald took his views, which were unreserved and pungent. He has now inhabited this district nearly twenty years.

"What did you think of the St. Louis convention?

"Perhaps the most irresponsible body ever met to oppose coherent events. Hardly a Northern man had anything to say. It petrified even Burke Cockran. Its only platform was avowed to be 'to win.' Its candidate delivered a charge from the bench against it and it adjourned without expressing in any official way his demands, so that no member of that convention or that party, is bound to Mr. Parker's dictum and Mr. Bryan, who twice occupied Mr. Parker's place, has already repudiated his views on behalf of the several millions of Mr. Bryan's double distilled voters. The Democracy never has penitence for anything, because its sincere situation is to be wrong. It is now a loose currency party as it has been since it began with repudition, and inflation and silver are only continuations. The man who called it to order, Jones, and the president, Williams, both come from Mississippi which repudiated its solemn bonds in 1841. The Democratic convention, says the State historian, Lowry, "is silent as the grave on the bond question;" and Mississippi has no credit with any part of the world. The other presiding officer, Clark, comes out of the hospitable train-robbing society of Missouri, which turned down its Governor, Crittenden, for taking off Jesse James. Yet these heirs of shame abused the President of the United States with extended vehemence as if such as they could destroy a great man with curses. We observed that Mr. Bryan said no evil word of the President. The Presidential office is not worth holding at the will of such men. Yet a chief justice of New York accepts it from them, escorted by Hill and Sheehan."

"Has there been another instance of a chief justice nominated for President?"

"Not one. Neither party, no party, has tampered with the sacred fire of the judiciary. Chief Justice Ambrose Spencer, of New York, wrote to Henry Clay, in 1833, when Justice John McLean was wooing the Presidential nomination, 'it will be a strong objection to him that he enters the arena with robes of office on.' No Republican President has been a judge; no Democrat who ran for President had ever been even a State judge except Douglas, who was long retired. This chief justice, Parker, has no documents to run upon except his decisions, as he has kept silence, and to quote decisions of the bench as campaign documents will be a crime. But men who would use the North for repudiation, inflation and half price silver, for panic, income tax and insurrection, have no respect for the bench. Judge Gray denounces the attempt to pull his frock into that convention."

"Do you think Parker saw that the gold issue would be dodged?"

"He never asked it to be mentioned. Hill, who created him a judge, was in the platform committed, and assented to silence. So did Shehan. By 35 to 15 the platform passed the committee, silent upon the subject for penitence on which two Democratic campaigns had been fought by Bryan. After the New York Democratic newspapers spoke out Mr. Parker sent a private message. It was privately answered. That is all which commits the raging Democracy to sure money. So has the judiciary marked its decadence already. A member of Judge Parker's bench denounced his descent into politics a year ago. 'Brave and manly,' he is called. Yes, after the battle is over. Suppose Lincoln in 1860 had accepted his nomination upon a platform silent upon the one subject of slavery in the territories, and after his nomination had telegraphed 'you know how I stand on on that,' and some volunteer in the convention had answered him. 'O, that subject is dead!' and then Lincoln had run. Run against such a competitor as Hearst, the Silverite?"

"That was a convention of jockeys. To break into the United States government, like the Trojan horse, was their purpose and unity. They put over their moral rags a judge's gown and renewed all their ignorant cunning in the hope to carry New York. I heard Hill in 1896 denounce the Southern Governors to their teeth. Now he barters the money standard of civilization against a plank of straw the income tax can it be supposed that New York will let such a starveling crew in the ship of State? Against such a brave head and hand like Colonel Roosevelt's Can it upon that fair nomination cease to feed and fatten on this move?"

"Did Maryland distinguish itself at the convention?"

"It was in Gorman's slinking image. The Maryland Democracy is an old hand at cunning. I read that Francis Thomas was a member of the Maryland State constitutional convention in 1850 and 'had a measure adopted that weakened the power of the slave holding counties.' What was it? Thomas was then a Democrat. The State went for General Taylor (Whig) in 1848 and for Clay in 1844; so I presume that the slave holding counties had displeased the Democrats, and they reduced their votes some way, though for Scott, the last Whig candidate, the dense negro counties nearly all went Whig. I have examined the constitution of 1850 and presume that the division of the State into three districts, each to elect a Governor in rotation, and putting the seven slave counties in with Baltimore city, separating Baltimore county from the city and adding that county to the Third district, on the west, was the ruse to break down the Whigs, for Baltimore city gave 4500 majority for Pierce and elected Ligon Governor over over Bowie, so that from 1854 to 1858, or nearly to the war, this gerrymandered constitution. But it was no joke when the constitution of Thomas ruled out the public enemy after the war. From 1850 to 1900, 50 years, the Democratic politicians have been conspiring and cheating. They now set up several Mudds in the black district to defeat the one Mudd, through confusing the illiterate voter. And yet these men expected to elect their caitiff boss President of the Americans."

"Why did they put on Henry Davis?"

"Probably at his cousin Gorman's request, and to emphasize devotion to the railroad corporations, which assisted Gorman's ticket last time. But it was an insult to the office to set up an 81-year-old Vice-President. A secretary of state, like Hill, or some plantation man, would under the law become President if Parker proved refractory and Davis died or decayed. After Franklin Pierce was elected and before his inauguration some miscreant put an obstruction on the railroad track and killed his only child. He escaped only to be bulldozed into repealing the Missouri compromise and the Filmore compromise, in slavery's fell purpose, and the Supreme Court was bulldozed as his successor came in to deny the people any right to limit the roving vagrancy of slavery. That was our last taste till now of a judiciary in politics. Three of Cleveland's Supreme Court judges denied Congress power to prevent railroads conspiring in the present term—Fuller, White and Hornblower. The latter has just congratulated Parker and hoped he would win. There was a solemn promise by the Democrats in 1850, after they got the fugitive slave law, never to break that compromise. They broke it as soon as they got the Whigs out and defeated Scott and elected Pierce. Sam Houston and John Bell refused to vote for the repeal, which Douglas, the guardian of Mr. Gorman, was the author of, Gorman was then Douglas' page in the United States Senate. The frightful Civil War resulted. The Republican party had not then arisen and was the public revolt against such treachery. Gorman is the hyphen, the link between those sinister times and these, and was the favorite of the South for President, but the South had destroyed its influence and by Gorman's party legislating against the freedmen in Maryland no Marylander is now eligible, though Gorman's chance was over-ripe. Give the Democrats a chance and they are opposed by civilization. A great insurrection is held back by the nation being in control of the friends of the lowly, the protectors of the humble and simple. Not till 1836 were Jews eligible to citizenship in Maryland; a Jew is now said to be Gorman's colleague, and Baltimore is Jerusalem. The meek do inherit the earth."

"Would Parker's election affect our prosperity?"

"It would exhibit the American people as a nation of triflers. They have reached the summit of renown. High purposes, all but achieved, would stand stalled. Our world wide trade within our borders and free trade among the States would be paralyzed as in Cleveland's second term, when the treasury ran empty and paid several millions commissions to Belmont's coffers. This platform calls for the army to be reduced when it is our market for hay and horses, and we are rushing our navy. Negation, opposition, provincial disorder would be the sequel of the great rebellion. The mines would be given over to dynamiters. In the language of the unworthy leader of the opposition, God would take care of the currency."

SIANS ROUTED AND FALL BAGK.

Desperate Fight Of Big Armies Ends In A Japanese Triumph. But Czar's General Say They EXPECTED TO BE DRIVEN BACK.

Fierce Contest Kept Up For Seventeen Hours On Sunday. Ta-Tche-Kiao The Centre Of A Stubborn Artillery Duel. No Statement Of Losses.

St. Petersburg, July 26—5:05 P. M.—Dispatches just received by the War Office announce that the Russians have retreated to Hai-Cheng. They decided to with draw from Ta-Tche-Kiao on Sunday evening.

General Zaronbaieff, commanding the Fourth Army Corps, who is General Stakelberg's senior, resolved to take this step in consequence of the reports of scouts that the Japanese were turning the left flank in the severe fighting going on.

The evacuation of Ta-Tche-Kiao was prepared for long ago by the Russians, as military experts have repeatedly indicated. The retirement is not regarded as materially altering the situation. The Russians had strongly fortified Hai-Cheng in view of this coutingency.

The Japanese forces are believed to included the whole of the armies of Generals Oku and Nodzu. More than seven divisions of Japanese were engaged.

The rear-guard action between Datchapu and Ta-Tche-Kiao continued until 11 o'clock Sunday night, when the Japanese were within sight of the Russian intrenchments. The Russians withdrew in perfect order covered by the beautiful moonlight. Further details of the fight have not yet been forwarded to the War Office.

The Official Messenger prints a dispatch from Liao-Yang, dated July 25, announcing that the Japanese maintained a terrific bombardment of Ta-Tche-Kiao throughhut Sunday, but that towards evening, several of their batteries being silenced by the Russian guns, they retired.

No estimate of the losses on either side, is furnished, but judging from the nature and extent of the fire, the engagement was a serious one.

The dispatch says:

"Throughout the night of July 24 the Japanese were busily engaged in emplacing batteries on the crests and slopes of the neighboring mountains, and at 4 o'clock in the morning opened a terrific artillery fire on the Russian position at the Ta-Tche-Kiao from their front, which was nine miles long. The firing continued throughout the day, but slackened towards evening and stopped entirely at 7 o'clock, the Japanese retiring from the mountains. The Russian artillery answered the Japanese fire hotly all day long.

"According to the reports of eye-witnesses, the Russians silenced three of the Japanese batteries, after which the Japanese fire ceased."

Official news received here shows that the fighting at Ta-Tche-Kiao and to the southward has been progressing for several days. The Japanese advanced in strong force on Sunday morning against the Russian position at Datchapu, 12 miles north of Kai-Chou.

The Japanese advance against General Kuropatkin's armies seems at last to have begun in earnest everywhere. They are moving up strongly from the south, and have captured Kan Pass, on the road to Hai-Cheng. A nothern movement is also reported, but the objective point of the Japanese at present seems to be Hai-Cheng.

General Kuropatkin reports that that the Japanese column in the vicinity of Saimatsza, which is believed to be two divisions strong, is marching along the valley of the Taitse, with the obvious aim of cutting the railroad above Liao-Yang.

Mukden, July 26—The latest reports received here are to the effect that the Russians, with about 100 guns in action in an engagement south of Ta-Tche-Kiao, inflicted serious losses on the Japanese and destroyed many of their guns.

The Japanese attack on the centre of the Russian position was repulsed, but the Russian were ordered to retire yesterday and occupy the heights five miles north of Ta-Tche-Kiao. This movement was carried out in good order.

The Empress' hospital train passed through Mukden yesterday, bearing 31 men who were wounded in Sunday's fighting at Ta-Tche-Kiao. The fight which was mainly an artillery duel, according to the statements of the men on the train, commenced at 6 o'clock in the morning, and was still going on at 11 o'clock at night, when the train left. The Russians were then maintaining their positions, about seven miles south of Ta-Tche-Kiao.

Small bodies of Japanese are reported to be moving in the direction of Benitzu, 40 miles east of Yantai station and toward Sintsintin. If this is true, it indicates the intention of the Japanese to try and turn the Russian position at Liao-Yang from the direction of Mukden.

POLICEMAN ARRESTED.

For An Alleged Assault Upon Henry Dickinson, Colored.

Yesterday Justice Teats issued a warrant upon the information of Henry Dickinson, colored, for the arrest of Policeman Broderick, who charges the officer with having assaulted him by striking him in the face with a blackjack without just cause or provocation.

The alleged assault occurred Monday afternoon on Alder street when Broderick arrested Dickinson upon a warrant for some slight infraction of the law. It is stated that when the arrest was made Broderick produced a pair of handcuffs to put on his prisoner. The man stated he would go without having this indignity thrust upon him, when, it is said, the officer drew his blackjack and struck the man in the jaw with it.

The trial of the officer will take place this afternoon at four o'clock before Justice Teats.

A number of witnesses have been summoned in the case. Public opinion favors the colored man.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

ROOSEVELT

It is announced that the Democratic Congressional committee has selected the personality of President Roosevelt as the chief issue in this campaign. Practically every other issue is to be abandoned. The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press is responsible for the statement that the committee has concluded to adopt the old-time, mud-slinging personal abuse method and to that end has picked out as the chief document for circulation speeches delivered in the House by Representatives Kitchin, of North Carolina; Patterson, of Tennessee; and Fitzgerald, of New York. These speeches, all of which teem with personal abuse of President Roosevelt, have been combined in a pamphlet known as "Number Six" and have been sent out to the extent of over a half million copies. This correspondent further says the Democratic committee has had few requests for the St. Louis platform and its literature does not abound in arguments on the tariff and gold standard.

An abusive, vindicative and personal campaign conducted by the Democratic Congressional committee will not be unusual or novel. In every national contest since Lincoln the Democratic press and public speakers have conducted campaigns in that way.

In this campaign the Democratic Congressional committee seems to have concluded it is the only method left to the Democracy. Both the Democratic candidates nominated at St. Louis having publicly repudiated their party's platform in the two issues that are represented and regarded by the country as most vital and of the greatest interest and importance. They seem to realize the party is up a tree on issues and to have concluded their only resort is abuse of Theodore Roosevelt. This will not in the least disturb the friends and supporters of Theodore Roosevelt. On the defensive he will prove to be one of the most heroic figures in the long list of the nation's truly great men. Personal abuse of Roosevelt will only serve to impress upon the people the absolute purity of his life, his culture, his statesmanship and above all his courageous patriotism and his sincere devotion to his country and love for his fellow citizens.

These qualities absorb the man and make him the fittest in the nation to stand, as he does, squarely, proudly and bravely upon the Chicago platform and to stand forth before the people for the principles and doctrine of the most progressive and popular political organization that the world has ever seen—the Republican party—the party of Lincoln and Grant and McKinley and of humanity.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Mr. John Crosby Brydon, one of the most successful of the younger coal operators, and Miss Nell Louise Harrison, of Somerset, Pa. The wedding will be one of the most notable events in social life that Somerset has known in late years. Miss Harrison is the daughter of Captain and Mrs. Charles J. Harrison of Somerset, Pa. Mr. Brydon is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Brydon, of "Borderside," Bloomington, Md. He is general manager of the Somerset Coal Company, with offices in Somerset. While young in years to occupy the responsible position he does, Mr. Brydon has met with remarkable success in the face of peculiarly adverse conditions. Out of the affairs of the coal company, which were, when he assumed the reins of management, in such a state of affairs as to discourage the average man, Mr. Brydon has perfected a smoothly running machine. He is a young man of great capabilities and undoubtedly destined to hold a leading position in the coal trade of the country.

Operated on For Appendicitis.

Albert L. Lohm, son of engineer Lohm of the Deer Park helper, was operated on last week at Keyser, W. Va., at the Hoffman hospital for appendicitis by Dr. C. S. Hoffman of Keyser, W. Va, and Dr. Jno. D. Milligan of Pittsburg, Pa., and the operation was very successful, although Mr. Lohm was very low for a few days after the operation. Albert was operated on last December at the West Penn Hospital, Pittsburg, Pa., for appendicitis, but owing to gangrene having set in, they could not remove his appendix at that time. Mr. Lohm is now out of danger, but will not be able to leave the hospital for about three weeks. Albert was formerly connected with the P. & L. E. R. Forrest's Dash Into Memphis

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

August 21, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

FORREST'S raid on the city of Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 21, 1864, was a roundabout way of ridding his chosen territory of an enemy he couldn't whip in open battle. As late as midsummer, 1864, when Sherman was battering away at Atlanta, in the heart of Georgia, the extensive belt of country lying west of his line of operations, which had been nominally conquered by General Halleck and General Grant in 1862-3, was still designated within the Federal camps, lying all around its borders, as "Forrest's country." Forrest raided quite at will with his rough riders almost to the Kentucky line, and, hoping to prevent repetitions of these incursions on the flank of his route of communications while operating in Georgia, Sherman directed a movement of troops out of Memphis into the Forrest belt of northern Mississippi. In this manner he hoped to distract or engross the attention of the ubiquitous cavalryman and keep him at arm's length.

A Federal expedition from Memphis led by General Sturgis ended in a stunning defeat at Guntown, Miss., June 10, and the hasty retreat of the column to Memphis. When Sturgis' troops reached Memphis on their retreat General A. J. Smith happened to be in camp there with a force of Federals intended to join Sherman in front of Atlanta. Instead of following the beaten track along the railroad, through Chattanooga, Smith set out to cross "Forrest's country," and, meeting the redoubtable confederate at Tupelo, Miss., July 14, whipped him so soundly that he had to resort to unusual tactics to get this new enemy out of the territory. Since Memphis was being used by Sherman as a base for blows aimed at him, he would counter on Memphis in the hope of getting up a panic that would insure Smith's recall, if nothing more.

With a detachment of 1,500 of his choicest men, Forrest set out from Oxford, Miss., Aug. 18. A heavy rain had been falling for several days, and floods had destroyed the fording places of the numerous creeks and rivers, which war had despoiled of bridges. With telegraph poles, grapevine ropes and planks gathered among farmers the raiders made headway amid difficulties that the enemy would have thought insuperable. Forrest's scouts brought in word of the location of Federal positions and when he was closing in upon Memphis reported that the foe had no knowledge of the daring raid, which proved to be true.

No halt was made, orders and information being distributed on the march. Fresh scouts came in to report almost every mile, and when the raiders were within three miles of the city at dawn of Sunday, Aug. 21, their leader knew the location of every picket post that would challenge his advance. Forrest's brother, Captain W. H. Forrest, had the lead and was directed to open the road at any hazard and dash for the heart of Memphis at once. The captain and ten men rode sixty paces ahead of all others and were soon challenged with the sharp cry, "Who goes there?" Of course no satisfactory answer could be given, but the Forrests were adepts at expedients to deceive a foe, and the captain responded boldly, "A detachment of the Twelfth Missiouri cavalry, with Confederate prisoners." This Federal regiment had been in Mississippi on the line in front of Forrest a short time previous, and the ignorant picket couldn't do otherwise than accept the answer as it went. "Advance one!" said he.

Captain Forrest went forward alone and met a mounted picket. With one blow of his revolver he knocked the Federal down, and the raiders at his heels sprang ahead and quickly disarmed the startled men on post in rear of the unlucky vedette. The daring captain rallied his men and rushed for the next post in the line, but a musket had been discharged during the melee at the outer post and the Federal reserve pickets were alert. The Confederates were received by a good volley, but they instantly charged their opponents and by this intrepid action gave signal for a general assault.

General Forrest had enjoined secrecy and silence on all sides until the city was fairly reached, but the shouts of young Forrest's animated band were echoed by a hundred throats along the column, stretching far behind, and the secret was out. Seeing this, the general, who was close up with the pioneer band, ordered his bugler to sound the charge. This call was repeated by the bugler of each separate detachment, and in a twinkling the enthusiastic squadrons scampered away to their work.

Captain Forrest rushed his little company down the main street, through a Federal artillery encampment, his eager followers shooting right and left as they galloped on, heading for the Gayoso House, a noted hostelry frequented by prominent Federal officers. Followed by as many of his band as could crowd in, the impetuous captain plunged his charger into the hall and up to the hotel office, spreading consternation among the guests, civil and military. Was this freak the work of riotous soldiers on a lark or an episode of real war?

In a few minutes all Memphis was in an uproar. For more than two years the city had been in undisputed possession of Federal troops. During that time vast camps had sprung up and disappeared, discharging battalions in thousands and tens of thousands to the scenes of hostile meeting, east, west and south, to the Red river, to Arkansas, to Vicksburg, New Orleans and Chattanooga. Mighty squadrons of Federal war vessels had patrolled the waters that washed her docks, and mammoth floating expeditions had swept past down the broad river to the gulf.

Memphis! Why, she was another Cairo or Cincinnati or Baltimore. The organized Confederate front was hundreds of miles distant, and she had long upheld the character of a city of refuge for people driven from their homes farther south and for disabled soldiers of the Federal army, as well as a place of safe keeping for Confederate prisoners. Several thousand armed soldiers were constantly stationed in the city, and a good sized army lay between it and the lines of the nearest known enemy—that is to say, Forrest loose in Mississippi.

The wild alarm stampeded the entire city. Forrest's command moved in five separate bodies. One detachment led by Colonel Longwood followed close upon the heels of young Forrest's band down the main street and through the Federal battery camp. The Federal guns, which had been abandoned by their guards at the first fire, were remanned, but Longwood's men went through the camp with clubbed rifles. Afterward they ran the gantlet of fire from scattered bodies of troops and the home guard along the streets.

Still another Confederate body, under Colonel Neely, attacked an infantry encampment near the point where the raiders entered the city, but found its match and more. The Federals were in line and received the intruders with a stunning volley. General Forrest, who had held aloof somewhat, went to Neely's aid and, with only his escort for a following, charged the enemy impetuously. Neely dashed in afresh at the same moment, and the Federal infantry ran for cover.

Another body of raiders, under Colonel Jesse Forrest, rushed off to the headquarters of General Washburne, the Federal commander of the department, and captured some staff officers, but failed to secure the general himself, who was the object of the search. General Forrest finally ordered a retreat. The enemy was badly scared, and further bloodshed would be useless. Colonel Longwood and Captain Forrest fought their way back with their commands from the Gayoso House to the outskirts of the city, having a sharp fight to get through the Federal battery camp on their route.

The main body of the raiders rallied at the camp taken by Colonel Neely and General Forrest, and this point was vigorously attacked by several hundred mounted Federals. General Forrest mortally wounded Colonel Starr in a personal combat during this fight. Although the raiders were virtually chased out of Memphis, the glory of their unique exploit remained behind them. Memphis was in a panic, and before the raiding detachment returned to Forrest's old camp in Mississippi General Smith's troublesome army was on the back track to save the city.

Forrest's boldness in attacking Memphis was fairly outdone by the coolness of his withdrawal from the vicinity. At the end of a day's march he halted and sent word to the Federals in Memphis that some of the prisoners he was leading away south were barefoot and could not keep up with the column. A supply of shoes was quickly sent to his bivouac, and, after another day's march, he sent back asking for rations for his prisoners. These were promptly sent to the rendezvous, twenty-five miles distant, and the officers in charge of the relief party carried back word that the raiding chief appeared in no hurry to leave the vicinity. Surely not, when he notified the enemy just where to find him and waited a whole night to keep the appointment.

Further Instruction.

He entered the department store
And asked that he be shown
The route to reach the clothing floor,
Then he would go alone.
The courteous floorwalker then said:
"Three aisles across, then down
Four aisles, you then keep straight ahead—"
The man began to frown.

"You take the elevator then,"
The floor man next observed.
"Get off the car at Number Ten."
(The man was quite unnerved.)
"Across four aisles, and then you turn
Six counters to your right;
Look to the left and you'll discern
A distant ruby light.

"Pass under that, and then you're near
The clothing stock you wish—"
The man cried out: "I cannot hear!
You gabble like a fish.
I never heard such silly talk;
You're having sport with me.
Your jocular designs I'll balk—
I'll make complaint. You'll see!"

The courteous floorwalker bowed
And said: "Turn to the right,
Go down the aisle until the shroud
Department comes in sight;
From there just thirteen aisles you trace
Until you reach the paints—
Beside them is a desk—the place
Where you may make complaints."

"What now?" asked the imperturbable boomer.

"There isn't a house within a mile of the lot I bought!"

"Well, who said there was?"

"You, sir—you did!"

"Why, my dear sir, you must be dreaming. I said nothing of the sort."

"Didn't I ask you if there were any residences close by?"

"I believe you did."

"And didn't you answer 'Just lots?'"

"Yes."

"Well, don't you call that a misrepresentation?"

"Certainly not. Isn't that what you found around there—'just lots?'"—Baltimore American.

Judging From the Sample.

A congressman who thought that one of the great national parties was trying too hard to find an issue when there was no issue in sight rebuked his opponents by telling this story:

"A client of mine has a large family, and accordingly is rather pressed for money. He came to me joyfully one day, declaring that he had found oil flowing from a spring on his land and bringing me a sample.

"The bottle he brought was one which he had picked up in a hurry somewhere about the house. I forwarded it to an expert chemist, and my client and I waited with a good deal of interest for his report of the analysis. In a day or two we got this telegram:

"'Find no trace of oil. Your friend has struck paregoric.'"

Oakland Model Steam Bakery

The Place to Buy the Best Bread Cakes and Pies.

Our aim is to make Bread "As Good as Mother made it," and we have been successful and have stopped all the drudgery of home baking with the use of Modern Machinery. Have you ever experienced as the following reads:

Your wife has gone out in the country;
You're left alone; what a pity,
With nothing to do but to ponder
And read out aloud to the kitty.

You run out of bread in the morning;
But knowing 'tis easy to make it,
You swiftly adjourn to the kitchen
And silently start in to bake it.

Take two coffee cups full of flour,
And water sufficient to "dough" it;
A thimble of salt for the "season,"
Then roll it, and poke it, and blow it.

And blow it, and poke it, and roll it,
And pinch it, and push it, and flop it,
And punch it, and pound it, and pull it,
And monkey around till you drop it.

Then clean it off nice with a towel,
And sock in a yeast cake to "raise" it;
Now drop in some soda to "short" it,
And smear on some butter to "glaze" it.

Then place it 'way back in the oven,
(That is if you've moulded and "set" it);
Close up all the doors of the kitchen,
Go in and sit down and forget it.

Go set yourself down in the parlor,
And read from "The Science of Baking:"
Read on till you smell something burning,
Then think of the bread you are making.

Now hop, skip snd jump to the kitchen,
And as you hop nigher and nigher,
You know by the smoke in the hallway
The blooming old bread is on fire.

Then hustle it out in the alley,
Juggle it, fumble it, shie it;
Then gently dig up a nickel
And go to the baker's and buy it.

"Teuf! teuf! teuf! Heroes! Wonder!" The automobile ceased its monotonous chant, coughed once or twice and subsided into a state of silence and, alas! immobility. In a moment the chauffeur was off his seat and poking about in the machinery. Then he went to the door of the carriage and touched his hat.

"Beg pardon, miss," he said, "but she's broke down and 'll have to go to the shop. I'm sorry, but you'll have to get around the city some other way."

The girl on the back seat, a tall, handsome blond with the bluest of blue eyes, uttered an exclamation. "If that isn't too bad! And I've got just two hours to see Washington before my train goes! Can't you call another auto for me?"

The chauffeur glanced around him. "Oh, yes'm," he said. "Of course. There ought to be some here on the stand now, only there ain't. But I'll go in and telephone for one right away."

"Do! Or, stay, there's one waiting at the postoffice door now. Maybe it's for hire."

The man looked doubtfully at the machine indicated. "Don't think so, miss," he answered. "That's a private machine or I miss my guess. Still, I'll ask." Leaving the girl he walked over to the curb and addressed the young man sitting on the box of a handsome automobile.

No one familiar with the new horseless vehicles would for one moment have supposed that the one in question was for hire. "Racer" appeared in every line of its build and costliness in the exquisite nicety of its construction. But the girl was from the west and had never had an opportunity to study the makes of machines, while the chauffeur hoped that by apparent desire to serve he might yet gain the hire he had lost by the breaking down of his own machine.

That anything but an instant negative would be the answer to his query "whether that machine was for hire?" had never passed his brain, so his astonishment may be guessed when the young man on the box started, glanced at the girl still sitting in the injured vehicle a short distance away, flushed deeply and replied in the affirmative. Then, without waiting for further explanation, he promptly ran his machine to the side of the other and halted to permit the girl to climb in. The next moment they were swinging down the avenue at a lively gait.

The girl leaned forward. "Ahem!" she said. "Did the other man tell you where I wanted to go?"

"Said you wanted to see the city, ma'am," returned the young man respectfully, but in a curiously muffled tone. He had kept his head averted, almost as if he wished to conceal his features, a wish—if it were a wish—in which he had been successful. The girl had looked at the machine, but not at its driver.

When the chauffeur spoke she started and glanced curiously at him, as though his voice struck some dormant chord in her memory. "Yes," she said. "I do want to see the city, but I want to get to the depot at 3 o'clock. My train goes out then."

"Yes'm. I'll get you there in time. Going east, ma'am?"

Again the girl looked at him curiously. "Yes," she answered slowly. "I'm on my way to college."

"Oh—er—you believe in the higher education of women then?"

The girl's eyes were dancing with fun now. "Under certain circumstances," she said. "Is that the capitol?"

"Yes'm, that's the capitol. Under certain circumstances? What circumstances, for instance?"

"Oh, a stepmother at home, for instance. How many senators are there?"

"Three hundred and eighty-six, I believe. A stepmother might be a terror to some girls, of course, but most of them can get away from one home to another without going to college."

"How? By the way, is that the library?"

"Yes. Why, of course, most girls have—have—can marry." The man was speaking eagerly now, but he still kept his face turned away and threw the words over his shoulder.

"Married! Whew! That's a very radical remedy. It might be worse than the other trouble. How many books are there in the library?"

"Two or three million, I believe. Oh, no! You wouldn't find it so, I'm sure. Think of growing into a spectacled old maid? All college girls do, you know. Then think of that young fellow just longing to make a home for you"—

"What building is that?"

"That? Oh, the patent office or the pension office or something! Think of"—

"But suppose the girl has sent him away?"

"Then let her whistle him back and see whether he won't come."

The girl glanced at the broad back of the man before her, while her shoulders quivered with silent mirth. Then she puckered up her lips and deliberately emitted a clear, soft whistle.

The effect was magical. Instantly the chauffeur swung around in his seat and faced her. "Bessie!" he exclaimed, "do you mean it?"

The girl smiled at him, though her eyes were dewy. "Of course I do, Frank," she said. "I never thought you would go away as you did just for a word. No! No! Keep your seat. You can say all that's really necessary from where you are."

"And you knew me all the time?"

"Of course! The minute I really looked at you. But you'll make me miss my train."

"Train? No train for you! I'll not take any chances now. Your interest in the city may have lapsed, but here's the city hall. Shall I go in and get a marriage license, or—will you go in with me?"

He had sprung from the seat and stood holding out his hands, the light of love pleading in his eyes. "Won't you go in with me, Bessie?" he asked again.

For an instant the girl hesitated; then she took the proffered hand. "Yes, Frank," she said softly. "I will go with you—now and always."

"Bless that old gasoline rattletrap that broke down with you," he cried. "It must have been one of Cupid's up to date chariots in disguise."

Table Manners In Argentina.

"We encamped near a swamp," says a gentleman, describing a meal he had several years ago with some cart drivers in South America, "and supped on sliced pumpkins boiled with bits of meat and seasoned with salt. The meal was served in genuine pampa fashion. One iron spoon and two cow's horns split in halves were passed around the group, the members of which squatted upon their haunches and freely helped themselves from the kettle. Even in this most uncivilized form of satisfying hunger there is a peculiar etiquette which the most lowly person invariably observes. Each member of the company in turn dips his spoon or horn into the center of the stew and draws it in a direct line toward him, never allowing it to deviate to the right or left. By observing this rule each person eats without interfering with his neighbor. Being ignorant of this custom, I dipped my horn into the mess at random and fished about for some of the nice bits. My companions regarded this horrid breach of politeness with scowls of impatience. They declared with some warmth to the cook that foreigners did not know how to eat. I apologized as well as I could and endeavored thereafter to eat according to gaucho etiquette."

Those Queer Women.

"Women are mighty queer about some things," remarked a conductor the other day. "I've been watching them for ten years on this line, and every day I see some new peculiarity. You just watch the next one that gets in. There's one vacant seat left, and she'll walk up to it and turn clear around in her tracks before she sits down. Here comes one now."

Sure enough, the woman who stepped on the car just then spied the empty seat, made for it and, reaching it, turned clear around before she sat down.

"You see how it is," continued the conductor, returning after taking her fare. "They all do it. There isn't one woman in ten but what turns around before she takes her seat. Perhaps it's natural for 'em, just as it is for a dog to whirl around three times before he lies down. I've seen more than one woman lose her seat by having some one else slip into it while she was going through her preliminary turn. But a little lesson like that doesn't do them any good. They keep on turning around before taking a seat just the same."—Exchange.

East Indian Worship.

In the census report of India, a government publication, it is gravely related that native clerks actually worship the tools of administration. At the time of the vernal equinox there is a festival known as Sri Panchami, which the orderlies celebrate on the flat roof of the buildings occupied by the secretariats of the government of India. The worshipers take one of the large packing cases which are used to convey office records from Simla to Calcutta and drape its rough woodwork with plantain leaves and branches of the sacred pipal. This structure, crowned with an official dispatch box, serves as an altar, and in the center thereof is placed the sacred symbol—a common glass inkpot with a screw top, flanked by paper, pens, sealing wax, ink erasers and such office paraphernalia, the whole festooned and adorned by coil upon coil of red tape. To this symbol of godhead offerings of food are made, while texts from the Vedas are recited by the Brahman officiating as priest.

The Woes of Bowser

He Finds the World Selfish and Starts Out to Reform It by Tackling Five Men, Owing to and All on Account of Uncle Ben's Illness.

[Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.]

MR. BOWSER came home the other evening in what seemed to be a humble mood, and during the dinner hour he was so unusually quiet and at times sighed so heavily and put on such a sad look that Mrs. Bowser was fairly up a tree to figure out what had happened. When they had reached the sitting room she asked what had gone wrong during the day, and after looking into vacancy for awhile and sighing again he replied:

"Nothing has gone wrong, so far as business is concerned, but all day long I have been thinking of the selfishness of the world around us and marveling at it. It is enough to make one wonder if we are really men and women instead of wolves and jackals."

"Yes, the world is selfish," mused Mrs. Bowser, "but not more so than ever. If you were on your dying bed tonight there would be dancing and singing all around us."

"There would, and it would be proof that what we call the higher cultivation is only a sham. When I first reached the office this morning I received a letter stating that my Uncle Ben had been kicked by a mule and might not live two days. I sorrowed with him and his family and at once wrote that I did, and I was at some pains to tell Green that I was feeling broken up, but did Green care two cents whether Uncle Ben had been kicked by a mule or tossed over a fence by a bull? Not a care. While I had sorrow in my heart he was whistling 'Yankee Doodle;' while I had tears in my eyes he was telling jokes; while my head was bowed in grief he went around singing 'Maggie Murphy's Home.' Was there ever a more outrageous instance of the unselfishness of mankind?"

"Our griefs are our own, and we can't expect strangers to sympathize."

"But why not? Why shouldn't a stranger go out of his way to speak kind words to the disconsolate? Why must we wrap the mantle of selfishness around us and care not what befalls our fellow men?

"On the car coming home I accidentally trod on a fellow passenger's foot. I excused myself, of course, and I mentioned that Uncle Ben might be dead by then, but he fired up and said I ought to travel in the cattle cars. Not one grain of sympathy have I had from the cold and selfish world today. Hark to that, will you!"

In the house of the neighbor on the left some one started to jingle the piano, and after listening a moment Mr. Bowser continued:

"There they go with 'Johnny Is a Cop.' Does that person in there care whether my Uncle Ben is living or dead? Would she care if Uncle Ben's death killed Aunt Mary too? Would she stop that thumping and yelling and screeching if I lay here panting in the agonies of dissolution? Of course she wouldn't, but why not, Mrs. Bowser—why not? Has it come to that pass that not one human being owes the slightest respect to the feelings of another?"

"But you must remember that the girl in there has not heard of the accident to Uncle Ben," said Mrs. Bowser. "If she had"—

"But there should be an intuition," he interrupted. "If I was out in the back yard building a pigpen and some person on this block should die, do you think I wouldn't somehow feel it and stop my work? And would I keep whacking away at that pigpen or would I go to that house of grief and speak words of condolence? By John, if there isn't somebody trying to yank our front door bell out by the roots!"

"I'll answer it," said Mrs. Bowser.

"I'll answer it myself. I want to see the person who dares to come here at such a time as this and pull and yank the bell as if there was a dance going on."

He saw him. He was a young man who wanted Mr. Bowser to sign a petition to the governor for something or other, and he was whistling when the door opened. He had opened his mouth to state his errand when a heavy hand was laid upon his shoulder and a voice said in his ear:

"Young man, have you no sentiment in your soul? As you stood here whistling and singing and yanking did no feeling come to you that this was a house of mourning? It evidently didn't, but by the living jingo"—

The young man made a dodge and a break and went clattering down the steps and out of the gate, and Mr. Bowser returned to the sitting room to say:

"I can't make it out. There is the cook downstairs wrestling the pots about and singing in a way to put a dog's teeth on edge. Does she give a thought to my sorrow? Even if I had a telegram right here in my hand that Uncle Ben was no more, would that girl care two cents about it?"

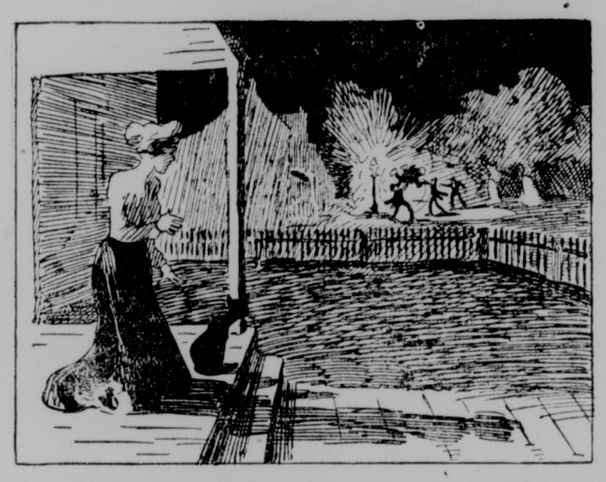
"You couldn't expect her to," answered Mrs. Bowser. "Her mother died a month ago, but when I told you of it you didn't run down to the kitchen to express your sorrow. On the contrary, you talked that evening of learning to play the fiddle, and you went off to your bowling club and had a good time."

"I must have misunderstood you. I don't remember your speaking of it. If I had known that her mother was dead I should have offered my condolence at once. Will you go down and tell her to stop her noise?"

"I will, but as your Uncle Ben may not be dead"—

"Mrs. Bowser, I do not believe that you yourself appreciate the situation. I see no signs of grief in your face. You are looking as if you didn't care a cent whether that kick resulted mortally or not."

"But I do care, of course that is, while I don't know your Uncle Ben or Aunt Mary and never heard you speak of them before, I am sorry on your account. Perhaps he ought to have been more careful about getting in the way of a mule's hind leg, but no doubt he acted according to his best judgment."



MRS. BOWSER AND THE CAT SAW THE MEN WHIRLING AND TOSSING.

She went down and broke the news to Jane, who shut off her song and handled the hardware more tenderly, but just as she came upstairs a hand organ man stopped in front of the house and began to grind out a merry air, and Mr. Bowser sprang to his feet with:

"Now, then, this is too much, too much! Here I sit thinking of Uncle Ben, and out there that man"—

"But how can he know?" protested Mrs. Bowser. "He'll probably play one tune and then be off. You might as well say that the street cars should be stopped running."

"I want to get my hands on him once."

"But if you are full of grief over your Uncle Ben you shouldn't go out and row with a hand organ man. Look at things as they are and not as you would have them."

Mr. Bowser settled down to sigh and try to read the paper, while the cat, which had also got on to the fact that Uncle Ben was a mule kicked man, walked around on tiptoe and purred very softly.

"It seems to me that some of the neighbors ought to have come in by this time," said Mr. Bowser after awhile.

"But why?" asked Mrs. Bowser. "Have any of them been told that your Uncle Ben has been kicked? Even you cannot say that he is dead yet. We can't expect any of them to come in."

Mr. Bowser leaned back and closed his eyes and wondered over the selfishness of the world. But not for long. At the end of five minutes the voices of men in song on the street aroused him, and he got to his feet to exclaim:

"Here come three or four loafers singing at the top of their lungs, and by the horn spoon if I s and it any longer"—

"But you must," replied Mrs. Bowser. "You can't go out and"—

"But I can and will. If I cannot make them respect my grief one way I will another. Let go of me."

She tried to hold him, but as the knot of men came opposite the house they struck a higher note, and out he went. He yelled as he struck the steps and he yelled as he reached the gate, and then Mrs. Bowser and the cat saw five men whirling and tossing and disappearing into the darkness. Mr. Bowser had started in to reform. M. QUAD.

THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1904.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR CONGRESS:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

of Allegany County.

THE Republicans declared for the gold standard from conviction. The Democrats omitted the money plank from fear.

THE ELECTORAL VOTE.

The electoral vote is worrying the Democratic press exceedingly and, of course, with reason. Blessings brighten as they fade from sight, and to have the cup of joy dashed from their lips must be conceded to be disheartening. Nevertheless, the grief of our friends, the enemy, will be assuaged in the knowledge and appreciation of the fact that it is always that way with them, and one more won't hurt them very badly—at least not much more badly than they have been in the habit of getting hurt

The nomination of the venerable millionaire and coal and oil and railway magnate, Davis, of West Virginia, was thought to be a mighty slick bit of political work. But The Atlanta Constitution, stalwartly Democratic, in a most interesting article, lets the cat peep out in the telling that David Bennett Hill looked upon it as a piece of foolishness, remarking that "Steve Elkins had made West Virginia so everlastingly Republican that nothing could change it." To that accurate description of the situation in the Meuntain State is to be added the surly consent of Mr. Bryan, who was compelled to let the tail go with the hide, taking gold bug Davis with gold bug Parker, with the remark that another gold bug would'nt make it any worse.

With West Virginia out of the Democratic column—and it was not in that column—the hope of a Solid South is broken to Democracy, and without that Solid South not all their wildest hopes could bring success to them. In fact, and slightly paraphrasing James Whitcomb Riley, "their hopes have cast their anchor in the harbor of a dream." With every Electoral College south of Mason and Dixon's line—including Delaware—voting for Parker and Davis, they would be sure only of 182, with 239 necessary for a choice, a deficit of 57.

To that deficit must be added West Virginia. 7; Maryland, 8, and Delaware, 3—for of the three the St. Louis ticket will not carry one and that raises the Democratic deficit to 75. To make up that deficit the St. Louis ticket would have to carry New York, 35; New Jersey, 12; Indiana, 15; Connecticut, 7; Nevada, 3, and Utah, 3. Or they may change the aspect of States of the far West and make up the deficit by carrying Illinois—or Massachusetts or Vermont. In fact, they may make it up in any way they please—on paper.

As Senator Hill said of Elkins and West Virginia it may be said of Roosevelt and the whole country. It is so thoroughly Republican in the Electoral Colleges as to make it impossible to change the result.

VOTERS would pay more attention to Democratic promises for the future if they were not so closely linked on the lips with apologies for the past.

OUR brethren of the local press have to keep moving to keep up with the Democratic band wagon wherein the platform makers ride. In 1896 before the Convention they were for sound money. But when the hymn "Sixteen to One" was given out by their National Convention they sang lustily for silver. When 1900 rolled around Bryan was the real thing and gold Democrats were objects of derision. In 1904 when the Convention kept silent on the money question this was heralded as very wise because that subject was not an issue. When, however, Parker sent his telegram declaring for the gold standard, straightway the faithful fell in line and they would just as quickly get in line for free silver in 1908. Anything to win.

A POET wants to know "How Long Does Hope Last?" Well with a Democrat it lasts from convention day until the night of the election.

PARKER'S DEMOCRACY.

We believe it is generally conceded that Judge Alton B. Parker, the Democratic nominee for the presidency, is a Democrat, and a true member of the Democratic fold. So far as we are aware, no person has ever seriously questioned the childlike faith of the eminent jurist, and the devotion of the Judge to the best interests of his party.

When he, however, placed himself on record as a disciple of sound money, and as being opposed to free silver, little Willie Bryanism, etc., we are decidely of the opinion that he showed himself to be at heart more of a Republican than a Democrat.

It will be remembered, however, that he did not dare place himself on record as a gold Democrat until after the nomination had been given to him by his party. Then, and not until then, did he declare himself in favor of the yellow metal. Is he honestly in favor of sound money, or is he only a wolf in sheep's clothing?

It will be remembered that only four years ago he voted for Bryan, free silver, and all implied by it, and by so doing endorsed everything, free silver included, in the then Democratic platform. Has he honestly changed his views, repenting in sackcloth and ashes for his past great sin, or is this a shrewd move for both Democratic and Republican votes?

Gold Democrats and Republicans alike should be careful how they cast their votes for a man who claims to believe he was wrong four years ago, and in the face of his past political record, wants to swear by all that is pure and holy he is right to-day.

President Roosevelt's views on the financial question are well known to everybody, and every voter in the land will be safe in casting their ballots for him. Judge Parker may be all right, and then again he may be all wrong, but at any rate we can afford not to take chances on electing him—brilliant politician as he is—to the presidency. He stands about as much show for that eminent office as does the humble individual who pens these lines.

WESTERN Democrats assert that they are not satisfied with the political character of their vice presidential nominee. His financial character, however, is all right.

SILVER SNAKE NOT SCOTCHED

Intelligent voters should be careful lest they be led into believing the contention of some of the Eastern Democrats that the Democratic party is now in favor of the gold standard. There if no room for any misunderstanding on this question. Judge Parker on his platform, which had been adopted by an overwhelming vote in the convention, and the party did not sustain him, but simply, in order to extricate itself from a situation that threatened a disruption of the convention, notified him to go ahead and hold the political postmortem in his own way and make whatever disposition of the corpse he deemed proper.

The masses of the Democratic organization fully understand that they were imposed upon by trickery and falsehood, to which it submitted rather than renew a fight which had already exhausted them. The silver men are keenly aware that they were buncoed at the eleventh hour and robbed of their just share of the fruits of the convention by trickery and cunning on the part of David B. Hill and his lieutenants. The result is that the party still has it meaningless platform and Silver orators of the West can point to the fact that the platform does not declare against their beliefs. So far as the platform goes the Democratic party is just as much of a free silver party to-day as it was when W. J. Bryan led it to two defeats. If evidence outside the platform is needed to show that the silver men are still confident of controlling the party organization, W. J. Bryan has supplied that evidence. In a formal, written statement, issued upon his return to Lincoln from the St. Louis convention, he said: "As soon as the election is over I will, with the help of those who believe as I do (in the coinage of silver at 16 to 1), undertake to organize for the campaign of 1908."

The silver snake has not been scotched. It has hardly been stunned.

THE Democratic candidate for the vice presidency was a railroad man for many years. The voters will tell him where to get off in November.

ALL FOR HARMONY.

The Republicans in Maryland are now a happy family. Harmony has been restored at a most auspicious time—as the beginning of a presidential campaign, preceeding an election at which the vote of Maryland may play a most important part in the electoral college. The Republican congressmen to be chosed at the same election may also be determining factors in the next House of Representatives.

With the Republican party united as it now is, with every Republican exerting his best efforts for a Republican victory, Maryland will remain in the Republican column at presidential elections, a position which she took in 1896 for the first time since 1864, and which she maintained in 1900.

Not only is harmony restored in Baltimore but it exists in the state. Congressmen Sydney E. Mudd and W. H. Jackson have agreed to "let the dead past bury its dead." Mr. Jackson has agreed to accept a renomination on the Eastern Shore. This virtually means his election. Mr. Watcher will have no opposition for renomination to Congress in his city. There is every prospect of his re-election.

By the restoration of harmony the Republicans face a bright future in this state. They are beginning to realize how costly are their feuds.

A glance at the returns of the election last November shows that it was not the large Democratic vote and accessions to the Democratic ranks that brought Democratic victoro, but it was in the slump in the Republican vote that brought Republican disaster—a slump that was directly traceable to factional strife within the party.

THE Democrats who allowed Judge Parker to write their money plank should be fair and allow Millionaire Davis to revise their trust plank to suit his pleasure and his interests.

REPUDIATING THE PLATFORM.

The Democratic national convention was unfortunate in naming candidates who are not in sympathy with its platform in some important particulars. First comes Judge Parker and flatly informs the delegates that he is not in agreement with the action of the convention in its failure to pronounce in favor of the gold standard, and now comes Mr. Davis, the nominee for the Vice-Presidency, practically repudiates the plank denouncing tariff protection as robbery.

A special to the Philadelphia North American from Elkins, W. Va., says:

While accepting without reservation the national platform of his party, which document he helped frame—he having been a member of the sub-committee—the personal political opinions of Henry G. Davis, Democratic Vice-Presidential candidate, embrace the following:

Flat gold standard as the monetary sastem.

A very moderate revision of the Dingley tariff schedule.

Recognition of the economic necessity and importance of capital in combination and an entire absence of anything like special antipathy to trusts.

A representative of the Philadelphia Record also interviewed Mr. Davis, and, referring to the latter's record in the United States Senate, said;

"In those days you were known as a moderate protectionist, believing that while a tariff was being levied for revenue, necessary protection should also be furnished American industries Have you changed your views in this regard?"

"I can't say that I have," Senator Davis replied, and then, smiling at the reminiscence, he said: "Why, in the draft of the platform at St. Louis they had the words tariff for revenue only, and Mr. Bryan helped me get the word 'only' stricken out. Yes, sir, he actually helped me to get the word 'only' stricken out," and pursuing this same subject, Mr. Davis continued: "It is a mistake to say that the democratic party is for free trade. We are not a free trade party. Before the war, when we had control of all the branches of the government, we raised all of the revenues from customs duty. We had no internal revenue tax in those days. Yet, now, with the internal revenue tax producing nearly one-half the government revenues, the charge is made that the Democratic party is a free trade party. That isn't true at all."

And Mr. Davis says this in the teeth of the declaration of the platform upon which he was nominated that "protection is robbery." The question for the people to determine is, whether the views of the nominees are paramount to those of the convention which nominated them, and which were, in Mr. Davis' case, fully acquiesced in, as he helped frame the platform and voted to declare protection robbery. If that be not free trade, what is it? To say the least of it protectionists cannot afford to vote for a candidate who agreed to that sentiment in convention, whatever his views on the subject may be personally.

The Sentinel said last week and now repeats that "it is well the Republican and Democratic conventions have made this issue so emphatic that no doubt can exist as to the attitude of either party on the subject. The Republicans are squarely for, the Democrats squarely against, tariff protection and the people can choose intelligently between them." The issue is not to be evaded by the private views of either of the candidates on the subject although it is understood Judge Parker is in through sympathy with the tariff plank of the Democratic platform.—Westminster Sentinel.

ONE thing must be said in Judge Parker's favor. He thinks so well of the Republicon gold standard policy that he has recommended it to a party he knows does not believe in it and is not honest in claiming to do so.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT was notified formally yesterday of his nomination for the presidency by the national Republican convention. The ceremony took place at his country home at Sagamore Hill, three miles from Oyster Bay. In accordance with the wish of the President, the ceremony was made as simple as possible.

The formal notification of the action of the convention was made, on behalf of a committee representiog every state and territory in the United States, by Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the House of Representatives.

IT IS stated that Judge Parker dearly loves to be out in a storm. He will get his fill of that when he is caught in the blizzard on November 8.

"WHAT makes you think we won't elect the Democratic ticket?" shouts Col. Watterson. We'll answer that, Colonel, when you tell us first what makes you think you will, if you really think that way.

BITTINGER.

A few days ago while a number of men were lounging upon the village green, relating their various experiences with and observations of the habits of all manner of snakes, a young farmer who is said to be in the habit of seeking shady retreats when the sun shines, related the interesting story of how he had seen a water snake "do up a rattler." He said that one very warm day when the heat had driven him to the shade, he saw a water snake crawl up out of the pond and approached a rattler that lay coiled up on the bank, a fierce battle ensued. After a time the water snake stretched itself out upon the sod and feigned death, whereupon the rattler proceeded to swallow his victim, but after he had succeeded in swallowing about six inches of the rear portion of the prostrate snake, the latter started off at a rapid pace, plunged into the water and drowned the rattler. The listeners thought it was a pity to call him a common liar so the meeting adjourned.

The festival held at this place last Saturday evening was a perfect success. The net proceeds amounted to $51.11, which money will be used to make some repairs to the church property.

DAVIS MAKES DENIAL

No Truth in Report That He Will Wed Mrs. Kate Reynolds.

Bedford Springs, Pa., July 26.—Charles B. Robb, secretary to ex-Senator Henry G. Davis, has, at the instance of Mr. Davis, authorized the emphatic denial of the story published in the morning papers to the effect that he will be married in the fall to Mrs. Kate Reynolds of Shepherdstown, W. Va. There is no truth whatever in the story that they will be married.

The story published in the morning papers is as follows:

News comes from Shepherdstown, W. Va., that ex-Senator Henry G. Davis, the Democratic vice presidential candidate, will in the fall marry Mrs. Katherine Reynolds, widow of Dr. John Reynolds, of Shepherdstown. Mrs. Reynolds is 70 years old, while Senator Davis is 80.

Many years ago, when Henry G. Davis was a brakeman on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, he became a suitor for the hand of Miss Catherine Chuswa, whose family was one of the most prominent in Washington county, Md. Miss Cushwa was a pronounced beauty and was the acknowledged belle in the section in which she lived. Her family being an aristocratic one she became the leader in the exclusive social set.

The friendship thus begun speedily ripened into love. Davis proposed, and the young woman was willing, but the parents could not reconcile themselves to the idea of their daughter marrying a poor brakeman, and the young man was sent on his way. In the course of years young Davis became the richest and most powerful citizen in his state, while Miss Cushwa became the bride of Dr. John Reynolds, a physician, of Shepherdstown, her old or first "flame" also in the course of time taking unto himself a life partner in a distant part of the state.

It was not until many years afterwards that the two old lovers came together again, one as a widower and the other as a widow. The old spark rekindled into a flame, with the result that there will be a notable wedding at the quaint old town of Shepherdstown, some time during the month of October, so the gossip says. Mrs. Reynolds is the mother of two grown up children and the grandmother of a half dozen interesting boys and girls. She lives in a beautiful old-fashioned house, within a stone's throw of the stately Potomac.

Died.

PRITCHARD.—At her home on Third street in Oakland Monday evening acout ten o'clock, after an illness of several weeks of typhoid fever, Mrs. Galusha H. Pritchard. Mrs. Pritchard was born in Ohio where she was married and returning to Oakland with her husband she resided here ever since. She leaves four children, three daughters and one son. Her funeral took place Tuesday afternoon from her late residence, the services being conducted by Rev. J. M. Davis and Dr. Scott.

WHITE—At her home three miles south of Oakland, after an illness of many months, Mrs. Rachael White, wife of William White of Joseph. Mrs. White was 77 years of age and died yesterday morning. Her funeral will occur this afternoon, the interment to be made in the Lower burying ground. Mrs. White was a noble Christian lady, loved, respected and endeared to all who knew her. Her many good traits of character and her neighborly instincts will cause her loss to be the more regretted. She leaves besides her husband, who is one of God's noblemen, one daughter and two sons, they being Mrs. Kate Junkins, of Bayard, West Va.; Rolla G. White, who resides on the farm, and Holland, who resides in Texas. Mrs. White was also the mother of the late Mrs. William Riley, of near Ryans Glade, and the late Mrs. Chas. J. Newman, of near Oakland, whose death but recently occurred. To the bereaved husband and children the sympathy of the entire community is extended.

AUGUST WILL BE HOT AND STORMY

Even Violent Torandoes and Hail May be Looked For.

Rev. Irl R. Hicks, of St. Louis, makes these predictions for August:

First period, regular, reaching the 1st to the 5th. The first days of August will bring decided increase of storm conditions. A low barometer will pass eastward over the country, attended by great increase of warmth, all followed by many black and blustering storm clouds. Even to sections where only light rains fall, this first August period will bring very threatening clouds, with violent to dangerous summer squalls. Heavy rains will visit sections covered by previous rains at this period. Change to much cooler will follow in the wake of these disturbances, progressively from the west and north.

Second storm period, reactionary, is central on the 8th and 9th. Terrestrial phenomena, for a period of at least two weeks, centering on the 10th. Falling barometer, increase in temperature, cloudiness and return of more or less storminess will be natural results on and touching the 8th and 9th. Under existing conditions, whatever perturbations arise at this reactionary period are very apt to be prolonged into the storm period next following.

Third storm period, regular. The influence of this period will be felt from the 11th quite up to the 16th. Autumnal equinox of Earth may also be regarded as entering the problem at this period. One of the heated terms of the summer is one of the things to be expected about this period. It will come in with very high temperature. The warmth will increase and barometer will fall as we advance into the period, and by the 14th may be expected wide areas of violent electrical storms, in full sweep across the country from west to east. These storms will consume three or four days in making a transit of the country. They will be attended with heavy hail in western and northwestern sections. Change to rising barometer and cooler will naturally come in behind the storms. It is altogether probably that West Indian hurricanes will appear south of our coasts and similar disturbances in many other parts of the Earth about this period. Such perturbations will almost certainly appear before the end of August, and no one need be surprised if they develop at this third storm period. About the 2th to 4th may also be considered a time of probably seismic and earthquake disturbances.

Fourth storm period, reflectory central on the 19th and 20th. high temperature, low barometer sultry, humid atmosphere will be ural at this period. and under s conditions intense electrical storms are very apt to occur. General thunder storms with phenomenal lightning, heavy gales and possible tornadoes, are among the results to be watchod for over much of the interior country. A marked rise of the barometer and change to westerly winds and cooler will push the rear of these disturbances.

Fifth storm period. Extends from the 24th to the 28th. Very general and severe storms will visit the interior parts of the country. The sectional conditions that have prevailed during the present and past months will break down, bringing changes in the character of storms and general weather to all sections. More hail will fall in many places than for weeks past. Tornadoes, storms in many localities should not surprise the intelligent students of these forecasts. Change to very cool nights will follow these general perturbations, especially should heavy equinoctial storms visit the south coasts and induce corresponding storms out of the northwest. In such an event, even frost may follow to the north the last week in August along with the high barometer that will succeed the storms.

Hard Luck.

He had been drinking of the cup that cheers and likewise inebriates, and had a large vessel of the joy-juice protruding out of his hip pocket. In this condition he was unwise enough to walk down to the B. & O. station this morning. When the cabbies and hotel porters saw him there was a howl of joy—for those men were thirsty and here was relief. But the gentleman with the jag and the juice refused to produce. Furthermore he said some things that were not pleasant to hear. The gentlemen with the thirst surrounded him and began to guy him. He repeated his charge. Suddenly that vessel of firewater disappeared from the protecting pocket of the proud possessor and was seen no more. Some magician had caused it to disappear. There was some talk of a scrap but it didn't materialize and the erstwhile owner of the soothing syrup got away on the train. The cabbies gave him a farewell cheer and heartily invited him back.

MONEY STOLEN.

Andy Gonder "Touched" for $67 In Cash and Checks.

Andy Gonder, the Railroad street confectioner, is poorer by $67 today on account of the fact of having been "touched" for that amount yesterday morning sometime between ten and twelve o'clock.

He had placed some paper currency and a check for $15 in his bank book and in a shot sack was some silver and nickles. This he instructed his brother to carry to the bank but for some reason the order was not carried out and the money left lying on the counter. An hour or two afterward Andy had occasion to ask about the money but it had disappeared, along with the bank book and the sack containing the silver. A search of the store was made but it was not located. Mr. Gonder has nopositive proof who the thief was.

LEG BROKEN BY FALL.

William Casteel, Jr., Seriously Injured at His Home

William, aged about eleven years, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Casteel, who reside on the West Union road, adjoining Oakland, met with a serious mishap last Saturday and as a result may be rendered a cripple the rest of his days.

The lad at the time he was hurt, was climbing into a moving wagon at his home and when about to set his foot in the bed he slipped and fell among the spokes of one the wheels. Before the vehicle was stopped it had wounded his leg around the axle, producing a compound fracture below the knee and lacerated the muscles and flesh in a horrible manner.

Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh was called to see him and dressed his injuries.

The foundation work for Mr. E. L. Mitchell's new dwelling house on Second street has been completed and on Monday the carpenters will begin the erection of the frame. The house will be quite a large one and will be fitted with all the modern conveniences.

Faust is a Baptist minister, young in years and energetic in his work. On Sunday morning he will preach at Thayerville and the same evening at Deer Park.

An advance agent representing a carnival company now showing at Piedmont, West Va., was in Oakland last night conferring with some of our citizens relative to bringing his attraction here for the week beginning August 15th. No definite understanding was arrived at, but the matter will probably be determined this evening.

Farmers are complaining of the extremely wet weather which has prevailed for several weeks and as a consequence delayed the hay harvest and retarded other farm work to a considerable degree. However, the grass is not yet overly ripe and little loss will be sustained on account of the delayed harvest. Oats will be a good crop and it is predicted that the yield of corn will be exceedingly heavy. Wheat has been cut and the yield is above the average.

By word received by friends from Dr. Bruce Lichty and wife, who are now visiting in Kansas, we learn that they had quite an experience in reaching Wellington, Kans., after leaving St. Louis. They were unfortunate enough to run into a flood and they were delayed 48 hours, and then only reached their destination by riding on freight trains and walking around the washouts. They will certainly have some great stories to tell of their trip when they arrive home.—Meyersdale Commercial.

Mr. S. F. Herr, of the Schley Hotel, whose efforts to afford amusement to the people of Oakland by sending up baloons and attended on two occasions by the burning of the spheres, has procured another from the makers in Chicago. Tuesday afternoon he endeavored to inflame it and succeeded to some extent but when the anchor was thrown off which held it to the ground and the monkey attached it failed to rise a hundred feet, descending in the Little Yougiogheny River where Mrs. Monk got a free bath. Another trial will be made some evening this week and it is hoped that success will attend the effort.

LOST FOUR OF HIS FINGERS.

John Carney, of Hutton, Met With an Unfortunate Accident at a Saw Mill.

John Carney, of Hutton, who until recently was employed as foremen of trackmen by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and afterward entering the employ of Carney & Pendergast as offbearer on their saw mill which is located several miles north of Hutton, met with a very unfortunate accident last Friday afternoon about two o'clock whereby three of his fingers were nearly severed and the fourth so badly mangled that it was afterward amputated.

Mr. Carney, at the time the accident befell him, was near the saw which was in motion and noticing a small piece of wood lying nearby stooped to remove it when the frayed end of his glove was caught by the saw which pulled his hand towards it and in an instant three of his fingers on his left hand were almost entirely cut off and the fourth badly mangled. He was brought to Oakland as soon as possible and taken to the McComas Hospital where an operation was performed Saturday morning at which time it was found that the injured finger as well as portions of the other three would have to be amputated, the operation being performed by Drs. McComas and Legge.

TEN CARS OVER MOUNTAIN SIDE

Patrick Burkett Injured in Wreck on Seventeen Mile Grade.

An extra east bound Baltimore and Ohio freight train was wrecked Sunday morning on the Seventeen Mile grade and nine or ten cars were pitched down the mountain side. Mr. Patrick Burkett, of Cumberland, a flagman, was injured and was removed to the Keyser hospital. He was injured internally. Mr. Burkett resides on Seymour street in South Cumberland. The wreck was caused by a broken wheel on one of the coal cars.

A Complimentary Letter.

Mr. DeWarren H. Reynolds, president of the Inter-State Trust and Guaranty Company of Cumberland, Md., who is a judge of such matters, writes this office concerning some work executed here for a coal company which is just beginning business as follows:

"The Secretary of the * * * Company came to my office yesterday with the bonds which were printed at your office and I must congratulate you upon the neat, workmanlike and admirable manner in which the bonds have been gotten up."

HAND BADLY MANGLED.

Mr. John S. Browning, a farmer residing a few miles from Oakland met with an unfortunate accident this morning by having his hand caught between a rope and a pulley on the hay forks in his barn to which a horse was attached. The rope had slipped from the pulley and Mr. Browning attempted to replace it when the horse started and caught his hand as above stated. The flesh on his fingers was almost entirely cut away laying the bones bare. He came to Oakland where his wounds were dressed.

BOUNDARY DISPUTE TO BE SETTLED

West Virginia Commission Will be Ready to Submit Arguments in October.

Mr. E. H. Sincell has written to Attorney General Bryan, notifying him that the West Virginia boundary commissioners desire time to collect more evidence in the case pending between the States of Maryland and West Virginia concerning the boundary between the two commonwealths, but would be prepared to submit arguments before the United States Supreme Court during the October session. Mr. Sincell was employed by the State of Maryland to collect evidence in behalf of the commission here.

The case has been dragging for years, and the fact that the beginning of the end is in sight will be pleasing information to all interested.

The boundary between Maryland and West Virginia at the headquarters of the Potomac river has long been in an unsatisfactory condition. It has been the subject of dispute and litigation, which finally resulted in suit before the United States Supreme Court.

The act authorizing the suit against West Virginia was passed by the legislature of Maryland in 1890. It was brought in 1891, since that time it has been pending. The surveys and locations were made under the administration of Attorney General Clabaugh.

The most important question to be settled by the location is the initial point or beginning of the line in controversy, which was supposed to begin at the most western source or "first fountain" of the Potomac river. Many persons in both states have always understood that point to be at the "Fairfax Stone," but when the representatives of Maryland met in the summer of 1897 to begin the survey they found a spring much larger than the one at Fairfax, with a much larger stream also. This stream is to the west of and one and one-eighth miles distant from the Fairfax spring.

The Maryland representatives, after satisfying themselves upon the subject by testimony entirely satisfactory to them, began a line at the spring discovered by them, which they called Potomac spring.

The disputed territory, as the matter now stands, lies between the parallel lines run from the Fairfax and the Potomac springs, respectively, and embraces a tract of fifty-four square miles.

It is said that West Virginia does not dispute the location seriously, but relies mainly upon her long continued possession of the land in controversy.

MISREPRESENTED

By

HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1903, by Charles W. Hooke

THE name I. John Lynde (as the gentleman always writes it) has a regal look. It suggests the old proclamations signed "I, the king." And, indeed, history is littered with kings who had not half his power or sphere of influence. He is the head of gigantic enterprises.

Edward Shoreham was not a beggar, but he felt himself to be a failure. He was nearing the age of forty. He had made money, though not very much, and had lost it. At the date of this narrative he held a minor executive position in a corporation so conservative that promotion therein was very slow. This corporation was closely allied with some of the big Lynde companies, but Shoreham felt that his own work was of microscopic size in the broad field of the great man's vision. Therefore when he waked one morning to find a personal communication from I. John Lynde waiting for him he was inclined to believe that he had not waked at all; that the incident belonged with the visions of the night.

The note was brief: "Please call at my office tomorrow (Wednesday) morning at 9 o'clock."

At 9 o'clock Shoreham presented himself at the potentate's office with an uplifted heart, but at fifteen minutes past 9 he was the most disappointed, perplexed and tormented man between the two oceans.

The ways of I. John are sudden as a hawk's. Everybody knows that. He selects men to serve him or dismisses the unworthy with a Napoleonic flash of decision. Therefore Shoreham was amazed beyond measure to discover that I. John had not made up his mind.

"I have an unknown friend as well as an unknown enemy," Shoreham said to himself as he left the office. "Somebody has spoken well of me, some one has spoken ill of me. I must thank the first and defeat the other."

Upon the matter of thanks he was not greatly in doubt. Though Shoreham had never met Lynde before he had the great good fortune to be acquainted with the mighty potentate's niece, Miss Alice Lynde. This young lady dwelt with her widowed mother in a style of great simplicity. Shoreham entertained for her a gloomy, secret, despairing affection, and it was sweet for him to fancy that she had brought this good fortune within his reach. He called in the evening to express his gratitude.

In the parlor of Mrs. Lynde's house he was distressed to find a gaunt, weak kneed, silly looking and not altogether reputable young man named Lucius Trevor, a distant cousin of the Lyndes.

Shoreham had met Trevor several times and had paid no particular attention to him. Upon this occasion, however, it seemed that the fellow looked at him in a peculiar manner. Trevor soon took his leave.

As soon as Shoreham was alone with Alice he offered her his thanks for the event of the day, but she would not receive them.

"I have never spoken of you to my uncle except once, and then he asked me a few questions about you. Why, it was last evening!" exclaimed the girl. "I had forgotten."

"Did he mention Wilmot, Shoreham & Co.?" inquired Shoreham.

This was the firm whose brief but eventful career in Galveston, Tex., had cost the junior partner all his money.

"He did," replied Alice. "And I was very glad that you had told me all about it. The name was mentioned quite casually. But I took the opportunity to tell him that I understood the matter fully and that you were simply the victim of misfortune; that the failure of the firm came by no fault of yours, but through sheer ill luck."

"YOU—YOU REALLY LIKE HIM?"

"There can be no possible doubt that some one is working against me," suddenly observed Shoreham.

"But who would wish to injure you?" she exclaimed. "And who knows anything about it?"

"Nobody in this city," he replied, "except Dudley Drew."

"Dudley Drew!" exclaimed Alice, rising. "Why, he was at my uncle's house last evening."

"What in the wide world was he doing there?" cried Shoreham. "But let's be calm. Dudley Drew is the best friend I have on earth."

"Look here, my friend," said Alice, raising her dimpled chin, as she always did when especially earnest. "I will believe no such thing of Dudley Drew. I take your own word for him. It was through you that I came to know him and to admire him for an honest and loyal fellow."

Shoreham felt the blood rush to his face.

"You—you really like him very much?" he stammered. "I—I am glad."

"You express yourself enthusiastically," said she, with a laugh.

Shoreham arose and walked half way across the room and then returned.

"I was falling into a very old and common error," he said. "Really, Drew is not at all the man to take such an advantage of me."

"An advantage?"

"Miss Lynde, I am getting upon dangerous ground where I have no right to

THE TWO MEN TALKED FOR TEN MINUTES.

be. If this were a melodrama and I were one of the leading characters instead of being the meanest supernumerary on the stage there might be a plot here. But there isn't."

"I understand you perfectly," said she. "I am the leading lady of your play and Mr. Drew is the villain. You are very silly."

"I love you," said he. And it was the very last possible combination of words that he would have supposed himself about to utter.

The perfect mechanism of the speech, the complete surprise of it to himself, half stunned him. He stood there rigid, pale, desperate, yet incapable of action or even of thought.

In fact, he could not have done better. There was never a plainer picture of sincerity than he presented at that moment.

"I am glad," whispered the girl, her eyes suddenly brimming with tears; "I am glad."

"Mr. Dudley Drew," said a maid so startlingly close to Shoreham's ear that he nearly jumped over the back of the chair upon which his trembling hands were resting.

When Mr. Drew was ushered in there was nothing to indicate to him that he had interrupted a conversation of more than ordinary importance.

"Good evening, Miss Lynde," said he. "Good evening, Edward. I hoped to find you here."

"Yes?" said Shoreham, whose emotional balance was not yet fully restored.

"There's something in the wind for you, Edward," continued Drew. "You may know all about it, but I don't believe you do. I think it's in the bud yet. Anyhow, I'll tell my story if Miss Lynde will excuse me. It has to do with a member of her family."

"What did you tell him?" demanded Alice, coming straight to the point, in the way of the sex.

"Why," said Drew, somewhat taken aback, "I gave Shoreham a great sendoff. Mr. Lynde is looking you up, Edward, and it means something big. He asked me if you hadn't made some rather serious mistakes in the matter of Wilmot, Shoreham & Co. I told him it was a plain case of hard luck and that you were all right."

When the men had left the house Drew said:

"I know your Nemesis. It's Trevor. He met me on the street and asked me to walk along with him to his uncle's house. I trailed along. We played some billiards, and he sprung old I. John on me. Trevor must have found out that I knew about the Wilmot-Shoreham case, and he hoped that I. John could get something damaging out of me. Well, he didn't."

About 5 o'clock on the following afternoon Shoreham was walking to his lodgings when his eyes beheld a spectacle that rooted him to the spot. Upon the opposite side of the street in earnest conversation stood Lucius Trevor and James Wilmot.

Shoreham had had no idea that his former partner was within 10,000 miles of that place. The last news he had heard of him was that the man had gone to New Zealand.

The two men talked for a matter of ten minutes, while Shoreham, unobserved, watched them from the other side of the street. When they separated he followed Wilmot and presently called him by name. They had not parted in a cordial fashion five years before, but they greeted each other like old friends, as is the way of the world.

This is what Shoreham learned in the ensuing conversation: That Trevor had in some unknown way discovered Wilmot's presence in the city and also the fact that the man was nearly penniless; that he had offered Wilmot various inducements if he would tell the story of the failure to I. John Lynde "in the right way," meaning thereby the way that would hurt Shoreham the most; that Wilmot had resisted this temptation and had not seen I. John, but instead had written him a letter praising Shoreham's honesty and business ability and asserting that only the hardest kind of hard luck had been the cause of the disaster.

"This is mighty good of you, Wilmot," said Shoreham. "Call on me tomorrow and I'll see what I can do to square it."

In the evening of this day he received a call from Dudley Drew, who came in a state of great excitement with an important piece of news. He had discovered what work it was that I. John had designed to put into Shoreham's hands, and both men spoke of it in tones of reverence.

Shoreham groaned.

"I'll never get it," he said. "Wilmot has turned up. Trevor has him in tow, and everything is going to blazes. And to think that this should have happened to a man in sight of heaven!"

"See Lynde again tomorrow. Go in and win!" exclaimed Drew. "Good heavens! Lynde knows the way of the world. He knows what hard luck is. Make him see what you were up against in that Wilmot-Shoreham affair."

"I will if I can," replied Shoreham, "but the chance looks mighty black to me."

On the following day Shoreham called upon I. John. He knew when he walked into the office that he had reached the crisis of his life, and he prepared to meet it with desperation appropriate to its aspect of finality.

I. John was smoking a very short end of a cigar.

"I want to ask you some more questions," said I. John. And then suddenly, "This isn't my usual way of doing business."

"I know it," said Shoreham, "and I am forced to conclude that you take a personal interest."

"Not a bad guess," responded Lynde. "It's a fact that I would like to give you this chance if I could, but I have the usual prejudice in favor of successful men. However, there may be circumstances which alter cases. Now, as to this affair of yours in Galveston. You had rather hard luck there, I'm told."

"My failure there," said Shoreham firmly, "depended upon a series of rather common errors, resulting largely from inexperience. I believe that I understand my mistakes perfectly now and that I shall never be caught in the same way again. There was no luck in it. If you have the time I will tell you precisely why Wilmot and I went to pieces and exactly where I myself was at fault."

"You are all right," he said. "This is all that I want to know."

Shoreham sank back into his chair with a faint gasp.

"I had looked you up," continued I. John. "I'd made up my mind that you were a strictly first class man. But at the last moment you were misrepresented to me by your friends, by my niece, Mr. Drew and others. I had a letter from your former partner, Wilmot, just before you called upon me the other day—very foolish letter, so foolish that I knew you couldn't have had anything to do with it, which was fortunate for you. It was hard luck, hard luck. I guess the man was trying to tell the truth, but he told the same story that I'd heard from all sides. I said to myself: 'This fellow Shoreham hasn't learned his lesson. He thinks that he's all right and that circumstances are all wrong. I've got no use for that kind of man.' Still I remembered what my nephew had said to me."

"THERE WAS NO LUCK IN IT."

"Trevor?"

I. John nodded.

"He told me that you had been an idiot in the Wilmot-Shoreham business and that you had admitted it to him."

"I never did," said Shoreham.

"Well, I rather hoped it was true," said I. John. "Anyhow, it was a good word for you. I like a man who knows when he's made a mistake and admits it, at least to himself. But blast a fellow who runs around telling everybody how unlucky he is! There's something wrong with him."

"I agree with you perfectly," responded Shoreham.

"And now," said I. John, "we'll close this matter up in two winks. By the way, are you engaged to my niece?"

"Not—not quite," stammered Shoreham.

I. John wagged his head slowly.

"Better close that bargain if you can," he said, with a dry smile. "She's a fine girl."

An Essential of Free Government and Personal Independence

By ELIHU ROOT, Ex-Secretary of War

IN no country and in no age have the practical provisions of law designed to secure to the private citizen the application of the principles of liberty and justice for his protection against official power been made so broad, so effective and adequate as in the countries following the course of the common law and inspired by the Anglo-Saxon ideas of PERSONAL LIBERTY AND PROPERTY RIGHTS.

There is one general characteristic of our system of government which is essential and which it is the special duty of lawyers to guard with care—that is, the observance of limitations of official power. THERE IS A CONSTANT TENDENCY TO IGNORE SUCH LIMITATIONS AND CONDONE THE TRANSGRESSION OF THEM BY PUBLIC OFFICERS, PROVIDED THE THING IS DONE WITH GOOD MOTIVES FROM A DESIRE TO SERVE THE PUBLIC. Such a process, if general, is most injurious. If continued long enough it results in an attitude of personal superiority on the part of great officers which is inconsistent with our institutions, a destruction of responsibility and independent judgment on the part of lower officers and a neglect of the habit of asserting legal rights on the part of the people.

The more frequently men who hold great power in office are permitted to override the limitations imposed by law upon their powers the more difficult it becomes to question anything they do, and the people, each one weak in himself and unable to cope with powerful officers who regard any questioning of their acts as an affront, gradually lose the habit of holding such officers accountable and practically surrender the right ultimately to hold them accountable.

CONSTANT ACCOUNTABILITY OF PUBLIC OFFICERS FOR STRICT OBSERVANCE OF THE LIMITS IMPOSED BY LAW AND CUSTOM AND UNDOUBTING ASSERTION OF THE PRIVATE RIGHT OF THE CITIZEN TO HAVE NO POWER EXERCISED OVER HIM EXCEPT IN STRICT ACCORDANCE WITH THE LETTER AND THE SPIRIT OF THE LAW—THESE ARE THE ESSENTIAL CONDITIONS OF FREE GOVERNMENT AND PERSONAL INDEPENDENCE.

THE EXERCISE OF POWER NOT CONFERRED BY LAW MAY IN A PARTICULAR CASE DESTROY NO MAN'S PROPERTY NOR RESTRAIN HIS LIBERTY, BUT IT WEAKENS THE TITLE TO EVERY MAN'S PROPERTY AND INJURES EVERY MAN'S LIBERTY, BECAUSE IT IS ONE STEP IN A PROCESS WHICH, IF CONTINUED, WOULD BE DESTRUCTIVE OF OUR FREE INSTITUTIONS.

Abundant evidence that our people have not become indifferent to these necessary limitations is furnished by the frequency with which political opponents impute disregard of them to public officers. THE CHARGE IS OFTEN UNFOUNDED AND OFTEN MADE UPON SLIGHT FOUNDATION WITH GREAT EXAGGERATION. But the fact that it is made shows that political leaders recognize that if they can make the people believe that a public officer has usurped power he will be condemned without regard to his motives.

THE CRY OF EMPEROR, CZAR AND MAN ON HORSEBACK IS BUT AN EXTRAVAGANT APPEAL TO AN INSTINCT WHICH OUGHT TO EXIST, AND HAPPILY DOES EXIST, AMONG US AGAINST SUBMISSION TO UNLAWFUL AUTHORITY, HOWEVER TRIFLING MAY BE ITS EXERCISE AND HOWEVER BENEFICENT ITS DESPOTISM.

The extravagance and lack of foundation for many of these appeals, however, involve the danger lest the cry of wolf should be heard so often that men will become incredulous and indifferent and turn a deaf ear to statements and proofs of real encroachments, MADE WITH MODERATION AND NOT FOR POLITICAL EFFECT, and that thus indiscriminate and unfounded charges against the innocent shall serve as a protection to the really guilty.

Co-Operation The First Law of Civilization

By E. H. HARRIMAN, Railroad Magnate

THE FIRST LAW OF ALL OUR CIVILIZATION IS THE CO-OPERATION OF ALL INDIVIDUALS TO IMPROVE THE CONDITIONS OF LIFE. By division of labor each individual is assigned to or takes his special part in our social organization. This specialization of labor has become most minute. Not only is this true in scientific and philosophical research and professional and business life, but in the simplest and earliest occupations of men, such as the tilling of the soil, the specialist is found bringing to the aid of his industry expert and scientific knowledge.

In primeval life the individual with his own hands supplied almost all his needs, but now his personal effort contributes directly little, if anything, thereto. He now satisfies his wants from many and diverse sources, giving in exchange the product of his special work. THUS MODERN SOCIETY HAS BECOME A COMPLICATED ORGANIZATION OR MACHINE, WHICH CAN ONLY MOVE WHEN ALL ITS PARTS HARMONIZE AND WHICH IS OBSTRUCTED OR BREAKS DOWN WHEN ANY OF THESE REFUSES TO CO-OPERATE OR PERFORM ITS SPECIAL FUNCTION.

It needs no argument to show that what we have accomplished was possible only through each individual doing his part—through depending on others to do theirs—through co-operation. BY REMAINING INDEPENDENT OF OTHERS MAN MUST HAVE CONTINUED IN HIS SAVAGE STATE. He has found it possible to improve his condition only by co-operating with others and by becoming dependent upon others; HENCE THE FIRST LAW OF CIVILIZATION—CO-OPERATION.

Omri and Ahab.

The throne of the Northern Kingdom was the shuttlecock of ambition for half a century. Seven kings had it and four of them got it by violence and murder. Reigns were brief and dynasties interrupted. The exodus of the Levites deprived the nation of a saline element. Civil war broke out. Conditions waxed worse and worse, until one king set the torch to his own palace and Tirrah, that synonym of beauty, lay in ashes.

The history of the Southern Kingdom presents a marked contrast. Almost the entire period is covered by the reign of a single monarch, Asa, one of the noblest men who ever wore a crown. No such black succession maintained as did in Israel. One need not go far to find the cause of the opposite fortunes of Israel and Judah. The former drifted further and faster from that national rectitude which alone brings national peace and joy.

It has been aptly said that every age thinks itself a crisis but no one can doubt but that the advent of Ahab brought a supreme issue in the history of Israel. The chronicler feels justified in giving all the balance of his book to the narration of these dark and stirring scenes. Ahab's name means "Father's brother," the suggestions being that Ahab is Omri's other self in impiety.

Just at this juncture, Jezebel, a female Judas Iscariot, cast her black shadow on Hebrew history. She is another Irene of Constantinople, or Catharine de Medicis of France, or Shakespearian Lady Macbeth. She is the inventor of priestly inquisition and first supporter of religious persecution. She was masterful, indomitable, and implacable. Her father had killed his brother in order to get the Zidonian throne. Such was the fierce and fanatical blood that flowed in her veins.

It was an evil day for both Israel and Judah when Ahab took the woman to be his wife. The pains and penalties of that choice perpetuated themselves for a thousand years. It was under her malign influence that positive idolatry was established. Calf-worship, had, it is true, been previously established and was unauthorized and corrupt. The calf was, however, everywhere recognized as a symbol of Jehovah, and under this sign he was still worshiped. But with the advent of Jezebel, the Baals supplanted Jehovah. A great Baalite temple was built in Samaria with the evident purpose of surpassing that of Jehovah in Jerusalem. Eight hundred priests in gorgous regalia served at the altars. The pomp of a sensuous cult was substituted for the simple and speaking rites of an elevated theistic religion. The essence of the faith of Israel, found its expression in the simple creed "Jehovah, Israel's God; Israel, Jehovah's people." But in place of the revered name of Jehovah it was deliberately proposed to substitute the name of the Baals. It was a blow at monotheism. In the place of the one God were substituted "gods many," namely, all the local deities of fertility—with all their shamful and murderous rites, including the burning of children. To such a foul depth had Israel fallen!

The cumulative nature of sin has a startling illustration in that the same superlalive terms are used to describe the sin of son of well as of father. Each did worse than all before him.

The Teacher's Lantern.

With Ahab a new and vivid section of Hebrew history begins. It closes with the destruction of the house of Omri by Jehu. Its importance is indicated by the fact that its incidents are recorded at length. The advent of Elijah makes it an epoch of absorbing interest. It is the description of one of the decisive battles of the world—the battle between Jehovah and Baal. It is both the glory and the shame of the nation.

Ahab's foolish choice of a wife resulted in lasting dishonor. Companionship stamps character. "A companion of fools shall be destroyed." There was a general law against marriage with a heathen. For a king to violate the law was all the more reprehensible because of the exemplary power of his high position. Yet Ahab considered it a light thing. He was unwarned by all previous visitations—which were in vain as far as he was concerned.

Jezebel is odious in the last degree, but she must be treated with historic fairness. She was a vigorous woman of a vigorous race. Her name is linked with the classic names of Belus, Pygmalion and Dido.

Samaria was a name destined to become familiar and significant. Its origin, as here given, is exceedingly interesting. Omri's removal of his capital from Tirrah to Samaria was like Constantine's removal from Rome to Constantinople. The new site was exceedingly advantageous—for strength and beauty. The name is derived from that of the owner of the hill, Shemer, from whom it was purchased at a price which is curiously a matter of record to this day.

A stone cries out in witness to the accuracy of Scripture. Thirty-six years ago a missionary in Syria found what is now known as the Moabite Stone, and which is said to read like a new chapter in the Book of Kings. It was made 850 B. C., bears the name of Jehovah and Omri, and confirms Bible history and geography.

The inscription on the Moabite stone is in ancient Phœnecian, and covers thirty-four lines. It is an interesting incident that when the Arabs found the archaeologists anxious to secure this stone, they became suspicious and broke it up into small pieces, to be used as amulets. Not understanding its historical value, they thought the reason it was wanted was that it possessed some magic spell. The infinite patience of the archaeologist a (class of workmen not generally understood or appreciated) is illustrated in the recovery of the fragments, the restoration of the stone and its translation. It is in the Louvre in Paris.

Two golden calves seemed an incident so small that it might be winked at. They were only grayen reminders of the true God. They were far apart. One was at the northern and the other at the southern boundary. Their setting up was an insignificant affair, not worth making a fuss over. But no! That was the crevice in the dike. Through that small orifice came all the putrid flood of idolism. The beginnings of evil should be resisted.

OVER THE RIVER

By Nancy Priest Wakefield

"OVER THE RIVER," which appeared in the Springfield (Mass.) Republican in 1857, has been a favorite in many scrapbook collections ever since that time. The name of its author, at that time Miss Nancy Priest, rests largely on this poem, although she wrote others of merit. She was born in Royalton, Mass., in 1821 and in 1845 was married to Lieutenant A. C. Wakefield. Mrs. Wakefield died in Winchendon, Mass., in 1870.

OVER the river they beckon to me—
Loved ones who've crossed to the farther side;
The gleam of their snowy robes I see,
But their voices are lost in the dashing tide.
There's one with ringlets of sunny gold,
And eyes the reflection of heaven's own blue;
He crossed in the twilight gray and cold,
And the pale mist hid him from mortal view.
We saw not the angels who met him there;
The gates of the city we could not see;
Over the river, over the river,
My brother stands waiting to welcome me.

Over the river the boatman pale
Carried another, the household pet;
Her brown curls waved in the gentle gale—
Darling Minnie! I see her yet.
She crossed on her bosom her dimpled hands,
And fearlessly entered the phantom bark;
We watched it glide from the silver sands,
And all our sunshine grew strangely dark.
We know she is safe on the farther side,
Where all the ransomed and angels be;
Over the river, the mystic river,
My childhood's idol is waiting for me.

For none return from those quiet shores,
Who cross with the boatman cold and pale,
We hear the dip of the golden oars,
And catch a gleam of the snowy sail—
And lo! they have passed from our yearning heart;
They cross the stream and are gone for aye;
We may not sunder the veil apart,
That hides from our vision the gates of day;
We only know that their barks no more
May sail with us o'er life's stormy sea;
Yet somewhere, I know, on the unseen shore,
They watch, and beckon, and wait for me.

And I sit and think, when the sunset's gold
Is flushing river and hill and shore,
I shall one day stand by the water cold,
And list for the sound of the boatman's oar;
I shall watch for a gleam of the flapping sail;
I shall hear the boat as it gains the strand;
I shall pass from sight, with the boatman pale,
To the better shore of the spirit land;
I shall know the loved who have gone before—
And joyfully sweet will the meeting be,
When over the river, the peaceful river,
The angel of death shall carry me.

MARCHING THROUGH GEORGIA

By Henry C. Work

SHERMAN'S "march through Georgia," which inspired the following song, one of the most popular in the north toward the end of the civil war, took place in November and December, 1864. The way being clear, in the former month the army of Sherman left Atlanta for Savannah. The country along the route was almost devastated. By Dec. 13 Sherman reached Savannah, and on Dec. 21 the city surrendered. The picture of General Sherman is shown herewith.

BRING the good old bugle, boys, we'll sing another song—
Sing it with a spirit that will start the world along—
Sing it as we used to sing it, fifty thousand strong,
While we were marching through Georgia.

CHORUS.

Hurrah! Hurrah! we bring the jubilee!
Hurrah! Hurrah! the flag that makes you free!
So we sang the chorus from Atlanta to the sea,
While we were marching through Georgia.

How the darkies shouted when they heard the joyful sound!
How the turkeys gobbled which our commissary found!
How the sweet potatoes even started from the ground!
While we were marching through Georgia.

Yes, and there were union men who wept with joyful tears,
When they saw the honored flag they had not seen for years;
Hardly could they be restrained from breaking forth in cheers,
While we were marching through Georgia.

"Sherman's dashing Yankee boys will never reach the coast!"
So the saucy rebels said, and 'twas a handsome boast.
Had they not forgot, alas! to reckon with the host,
While we were marching through Georgia.

So we made a thoroughfare for Freedom and her train,
Sixty miles in latitude—three hundred to the main;
Treason fled before us, for resistance was in vain,
While we were marching through Georgia.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

By Shakespeare

'TIS but thy name that is my enemy;
Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.
What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot,
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging, to a man. O, be some other name!
What's in a name? that which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet:
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo called,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes,
Without that title:—Romeo, doff thy name;
And for thy name, which is no part of thee,
Take all myself.

Love's Young Dream

By the Fun Makers

"I WOULD like to have this ring made larger," said the young woman. "It's my engagement ring and"—

"I'm afraid," said the goldsmith, "that it'll have to have an entirely new setting. It's already been altered five times."—Cleveland Leader.

"When you proposed to Miss Duckatts did she spring the this-is-so-sudden gag?" asked the innocent suburbanite.

"No," answered the drug clerk, "she didn't. She merely looked at me a long time and then said, 'Well, wouldn't that jar you?'"—Indianapolis Sun.

Father—But I am afraid he is a young man of fickle character.

Daughter—Oh, no, he isn't, papa. Why, he has smoked the same brand of cigarettes for nearly six months!—Puck.

Ethel (ecstatically)—Oh, Charlie, would you just propose all over again, and do it into this phonograph?

Cholly—Why?

Ethel—Why, I want to have something to remember you by after you have gone in and spoken to papa about it.—New York News.

"Why does a hen cross the road, Uncle Si?" asked the fresh young city feller of his country relative.

"Hain't any one o' my hens went crost th' road sence th' autymobiles begun usin' it," replied Uncle Si, thereby putting the venerable joke down and out.—Cleveland Leader.

She Took His Advice.

"I am so very unhappy, Mr. Brief," said the fair petitioner for a divorce to her lawyer.

"Is there anything in particular wrong?" the legal gentleman asked sympathetically.

"No, nothing in particular," sighed the fair petitioner. "I am simply miserably blue and depressed. But I suppose that is something for which you cannot advise."

"Well, madam," said the lawyer, swinging around in his chair, "I will say frankly that if you were a man I should advise you to go out and drink three or four cocktails. But, as it is, I am afraid I am not competent to deal with the situation."

Three or four days later the fair petitioner again called at the office of her lawyer. This time she was all smiles.

"And, oh, Mr. Brief," she said when she arose to go at the end of the conference, "I want to thank you very much for your advice as to how to get rid of the blues. Like all your other advice, it was excellent."

"You—you"— gasped the lawyer.

"Yes," said the lady, "I took them."—New York Press.

Jack's Prayer.

Five-year-old Jack is very brave in the daytime, but an awful coward when it is dark. The other night after having prayed for all his relatives he mournfully concluded his supplication in the following words:

"And, oh, dear Lord, do take care of Jack when it gets dark and the light is all gone. Don't let anything hurt him, please, and don't let anybody get him." Then changing his tone to a very cheerful confident one he said: "You needn't bother about him in the daytime, Lord. Just let him alone and he can have a good time and take care of himself."—Philadelphia Press.

A Habit With Her.

"There goes Mrs. Giddeigh," remarks the woman in the wicker rocker on the porch of the summer hotel. "One hears all sorts of things about her. They say she got acquainted with her husband by flirting with him."

"Humph!" says the sallow lady on the settee. "That's how she got acquainted with mine."—Judge.

By Sight Only.

Sunday School Teacher—Henry, do you know the tenth commandment?

Henry—Yes, ma'am.

Teacher—Then you may repeat it.

Henry—Can't.

Teacher—Why, I thought you said you knew it.

Henry—Oh, I only know it by sight.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Successful Training.

"Do you think I am improving?"

"Sure you are. Jest keep at it a week or two more, mum, an' I guarantee your husband won't never dispute a thing you say."—San Francisco Examiner.

An Apprehension.

In fair Japan their courteous ways
Still fill the stranger with delight.
'Twere sad if these progressive days
Should teach them kindlier moods to slight.

They never say "Step lively, please,"
Nor slap a friend upon the back,
Nor crowd at weddings or at teas;
Such things their manners proudly lack.

Our modern genius must be prized,
Yet one suspicion bids us fret—
The more you get folks civilized
The more uncivil they may get.

A French Horn Among The Philistines

By JEFFERSON NOEL

Copyright, 1903, by Jefferson Noel

ALL day long the wind had been blowing hard enough to raise freckles on an Indian. The alkali laden sand scurried over the desert, blinding us and our ponies and enveloping old landmarks in a cloud. Toward sundown it eased up a little, and when we had finished our dry tea only an occasional puff came to remind us of the day's discomfort.

When a lull came in the conversation I arose and sauntered beyond earshot of the camp. Juan, the Mexican, seemed to have been waiting for a break in the circle and started in the opposite direction. Glancing over my shoulder I saw Metcalf standing alone, throwing an armful of brush on the fretful fire. Macpherson and Williams, being old cronies and a bit exclusive in their tipple when towns were far apart, had gone off, I thought, to finish the Randsburg bottle.

I was dimly conscious of something strange about the whole proceeding. On the desert men never wander away from camp, especially when a stranger is left on guard. This Metcalf—here anything that was dim and uncertain in my consciousness gave way to a clearly defined image—this Metcalf had been picked up at the Needles, and, in the prospectors' way, we asked no questions. None of us knew him. Suppose, I thought, he should put his heel on that dancing bit of flame? Suppose he should pack everything of value on the ponies and make a bee line for civilization?

I hesitated between two impulses. The camp needed me, but since early morning I had waited impatiently for this hour. I wanted to be alone. I wanted to sing.

Something other than the sense persuaded me the music breaking for utterance was of high order. Having only an indifferent memory for sweet sound, and, I must confess, a taste that might be termed popular, I was carried off my feet as much by the recognition of its merit as by its continual recurrence. But, strange as it might seem, despite the continual recurrence when I was surrounded by distractions, at the very moment I had an opportunity to do more than listen in dumb ecstasy, try as I might, I could not recall a single note. Laying the blame on my anxiety over the possible loss of our traps, I allowed the other impulse to get the upper hand and returned to camp.

Metcalf was lying on his back, smoking. There was no greeting. He did not even turn his head. About his indifference, which was extraordinary, I cared nothing, for just as I got within six feet of him the tantalizing air came again full born into my brain.

I wondered at my grasp of such a masterpiece. My conception was complete to the final note, and, though I had never taken a lesson in music, I knew—felt, rather—wherein it conformed to the highest standards of the art. I followed the flutelike tones that were ringing in my ear, and, finally obeying something stronger than my will, I threw back my head and, shaping my mouth as I had seen the fellows of the glee club at the university shape theirs, sang.

Metcalf's groaning brought me to a realization of the absurd figure I cut standing in the center of the camp beating time with a wisp of sage and singing to the moon as though my life depended on it. Hastily throwing some scrub on the fire, I set off with the determination of reaching the final cadence without interruption if I walked to the other side of the desert.

When beyond Metcalf's hearing I stopped and gathered myself together. The discovery of a talent is something to be well considered. Perhaps my ability as a composer would rank me above mediocrity. It would be impossible to conceive of one musical theme exhausting my originality; rather might it be expected to aid development in that direction.

Throwing back my head I formed my lips to sing, and not a note came forth. All my mental turnings and twistings were of no avail; not a suggestion of the melody that was to open up a noble career for me came to the foreground of consciousness. My castles were ruins.

The reaction caused by my failure brought a feeling akin to disgust. Waiting, dull and inert, not caring if the elusive air ever returned, my ear caught the faint echo of whistling off to the right. I went in the direction of it. As I drew near enough to distinguish between the sounds there seemed a strange familiarity in them. By stretching the imagination a resemblance to my own elusive air could be discovered.

Forgetting the indifference of a moment ago, I grew furious. Here was some scoundrel who had evidently heard me practicing near the fire trying to steal the product of my genius. Drawing near, I was about to tax him with his dishonesty when he stopped and, stretching his arms above his head, rose from the sand heap. His "bueno, senor," as he passed on his way to the camp told me it was Juan, the Mexican, the kindest and gentlest of men. Nothing but folly would appear in accusing him of anything but faithfulness.

Thinking in nervous jerks, my feet keeping time to the unaccustomed mode of thought, I turned away. Scarcely had I gone 500 yards when I heard another whistle offend the night. And it was offense: it was little more than high treason against music. Williams had no doubt caught the first few bars of the strange air as I sang it near the fire and was determined to make them do duty for the whole composition.

Only Macpherson remained. There was no possibility of this man lurking in the shadows when I made that exhibition of myself before Metcalf. Filled with the traditional Scotch honesty, if he had heard me and was interested he would have come forward and asked me to teach him.

Keeping the flickering camp fire as a central point, I set out to encircle it. About one-third the distance was traversed when a low wailing attracted my attention. At first I thought it the bark of a distant coyote, but closer investigation discovered a larger share of the human cry in it than could possibly come from that skulking evidence of arrested development. With my gun ready for action, I went on. I was firmly convinced some one was being murdered. It was Macpherson. He was singing—that is—

Now he was low and hoarse; again he was high and piercing. Between these two extremes were roars beside which the efforts of the bull of Bashan were as the bleating of a lamb. And these sounds represented his conception of my beautiful air!

SINGING TO THE MOON.

Here was a case of disillusionment without a parallel. About Williams I should say nothing. But Macpherson and Juan! I would have taken their simplest word and considered it binding as an oath. Two more honest men never trod the earth. Yet they were undoubtedly guilty of trying to appropriate a masterpiece that I had conceived.

I hastened back to where the wedge of flame pierced the pervading gloom—a gloom that now reeked up from every point and obscured even the beauty of the stars.

Juan and Metcalf and Williams were scattered lazily about the camp. It seemed impossible to do otherwise than shun my two old friends, so, wrapping myself in my blanket, I stretched out near the man we had picked up at the Needles, and my back had not fully touched the earth before the beautiful air came to me again. As its wonderful charm gripped me I grew dizzy with excitement. The veins in my neck swelled at the memory of being robbed by the very men I had trusted most.

It was the gray of the morning when a coarse burlesque of my masterpiece intruded itself on my consciousness. Macpherson was sitting up beating time with a corner of his blanket to a kind of sotto voce reproduction of the absurd sounds he had made the night before. Metcalf was watching him, and Williams was turning uneasily in his sleep.

At a very palpable error I objected and called to Macpherson that he was wrong, but without paying the least attention he kept at his noise. Incensed, I took up the theme and sang it as I knew it should be sung. Then Williams at this juncture joined in with his stupid attempt to show acquaintance with the air. And finally Juan awoke and set the pace, musically speaking, for us all. The Mexican's notes were clear and well sustained and gave evidence of some training. Indeed, if we had been content to follow his leadership, it is barely possible we should have reproduced something like unison, or even harmony, but the strong personality that is engendered in men when they cease to be house animals was apparent in our efforts to sing—rather roar—each other down.

Metcalf groaned aloud. There was no humor in that early morning serenade. It contained all the tragedy of an artistic inspiration entering commonplace souls.

At breakfast we glared at each other. Williams toyed maliciously with his six shooter, and Macpherson, the peace loving Macpherson, unlimbered himself, placing both knife and gun within easy reach. The silence was ominous.

I was the first to speak. Addressing Juan, I asked him if the music did not run like this, whistling.

Juan shook his head, but before he could suggest a correction Williams growled out his idea of how it should go.

The half quizzical smile on Macpherson's face gave way to a look of disgust. "This is how the tune goes, Williams," he broke in abruptly.

There was no question of the energy displayed in Macpherson's performance, but the grace left something to be desired.

I was on the verge of explaining this to him when Metcalf said, "That's the most infernal piece of music I have ever heard, and, furthermore, you are all wrong."

To this day I fail to see what saved his life. It seemed as though a child of mine had been murdered before my eyes. Williams and Macpherson both covered him instantly.

"You mean you're a liar," said Williams hotly.

"Go on; say you're a liar," echoed Macpherson, nervously fingering the trigger.

"If you care to listen to me," answered Metcalf with an indifferent wave of his hand and a shrug that spoke volumes for his character, "I'll prove it the truth."

"Let's give him a chance," I broke in, impelled as much by the anxiety to discover what he meant as the desire to avoid blood.

Without another word Metcalf went to his saddlebag and drew forth a sort of flute, which he screwed together.

"This is where it tripped you by the heels," he said, nodding to Macpherson. He then gave an imitation of Macpherson's ridiculous squeaks. "This is how it goes." And he played like an angel. "That's the chorus. Now the woman comes on. She's a contralto." And again the superb sounds that were a match for the morning filled our ears. A hint of the futility of life came as he reached the cadence. My throat was full. I was tempted to speak, to cry aloud, when a tenor note rang out clear and strong, transporting us to a truer, better world. He played this part twice over and finished with a dying fall that was as sweet as sleep after nights of pain.

Perhaps it was a minute, perhaps it was an hour, before any one spoke. Time and space were eliminated from our consciousness. Juan, the Mexican, a glint of reverence in his eye, had edged close to the player. Macpherson sighed and turned away. Even Williams, the bullet head of the outfit, was visibly affected.

"Gentlemen," said Metcalf, calmly unscrewing the inspired instrument and stuffing it into his saddlebag, "that proves one-half of my contention, the other half can be as easily proved."

Macpherson plucked nervously at his tuft of a beard and in his blunt, honest fashion said, "I thought that was my own tune."

"I thought it was mine," remarked Williams, and there was in the sliding inflection of the last word the suggestion of a man always sure of himself discovering a hole in his armor.

"I had dreams of developing into a great composer on the strength of it," I confessed, and, try as I might, I could not repress a sigh. Juan echoed the sigh and turned quietly away.

Metcalf seemed to be oblivious of his triumph. The indifference that was in his eyes when he looked down the muzzles of the revolvers still lingered. "You are all wrong," he finally began. "A man of whom you know nothing wrote it. There was a time when the music stood well in the world's opinion. About the beginning of its vogue I came in contact with it, to my grievous injury.

"Of course there was a woman," he went on after a slight pause. "There always is. But she was such a woman as only poets know in their dreams. And by every right that springs from years of unflagging devotion and unselfish love she was mine.

"Then he came, the composer, with all his old world charm and his old world knowledge of the human heart. In something less than a month from the day I introduced him to her I learned that all my unflagging devotion and unselfish love could not tip the beam against the least of his smiles. This knowledge came during the performance of the music you claim individually and collectively as your own. As they sang I watched them— But why go on? The music was composed for her. The man's soul was in it.

"That was ten years ago. Occasionally the desire takes possession of me to learn if she still lives, if she is happy—with him, and I move in the track of men. Yesterday she seemed to draw me down that way." And he waved his hand toward the crowded east. We were hardly conscious that he had finished. His voice had fallen to a whisper.

Over us the sky hung fiery red. The desert wore a strange, pathetic look. The blue veil shutting in the mountains swayed indolently. Not a twig or grain of sand moved. The wind was dead.

HE PLAYED AS MAN NEVER PLAYED BEFORE.

Metcalf quietly saddled his pony. We watched him with the sympathy we felt showing in our faces.

"Won't you play for us just a little?" said Macpherson hesitatingly.

For answer Metcalf drew forth the flute and, leaning against the pony, played as man never played before. He seemed to be something more than human and carried us with him into a world far beyond this.

Where he led us we were content to go. It was up, ever up, and the higher place was easy of attainment when he pointed the way. None of the cramping misery of the cities was in the life unfolded for us. The kisses of the kindly rain, the caresses of the splendid sun, the freedom of God's own smile were of it. The generous breath of the morning lulled us to sleep again, and the whisperings of the water brook came to our ears.

He was a mere speck against the sky line when Williams said: "Beautiful! Beautiful! Play it just once more."

Juan pressed my hand and was gone.

Macpherson looked with vacant eye after the Mexican, then arose and saddled up. He waved goodby to us as he went away.

Williams moved, and I put my hand on his arm. "They will not find him," I whispered hoarsely. "He will get behind the mist and be lost. Perhaps they will search for him forever."

"Perhaps, perhaps," said the bullet head, "but for that music I would search for him in hades." And he, too, rode off, leaving me alone on the desert, regretting the jot of reason that bade me stay.

Flow of Blood Stopped by Music.

Perhaps the strangest use to which music can be put is to stop the flow of blood from a wound. An army doctor noticed that when a wounded soldier was taken to within an easy hearing distance to music hemorrhage was greatly reduced or stopped. Neither he nor others who confirmed his observations, could understand how this phenomenon was brought about, but it is now believed that the vibration of the air produced by the music causes the patient to become faint, in which case the action of the heart is so considerably lessen that the overflow of blood is reduced.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

No. 1279 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Franklin P. Stremmel, vs. Mildred E. Stremmel.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree of divorce of Franklin P. Stremmel from his wife, Mildred E. Stremmel, a vinculo matrimonii.

The bill states that on the 21st day of December, 1898, the plaintiff and defendant were married and lived together in Garrett county until December, 1903. That the said Mildred E. Stremmel on divers days and times since said marriage has committed the crime of adultery with certain men and that the plaintiff has not lived or cohabited with said defendant since he has become convinced of her adulterous acts.

The bill further alleges that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii, and for an order of publication.

It is thereupon this 21st day of June, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, in each of four successive weeks before the 22d day of July, 1904, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of August next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not not to be passed as prayed.

ATE STOCK IN C. AND O. CANAL.

Offer Made for It By W. M. R. R. Company.

The Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, against which the State of Maryland has claims estimated at about $30,000,000, comes into prominence again by a letter from Vice-President F. S. Landstreet, of the Western Maryland railroad, suggesting that his company might become a purchaser for the State's interest in the property. The Board of Public Works will consider the proposition of Mr. Landstreet at a meeting to be held on August 4. It came before a meeting at which were present Governor Warfield, Comptroller Gordon T. Atkinson and Treasurer Murray Vandiver, but was laid over until the next meeting for consideration.

The Chesapeake and Ohio canal is in a maize of litigation, and the purchaser of the State's interest would probably have a lawsuit when an attempt was made to get hold of the canal itself. But to the Western Maryland this ownerspip would give it such a position that it would be able to practically nullify the opposition of the trustees of the canal to the condemnation of a part of the canal for its Cumberland extension. This opposition, according to the threats of one of the trustees, will be carried to the United States Supreme Court. Ownership of the State's equity in the property would, it is believed, give the Western Maryland clear sailing in getting its rights of way at once and in ultimately beating out the Baltimore and Ohio for absolute posession of the canal.

Free Book Fund.

The annual distribution of the state fund for free school books to the schools of Baltimore city and the several counties of the state has been made by the state comptroller, as authorized by the acts of 1902, chapter 330. Allegany gets $7,058.42 and Garrett $3,624.43.

Seriously Ill.

Capt. J. M. Litzinger and daughter, Miss Tede, were called last evening to Farmington, to attend the bedside of Mrs. Annie Miles, eldest daughter of Capt. Litzinger, who is very critically ill at her home in that city. Although no definite statement has been made, Mrs. Miles is thought to be suffering with appendicitis, and surgeons from Wheeling will in all probability perform an operation for her relief this afternoon or evening.—Grafton Sentinel.

WEST VIRGINIA MILITIA

Passed Through Oakland Yesterday Afternoon in Charge of Negro Prisoner.

Yesterday evening three cars and an engine, running as second section of train 55, and containing three companies of West Virginia State militia in charge of the negro Williams who was convicted at Charles Town, West Va., Tuesday of having committed an assault upon a white woman and sentenced to be hanged in the Moundsville penitentiary Sept. 9th, passed through Oakland on the way from Charlestown to Moundsville. The negro was securely ironed and was closely guarded by the soldiers and the sheriff of Berkely county.

The Governor of West Virginia fearing that an attempt would be made to lynch the negro when he was taken from Clarksburg to Charles Town for trial last Thursday, ordered the militia from Kingwood, Clarksburg and Grafton to accompany him.

Tuesday night a committee who voiced the sentiments of a mob of six hundred men gathered at Charles Town for the purpose of lynching Williams, approached the soldiers as they were guarding the prisoner and demanded admittance to the jail. The soldiers arrested nine of the committee and the following morning Judge Faulkner fined each of them $25 and costs.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

Dr. Boyer, of Accident, is frequently seen in this section, as he has a growing practice among our people.

Some gentlemen from Meyersdale, Pa., came up last Monday to look at Mr. John B. Harmon's farm, with a view to buying or renting same.

Messrs. T. Jefferson Lohr and E. F. Durst were business visitors to Grantsville last Thursday.

Mr. Lichliter, of Salisbury, Pa., was in this section last week and bought up most of last season's crop of maple sugar, the price paid being six cents per pound.

News has reached us of the safe arrival of Rev. Stroup's family at their new home near Meyersdale Md.

Mr. Malone, of Elizabeth, Pa., is again recuperating in this section.

There is talk of a union picnic to be held by the Grantsville and Bittinger Lutheran congregations, and we trust the matter may take definite shape as such an event would afford a season of enjoyment to many.

THE dinner pail is never rusty except during a Democratic administration.

CHAUTAUQUA OPENS AT MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK

Twenty Second Annual Assembly Began Yesterday Most Auspiciously.

THE USUAL CROWD IN ATTENDANCE

Director Davidson Promises Great Things—An Address Delivered Last Night by Dr. C. W. Baldwin, President of the Association.

Yesterday the twenty second annual assembly of the Mountain Chautauqua opened at Mountain Lake Park and will continue in daily session until the 29th inst.

The night session last evening was opened by Dr. Chas. W. Baldwin, President of the Mountain Lake Park Association, who extended a hearty welcome on behalf of his associates and in the course of his remarks stated that the work would go on uninterruptedly, building better and greater each year. Superintendent Davidson followed Dr. Baldwin in his usual cheery manner, outlining the many improvements in view for the future and promising the audience a better program this year than in years past.

The Chatauqua program is very strong this year and will have a number of noted lecturers, well known men in several lecture courses. Biblical work, illustrated lectures on various interesting subjects, music of almost every kind, readings and impersonations, and entertainments galore from magicians to trained dogs, base ball games and fire works.

The summer school has been enlarged and offers about twenty-five courses of instruction in its various departments. In the School of Liberal Arts will be taught French, Spanish, Italian, German, Greek and Latin.

Many improvements may be noted since last year. New cottages have been erected and old ones renovated. A number of new rowboats have been placed on the lake, which has undergone extensive improvements at the dam, under the supervision of a civil engineer, and a beautiful steam power launch has been bought for those who prefer steam to rowing.

The work of the Chatauqua Literary and Scientific Circle will be conducted in the Hall of Philosophy, in the grove, and a number of Round Tables will be held during the ten days of the reunion and also Round Table art lectures will be delivered will be "Raphael," "Michael Angelo" and "The Sistine Chapel."

NEW PHASE IN WATER WORKS QUESTION.

L. T. Yoder, of Mountain Lake Park, Now Wants Franchise

TO INSTALL SYSTEM IN OAKLAND.

Is Willing to Put Up a Bond for Faithful Performance of Contract—Matter Held Under Advisement Until August 15th.

Among the more important qeestions which came up at the regular monthly session of the City Council, held Monday night, was a proposition submitted in person by Mr. L. T. Yoder, of Mountain Lake Park, for the installation of a system of water works with sewerage for the entire town.

Mr. Yoder's proposition submitted orally by him to the members of the Council is a very favorable and rather liberal one and as now seems the case the best the Council can secure. He proposes to furnish from the stream and spring from which the source of supply is now drawn for Mountain Lake Park a sufficient quantity of pure water for commercial and household purposes and also for a specified number of fire plugs to be placed at points to be designated by the Council at and for a stipulated sum to be hereafter fixed, the sum for house service not exceeding that now charged in Pittsburg and in proportion for fire plugs and commercial purposes.

Mr. Yoder's proposition was discussed generally by Council and a resolution was adopted empowering that body to employ a competent hydraulic engineer to investigate Mr. Yoder's proposition, ascertain the quality and quantity of water he will be able to furnish from the fountain where it is proposed to secure it and also to ascertain what the town requires in the way of volume, size of reservoir, mains, etc., and to make a written report to Council at a special meeting to be held on the evening of August 15th, at which time further action will be taken on Mr. Yoder's proposition.

The matter is being taken up very energetically by the business men and property owners of the town and it is hoped that for the future welfare and good of the community from both a commercial and healthful standpoint, something of a definite character may be accomplished in this direction.

Other business transacted by Council was the following:

Bills for street work, advertising, electric lights, etc., for the month of July, amounting to $109.29 were passed and ordered paid.

Bill of J. Brock for caps, belts, etc., for policemen, amounting to $14, was ordered paid.

A permit was granted Mr. J. W. Hart and J. D. Hamill for the erection of a two-story frame building at the corner of Third and Alder streets.

Mr. A. D. Naylor appeared before Council and proposed that if an appropriation of $50 be made by that body for the repair of street between Pennington street and the corporate limits he would donate an amount equal to twenty-five per cent. for the same purpose, which was passed.

Councilman D. E. Bolden was instructed to draw plans and specifications for the erection of a sidewalk along Second street and also for elevated walk leading from Second street to Railroad street

A permit was granted Mr. Ered. T. Martin for the erection of a stable and a two-story dwelling on his lot corner Fourth and Oak streets.

Council adjourned to meet in special session August 15th.

Masons Feast.

Last Friday night after a special communication of Oakland Lodge No. 192, Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons, upon which occasion Dr. Benj. F. Selby was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason and Mr. Julius C. ANOTHER MERCHANT ROBBED.

W. H. Bartlett, the Groceryman, Relieved of Sixty Dollars.

Another robbery of a merchant took place last Friday morning in Oakland which was similar in nearly every particular to the one occurring earlier in the week when Mr. W. A. Gonder was robbed of a considerable sum.

W. H. Bartlett, the groceryman, whose place of business is in the First National Bank building, was the victim of the thief on Friday at which time his pocketbook containing about $60 in currency and checks was picked up from the counter and carried off.

A few minutrs before the money was taken Mr. Bartlett had waited on a customer and had occasion to take his pocketbook from the cash register to make some change. Just then another customer entered and lying the book down on the shelf ledge Mr. Bartlett filled the order of the second patron. A few minutes afterwards he remembered his money and went to look for it but it had mysteriously disappeared and up to this time no trace has been discovered of its whereabouts

POLICEMAN BRODERICK NOT GUILTY

Justice Teats, Before Whom The Officer Was Tried, Released Him.

Last Thursday afternoon Policeman W. E. Broderick, who was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Henry Dickins, charging the officer with assault and battery, was tried before Justice Teats. A number of witnesses were examined on behalf of the State and at the conclusion of the testimony the Justice withheld his decision rendering the same on Monday when he found the officer not guilty.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

THE CANDIDATE OR THE PARTY

The Republican press of the country has been generous and even chivalrous in dealing with Judge Parker as a Presidential candidate. There has been no disposition to withhold whatever measure of personal credit was due him for either the manliness or the shrewdness of his telegram to the Democratic convention. There were three distinct facts back of the act which must inevitably affect any cool and dispassionate judgment upon it, and which might have been instantly pressed with greater force but they have not been crowded home with any persistency.

The first fact is that Judge Parker had twice voted for Mr. Bryan on the free silver issue. He had thus as a citizen gone as far as he could to establish the silver standard. Tens of thousands of patriots and High-minded Democrats had refused to acquiesce in that folly and peril and had joined not one of them. It is inconceivable that he could have believed in the Bryan madness, and the only conclusion is that even behind the veil and ermine of the bench he preferred to preserve his party regularity rather than unite in halting its dangerous wrong.

The second fact is that Judge Parker had been made a candidate for the Presidency on a silent money program. The New York State Democratic Convention was held in April. That convention formally presented his candidacy. Its platform was prepared under his immediate direction, and was universally understood to embody the treatment of public questions on which he wished his candidacy to rest. That platform, which was, so to speak, his prospectus, was as silent on the money question as the national platform. Yet for three months Judge Parker stood on it as his special creed while his friends were busy gathering delegates, and he felt no necessity to speak.

The third fact is that, which the act of the platform committee in expunging the money plank by a vote of 35 to 15 was taken at 5 o'clock on the morning of July 8, and was known all over the country during the forenoon of that day, Judge Parker did not send his telegram till 24 hours later. Meanwhile all of the great Democratic papers of New York which fall under his eye had treated the determination of silence as political suicide and as destroying any possible chance that the nominee of the convention might make even a respectable fight. It was in the light of that situation—30 hours after the suicide of the committee, 18 hours after the suicide of the convention, not less than four or five hours after the question of the suicide of the candidate was raised—that Judge Parker reached his commendable determination at least not to commit suicide and despatched his message.

We say that all of these facts might be urged with great cogency as bearing on the character of Judge Parker's course from the beginning, but we repeat that there has been no inclination to detract from the personal merit of his decision to extricate himself from what was confessedly a fatal situation. If it indicated manliness to speak when he had so long remained silent, if it indicated shrewdness to find a way out of difficulty, that was certainly far better than paralysis in the face of fatality. But we are not inclined unduly to disparage or unduly to magnify this individual act because it does not change the fundamental fact that it is the Democratic purpose, tendency and capacity for government which is on trial.

If Judge Parker was elected he would not control the Democratic party, but the Democratic party would control him. In 1896 and 1900 he made it plain that he would rather be regular than right. Regularity was his ruling note. Even his boasted telegram does not contravene this principle. His nomination having been fixed without inextricable confusion, he telegraphs the convention that he believes the gold standard settled and that the convention ought to know his view in order that, if not acceptable, might make another nomination. He would still be regular. The convention answers that the money standard not being a present issue, he is at liberty to believe about it as he pleases. What is there here beyond a declaration on the one side that it is not now pending? What if with Democratic success it were unsettled who would control—the regular Parker or the regular party.

God Taking Care of Elijah.

The camel of idolatry first got his head into the tent of Israel, and then in the shortest time possible he was all in, hump, hoof and tail. At first there was no notion of supplanting the worship of Jehovah. The golden calves were only set up as substitutes for the awe-inspiring furniture of the temple to which for political reasons the people were no longer to resort. "These represent thy God," was the language in which they were dedicated. They broke the second commandment in an effort to keep the first, making a graven image to remind them that they must have 'no other God but Jehovah. Thus idolatry began in the mildest form possible. But it was a start on a down-grade. Velocity augmented. A few decades, and the whole kingdom landed in total apostasy. Priests of God were in exile, and his prophets shut in caves. Under patronage of Jezebel, her ancestral worship was made the State religion. The cruel and lascivious worship of Baal and Astarte were substituted for the pure and elevating theism of the Old Covenant. On the very spot where Abraham had worshiped the invisible and Holy One, were now altars for human sacrifice and groves for the goddess of love. Such disease as this needed heroic treatment. The case brooked no delay. Elijah was a physician after the Lord's own heart. He was not lacking in nerve or skill. He consulted with the Lord only.

The accepted idea of a prophet is too mechanical. We have been accustomed to imagine one called to this office as so possessed by the Divine Spirit that his personal will and judgment are practically supplanted. He is moved like an automaton. A verse in St. James epistle turns a strong light upon the prophetic office, and corrects our misapprehension. "Elijah was a man of like nature as we are." In and out of his special function, he was a perfectly normal character. Over in Tishbe of Gilead he contemplated the disgrace and impending ruin over his country. His heart was stirred with patriotic feelings, as ours are by events now transpiring. Do not take Elijah out of the category of perfectly normal human life. St. James says his feelings and emotions were just such as ours would be under similar circumstances. In his distress he communed with God. Is the evil remediless? Can not the people be chastened? Will not drought and famine bring them to repentance? He believes so. He prays that it may not rain. Can he aspire to be Jehovah's ambassador to the Court of Ahab? If so, he places himself unreservedly at the disposal of the Almighty. So, of his own will, with use of his own judgment, in normal manner he becomes Israel's reformer. Some scholars have been annoyed at the abruptness of Elijah's appearance in the narratives. The Jerusalem Talmud fills in the apparent hiatus with an imaginary conversation between Elijah and Ahab. It is gratuitous. Abruptness is in appearence only. From St. James we know now a season of prayer prepared the prophet for his mission. The people would recognize him as Jehovah's messenger. Conscience would tell them why the scourge was sent.

Next this portrait of the prophet hangs that of the widow of Zarephath. Plague of famine has fallen upon her. She is gathering fuel to bake the last cake. A footstep! She looks up. A stranger; a Hebrew; a prophet. Possibly the prophet whose word has brought the famine. However, she recognizes in the alien a fellow-sufferer. He, too, is famine-stricken. Her benevolence rises to subdue her racial prejudice, and even the stronger passion, her religious prejudice. The prophet makes as great a requisition as was ever made upon himself. She honors it. So this heathen woman, whose faith excelled that of any woman of Israel, received a prophet, and with him a prophet's reward. It was no accident that Elijah was sent to her. She was worthy. Now she stands forever incensed with the Savior's commendation and hallowed with His praise.

The Teacher's Lantern.

The prophet needed no introduction. His very name, Elijah, "Jehovah is my God," is a rebuke to the current idolatry. To have given the pedigree of Elijah, would be merely to satisfy curiosity. It could not add to his worth. He could smile at the claims of long descent. Well does Tennyson sing:

"How'er it be, it seems to me
'T is only noble to be good;
Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood."

And Elijah had a kind heart spite of apparent severity. He burst through bounds of personal interest, stood alone in peril, all for the rescue of his fellow-countrymen. He was severe to the few, that he might be merciful to the many.

History does not afford a sublimer example of faith than in the man, who, single-handed, repaired the desecrated altar in Carmel, and in presence of an apostate king and people competed with four hundred and fifty priests, deliberately giving them every advantage. Well may Mendelssohn's immortal oratorio reach its most realistic and thrilling strain when it points the frenzy of the priests and the calm assurance of the prophet!

"He repaired the altar of the Lord that was broken down." The act was Elijah's whole work in epitome. No Scripture more graphically shows the completeness with which a devine religion is put under control of human will. The altar, in spite of the fact that it was the Lord's, was yet broken down, and that by human hands. A consecrated human hand was also privileged to restore it. The same is true to this day in the Church.

The Lord has his prophets yet. Who see the evil. Whose hearts are stirred. Who put themselves at disposal of heaven for reformation of the evil.

Two portraits appear upon the same page. Women, contemporaries, same race, worshipers of same gods. Here resemblance ceases. One is a queen, ambitious, cruel, intolerant, licentious. Other a widow, on whom and her dying son the plague has fallen with all its weight. Her benevolence and faith outshine the queen's jewels.

No accident these two portraits appear together. Bible teaches by example. Each character stands for an opposite principle of life. In Jezebel it was love of self. In the widow it was love of others.

Outcome of the two lives was what might have been expected. Jezebel dies a violent death at hands of traitorous menials. Whether it be true or not that the widow's son became the prophet Jonah, at any rate she received commendation of the Prophet of prophets.

The Newspaper Man.

The following article which sums up the qualities of the newspaper man is from the Pittsburg Dispatch:

"There are so many, many people in the world, intelligent people at that, who have such an utterly warped impression of the newspaper man that it is only fair to that servant of the public to tell of a few of the things he sometimes does for the good of the public. He is the man in the world who is expected to work all of the time that he is awake, be an absolete machine, be at the same time an intelligent being, with a fair knowledge of almost everything that has ever transpired, be polite, patient, entirely impersonal and fair, be energetic and up to date, enthusiastic and a little more ambitious than his fellows, must get all of the news for his own paper first and at the same time be storehouse for the secrets and confidence of some of the leading men of the country.

"His ear must always be patient, his hand steady and his eye lighted to catch a glance of everything that goes on. In addition he must know news when he sees it, dig out the libel without question, expurgate that portion which will give offense, and do it all in the twinkling of an eye. If one were to pick out a big steel manfacturer, a wealthy banker and tell those things about him he would be regarded as a remarkable man, but in the case of the newspaper man, it is expected of him. And how many people think of this when they endeavor to snub or ignore?"

Oakland Model Steam Bakery

The Place to Buy the Best Bread Cakes and Pies.

Our aim is to make Bread "As Good as Mother made it," and we have been successful and have stopped all the drudgery of home baking with the use of Modern Machinery. Have you ever experienced as the following reads:

Your wife has gone out in the country;
You're left alone; what a pity,
With nothing to do but to ponder
And read out aloud to the kitty.

You run out of bread in the morning;
But knowing 'tis easy to make it,
You swiftly adjourn to the kitchen
And silently start in to bake it.

Take two coffee cups full of flour,
And water sufficient to "dough" it;
A thimble of salt for the "season,"
Then roll it, and poke it, and blow it.

And blow it, and poke it, and roll it,
And pinch it, and push it, and flop it,
And punch it, and pound it, and pull it,
And monkey around till you drop it.

Then clean it off nice with a towel,
And sock in a yeast cake to "raise" it;
Now drop in some soda to "short" it,
And smear on some butter to "glaze" it.

Then place it 'way back in the oven,
(That is if you've moulded and "set" it);
Close up all the doors of the kitchen,
Go in and sit down and forget it.

Go set yourself down in the parlor,
And read from "The Science of Baking;"
Read on till you smell something burning,
Then think of the bread you are making.

Now hop, skip snd jump to the kitchen,
And as you hop nigher and nigher,
You know by the smoke in the hallway
The blooming old bread is on fire.

Then hustle it out in the alley,
Juggle it, fumble it, slide it;
Then gently dig up a nickel
And go to the baker's and buy it.

DOWN IN THE HAYFIELD

By JAMES NORFLEET

The Widow Ray was tired of being a widow. For seven years she had been left to run the farm with the help of a red man. The time had come when she longed to shift the burdens on the shoulders of a man. Not that she couldn't have married within a year or two after the lamented Ray fell off a haystack and broke his neck, but she had ideals. She had turned to poetry in the first six months of her bereavement, and she felt her soul soaring above the hickory shirts and stogy boots of the average farmer. If she married again the standard must be higher.

In the years that followed men of higher standard came into her life, but matrimony did not follow. There was a windmill man who hung about for a month and sighed and bragged by turns, but just as he was about to propose marriage the widow discovered that he had two or three wives elsewhere. There was a lightning rod man who wrote poetry and talked of the whippoorwills and nightingales, but he was arrested and carted off to jail before he could ask her to be his. A piano man with ideals as high as her own came within an ace of asking for her heart and hand, but was interrupted by a case of jumping toothache. There were two or three others who might have won her heart, but didn't. And there was Deacon White. He lived on the next farm west and was a widower five years older than herself. He had been the first in the field. Fifteen months after her bereavement he had stood on the steps beside the kitchen door and said:

"Widder Ray, I'm a plain man and don't say nothin' but what I mean. If you'll marry me, I'll do my best to make you a good husband."

The widow was not for the widower, and she didn't make any bones of telling him so. He didn't get mad or commit suicide. He simply hung on and repeated his offer every three months. He had read that all things come to him who waits, and he waited.

THEY TURNED TO FIND THE WOMAN IN A HEAP ON THE GRASS.

He was waiting when an artist from the city put up with him for a few weeks to sketch some of the views in the neighborhood. The artist met the widow almost at once as he was sketching the ruins of an old cider mill, and fifteen minutes later she realized that her heart was beating at least one-fourth faster than usual. The artist did not even attempt a flirtation. He was pleasant and talkative and good company, but that was all. As the days passed he divided his time between the two farmhouses, and the thought that the Widow Ray might fall in love with him never crossed his mind. She did that very thing, however, and within a fortnight she was trying to make herself believe that her love was reciprocated and that every time he visited the house he had a proposal on the tip of his tongue.

The windmill and lightning rod and piano man had betrayed themselves within a fortnight. The widow gave the artist four weeks, and then she decided that something must be done. He lacked the cold nerve of the others, and opportunity must be made for him. Two girls or two married women will conspire together. A widow always conspires with herself alone, although the law says that it takes two to make a conspiracy. She rejected several plans before she struck the right one. On coming over to the house one evening to make his usual quarterly proposal of marriage Deacon White mentioned the fact that he had killed a rattlesnake in his meadow while mowing the grass in the fence corners. In a moment the widow's plan was formed and she had said no to the deacon and was perfecting it.

It was haying season. The artist wanted a sketch of a sturdy farmer swinging his old fashioned scythe in the meadow, and he set up his easel in the shade of a tree and the deacon sharpened his old scythe and bent his back. As the one mowed the other sketched, and as the mowing and sketching went on the Widow Ray had her own work cut out. She had lived among the daisies and buttercups all her life and cared no more for them than she did for dandelions, but on this summer morning she started out to cull a bouquet.

In due time she appeared in Deacon White's meadow. Both the deacon and the artist had their backs toward her as she approached them and were therefore ignorant of her presence. The widow looked to the right for daisies and to the left for buttercups and ahead and behind for rattlesnakes. All of a sudden the farmer was jumped a foot high and the artist off his camp stool by a long, shrill scream. They turned to find the woman in a heap on the grass with her hands over her face. She heard the rush of footsteps, and as some one seized her hands she gasped out:

"The snake! The snake! Oh, I have been bitten!"

"By gum, but is that so?" she heard a voice exclaim, and next moment she was picked up and thrown over a manly shoulder and was being borne toward her own house.

She didn't recognize the voice, but as the man bearing her reached the first fence and tried to climb it she identified the deacon's asthmatic wheeze. She at once wriggled out of his arms and pushed him away. Then she looked beyond him and saw the artist rolling on the ground with laughter. He hadn't rushed to the rescue. He hadn't declared his love.

"How dare you?" she exclaimed as she thought of the picture she must have presented as she lay across the deacon's shoulder like a bag of potatoes.

"Why, hain't you bin bitten by a snake?" he asked in reply.

"No, sir, of course not."

"But I thought you said you had?"

"I said I had twisted my ankle. What is that idiot laughing at over there?"

That evening the deacon showed up after his day's work to say that the artist was going away next morning. Much to his surprise, the widow turned on him with:

"Well, deacon, as you will keep on pestering me for the next five years if I don't say yes, I'm going to say it. But you just remember we ain't never to take no sapheaded artist to hang around and make fools of us."

"I—I don't understand," replied the deacon, with a puzzled look.

But she did, and that was enough.

He Got the Job.

"I was much amused the other day," said an uptown hardware dealer, "at a small boy who came around looking for a job. One of the clerks had dropped a lot of sharp pointed tacks into a drawer of brass screws and had given up the idea of taking them out.

"When the youngster turned up looking for a job we thought we would try him out by letting him sort the two articles. He went at it the same way we had begun, picking out the tacks with his fingers and getting the point of every third tack in the ball of his thumb.

"He had enough in about a minute, and he straightened up. We all began to smile, expecting him to give up the job. Instead of that he went over to the show case and picked out a horseshoe magnet. Then he came back to the box. In thirty seconds he had the tacks out, and the screws were still in the compartment. He knew that the magnet would attract iron and not brass, and in a jiffy he had accomplished what we had been trying to do all the morning.

"We didn't really need a boy, but this chap's smartness appealed to us, and we find him so handy to have around that next Saturday he gets a raise."—New York Press.

A Resourceful Woman.

"I think it is a foolish fashion that so many women indulge, that of telling their age wrongly," said the woman with the prematurely gray hair. "I can honestly say that I never practice it myself."

"No?" said her friend, with many meanings in the monosyllable.

"Well," said the first speaker, with a smile—she was a woman with a sense of humor—"the fact is I don't have to. I have a way of making myself out younger than I am if I wish to without telling a fib at all."

"Really?" inquired the other curiously. "In what way?"

"I put the burden of the fib all upon the questioner. You see, when one of my dear women friends—it is always women who are curious on this point—asks me how old I am I say: 'Oh, I'm a year or two older than you, you know, my dear—at least a year older. Let me see, now, how old are you?' And then she always knocks more off my age than I should ever have the nerve to do myself."

Extreme Absentmindedness.

"The queerest case of absentmindedness that I have ever known of," remarked the night clerk of a certain hotel, "was that which happened at this hotel early yesterday morning. Two fellow boarders, one Jones by name and the other whose name is Brown, occupied a room on the third floor.

"Well, Brown requested me to have him wakened at 3 o'clock so as to allow him to catch the 4 o'clock train. He was awakened at the requested time, and in his hurry to dress himself he put on Jones' clothes by mistake. He did not discover his mistake until he reached the depot, and would you believe it"—here the speaker paused—"when he found out that he was wearing some one else's clothes he immediately returned to the hotel and went right to bed"—

"I don't see any absentmindedness about that," broke in one of the listeners.

"You don't? Why, he thought that I had awakened the wrong man."—Philadelphia Press.

When Divorce Is Justifiable

By Mrs. FRANK LESLIE

TWO persons marry. Perhaps they are in the first flush of youth, with all sorts of rose colored ideals confidently set before their eyes, or perhaps they are older, and, having already known sorrow and disappointment and disillusionment, fancy they have at last found a companion whose sympathy and comradeship are to make up for a great deal of what is forever lost. In either case the contract, at least on the woman's part, is made with full intention of fulfilling its obligations.

And the man, if he be a true and honorable man, as he turns from the altar tells himself that in this hour a new life must begin for him, the old follies and vices must be forsworn, the old companions forgotten, the old crooked ways be made straight and clean.

OUT OF THIS GREAT MASS OF MANKIND THERE ARE A FEW, A VERY FEW, MARRIED COUPLES WHO DO REALLY FULFILL THEIR IDEALS AND FIND LIFE JUST WHAT THEY HAD HOPED, JUST WHAT THEY HAD PLANNED. They are fully satisfied and go about the world gloating over their own happiness and flaunting it in the faces of other people in a fashion that would be exasperating if it were not so pathetic.

Now, this class of persons look upon DIVORCE as NEAR AKIN TO MURDER OR SACRILEGE OR MADNESS. They cannot in the least understand how anybody, once admitted to the paradise of matrimony, could ever wish to leave it or to drive their other self out of its dear inclosure. They speak with bated breath or with uplifted eyebrows and whispers of holy horror and dismay as they wonder what strange sort of beings those may be.

Returning to that great class of married people who just get on after a fashion, with a good deal of bickering and a good many spoken or unspoken doubts as to whether marriage is worth while or not, we find them also opposed to divorce, but from a different standpoint from the little clique of paradisians just described. They thoroughly recognize why some people wish to be divorced. They are more or less frankly conscious of occasionally wishing to be so themselves, but they have never said so aloud, and the bitterness of their opposition to this mode of relief is that they do not care to see others rid themselves of a burden which they have made up their minds to bear. IT IS JUST THE DOG IN THE MANGER OVER AGAIN.

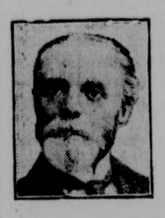
TO WIVES OF THIS CLASS I SAY: STAY WHERE YOU ARE. BE SATISFIED WITH THE FRYING PAN AND DON'T JUMP INTO THE FIRE. BEAR THE ILLS YOU HAVE AND DO ALL THAT YOU CAN TO ALLEVIATE THEM. ABOVE ALL, IF YOU HAVE CHILDREN, SACRIFICE YOUR OWN WORN AND WEARY LIFE TO THEIR FRESH YOUNG PROMISE.

BUT THERE IS STILL ANOTHER CLASS, AND A LARGE ONE, TO WHOM I WOULD NOT PROFFER THIS ADVICE, TO WHOM I WOULD RATHER SAY "SAVE YOURSELVES WHILE YOU CAN"—women without children and without obligations except the marriage vows which have been flung back upon them, shattered and soiled by him who had sworn to hold them sacred and inviolate "so long as ye both shall live." When this day comes to any wife, the day when she finds her home ruined, her womanhood insulted, her self respect outraged; when she finds her petitions, her tears, her arguments and her warnings alike are scoffed and disregarded; when she sees that she can do nothing to elevate the man who persistently degrades himself and drags her down with him; when she fears that blow may be added to cursing and coarseness, then my advice to that woman is, APPEAL TO THE LAW FOR A RELEASE FROM A UNION WHICH HAS BECOME A SLAVERY; ANNUL THE CONTRACT BROKEN AND DESPISED BY THE OTHER CONTRACTING PARTY; BE FREE.

Keep Politics Out of the Schools

By WHITELAW REID, Editor, Chancellor of the Board of Regents, University of the State of New York

LET us see to it that all our educational work, and ESPECIALLY THE WORK OF THE COMMON SCHOOLS, is done on the basis of absolute fairness to all the people. You carefully keep a saloon a certain number of yards away from a schoolhouse or a church. You are even more particular about other sources of possible contamination. But there is one thing not enumerated in the law which would damage the acceptable working of your common school system almost as much as these abhorrent and forbidden influences.



Far be it from me to disparage politicians; no man can be a good citizen without being a politician. "TAMMANY extends her hands to the Democratic candidate," says Bourke Cockran. Tammany always extends her hands palms up.

SILENCE NOT A PLEDGE.

In his role of advisor emeritus of the Democratic party, Mr. Grover Cleveland has been discussing the action of the St. Louis convention. Referring to the money question he says that he does not "overlook the fact that two clear and unimpeached verdicts of the people stand recorded in favor of the gold standard, and that its perpetuity has been secured by Federal enactments." Then, the distinguished ex-President goes on to argue that the telegram of Judge Parker to the convention supplies a "plank in a disabled platform," and pledges the Democratic party to the maintenance of the gold standard.

With all deference to the opinion of Mr. Cleveland, who is offering a mitigating circumstance in behalf of a client who has already pleaded guilty, the Parker telegram does nothing of the kind. The money question was ignored in the St. Louis platform because the delegates in favor of the Republican system of sound money did not dare force their demands. The Bryan followers, wedded to free silver and fiat money, were too strong to be turned down and the convention compromised its differences on the question by a cowardly dodge. So far as the Democratic party is concerned, and it must be judged by its platform utterances, the money planks of 1896 and 1900 stand, and they must stand, as tenets of the Democratic creed until changed by a vote of the Democratic party in convention assembled.

The tariff question is also a "Federal enactment," as Mr. Cleveland would say. It would be just as logical as Mr. Cleveland's argument to insist that the omission of the tariff plank from the Republican platform would remove the issue from the field of politics. The money question is just as much an issue as the tariff and must continue to be so long as the stability of our currency is opposed by probably a majority of the Democratic party.

THE Democrats are looking for a new party emblem, the only requirement being that it be made large enough to conceal a knife.

THE MAN WHO WHITTLES.

Every community knows the man who sits on a storebox and whittles, finds fault with his neighbor and brags how much better he could do it than his neighbor, yet who never goes out and does anything right himself. We have all seen that fellow.

He is the prototype of the Democratic party, in politics. It has been so for forty years, hand running and now is starting on a new lap. The platform of the Democratic party, adopted at St. Louis, shows conclusively that the party is not ready to do anything; it is sitting on the storebox abusing the other fellow and bragging about what it would do if it had a chance.

The Republican party began "doing things" in 1861. Every step of progress this country has made since then has been under Republican administration and Republican laws. The party in 1897 had to go back and do them over again, after a brief Democratic administration had undone the laborof years.

The Republican party in its platform tells in plain language what it intends to do. The Democratic party is not specific, but intimates that it will work wonders.

Now, if you had a job of important work you wanted attended to would you give it to the fellow who has been sitting on the storebox for forty years, whittling, bragging and faultfinding, or would you entrust it to the other fell who has been "doing things," and doing them right, notwithstanding the faultfinding and nagging of the chap on the storebox.

The American people demand results, not talk. They like the man who delivers the goods. The Republican party is the party of action; it delivers the goods.

The bill- of-lading of the Republicon National convention specifies the kind and quality of goods to be delivered in good order and without shortage or breakage.

And the man on the storebox will sit and whittle and scold and brag for another spell.

THE Republican candidates are running on a gold platform; the Democratic on a gold telegram.

THE Philadelphia North American of the 25th inst prints a dispatch from New York giving the reason why Senator Gorman drew out of the contest for the Democratic Presidential nomination, absented himself from the St. Louis convention and refused to permit his name to be considered for the National chairmanship. The explanation is that if he allowed his name to go before the convention his enemies would expose his political history and that this threat was so intimidating in its effect on him that he decided to remain at home, and told the delegate who had prepared a speech, commanding him to tear it up. The story continues: It was agreed that it would be a political crime to permit Gorman's candidacy to contaminate a party which seeking, and was about to profess, regeneration. The whole ground was gone over,and a speech was prepared laying bare the odious record Gorman has written in the politics of Marvland and the Nation. A young lawyer was chosen to deliver this speech before the convention. He was not a delegate to the convention, but the Parker management being informed of the project, agreed to furnish him with a proxy which would entitle him to claim the floor and be heard. The speech has been used in these latter days as an argument against contaminating Parker's candidacy, and the threat has been made that if Gorman should be chosen chairman his record in Maryland would be laid before the country as it was to be laid before the convention. Advised of this, Gorman has refused the chairmanship and will, it is believed, decline a reelection as minority leader in the Senate, his one desire now being to placate by his self effacement the enemies who have forced him to a complete abandonment of all his ambitions. Beside the original of the address it was proposed to present to the St. Louis convention, there is but one copy. That copy has fallen into the hands of your correspondent. Following is an extract: "Here, then, in the face of this convention, with no other motive before God than the protection of my party from disaster and shame, I indict Arthur P. Gorman of a hundred violations of public law and order; of thrice and fourfold as many violations of his public and official obligations; of the barter and sale of offices, legislation and political influence; of corrupting and debauching the politics and public service of the country; of treason to the Democratic party; of perfidy and treachery to all its politics; of disloyalty to its greatest leaders and its highest hopes; of being 'steeped'—to use terms which are commonplace in their application to him in Maryland—of being steeped in corruption and saturated with official perjury from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet."

THE GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT.

More convincing argument is found in favor of the expediency of building first-class roads, in a single practical example where good results have been obtained, than in any amount of discussion where actual results are often exaggerated, finally retard the promotion of model highways. The advantages offered to the counties of Maryland by the recently enacted law for state aid to road-building, are inclining county official and residents to avail themselves of the offer and the mention of one object-lesson in the town of Cambridge, demonstrating the greater satisfaction of macadan roads over other materials will show how unwise it will be to allow the opportunity to secure these state funds to pass unappreciated.

Street-building and repairing in Cambridge had become a more expensive item every year, until finally the lately retired Board of Commissioners after considering many plans of street-building, decided to put down a macadam road on the most frequented street of the town. They considered that to meet the situation in this way would mean a greater initial expense but would be cheaper in the end, besides giving much greater satisfaction to traffic. The results have fully justified their determination. In this work the commissioners received free of cost the assistance of Mr. A. N. Johnson, highway engineer of the Maryland Geological Survey, and were able to put down a road which so far has every requirement and is a great improvement over the shell road which it replaced. There is now about six feet more of carriage room than in the old street, the road drains perfectly, it has a firmer resisting surface, it dries out more quickly after a rain, and it is less expensive when its lasting qualities are considered. In speaking of the great improvement made by the road, the Democrat and News of Cambridge says:

"The Board decided to build a modern road although each member knew there was some opposition to the new method. Its expense was pointed out its lasting qualities were doubted. Fortunately, the Board did not allow this opposition, which was by no means insignificant, to deter it from going to the bottom of the plan and now the town is better off by reason of the courageof the old board. The street-building and repairing was becoming a more expensive item every year, and the Board decided to try to meet the situation in a method more expensive in the first cost, but cheaper in the end. All of which goes to show that the first step made by the Board in the direction of modern road-building was a step in the right direction and further progress in this direction will result in the betterment of the streets of the town and a decrease in the expense of the building and repairing streets.

"It is well to remark here however that the work could have been done better if the country had been equipped a steam-roller to pack the material. As it turned out, it had to be left to passing teams to pack the road and in order to hold the material in place, a great deal of fine stuff had to be put on, rendering the road dustier than would have been necessary if a steam-roller had been available. In the course of time, however the fine stuff will pack and disappear as the road becomes more used. It is also said that the cost of the road need not have been as great as it proved as certain items of expense which may be curtailed in the future were unnecessarily undergone.

THE Democratic party professes to be ardently in favor of education, but it wants an expurgated edition of its party history.

EVERY vote for Parker and Davis is an attempt to change the hands on the dial and block the wheels that move forward.

BURGLAR WILFONG HAS A CHECKERED CAREER

West Virginian Boasts That No Jail Is Strong Enough to Holg Him.

IS VERY FOND OF EATING SOAP

His Career After Having Broken Jail in Oakland—Was Robbed In Baltimore of $50 Which Made The Prisoner feel Badly.

J. F. Wilfong, whose escape from the Oakland jail occurred about a year ago when he with two or three others prisoners dug through the partition wall between the jail proper and the sheriff's residence, is again in the toils, this time at Elkins W. Va., to which place he was taken a few days ago after having been captured at Baltimore on the charge of being implicated in the robbery of a store at Hendericks, West Va.

Wilfong's doings from the time he was first arrested up to the present is told in a special dispatch from Elkins to the Baltimore Herald of Mondav. The story is interesting and is reproduced below:

Elkins, W. Va. July 31.—Could the checkered criminal career of J. F. Wilfong, the Randolph county burglar who was caught in Baltimore this week, be put on paper it would read like a romance. Educated in crime, his whole life has been a series of intenseiy interesting chapters of reckless robberies and thrilling escapes from penitentiaries and jails, one of his boasts being that no jail, big enough and strong enough to hold him had ever been built. Whether his claims in this case will hold true remains yet to be seen.

Wilfong's latest crime was the theft of twenty-seven watches from the store of J. E. Poling & Co., at Hendricks, Tucker county, on Thursday night, July 14. He was last week arrested in Baltimore while attempting to dispose of part of his plunder. He was yesterday brought from Baltimore by J. E. Poling and Zach Ryan, members of the company which had been robbed and who were specially deputized to go to Baltimere and bring Wilfong back to the scene of his crime to answer therefor. He was placed in the Tucker county jail to await the action of the grand jury at the next session of the Circuit Court, when he will be tried, unless his old time luck and genius for jail-breaking forsake him.

J. F. Wilfong is now 24 years old. His criminal career began eleven years ago with petty thefts from his neighbors in the mountains, which he conducted with much success for many years.

In 1902 Wilfong and his brother Abel were sentenced to seven and five years respectively in the state penitentiary at Moundsville for robbing a store at Harman, this county. Their trial attracted a good deal of attention because of the fact that the entire summer was spent in rehearsing their testimony to each other in the Beverly jail. They were often overheard reciting their testimony to each other, J. F. having fixed up a very probable story for himself and Abel to tell when the time for their trial should arrive. On one occasion, Abel having gotten tangled up in his tale, J. F. jumped upon him and administered a sound thrashing. When they were brought up for trial J. F. gave his testimony in an impressive manner,but Abel'strouncing had done him little good and his evidence was recited much after the manner of a country schoolboy at a Friday afternoon entertainment. Both were found guilty and sentenced accordingly. But fortune favored J. P. He ate soap excessively in order to produce a consumptive appearance, and an application for pardon was indorsed by the state board of pardons and Gov. Albert B. White granted a conditional pardon on March 19, 1903, before he had served a year of his sentence.

Several months elapsed before James F. was heard from. Letters to Abel signed "C. E. Dawson" attractattracted Warden Haddox's attention, besause the initials were the same as his own, while Dawson was captain of the guards. In one of these letters the writer told of his great love for a woman in Garrett county, Md., and of his impatience to get rich quick, which had prompted him to steal two horses from a farmer in that county, and for which crime he had been arrested and lodged in the Garrett county jail. The absence of the object of his devotions causing him to be lonesome he had testified falsely against the woman, causing her also to be arrested and confined in the same jail. After the woman's incarceration her sister had aided both to escape, and "C. E. Dawson" went to Pittsburg, Pa., where he joined the United States Army, from which he within a few weeks deserted going to Philadelphia and enlisting in the United States Navy, being transferred to Brooklyn, N. Y. All his letters to Abel describing his escapades were signed "C. E. Dawson."

Warden Haddox took the matter up with Governor White, with the result that the Garrett county authorities were notified of Wilfong's whereabouts, and the sheriff of that county was sent to Brooklyn to arrest him and bring him back to stand trial for horse stealing. Upon the arrival of the sheriff at Brooklyn he was informed that Wilfong had deserted the navy on August 21, 1903, just two days before the arrival of the officer.

Going from Brooklyn to Baltimore he caught a cattle steamer and sailed to Liverpool, going thence to London, where he enlisted in the British Army; of this, however, he soon tired and again resumed his consumptive color and deep sunken eyes by a few days excessive soap eating, and was discharged. So much of this commodity has he used internally that Wilfong has really developed a taste for it.

Coming back from Great Britian Wilfong was next heard from in Preston county, where he attempted to rob the store of W. W. Shoch, at Rowlesburg, but was caught by a complete burglar alarm system which Mr. Shoch had installed for his protection, his store having been looted on many occasions previous to this. On one night in November 1903, Mr. Shoch's alarm was set off, and donning his bullet-proof suit and all the pistols he could carry, aroused a number of his neighbors and surrounded the store. Through an open window a man was soon seen to appear. He saw that resistance would be futile and surrendered. It was J. F. Wilfong, loaded down with watches, cutlery, jewelry, &c.

Wilfong was indicted, confessed and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, all within thirty-six hours from the time of his capture. Fortune was still with him, and before he could be conducted to the penitentiary he broke jail and disappeared as completely as though the earth had swallowed him up.

Nothing was heard of Wilfong until his arrest in Baltimore. In the meantime he had "bummed" about various cities gambling and engaging in other shady methods of obtaining a sustenance. Since the harvesting of the Delaware peach crop began he had been engaged in picking peaches, until an overpowering inclination to visit the scenes of his old-time depredations brought him to the green mountains in Tucker county, where he spent two days gambling with the woodsmen, his stay netting him $80 in profits. At Thomas, however, a few nights later, he lost his entire assets and again started to Green mountain lumber woods, but hunger prompted him to break into the store of J. E. Poling, at Hendricks, where he stole the watches for which he was arrested in Baltimore. Prisoner Wilfong said yesterday that when he saw the watches his sensation of hunger vanished, and he stole them and boarded a northbound freight train going to Thomas. At Thomas and Cumberland he disposed of a number of watches, securing enough money to take him to Washington, where others were sold. He then went to Baltimore.

Wilfong says that while in Baltimore he was robbed of $50 by a woman whose place he visited. The woman was arrested and the money found concealed on her person. Wilfong says it was the first time he has ever been robbed and so badly did it make him feel that had he been robbed earlier in life he would never have traveled the crooked path he has followed for so many years.

Congressional Committee Meeting.

The Congressional Committee of the adjoining counties of West Virginia will hold a meeting at the Mountain Lake Park Hotel this evening at which will be present Congressman Dayton and a large number of prominent party workers. Our friend Mr. James S. Lakin, of Terra Alta, is one of the committee and is enthusiastic in the belief that West Virginia will give her usual Republican majority notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Davis is a candidate on the opposition ticket.

STRIKING PASSAGES

From Theodore Roosevelt's Speech Accepting the Republican Nomination for President.

Three years ago I became President because of the death of my lamented predecessor. I then stated that it was my purpose to carry out his principals and policies for the honor and the interest of the country. To the best of my ability I have kept the promise thus made. If next November my countrymen confirm at the poles the action of the convention you represent, I shall, under Providence, continue to work with an eye single to the welfare of all our people.

We who have been intrusted with power as public servants during the past seven years of administration and legislation now come before the people content to be judged by our record of achievement. In the years that has gone by we have made the deed square with the word; and if we are continued in power we shall unswervingly follow out the great lines of public policy which the Republican party has already laid down; a public policy to which we are giving and shall give, a united, and therefore an efficient, support.

In all of this we are more fortunate than our opponents, who now appeal for confidence on the ground, which some express and some seek to have confidentially understood, that if triumphant they may be trusted to prove false to every principle which in the last eight years they have laid down as vital, and to leave undisturbed those very acts of the administration because of which they ask that the administration itself be driven from power.

Seemingly their present attitude as to their past record is that some of them were mistaken and others insincere.

Our opponents, either openly or secretly, according to their several temperments, now ask the people to trust their present promises in consideration of the fact that they intend to treat their past promises as null and void. We know our own minds and we have kept of the same mind for a sufficient length of time to give to our policy coherence and sanity.

In dealing with the great organizations known as trusts, we do not have to explain why the laws were not enforced, but to point out that the actually have been enforced and tha legislation has been enacted to increase the effectiveness of their enforcement. We do not have to propose to "turn the rascals out," for we have shown in very deed that whenever by diligent investigation a public official can be found who has betrayed his trust he will be punished to the full extent of the law without regard to whether he was apppointed under a Republican or Democratic administration.

We know what we mean when we speak of an honest and stable currency. We mean the same thing from year to year. We do not have to avoid a definite and conclusive committal on the most important issue which has recently been before the people, and which may at any time in the near future be before them again.

Upon the principles which underlie this issue the convictions of half of our number do not clash with those of the other half. So long as the Republican party is in power the gold standard is settled, not as a matter of temporary political expediency,not because of shifting conditions in the production of gold in certain mining centers, but in accordance with what we regard as the fundamental principles of national morality and wisdom.

In the fiscal year that has just closed the excess of income over the ordinary expenditures was nine millions of dollars. This does not take account of the fifty millions expended out of the accumulated surplus for the purchase of the Isthmian Canal. It is an extraordinary proof of the sound financial condition of the nation that instead of following the usual course in such matters and throwing the burden upon posterity by an issue of bonds, we were able to make the payment outright and yet after it to have in the Treasury a surplus of one hundred and sixty-one millions. Moreover, we were able to pay this fifty millions of dollars out of hand without causing the slightest disturbance to business conditions.

Change in Firm.

Mr. George D. White, who has for several months been employed in the Custom House at Baltimore, came up to Oakland Saturday night and remained here until Monday evening visiting his family.

Monday three parties of automobilists from New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore en route to St. Louis over the old National Road, passing through Grantsville, where a short stop was made for slight repairs to one or two of the machines when the journey was resumed.

Messrs. Chas. Blamble and J. S. McCardle passed through Oakland this morning with five very fine horses which they bought down near Accident for the Wildell Lumber Company's operations at Wildell, W. Va. The animals are Garrett county bred and are fine as any horses ever seen in this community.

Messrs. John W. Davis and family and Mr. and Mrs. Luther J. Brown, of Oakland, with all the necessary requisites for a camp in the woods, left Oakland Monday morning for the Cheat River, south of Aurora, where they will go into camp for a week or ten days.

The Mayor and Council by advertisement which will be found elsewhere in this issue of The Republican, requests sealed proposals for the erection of two sidewalks in Oakland, one fronting the opera house block and the other leading from Second street to Railroad street.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Pope Theodoroff and Mr. and Mrs. Samuels left today for Mountain Lake Park to spend the rest of the summer with Mrs. Theodoroff's father, Dr. Samuels. Mr. Theodoroff will return to this city each week to look after his law business.—Morgantown Dominion.

Mr. J. L. Richter, of Accident, came up to Oakland yesterday accompanied by his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, of Westernport, who were on their way home after having spent a week or two with Mr. and Mrs. Richter and other relatives at Accident.

Dr. D. O. McKinley lies critically ill at his home on Union street. Mr. McKinley has been suffering from stomach trouble for some time, and we understand that his ailment, which has been pronounced cancer of the stomach, is growing worse.—Meyersdale Commercial.

Messrs. Alfred Friend, of Sang Run, and David H. Friend, of Friendsville, were in Oakland yesterday. The latter gentleman is just recovering from an injury to his arm sustained several weeks ago in an argument with one of his neighbors over a line fence which was being erected.

County Treasurer E. A. Weimer, who has been out in the several districts collecting taxes, since early in July, will complete his itinerary next week, when he will thereaftar be found at his office in Oakland. Mr. Weimer has collected during his trip a large amount of funds.

The creditors of the Commonwealth Tanning Company received Tuesday checks in full for the claims they held against the corporation, the same being issued by Messrs. Fred. A. Thayer, G. S. Hamill and Davisson Armstrong, trustees, appointed for the purpose by the United States District Court.

Capt. James W. White, one of the old vets who look upon the sunny side of life although on the down grade, was in Oakland Tuesday morning and dropped in to see The Republican. He is enthusiastic in his support of the proposed issue of bonds with which to erect new county buildings and has promised to contribute an article on the subject to these columns.

The first excursion of the season to the Mountain Chatauqua at Mountain Lake Park will be given on Tuesday, August 9th. A rich program has been prepared by Dr. Davidson for the occasion. Among other distinguished men who will be present is Hon. H. G. Davis, Democratic nominee for the vice presidency. There will be a great gathering there for the occasion.

The program for the Teachers' Institute to be held in the school building at Oakland September 26-30, is now in the hands of the printer and will shortly be issued. The program contains many interesting features and prominent speakers and lecturers will be present at one or more sessions. The night sessions of the institute will be held in the opera house.

This office acknowledges a very pleasant visit from Merchant W. C. Jones, of Deer Park, on Tuesday afternoon. His son Ray, who was taken ill while pursuing his studies at Buckhannon, West Va., is now at home and rapidly recovering. His elder son, Charles A., is expected home this week from a visit to relatives in Fayette county, Penna., the young man going and returning via the National Road on his bicycle.

Mr. J. B. Emory, of Bittinger, a valued contributor to these columns and a most estimable young man of more than ordinary ability, was on last Thursday appointed Justice of the peace for District No. 12 by Governor Warfield. Mr. Emory will fill the unexpired term of George Ralston, lately deceased. The appointment of Mr. Emory by the Governor gives satisfaction to almost every one.

The merchants and other business men along the two blocks of Second street between Alder street and Lauer's bakery formed themselves into an impromptu street cleaning brigade yesterday morning and within half an hour after the work was started the pavements and roadway were as clear of dust and dirt as brooms and muscle could make them. This commendable movement could well be imitated in other portions of the town and thus keep the streets looking tidy and neat at all times.

Mr. H. Allan Ison, an employee of the Pension Office at Washington, D. C., who with his mother, wife and family is spending his vacation at Oakland, is in the city to-day, shaking hands with many of his old friends whom he knew before removing from Oakland to Washington. Mr. Ison is the youngest son of the late Rev. Benjamin Ison, D. D., who was well and appreciatively known by many Graftonians. After spending the day in the city Mr. Ison leaves on train No. 55 for Parkersburg, where he will pay a short visit to an uncle.—Grafton Sentinel.

Mr. H. L. Grant, of Grafton, came down to Oakland Monday and rented for the balance of the season the Turley property between Oakland and Mountain Lake Park and which will be occupied after tomorrow by Mrs. Grant and children. Mr. Grant expects to receive an appointment as photographer by the Panama Canal Commission and in case this is done he will leave this section sometime early in the fall for Colon where he will be attached to the engineer corps having charge of the preliminary work on the canal.

In the Democratic Congressional Convention held at Fairmont Monday the name of Mr. Fred. T. Martin was put in nomination for the honor but later withdrawn. Mr. Martin has for a year or more been considered a citizen of Oakland, although he has not declared his intention in this respect. He is erecting a very handsome dwelling on Oak street which when completed will be occupied by himself and family and then it is hoped by his many friends here that he will become permanently identified with the town. He is a good citizen, energetic, with the "get there" characteristic of the average West Virginian of the present day.

Church Fair and Lawn Fete.

Under the auspices of the Ladies Guild of St. Mathew's P. E. church a fair and lawn fete will be held in the Oakland Hotel grounds on August 25th, from 3 until 11 o'clock p. m.

There will be a number of booths erected in the grounds and will contain for sale fancy articles, refreshments, etc. A special booth will be erected in which will be enthroned a fortune teller.

During the afternoon and evening concerts will be given by professional and local talent and there is a probability that the Naval Academy band from Deer Park hotel will be present.

No Principal Chosen.

The board of trustees of the Oakland public school, composed of Messrs. Daniel Hinebaugh, John W. Hart and Joseph E. Harned, held a meeting Monday at which time the resignation of Prof. A. W. DeWitt for several years principal of the Oakland schools, was received and accepted.

The board also opened and are holding under advisement two applications for the place made vacant by the resignation of Prof. DeWitt, the same being submitted by Mr. J. I. Sollars, of near Oakland, and J. H. Rohrbaugh, of Belington, West Va. Definite action will not be taken upon either of these applications until August 15th, and in the meantime the board invites others to file their applications for the position.

Mr. N. U. Bond, of Bond, this county, spent Sunday evening in Oakland with friends.

Frederick's Labors

By SIDNEY HODGES COLE

Copyright, 1904, by M. Wood

Mr. Frederick Brigham leaned forward in his chair, his brows drawn in a frown of perplexed anxiety.

"Surely, Ethel," he said in his deliberate drawl, "my ears have deceived me."

The girl's eyes met his own squarely. Her face expressed very plainly her disapproval.

"I think you have no cause to complain of defective hearing," she said stiffly.

"You don't mean what you have just said?" he asserted.

"I most certainly do mean it," she averred.

"I never doubted for a moment you would marry me," said he. "I always supposed"—

"Suppositions are not sureties," she informed him.

"Ethel," he said coaxingly, "this has gone far enough as a joke. It's getting to the point where it hurts."

"I'm sorry it hurts, but it isn't a joke, Frederick," she said.

He stared at her in amazement and rumpled his hair thoughtfully with one hand.

"I'm a pretty steady going sort," he said, half to himself. "Don't drink to excess, allow myself but three cigars a day and never play over a ten cent limit. It can't be money, either"—

"FREDERICK!" SHE SAID AND HURRIED FROM THE KITCHEN.

"No; it's not money," she said.

"Must be I'm stupid, then."

"If you were stupid," she said, "I think perhaps I might forgive you."

"I confess I'm in the dark," he said. "Kindly show me the vulnerable point in my armor of virtue."

"You have everything in the world to live for," she said severely. "You start life with a big handicap in your favor, but all your qualities are negative. You don't do anything."

"Pretty clever with a boat," he reminded her. "Play a fair game of polo"—

"Anything useful?" she hastened to amend.

"I see," he said and for several moments gazed abstractedly at the ceiling. "I'd like to take exceptions to your last statement," he said at length. "It seems to me I am doing the most useful thing in the world for a man in my position. I have plenty of money, and instead of crowding out some poor duffer who really needs that commodity I keep out of it and give him a show."

Her eyes flashed. "What a lame excuse," she said.

"May be a trifle spavined," he agreed cheerfully.

"I was going to say it was cowardly," she said.

"Oh, well, if it's that I'll join the 'doers' at once," he drawled. "Let's see; law is what I was trained for, but I fear my legal ability has a fine coat of rust by this time."

"There are other fields," she reminded him.

He rose and stood before her, looking down at her flushed face.

"If I do something useful—something really useful—do I win?" he said tensely.

"Yes," she said, studying the toe of her shoe.

"Very well, then," he affirmed. "You'd better decide whether it's Italy or southern California. Goodby."

A moment later the outer door banged, and the usefulness of Frederick had begun.

He did not come to see her the following day nor the next. In fact, a week passed before she saw him again, and then it was quite by accident. She was walking down the avenue one morning and when she had reached Dr. Lawrence's house a well known voice called, "Hello, Ethel!"

She turned, but he was not behind her. Then she looked up and beheld him standing on the ledge outside a second story window. He was clad in faded blue overalls, and in one hand was a sponge, while the other held a polishing cloth.

"Begun at the bottom of the ladder, you see!" he called down cheerfully. "Doc says if I'm faithful to the windows and the brass knobs I may rise to be gardener. You'll kindly observe my occupation is useful."

She made no reply, but walked down the avenue, the angry color mounting her cheeks. That evening she received a note:

Dear Ethel—I've thrown up my job. You didn't seem to favor it. I shall try another useful one. Yours, F. B.

The nature of the new job disclosed itself two mornings later. Ethel was in the kitchen giving some instructions to the cook, when who should appear at the back door but Brigham, white frocked, a delivery basket on his arm and whistling irrepressibly.

"Good morning," he said. "This is perhaps somewhat more useful than window cleaning. People must eat, you know."

"Doubtless," said Ethel coldly.

"Not so bad either," he went on recklessly. "Meet lots of nice girls. The Bentons' cook—she's quite a stunner—flirted with me desperately this morning."

"Frederick!" she said and hurried from the kitchen.

Another note appeared that evening.

"I have resigned from butcherdom," it read, "but will persevere elsewhere."

Some days later she encountered him again. She had been out to the Country club with young Martin that afternoon, and it was dusk when they alighted from the suburban train. As they hurried along the platform a familiar voice said, "Kerridge, mum?"

It was Frederick, decked in the livery of old Sam, the Brighams' coachman.

"Made $4.75 today," he chuckled gleefully.

Her face grew tense.

"When is this ridiculous burlesque to end?" she inquired in a strained voice, and without waiting for his reply she hurried after Martin.

The climax came one late February afternoon. Ethel had left the cross town car at the corner and was hurrying up the avenue. When she reached St. Botolph's she saw quite a crowd standing on the sidewalk staring upward. She, too, looked up. A lightning rod ran up the brownstone spire, and on the lightning rod, slowly, painfully working his way upward, was a man. She turned away with a little shiver of horror, but as she did so a well dressed man beside her cried excitedly:

"By George! It's Brigham—Freddy Brigham."

She stopped, sick with dread, yet she could not keep her eyes from that black dot on the spire. She saw him creep up to the very apex; saw him climb the rod that supported the weather vane. There he drew from somewhere a hammer, cleared the snow from the vane and with several blows of the hammer set it free to swing to the wind. Then he came down the rod to the bell deck and disappeared through a trapdoor while the crowd cheered.

Ethel, giddy with the strain of the last few minutes, entered the church. In the vestibule she saw Brigham and the sexton, who was handing him some bills.

"Hello!" called the former, catching sight of her. "It was really useful—vane snowed up, you know, and people in the vicinity couldn't tell which way the wind was blowing. Did you want to see the sexton?" he added pointedly, whereat that functionary discreetly took his leave.

Frederick Brigham!" she began bravely, but suddenly the tears came, and she began to sob. He watched her covertly for a moment and finally decided to risk an arm about her.

"Perhaps I'm useful, after all," he suggested.

"You are! Oh, you are!" she said wildly.

"To you?" he hinted.

"Of course," she said, clinging to him.

Early Ideas About Hair.

All the ancient philosophers held curious ideas respecting the growth, functions, structure, etc., of the hair and had many superstitions founded on these old opinions. The early writers on the makeup of the human body almost invariably refer to the hair as being an excrement fed on substances similar to itself. They supposed that it generated in the fuliginous parts of the blood, was exhaled by the heat of the body, becoming firm and fibrous upon being exposed to the air, just as the fluid of the spider web does. In these days every idea respecting the growth and character of hair is changed. It is now agreed that every hair properly and truly lives and receives its nutriment from the body. True, they take upon themselves the nature of parasitic plants. They grow as vegetation does, yet each has, as it were, a distinct life and economy. That they derive their existence from the juices of the body there is no doubt, but that food is not taken from the nutritious juices, for we know that hair will thrive even though the body starve or be wasted by disease, or even after the animal life has ceased to exist in the flesh or skin to which it is attached.

Scared the Princes.

Years ago four New Zealand princes visited England. A friendly Englishman entertained them at lunch. The four princes ate fourteen pounds of roast beef and promised to tattoo the face of their host in return for his kindness. The after proceedings were equally felicitous until the master of the house produced a case of stuffed lizards. With shrieks and yells the warriors rushed from the house like deer, leaped the wall of the garden and those of adjoining ones. A drawing room window was open. Shrieking in fear and indignation, they made for this and at a bound were through it. There sat an elderly lady knitting stockings. She was frightened nearly out of her wits by the invasion. The terrified princes had never before seen anything like that which had alarmed them. The lizards simply represented devils to them, and they were anxious not to remain in such company.

Justice at Sandy Bend

How a Dispute as to the Ownership of a Bag of Flour Was Disposed of by Judge Hoke.

"THIS court bein' now open for the dispensin' of justice," said Judge Hoke, as he rapped for order and assumed a judicial dignity, "we will trot out the case of Tom MacLarney versus Joe Hazzard.

"There is nothin' in the case that this court can't settle without the help of lawyers. Both parties are purty well known in Sandy Bend. Tom MacLarney was born a cross eyed baby. He grew up a cross eyed kid. His eyes was on the squint when he cast his fust vote and wore a gun for the fust time, and they hain't improved since. He's bin told on numerous occasions that his eyes were out of plumb, but he never would believe it till the other day.

"Joe Hazzard is a sort of fifteen cent critter who has bin hangin' about Sandy Bend, Rocky Reef, Yaller Flats and other places for the last five years without committin' any offense for which he could be hung. I never heard of his askin' a man to drink, and I never set him down as pizen mean. He might be a blamed sight better, and he might be a heap wuss.

HE OPENED FIRE ON HIM.

"It appears that Tom started for Injun Hill the other day to find a new brand of forty rod. It appears that Joe started from Injun Hill for Sandy Bend at about the same hour. As a result, the two of 'em met on the trail about half way. They met jest where some one had dropped a bag of flour, and both jumped forward and laid claim to the find. Very nacherally there was a row. Had this court bin there hisself he would have pulled his gun and defended his rights. There was a proper amount of cussin' and jawin', and then Joe Hazzard grabs up the bag and starts off with it. Tom MacLarney opens fire on him as he goes.

"This court is willin' to bet fifty to one that he could have put a bullet into Joe's leg six times over before he got out of range, and there's fifty other men in Sandy Bend who could have done the same, but Tom MacLarney wasn't seein' straight. He did plug the bag and let all the flour run out as Joe made off, but the rest of the bullets went flyin' all over the territory of Wyoming.

"It was poor shootin'—mighty poor. It was such shootin' as any man of us would be ashamed to tell of. But Tom felt that he must git even or bust. I was behind the bar in my Red Dog saloon, and business was goin' with a rush, when Tom comes in. He was breathin' hard and lookin' anxious.

"'What's yer drink?' says I as I leans over the bar.

"'I'll take a bar'l o' justice,' says he as he pounds on the board.

"'What's wrong?'

"'I've been robbed.'

"Then this court has to put aside bizness and sit down and inquire all about it and issue a warrant for Joe Hazzard. It was not until Joe was arrested that the true facts in the case leaked out.

"It appears that while he had an old pistol with him, it was out of repair and unloaded. All the shootin' was done by Tom, and outside of losin' the bag of flour he wasted ten cartridges. He didn't even make Joe's hair curl. This court spent two hours makin' an investigation, and he found the facts as related. The statoos of Wyoming don't say nothin' to guide a jestice of the peace in a case like this. The statoos don't reckon on no such cases bein' pulled off, or if they are that the jestice will know enough to handle them accordin' to Hoyle.

"I'm feelin' sorry for poor Tom MacLarney in a way. He ain't to blame for his squint. He wouldn't have had it if he had been given a choice in the matter. What I do blame him for, however, is luggin' around a gun and thinkin' he could use it as well as anybody else. He orter have known better. He orter have tried shootin' at a tree, and thrown away his gun for a club. And this court can't possibly excuse the fact that arter his shootin' had proved a failure Tom comes gallopin' down from Injun Hill and hollers for jestice and makes out that he has bin robbed of his bag of flour.

"I don't need to reserve decision for a week to study up the law on the case. I'm goin' to say to Tom right here and now that he can't git out of this court room and this town of Sandy Bend any too soon. He can't stay away too long. He can't give us any too little of his future society. I don't want it to go forth to the world that a knock kneed, lop shouldered or cross eyed man can't get a fair show in this community, but I'm bound that no such critter shall come in here and dim the prestige of our forefathers.

"It is reckoned that Tom can be a mile away at the end of the next fifteen minutes if he gets the right sort of a hump on him, and if he is wise he will now hump."

Mr. MacLarney lost no time. He seemed to realize the enormity of his offense to the full, and he upset two Chinamen and a dog as he left the courtroom. When he had disappeared his honor drew a long breath and resumed:

"As Tom didn't have any money, and as it is known that Joe has $3, the costs will be assessed on the defendant. I ain't sayin' that the supreme court might not overturn my decision, but I'm basin' it on two things.

"In the fust place, he hadn't orter kept on runnin' and let that flour dribble out, and in the next he orter have brought the bag to me to be kept for the owner. Bags of flour belong to somebody, and even if lost by a Chinaman there is a law in the case.

"Joe, you may go, but in future you look out a little. This court has its eye on you, and if you make another false move the law will step in in its majesty and tie you up in hard knots.

"That's all today, and, bein' that jestice is righted and dignity satisfied, we'll adjourn court and resume the business of pushin' progress up hill."

M. QUAD.

Hot Weather Yarn.

"There I was a mile from the camp, my rifle useless, the giant bear behind me and the field of ice ahead."

"Naturally you ran."

"I did. Across the slippery ice I dashed, the bear gaining on me at every stride. I felt its hot breath on my neck. I felt its great paw upon my shoulder. Suddenly I came to the edge of the ice pack. Ten feet out from the edge was a floating cake."

"You jumped!"

"For my life. I gained the ice cake safely. I turned around. The bear had stepped back. With a running start it leapt across the open water, and we were, bear and man, adrift on a ten foot ice floe in the middle of the Arctic ocean. I had no weapon, not even a penknife. The savage animal came on, its eyes flashing, its growls shaking the air like thunder. Just then"—

"Just then?"

"The bear froze to death."—Baltimore American.

A Case of Necessity.

"My son," said the parson to a small boy who was digging, "don't you know that it is a sin to dig on Sunday except in case of necessity?"

"Yes, sir," replied the youngster.

"Then why don't you stop it?" asked the good man.

"'Cause this is a case of necessity," replied the young philosopher; "a feller can't fish without bait."—Baltimore World.

Naturally.

"What happened to your brother, who fell in love with that girl with the wasplike waist?"

"Stung."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Wronged.

"I suppose you were terribly shocked when you heard your son was engaged to your husband's stenographer?"

"Oh, no. You see, I couldn't get William to discharge her and hire a man, so really the news that she's been in love with Clarence all this time is quite a relief."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Drastic Cure.

"Some of the necessaries of life are exorbitantly high these days."

"Yes. I wish they'd raise the prices still higher."

"What?"

"Yes; I wish they'd get high enough to scare me, so I'd quit needing them."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Cat Ate the Pie.

Marshall P. Wilder tells the story of a wife who told her husband that the cat had eaten the pie that she had baked for him.

"Never mind, my dear," replied the husband. "I will get you another cat."—New York Times.

A Touching Farewell.

Goodby, summer shirt, forever;
I must send thee to be tubbed,
To be rent and torn a-sever
When the laundryman has scrubbed,
Where to pulpy shapes and flaccid
Fiends will rip you with a scream,
When they've sprinkled you with acid
And have wrung you out by steam.

They will tear you in your anguish
Through a cloth destroying press,
Gummed with starch and left to languish
In unmerited distress
Till your fabric, ripped and rotten,
Shrinks obedient to their skill,
And you're left as one forgotten
(But remembered in the bill).

Time there was when grandpa's daughter,
Ignorant of cleansing dope,
Put her simple faith in water
Highly fortified with soap—
Shirt's Elysium, vainly pondered!
Soap is vanished, hope is squashed,
In an age where shirts are "laundered"
In the place of being washed.
—Wallace Irwin in New York Globe.

Further Instruction.

HE entered the department store
And asked that he be shown
The route to reach the clothing floor,
Then he would go alone.
The courteous floorwalker then said:
"Three aisles across, then down
Four aisles, you then keep straight ahead—"
The man began to frown.

"You take the elevator then,"
The floor man next observed.
"Get off the car at Number Ten."
(The man was quite unnerved.)
"Across four aisles, and then you turn
Six counters to your right;
Look to the left and you'll discern
A distant ruby light.

"Pass under that, and then you're near
The clothing stock you wish—"
The man cried out: "I cannot hear!
You gabble like a fish.
I never heard such silly talk;
You're having sport with me.
Your jocular designs I'll balk—
I'll make complaint. You'll see!"

The courteous floorwalker bowed
And said: "Turn to the right.
Go down the aisle until the shroud
Department comes in sight;
From there just thirteen aisles you trace
Until you reach the paints—
Beside them is a desk—the place
Where you may make complaints."
—W. D. Nesbit in New York Life.

Frederick's Labors

By SIDNEY HODGES COLE

Copyright, 1904, by M. Wood

Mr. Frederick Brigham leaned forward in his chair, his brows drawn in a frown of perplexed anxiety.

"Surely, Ethel," he said in his deliberate drawl, "my ears have deceived me."

The girl's eyes met his own squarely. Her face expressed very plainly her disapproval.

"I think you have no cause to complain of defective hearing," she said stiffly.

"You don't mean what you have just said?" he asserted.

"I most certainly do mean it," she averred.

"I never doubted for a moment you would marry me," said he. "I always supposed"—

"Suppositions are not sureties," she informed him.

"Ethel," he said coaxingly, "this has gone far enough as a joke. It's getting to the point where it hurts."

"I'm sorry it hurts, but it isn't a joke, Frederick," she said.

He stared at her in amazement and rumpled his hair thoughtfully with one hand.

"I'm a pretty steady going sort," he said, half to himself. "Don't drink to excess, allow myself but three cigars a day and never play over a ten cent limit. It can't be money, either"—

"FREDERICK!" SHE SAID AND HURRIED FROM THE KITCHEN.

"No; it's not money," she said.

"Must be I'm stupid, then."

"If you were stupid," she said, "I think perhaps I might forgive you."

"I confess I'm in the dark," he said. "Kindly show me the vulnerable point in my armor of virtue."

"You have everything in the world to live for," she said severely. "You start life with a big handicap in your favor, but all your qualities are negative. You don't do anything."

"Pretty clever with a boat," he reminded her. "Play a fair game of polo"—

"Anything useful?" she hastened to amend.

"I see," he said and for several moments gazed abstractedly at the ceiling. "I'd like to take exceptions to your last statement," he said at length. "It seems to me I am doing the most useful thing in the world for a man in my position. I have plenty of money, and instead of crowding out some poor duffer who really needs that commodity I keep out of it and give him a show."

Her eyes flashed. "What a lame excuse," she said.

"May be a trifle spavined," he agreed cheerfully.

"I was going to say it was cowardly," she said.

"Oh, well, if it's that I'll join the 'doers' at once," he drawled. "Let's see; law is what I was trained for, but I fear my legal ability has a fine coat of rust by this time."

"There are other fields," she reminded him.

He rose and stood before her, looking down at her flushed face.

"If I do something useful—something really useful—do I win?" he said tensely.

"Yes," she said, studying the toe of her shoe.

"Very well, then," he affirmed. "You'd better decide whether it's Italy or southern California. Goodby."

A moment later the outer door banged, and the usefulness of Frederick had begun.

He did not come to see her the following day nor the next. In fact, a week passed before she saw him again, and then it was quite by accident. She was walking down the avenue one morning and when she had reached Dr. Lawrence's house a well known voice called, "Hello, Ethel!"

She turned, but he was not behind her. Then she looked up and beheld him standing on the ledge outside a second story window. He was clad in faded blue overalls, and in one hand was a sponge, while the other held a polishing cloth.

"Begun at the bottom of the ladder, you see!" he called down cheerfully. "Doc says if I'm faithful to the windows and the brass knobs I may rise to be gardener. You'll kindly observe my occupation is useful."

She made no reply, but walked down the avenue, the angry color mounting her cheeks. That evening she received a note:

Dear Ethel—I've thrown up my job. You didn't seem to favor it. I shall try another useful one. Yours, F. B.

The nature of the new job disclosed itself two mornings later. Ethel was in the kitchen giving some instructions to the cook, when who should appear at the back door but Brigham, white frocked, a delivery basket on his arm and whistling irrepressibly.

"Good morning," he said. "This is perhaps somewhat more useful than window cleaning. People must eat, you know."

"Doubtless," said Ethel coldly.

"Not so bad either," he went on recklessly. "Meet lots of nice girls. The Bentons' cook—she's quite a stunner—flirted with me desperately this morning."

"Frederick!" she said and hurried from the kitchen.

Another note appeared that evening. "I have resigned from butcherdom," it read, "but will persevere elsewhere."

Some days later she encountered him again. She had been out to the Country club with young Martin that afternoon, and it was dusk when they alighted from the suburban train. As they hurried along the platform a familiar voice said, "Kerridge, mum?"

It was Frederick, decked in the livery of old Sam, the Brighams' coachman.

"Made $4.75 today," he chuckled gleefully.

Her face grew tense.

"When is this ridiculous burlesque to end?" she inquired in a strained voice, and without waiting for his reply she hurried after Martin.

The climax came one late February afternoon. Ethel had left the cross-town car at the corner and was hurrying up the avenue. When she reached St. Botolph's she saw quite a crowd standing on the sidewalk staring upward. She, too, looked up. A lightning rod ran up the brownstone spire, and on the lightning rod, slowly, painfully working his way upward, was a man. She turned away with a little shiver of horror, but as she did so a well dressed man beside her cried excitedly:

"By George! It's Brigham—Freddy Brigham."

She stopped, sick with dread, yet she could not keep her eyes from that black dot on the spire. She saw him creep up to the very apex; saw him climb the rod that supported the weather vane. There he drew from somewhere a hammer, cleared the snow from the vane and with several blows of the hammer set it free to swing to the wind. Then he came down the rod to the bell deck and disappeared through a trapdoor while the crowd cheered.

Ethel, giddy with the strain of the last few minutes, entered the church. In the vestibule she saw Brigham and the sexton, who was handing him some bills.

"Hello!" called the former, catching sight of her. "It was really useful—vane snowed up, you know, and people in the vicinity couldn't tell which way the wind was blowing. Did you want to see the sexton?" he added pointedly, whereat that functionary discreetly took his leave.

Frederick Brigham!" she began bravely, but suddenly the tears came, and she began to sob. He watched her covertly for a moment and finally decided to risk an arm about her.

"Perhaps I'm useful, after all," he suggested.

"You are! Oh, you are!" she said wildly.

"To you?" he hinted.

"Of course," she said, clinging to him.

Early Ideas About Hair.

All the ancient philosophers held curious ideas respecting the growth, functions, structure, etc., of the hair and had many superstitions founded on these old opinions. The early writers on the makeup of the human body almost invariably refer to the hair as being an excrement fed on substances similar to itself. They supposed that it generated in the fuliginous parts of the blood, was exhaled by the heat of the body, becoming firm and fibrous upon being exposed to the air, just as the fluid of the spider web does. In these days every idea respecting the growth and character of hair is changed. It is now agreed that every hair properly and truly lives and receives its nutriment from the body. True, they take upon themselves the nature of parasitic plants. They grow as vegetation does, yet each has, as it were, a distinct life and economy. That they derive their existence from the juices of the body there is no doubt, but that food is not taken from the nutritious juices, for we know that hair will thrive even though the body starve or be wasted by disease, or even after the animal life has ceased to exist in the flesh or skin to which it is attached.

Scared the Princes.

Years ago four New Zealand princes visited England. A friendly Englishman entertained them at lunch. The four princes ate fourteen pounds of roast beef and promised to tattoo the face of their host in return for his kindness. The after proceedings were equally felicitous until the master of the house produced a case of stuffed lizards. With shrieks and yells the warriors rushed from the house like deer, leaped the wall of the garden and those of adjoining ones. A drawing room window was open. Shrieking in fear and indignation, they made for this and at a bound were through it. There sat an elderly lady knitting stockings. She was frightened nearly out of her wits by the invasion. The terrified princes had never before seen anything like that which had alarmed them. The lizards simply represented devils to them, and they were anxious not to remain in such company.

Justice at Sandy Bend

How a Dispute as to the Ownership of a Bag of Flour Was Disposed of by Judge Hoke.

"THIS court bein' now open for the dispensin' of justice," said Judge Hoke, as he rapped for order and assumed a judicial dignity, "we will trot out the case of Tom MacLarney versus Joe Hazzard.

"There is nothin' in the case that this court can't settle without the help of lawyers. Both parties are purty well known in Sandy Bend. Tom MacLarney was born a cross eyed baby. He grew up a cross eyed kid. His eyes was on the squint when he cast his fust vote and wore a gun for the fust time, and they hain't improved since. He's bin told on numerous occasions that his eyes were out of plumb, but he never would believe it till the other day.

"Joe Hazzard is a sort of fifteen cent critter who has bin hangin' about Sandy Bend, Rocky Reef, Yaller Flats and other places for the last five years without committin' any offense for which he could be hung. I never heard of his askin' a man to drink, and I never set him down as pizen mean. He might be a blamed sight better, and he might be a heap wuss.

HE OPENED FIRE ON HIM.

"It appears that Tom started for Injun Hill the other day to find a new brand of forty rod. It appears that Joe started from Injun Hill for Sandy Bend at about the same hour. As a result, the two of 'em met on the trail about half way. They met jest where some one had dropped a bag of flour, and both jumped forward and laid claim to the find. Very nacherally there was a row. Had this court bin there hisself he would have pulled his gun and defended his rights. There was a proper amount of cussin' and jawin', and then Joe Hazzard grabs up the bag and starts off with it. Tom MacLarney opens fire on him as he goes.

"This court is willin' to bet fifty to one that he could have put a bullet into Joe's leg six times over before he got out of range, and there's fifty other men in Sandy Bend who could have done the same, but Tom MacLarney wasn't seein' straight. He did plug the bag and let all the flour run out as Joe made off, but the rest of the bullets went flyin' all over the territory of Wyoming.

"It was poor shootin'—mighty poor. It was such shootin' as any man of us would be ashamed to tell of. But Tom felt that he must git even or bust. I was behind the bar in my Red Dog saloon, and business was goin' with a rush, when Tom comes in. He was breathin' hard and lookin' anxious.

"'What's yer drink?' says I as I leans over the bar.

"'I'll take a bar'l o' justice,' says he as he pounds on the board.

"'What's wrong?'

"'I've been robbed.'

"Then this court has to put aside bizness and sit down and inquire all about it and issue a warrant for Joe Hazzard. It was not until Joe was arrested that the true facts in the case leaked out.

"It appears that while he had an old pistol with him, it was out of repair and unloaded. All the shootin' was done by Tom, and outside of losin' the bag of flour he wasted ten cartridges. He didn't even make Joe's hair curl. This court spent two hours makin' an investigation, and he found the facts as related. The statoos of Wyoming don't say nothin' to guide a jestice of the peace in a case like this. The statoos don't reckon on no such cases bein' pulled off, or if they are that the jestice will know enough to handle them accordin' to Hoyle.

"I'm feelin' sorry for poor Tom MacLarney in a way. He ain't to blame for his squint. He wouldn't have had it if he had been given a choice in the matter. What I do blame him for, however, is luggin' around a gun and thinkin' he could use it as well as anybody else. He orter have known better. He orter have tried shootin' at a tree, and thrown away his gun for a club. And this court can't possibly excuse the fact that arter his shootin' had proved a failure Tom comes gallopin' down from Injun Hill and hollers for jestice and makes out that he has bin robbed of his bag of flour.

"I don't need to reserve decision for a week to study up the law on the case. I'm goin' to say to Tom right here and now that he can't git out of this court room and this town of Sandy Bend any too soon. He can't stay away too long. He can't give us any too little of his future society. I don't want it to go forth to the world that a knock kneed, lop shouldered or cross eyed man can't get a fair show in this community, but I'm bound that no such critter shall come in here and dim the prestige of our forefathers.

"It is reckoned that Tom can be a mile away at the end of the next fifteen minutes if he gets the right sort of a hump on him, and if he is wise he will now hump."

Mr. MacLarney lost no time. He seemed to realize the enormity of his offense to the full, and he upset two Chinamen and a dog as he left the courtroom. When he had disappeared his honor drew a long breath and resumed:

"As Tom didn't have any money, and as it is known that Joe has $3, the costs will be assessed on the defendant. I ain't sayin' that the supreme court might not overturn my decision, but I'm basin' it on two things.

"In the fust place, he hadn't orter kept on runnin' and let that flour dribble out, and in the next he orter have brought the bag to me to be kept for the owner. Bags of flour belong to somebody, and even if lost by a Chinaman there is a law in the case.

"Joe, you may go, but in future you look out a little. This court has its eye on you, and if you make another false move the law will step in in its majesty and tie you up in hard knots.

"That's all today, and, bein' that jestice is righted and dignity satisfied, we'll adjourn court and resume the business of pushin' progress up hill."

Hot Weather Yarn.

"There I was a mile from the camp, my rifle useless, the giant bear behind me and the field of ice ahead."

"Naturally you ran."

"I did. Across the slippery ice I dashed, the bear gaining on me at every stride. I felt its hot breath on my neck. I felt its great paw upon my shoulder. Suddenly I came to the edge of the ice pack. Ten feet out from the edge was a floating cake."

"You jumped!"

"For my life. I gained the ice cake safely. I turned around. The bear had stepped back. With a running start it leapt across the open water, and we were, bear and man, adrift on a ten foot ice floe in the middle of the Arctic ocean. I had no weapon, not even a penknife. The savage animal came on, its eyes flashing, its growls shaking the air like thunder. Just then"—

Wronged.

A Drastic Cure.

"Some of the necessaries of life are exorbitantly high these days."

A Touching Farewell.

Goodby, summer shirt, forever;
I must send thee to be tubbed,
To be rent and torn a-sever
When the laundryman has scrubbed,
Where to pulpy shapes and flaccid
Fiends will rip you with a scream,
When they've sprinkled you with acid
And have wrung you out by steam.

They will tear you in your anguish
Through a cloth destroying press,
Gummed with starch and left to languish
In unmerited distress
Till your fabric, ripped and rotten,
Shrinks obedient to their skill,
And you're left as one forgotten
(But remembered in the bill).

Time there was when grandpa's daughter,
Ignorant of cleansing dope,
Put her simple faith in water
Highly fortified with soap—
Shirt's Elysium, vainly pondered!
Soap is vanished, hope is squashed,
In an age where shirts are "laundered"
In the place of being washed.
—Wallace Irwin in New York Globe.

Further Instruction.

HE entered the department store
And asked that he be shown
The route to reach the clothing floor,
Then he would go alone.
The courteous floorwalker then said:
"Three aisles across, then down
Four aisles, you then keep straight ahead—"
The man began to frown.

"You take the elevator then,"
The floor man next observed.
"Get off the car at Number Ten."
(The man was quite unnerved.)
"Across four aisles, and then you turn
Six counters to your right;
Look to the left and you'll discern
A distant ruby light.

"Pass under that, and then you're near
The clothing stock you wish—"
The man cried out: "I cannot hear!
You gabble like a fish.
I never heard such silly talk;
You're having sport with me.
Your jocular designs I'll balk—
I'll make complaint. You'll see!"

The courteous floorwalker bowed
And said: "Turn to the right.
Go down the aisle until the shroud
Department comes in sight;
From there just thirteen aisles you trace
Until you reach the paints—
Beside them is a desk—the place
Where you may make complaints."
—W. D. Nesbit in New York Life.

Hancock In His Last Battle

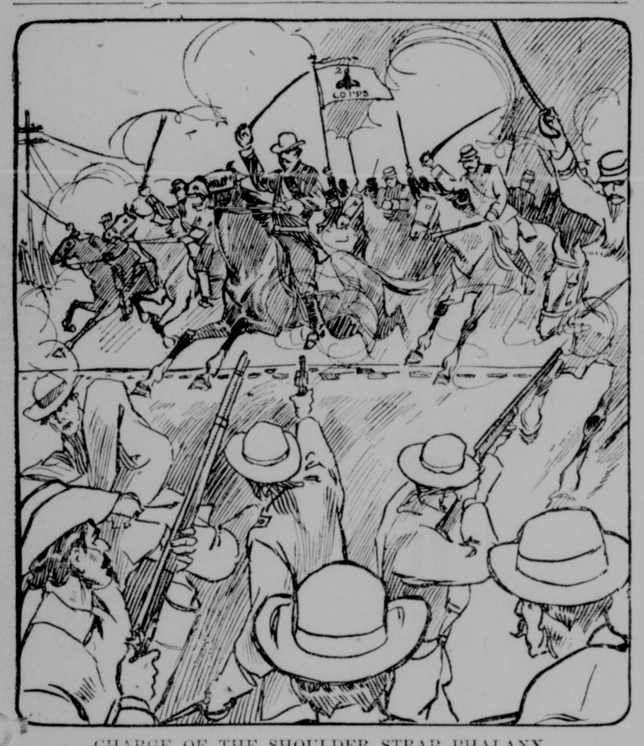
A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

August 25, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

REAM'S STATION, on the Weldon railroad, south of Petersburg, Va., gave its name to a battle fought there Aug. 25, 1864. The action lasted but a couple of hours, yet during that short time, on a very narrow field, the drama of war in its most terrible as well as most picturesque features was unrolled. For the first hero, Hancock, "The Superb;" for the second, Brigadier General Nelson A. Miles.

The Weldon road, running from North Carolina into the besieged city of Petersburg, served Lee's intrenched army as a line of supply, and after the great siege had fairly begun it became a necessity for Grant to break up the line. A few miles of track close to Petersburg were destroyed, but the zealous Confederates simply bridged the awkward gap by wagoning their freight across it to the Petersburg camps. Finally General Hancock was sent out with an expedition to extend the break farther south. He marched down the track on Aug. 24 at the head of two divisions of his famous Second corps, supported by General D. McA. Gregg's division of cavalry. The command halted at Ream's Station, which was then but four miles off the left flank of the army of the Potomac.



CHARGE OF THE SHOULDER STRAP PHALANX.

Some weeks before Hancock's march to Ream's Station the cavalry of General James H. Wilson had paid it a brief visit, one which incidentally led to the battle of Aug. 25. Wilson chanced upon Ream's Station while returning from a raid of railroad destruction far within the enemy's lines. Being headed off there by Fitz Lee's Confederate troopers, Wilson threw up a line of light intrenchments covering a small section of the track from the north, south and west.

Early on the 25th Gregg's troopers stirred up the enemy just outside of camp, but found them indisposed for battle. Hancock had received notice that 8,000 or 10,000 Confederates had left the Petersburg intrenchments in pursuit of his column. In spite of this warning, the plucky soldier set one division under General Gibbon to work tearing up the track and held General Miles' division in the trenches. Gibbon's force was soon driven from the work of destruction and formed line in the trenches, with Gregg's troopers covering the flank. In places the parapets were so close that the enemy's fire would pass over and strike the defenders of the opposite side of the narrow field in the rear.

Hancock expected help from the main army in front of Petersburg and gave to Miles the task of holding the road open. Miles was first attacked by Confederates marching boldly from the shelter of some woods into open ground swept by Federal fire. The guns of three batteries aided Miles' riflemen in repelling this attack, and the enemy soon recoiled, doubtless surprised at their warm reception.

Finding the enemy ready to fight outside his intrenchments, Hancock determined to favor him and prepared for a stubborn battle, well knowing that he had to deal with 15,000 of Lee's choicest troops. There were 20,000 Federal troops lying idle within four miles of Ream's Station, and the general in chief knew that the Confederates were watching a chance to pounce upon Hancock while he was separated from the main army. It was not Hancock's way to back out, and he set the cavalry to building rail breastworks across the open end of the field and posted guns to rake the railway track which traversed his line on the left.

After tasting the fire of Miles' line the enemy came on with a fresh division supported by eight guns. Again the southern infantry recoiled, but the artillery opened a galling fire that passed over Miles' trenches into Gibbon's line, which was facing the other way to stand off Hampton's Confederate cavalry. Hancock's batteries replied, shelling the woods where the enemy's infantry lay. Suddenly a column in gray, comprising five brigades, made a bold dash across the open space swept by Hancock's guns. For a moment it looked as though the rash assailants would be destroyed, but at the supreme moment a provisional brigade of Federals ran away from the works and allowed the enemy to enter at a critical point between two of Hancock's advanced batteries.

Hancock saw the break in the line and hastened to call up a brigade lying as a reserve to the cowardly one which had run away. These men refused to move and hugged the ground like partridges. Miles saw the plight of his chief and quickly joined him, although he had at his back nothing more than his headquarters staff and guard, the main body of his troops being hard at work buffeting the enemy. With his handful the gallant leader charged the swarming ranks of the Confederates who had crossed the railway track, hoping by their example to shame the cowards of the field into action.

The Confederates made the most of their chance and rushed up and down the works. The cannoneers of Sleeper's Tenth Massachusetts battery fought until their captain and many comrades and all the horses had been shot down, then retreated to the railway embankment. Turning the other way, the victorious Confederates ran over Dauchy's Twelfth Massachusetts battery, but not until the commander and all the cannoneers had fallen beside their guns. Cowardice and stampede had simply maddened the real heroes of the field. Miles rode into the ranks of his own regiment, the Sixty-first New York, lying just on the edge of the breach, and ordered them to form at right angles across the breastworks. Placing himself in front, he led the way down the line to Dauchy's silent guns, recapturing the breastworks and three of the pieces.

The astonished Confederates gave way before Miles' fierce assault. But the hero did not stop at that. Gathering new men as fast as his little band of 200 was depleted, he crossed to the outside of the breastworks. At this point Hancock joined him, accompanied by the Second corps battleflag, which was a conspicuous target for the enemy's fire. It had already been pierced with bullets, and the staff was in splinters. While Hancock was riding forward to reach Miles his bridle rein was twice cut by bullets and his horse killed under him.

The original gap in the angle of Miles' works still lay open to the Confederates, and at this Hancock and Miles drove full tilt, followed by a unique shoulder strap phalanx composed of brigade and regimental officers and aids-de-camp, less than 100 in all. Again Hancock appealed to the demoralized men in the rear to rally and defend the angle which was once more in their grasp. But they still refused to stir from their tracks.

Hancock was in despair at last. Hampton's troopers were crowding Gregg's in the rear. The line was almost surrounded and no help in sight. Already shattered with many wounds, the hero felt that his warrior strength, his career, his fame, likewise his grand old corps, until that day invincible in battle, were going to pieces. Placing his hand upon the shoulder of one of his staff, he exclaimed, "Colonel, I do not want to die, but I pray God that I may never leave this field!"

Miles' indomitable soldiers and the few guns they had saved kept open the road back to Petersburg, and after nightfall the corps marched from Hancock's last battlefield to the sheltering lines of the main army.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

Colonel Bunker

He Would Have Been Born a De Soto if He Had Been Born Soon Enough.

IT was midafternoon, and Colonel Bunker had just emerged from a corner drug store when he ran up against Squire Dawson and exclaimed:

"'Deed, squar', but I am happy to see yo'—mo' than happy, suh."

"Same to yo', colonel," replied the squire as he extended his hand for a shake. "Yo' are looking so-so."

"I'm about the same, squar'—about the same. Hope none of yo'r family are ailing?"

"None, thankee. One of my working mewls is off his feed, and I was going into the stoh for powders.

THE JUDGE TOOK OCCASION TO SAY, "I MIGHT HAVE BEEN A DE SOTO."

Didn't I hear something about yo'r having a case in cote the other day?"

"Yo' probably did, suh, and we might step inside while I tell yo' about it. Yo' know, squar', that since I went out of politics I've returned to my old profession—the law?"

"I've heard so, colonel."

"But I've met with nothing but envy and jealousy on every hand, though everybody knows what part I took in the late wah. They don't want me to build up a practice here, and they've thrown me down whenever the occasion offered. They tried it again the other day, suh. Yes, suh, the enemy moved down on my works again and just reckoned to wipe me off the face of the earth. This county has made up her mind that I must go, and mebbe I'll have to, but I'm gwine to die powerful hard, squar'—powerful hard."

"What happened this time, colonel?" queried the squire as he cut a piece off his plug of tobacco and passed the plug to his friend, but carefully remembered to get it back again.

"Squar' Dawson, yo' run mostly to co'n and mewls and are a busy man."

"Yes, colonel."

"But yo' ain't too busy to remember that De Soto discovered the Mississippi river about a hundred and seventy years ago. Yo've read that in history."

"Yes; reckon I have, colonel, but I didn't charge my memory with it in particular. Name was De Soto, was it? Live anywhere around here?"

"Not exactly, suh. This county wasn't heard of till long after his time. He was a Spaniard, Squar' Dawson, and he came over to this country with a crowd behind him to make new discoveries, pick a fuss and run things to suit himself. It was while wandering over the country to find something worth stealing that he discovered the big river."

"Shoo! Just broke right out of the woods and discovered her, eh?"

"That was the way of it, squar'. Now, then, last Saturday I went into cote for Tom Jackson. Tom's dawg bit the ear off of Jim Forbishes' yaller mewl, and Jim sued fur $50 damages. I was for the defense. I not only had an alibi for the dawg, but I had seventeen witnesses on hand to swear that he was too dodgasted lazy to chase and bite anything. Besides that, I had the canine right in the cote-room that I might show the jury he had but two teeth left and couldn't nip a baby's finger. It was a legal and military defense combined, suh, and it looked to be impregnable."

"And of co'se yo' won, colonel—of co'se yo' did?" observed the squire.

"Did I? Yo' jest wait! I stood to win it, of co'se, and I'll leave it to the bar of the state, but yo' forget that my enemies were in ambush and waiting for me. They were afraid that I was coming out on top, and the fiat went forth that I was to be thrown down, no matter how strong my defense. Yo' know what a fiat is, don't yo', squar'?"

"Well, not jest this afternoon, as I'm not feelin' any too peart. But go on with yo'r story."

"I had the neatest, slickest case yo' ever did see, but the aforesaid fiat had gone forth, and judge and jury had to obey. They just knocked me out all around and brought in a verdict of $20 and costs. How was that for a conspiracy, squar'?"

"Shoo! Shoo! But it don't seem possible."

"No mistake, Squar' Dawson. They not only threw me down in the verdict, but the judge took occasion to say that if I hadn't fooled away my time and let my ambition run to weeds I might have been a De Soto. Yes, suh, he said them very words right to my face."

"I can't skassly believe it, colonel—not skassly."

"Squar' Dawson, are yo' looking at me?" queried the colonel as he faced the other.

"I shorely am, colonel."

"Then let me ask yo' if Colonel Bunker is a Spaniard?"

"Of co'se not."

"Then how could I be a De Soto? I'm blamed by these jealous minded people because I'm not as big a man as he was, and yet he was dead and buried a hundred years befo' my American grandfather was bo'n into the world. How could I discover the Mississippi river befo' I was bo'n? How could I be a great man a century and a half befo' I opened my eyes on this sinful world? Answer me that, suh—answer me that?"

"Yo' couldn't do it, colonel—yo' couldn't possibly do it!" answered the squire.

"Shorely I couldn't, and yet the people of this county are throwing me down whenever the opportunity comes. They probably reckon that this last turn will drive me out, but I can tell yo' that they will be disappointed. I can be thrown down, but the grass don't hold me long. It's like fighting the wah over again, though I do believe the Yankees gave me a better show than I'm getting now. I'm keeping quiet for a day or two, but the enemy may prepare for a surprise pretty quick."

"Got an idea, colonel?"

"I have, squar'. Do yo' know that there are 2,149,628,498 grasshoppers in this country? Do yo' know that ever' last hopper is on the jump for fo'teen hours a day? Do yo' know that it takes as much power for a grasshopper to jump as for a man to raise a shovel? What if that power could be caught and stored up to run the machinery of the country? What if Colonel Bunker was the man to do it?"

"Do yo' mean it, colonel?" asked the squire in a whisper of awe.

"As suah's yo'r bo'n, suh, and now, being yo' have kindly asked me what I'll take, I don't care if I do step around to Joe's place with yo' and wet my mouth with whisky—jest dampen it, yo' know, to keep the cotton out."

Santa Fe the Source of Knowledge.

A chaplain assigned to a remote army post in New Mexico organized a Sunday school for the children of the soldiers. Until the catechisms came he had to ask his own questions. He decided to begin with the Lord's Prayer.

"How many," he inquired the first morning, "know the Lord's Prayer?"

A prolonged silence. Then one little girl timidly raised her hand.

"Only one who knows it!" exclaimed the chaplain, in genuine surprise. "You may repeat it, Anna."

Anna repeated it quietly and correctly.

"That was very nicely done. Where did you learn it?"

"In Sante Fe."

"Very good. Now, Margaret," to the next little girl, "can't you say the Lord's Prayer?"

"No, Mr. Gardiner."

"Twelve years old and don't know the Lord's Prayer!"

"Oh, but Mr. Gardiner," said the child, eager to set herself right, "I have never been in Santa Fe."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Minor Consideration.

"So you have found a new servant," said Mrs. Bliggins.

"Yes," answered her husband proudly. "I don't know yet how much salary she wants."

"Never mind about the salary. Find out how many people there are in her family and whether they have large appetites."—Washington Star.

She Was Lucky.

ONWARD, CHRISTIAN SOLDIERS

By Rev. Sabine Baring-Gould

THE Rev. Sabine Baring-Gould, author and traveler (born 1834), holds high rank among popular living English writers. The list of his books in prose and verse contains more than eighty titles and covers a wide variety of religious and secular topics. The hymn given below is one of a large number written by Mr. Baring-Gould and has been exceedingly popular as a marching song for religious bodies.

ONWARD, Christian soldiers,
Marching as to war,
With the cross of Jesus
Going on before.
Christ, the royal master,
Leads against the foe;
Forward into battle,
See, his banners go.

Like a mighty army
Moves the Church of God;
Brothers, we are treading
Where the saints have trod;
We are not divided—
All one body we;
One in hope and doctrine,
One in charity.

Crowns and thrones may perish,
Kingdoms rise and wane,
But the Church of Jesus
Constant will remain;
Gates of hell can never
'Gainst that Church prevail;
We have Christ's own promise,
And that cannot fail.

Onward, then, ye people;
Join our happy throng;
Blend with ours your voices,
In triumphant song—
Glory, laud, and honor
Unto Christ the King,
This through countless ages
Men and angels sing.

HANDS ALL ROUND

By Lord Tennyson

FIRST drink a health, this solemn night,
A health to England, every guest;
That man's the best cosmopolite
Who loves his native country best.
May Freedom's oak for ever live
With stronger life from day to day;
That man's the best Conservative
Who lops the mouldered branch away.
Hands all round!
God the tyrant's hope confound!
To this great cause of Freedom drink, my friends,
And the great name of England, round and round.

A health to Europe's honest men!
Heaven guard them from her tyrants' jails!
From wronged Poerio's noisome den,
From iron limbs and tortured nails!
We curse the crimes of Southern kings,
The Russian whips and Austrian rods—
We likewise have our evil things;
Too much we make our Ledgers, Gods.
Yet hands all round!
God the tyrant's cause confound!
To Europe's better health we drink, my friends,
And the great name of England, round and round!

What health to France, if France be she,
Whom martial progress only charms?
Yet tell her—better to be free
Than vanquish all the world in arms.
Her frantic city's flashing heats
But fire, to blast, the hopes of men.
Why change the titles of your streets?
You fools, you'll want them all again.
Hands all round!
God the tyrant's cause confound!
To France, the wiser France, we drink, my friends,
And the great name of England, round and round.

Gigantic daughter of the West,
We drink to thee across the flood,
We know thee most, we love thee best,
For art thou not of British blood?
Should war's mad blast again be blown,
Permit not thou the tyrant powers
To fight thy mother here alone,
But let thy broadsides roar with ours.
Hands all round!
God the tyrant's cause confound!
To our great kinsman of the West, my friends,
And the great name of England, round and round.

O rise, our strong Atlantic sons,
When war against our freedom springs!
O speak to Europe through your guns!
They can be understood by kings.
You must not mix our Queen with those
That wish to keep their people fools;
Our freedom's foemen are her foes,
She comprehends the race she rules.
Hands all round!
God the tyrant's cause confound!
To our dear kinsman of the West, my friends,
And the great name of England, round and round.

THERE'S NOT A JOY

By Lord Byron

THERE'S not a joy the world can give like that it takes away,
When the glow of early thought declines in feeling's dull decay;
'Tis not on youth's smooth cheek the blush alone which fades so fast,
But the tender bloom of heart is gone, ere youth itself be past.

Then the few whose spirits float above the wreck of happiness
Are driven o'er the shoals of guilt or ocean of excess:
The magnet of their course is gone, or only points in vain
The shore to which their shivered sail shall never stretch again.

Then the mortal coldness of the soul like death itself comes down;
It cannot feel for others' woes, it dare not dream its own;
That heavy chill has frozen o'er the fountain of our tears,
And though the eye may sparkle still, 'tis where the ice appears.

Though wit may flash from fluent lips, and mirth distract the breast,
Through midnight hours that yield no more their former hope of rest;
'Tis but as ivy leaves around the ruined turret wreath,
All green and wildly fresh without, but worn and gray beneath.

Oh, could I feel as I have felt—or be what I have been,
Or weep as I could once have wept o'er many a vanished scene;
As springs in deserts found seem sweet, all brackish though they be,
So, midst the withered waste of life, those tears would flow to me.

DEER PARK JOTTINGS.

Again we are in our sanctum after a few weeks of silence owing to sickness and some official duties, scribbling to the readers of THE REPUBLICAN, noping the editor will pardon the silence and remember sickness comes to all of us sooner or later.

We were pleased to meet and greet our old friend of years past, Mr. Lloyd H. McRobie, of North Glade, and found him the same warm hearted friend as of old. Old Father Time has dealt kindly with him, for he looks as youthful as he did twenty years ago. In the language of Rip Van Winkle, "I hope he may live long and prosper."

Mr. and Mrs. Menke, of near Kurtz chapel, south of Deer Park, spent Sabbath with friends and attended both the Lutheran and Baptist services, listening to our good pastor, Rev. Manges in the morning, and the talented young Georgian, Rev. Faust at night.

Our young friend Charles A. Jones is on his wheel meandering through the mountains and hills of Garrett and Fayette county, Pennsylvania, to the home of his grandmother near Uniontown, Pa. We wish our friend pleasure in his much needed recreation after his close application to studies and more recent care of a sick brother, and we are glad to say, his brother Ray is recovering rapidly.

Our friend and close neighbor, the venerable Rev. Wm. E. George is in feeble health at this writing. Although in his 84th year, when feeling well is as lively as a boy and happy all day long, and now as we write on this 2d day of August at 5:30 a. m., we miss hearing him singing his favorite hymns; and we pause and think will we again hear this God-fearing, grand old man, sit on his porch (opposite our sanctum) and sing with the birds at 5 o'clock in the mornings. We hope he may be spared many years, but if not, we feel assured he will sing with the Angelic Hosts in a fairer Land than this.

Mr. Wm. B. Miller contractor and builder of this place, has just finished the "Swiss Cottage," of Mr. Walter Engle and in justice to Mr. Miller must say that he has proven himself a workman "that need not be ashamed," and has turned over the key to the owner with proud assurance that he has finished up complete in all of the appointments of this cottage a first-class job—far in advance of the contract, and we feel assured will stand as a monument to Mr. Miller's workmanship.

Our genial real estate dealer, Mr. Clary, has made some land sales the past few days, and been negotiating, with every prospect of success the sale of some valuable town property. He sold to Mr. John R. Male a valuable farm some two miles north of town and a lot and two houses in town to Mr. Wayne; and with every prospect of another sale of a house and lot in Speicher's addition to Deer Park. Dr. J. W. Laughlin having placed all of his property including a farm near "Upland," in the hands of this trusted and energetic real estate agent we wish him abundent success and if the Democratic headquarters comes to the old summer home of the candidate for Vice President we feel sure our little town will take on a boom such as it never has had and in this connection surrounded as we are with land monopolies we look to our worthy Mayor to place on the market valuable lots and sites for villas and suburban homes of which he is the owner and thus show a public spiritedness that will add so much to the prosperity of our people.

Mr. Editor, I feel you will again give me space to mention some familiar scenes. In a ramble with my friend, the efficent manager of the Altamont Springs Farm, Mr. W. H. Chadderton, the sight that met my gaze on every side was like that which I loved to look upon in the beautiful Shenendoah Valley of Virginia, and that of the South Branch Valley of West Va., in the years that have passed. I find that Col. George Truesdell, who is now in Dresden, Germany, will have his heart gladdened to know what flourishing crops are growing on the Heights by virtue of his systematic and up to date farming. As we walked over this magnificant farm I found Mr. Chadderton harvesting over three hundred acres of clover, all new land cleared the past winter, and finer clover never grew out of the ground; also over six acres of new timothy meadow, reaching up to your chin; four acres of rye, ten acres of oats, ten acres of potatoes, five acres of cabbage, seven acres of turnips, twenty acres of cow peas (this for fertilizer to plow under), two acres alfafa six acres corn, eight acres rape, beside one of the finest gardens in Garrett county even eclipsing J. Swan Frick's famous garden that has been the admiration of so many when the gallant General Vic Baughman loved to gaze on his visits to Hunting Ridge,—in reminder of his own beautiful home and garden in Frederick County. But I degress, all these products will be fed on the farm besides many tons of grain, as Mr. Chadderton informed me. He purchases cracked corn, wheat bran and oil cake in five ton lots. The force of employes that it requires to work this farm in all the varied branches is sixteen men, four boys and four teams. There is also 25 acres of land just cleared this spring, some in buckwheat and is looking fine and the aroma of the honey that is wafted on the breeze makes you feel (as you look at the fine Jersey) you are in the land of "Milk and Honey." The force of employes above does not include the shepherd Gallant Hugh. Besides all this the manager has some time since harvested six acres of crimson clover, and the field is now sown in rape which gives two large crops this year. It would be an incentive for some of our Garrett county farmers to visit this model farm, and be assured that evey kindness and courtesy will be shown by God's noble men, Messers. Chadderton, manager, and Mr. Hugh Chadderton, shepherd, the Highland Chief of this mountain top, the trusted one who will take several car loads of his best herd to Ohio state fair on the 26th of this month and from there back to Wheeling to the West Va., State fair and then in two weeks come home and start with his famous herd the Registered Rambouillett sheep (the finest in the world) to the Worlds Fair at St. Louis. Col. Truesdell as stated, is in Europe with a sick wife and the trusted Hugh will be chief Mogul and we bespeak for him many worthy prizes for the Colonel on his return before the autumn breezes fan the Mountain Peak.

Our sympathies go out to Mr. Nugent, of Friendsville, in his sad bereavment in the death of his bright baby child, which was laid to rest beside its young mother who died but a few months ago and rests in our little cemetery among eelatives that have gone before, leaving a devoted husband and father; with but one child, a small girl of six or seven summers to console him in his sad loss. But let him be consoled. This little jewel is gone to join her mother and be a star that will guide him and the one that is left to a better land than this.

Mrs. John Bartley, of Bayard, W. Va., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Etta Lashorn on Church street. On Saturday after her arrival her youngest daughter was taken ill. Being in delicate health, the ride across the country from Bayard was too fatiguing. Her life was despaired of on Sunday and her father and brother Frank, of Cumberland were telegraphed for. She rallied from the spasm on Monday and at this writing hopes are entertained for her recovery. Mrs. Bartley is a sister of the Thrasher brothers of this place, one of whom is our efficient postmaster.

Mr. John Felty, Jr., accompanied by his wife and daughter, the petite Miss Miriam, and Miss Nellie Hoye, of your city, paid relatives a visit on Sunday and as usual Miriam was the center of attraction. Miss Nellie remained and will spend some weeks among associations of her childhood days, where she is pleasantly remembered by many true friends in the years that have passed and where relatives and friends open wide their hearts and homes to this orphaned child, bereft of father and mother just as she was budding into young womanhood. But let her remember devoted as she was to her invalid mother she has, and will ever in God's providence be cared for by those who love her as their own.

Mr. Editor other thoughts flit and flash through memory's storehouse but I can't intrude on your space farther. And as I am reliably informed that your paper is crossing the blue Atlantic to a friend on a foreign shore, I hope the scratch I contribute will not be criticised by readers either in France, Germany or Switzerland.

With best wishes I sign my nondeplume and say

Sixty cases of typhoid fever are reported at Mount Savage due to contaminated water supply. The new county road from Crabtree to Bloomington is about completed and will in a few days be ready for travel.

Mr. Henry Paugh, of near Frankville was in town Saturday and disposed of a wagon load of produce at a good figure.

Mrs. Kemp, widow of the late E. Kemp and mother of Dr. H. M. Kemp, lies sick at her home in this place and is in a very critical condition Her illness dates back to the week before Christmas, when she suffered a stroke of paralysis from which she has never fully recovered.

Efforts for a second time are being made to start another saloon in town.

Mr. Charles Brendlin, Jr., while wrestling with a companion last Saturday evening was thrown and sustained a dislocation of the left elbow.

The bridge over the Potomac river between Bloomington and Buxton Dump to be built conjointly by the counties of Garrett and Mineral, W. Va., is reported as an assured fact and will be in course of constuction in the next few weeks.

The intensely hot weather of Monday was broken by a terrific storm late in the afternoon. It was reported in the evening that Cumberland had been visited by a terrible cyclone attended by a great loss of life and destruction of valuable property and that the storm was traveling westward in our direction. We prepared ourselves externally and internally and when a dark cloud appeared on the eastern horizon about 7 p. m., we commenced to wonder what would become of us eternally if things turned out half as bad as reported. Fortunately, however the fury of the storm had been appeased when it reached this vicinity and outside of a few broken down corn stalks and muddy streets and roads, no damage was inflicted.

Senator Ravenscroft Recovering.

The many friends of ex-Senator Ravenscroft, of Accident, who was stricken with typhoid fever while in the discharge of his duties as Suvreyor of the Port at Baltimore, several weeks ago, will be glad to learn that he is rapidly recovering, being able to sit up several hours each day. Immediately after he was taken ill Senator Ravenscroft was taken to the Maryland General Hospital in Baltimore where he was treated.

Wanted No Perquisites.

Richard Cobden was a striking illustration of a man who refused to take from his government perquisites that might well have been his.

When Cobden went to Paris in 1859 to negotiate the commercial treaty with France the government hired for him an elegant mansion. During the negotiations he lived in state, with carriages at his disposal.

The moment the treaty was signed at the Quai d'Orsay Cobden regarded his errand and his services as ended. He returned to his official headquarters and wrote to the Anglo-Parisian banker with whom a credit had been opened for him that the treaty had been signed, and his account with her majesty's government should be closed immediately.

He sent the letter, called a cab and drove, with his trunk, from his mansion to a hotel, where he slept that night as a private citizen in a room "two pair back."

Why a Boiled Lobster Is Red.

In all crustaceans, as indeed in almost everything in nature, there is a certain per cent of iron. Upon boiling the lobster is oxidized. The effect is largely due also to the percentage of muriatic acid which exists naturally in the shell. The chemical change which takes place here is almost similar to that which occurs in the burning of a brick. In boiling a lobster its coat ceases to be a living substance, and to a certain extent it takes a new character.

It is as a brick would be after burning. This effect can also be produced by the sun, but necessarily not so rapid, as the heat of that luminary, although more intense, is not concentrated sufficiently to produce the result. The sun also exercises a bleaching influence which consumes the oxide almost as fast as it is formed, leaving the shell white or nearly pure lime.

Flow of Blood Stopped by Music.

Perhaps the strangest use to which music can be put is to stop the flow of blood from a wound. An army doctor noticed that when a wounded soldier was taken to within an easy hearing distance to music hemorrhage was greatly reduced or stopped. Neither he nor others who confirmed his observations, could understand how this phenomenon was brought about, but it is now believed that the vibration of the air produced by the music causes the patient to become faint, in which case the action of the heart is so considerably lessen that the overflow of blood is reduced.

BISHOP POTTER ROASTED.

Col. George W. Bain, of Kentucky, Pays His Respects to the Divine.

In his sermon delivered Sunday morning to the Chautauqua audience at Mountain Lake Park, Col. George W. Bain, the noted temperence lecturer and brilliant talker, took as his text "Render Unto Cæsar that Which is Cæsar's and Unto God that Which is God's". During the course of his remarks, which were of a high standard, he naturally drifted upon the subject of the liquor traffic and the spectacle presented by Bishop Potter who officiated at the opening of the sub-way saloon in New York a few days ago. Holding Bishop Potter up before his audience as a man who should know better than to participate in such an affair Mr. Bain said in part:

"It is no new thing to try to elevate the liquor tarffic or to draw its fangs so far as possible by removing it from the field of private profit. The so-called Gothenburg ssytem and other systems involving a monopoly by the State have familiarized us with the idea of reducing drunkenness by striking at the treating habit and discouraging promiscuous tipping over a bar, The new model saloon in New York, however, which has been opened under Bishop Potter's patronage, seems to be a copy of the Earl Gray inns in England.

"Left solely to the selfish commercial exploitation of the ordinary saloonkeeping class, the public drinking-place for the masses easily becomes what it has long been known to be—a nursery of crime and social depravity. The State places more or less restrictions around it with the object of maintainidg order and diminishing drunkenness, but the question arises whether the saloon should be left entirely to the mercy of the commercial instincts of men who aim to get rich out of it Granted that in such a city as New York the saloon is a fixture, in our time at least, ought the best elements of society abandon [illegible] people, who have no concern for the betterment of society as a whole? This is the question it is probable that has troubled Bishop Potter and citizens of his way of thinking."

EXCURSIONISTS MADE IT WARM

For a Coterie of Three Shell Game Artists on Cumberland Train Sunday.

According to a report of the occurrence given by an eye-witness, parties on the excursion train from this city to Cumberland last Sunday morning, made it mighty hot for a coterie of three-shell gamblers who had boarded the train with a view to fleecing the excursionists. The artists worked their game in the cars when the conductor, brakemen and guards were not on the lookout, and when the train arrived at Altamont a slight freight wreck held the excursion train a short while, and the shell-men immediately opened business on the embankment along the railroad track. Of course, a good sized crowd was at once attracted and the shell artists had lifted nearly half a hundred plunks from the jeans of the male passengers when a strapping big fellow walked up, laid down his seven dollars on a guess and of course when the shell was lifted the ball was under the other one. The loser didn't wait to bandy words but instantaneously his fist shot through the air and caught the manipulator of the shells a two-bagger under the ear, and he followed it up with several home-run punches that put the umpire of the shells out of the game in a hurry. Two or three "capper" assistants of the shell-artist, hurried to his aid, but as they stepped up they received like treatment from the hands of the big man, and in about a pair of minutes the whole coterie of gamblers were badly used up. When the train started a short time later the passengers who had lost their "mon" to the shell artists wouldn't let them get aboard and despite of the efforts of the conductor and train force the party was left along side the track to practice its wiles on the natives who should by chance be enjoying a stroll down the grade.

ENTHUSIASTIC CROWD GREETED SEN. DAVIS

Vice Presidential Nominee Spoke to About 2500 at Mountain Lake Tuesday.

INTRODUCED CAPT. R. P. HOBSON

Who Lectured on the "Mighty Mission of America." Mr. Davis Showered With Many Beautiful Flowers and Much Affected at the Reception.

Tuesday afternoon ex-Senator Henry Gassaway Davis, of Elkins, West Va., Democratic candidate for Vice President, was the centre of attraction to the crowd estimated at twenty-five hundred who gathered at Mountain Lake Park for the purpose of seeing him and hearing him introduce to the assemblage in the Auditorium Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, who delivered an address on the "Mighty Mission of America."

Mr. Davis was the guest Monday night of Col. John T. McGraw at Deer Park, who now owns the Davis home at that place, and was driven to the Park in Mr. McGraw's carriage.

In making the address introducing Mr. Davis, Superintendent Davidson of the Chautauqua, stated that it was not in the interest of any political party that Mr. Davis appeared upon the platform, but "we honor one of us; one who laid out Deer Park, who has won the regard and esteem of all for his many benevolent traits and as a magnificent Christian gentleman."

Mr. Davis upon approaching the front of the platform was greeted with the Chautauqua salute and almost overwhelmed with hundreds of the most magnificent flowers from the Weber gardens. The outburst was so sudden and enthusiastic that the speaker was unable to proceed with his remarks for several minutes. In the meantime three lusty cheers were given him by the audience, being led by Capt. Hobson. While the crowd present was not in accord with the political creed represented by Mr. Davis, but he being a resident of the county for so many years and being so well known by hundreds present, it seemed proper that he should be thus honored.

Mr. Davis was very much affected with the reception given him and his remarks, given in full below, eschewed politics. Mr. Davis said:

"I can't help wiping my eyes. This is my old home and I have seen many familiar faces here to-day. I think my stay of fifteen or twenty years on the mountains has helped to prolong my life and keep my health. This Association is working great good all over this great land and I am glad to see that the people are becoming educated. Education and religion are the principles that underlie good citizenship. The great Creator said 'let there be light, and there was light.' Religion and education are a part of this light. All should give special attention to them for wherever they are found they lead on to good. Did you ever think of the uneducated. Think of the African, Hottentot and other nations where they live from hand to mouth. We hope to give them eventually both religion and learning. We have advanced further in spreading to the world education and religion than any other nation. To the teachers and educators I say go on with your good work; it will bring good results. I did not come before you to make a speech but to say only a few words of encouragement, and I thank you."

Mr. Davis then introduced Capt. Hobson who spoke for two hours to his interested listeners. During his address Capt. Hobson's patriotism was as apparent to his auditors as his eloquence and graphic presentation of thought and deduction.

Not only does Capt. Hobson place the United States as foremost in the council of nations, but credits the destiny of the world with being under the espionage of our republic. He declares that our commercial supremacy is recognized by the world, that our government typifies liberty in the most exalted sense, that our measure of happiness and contentment is without parallel, and that our progress in the path of Christian civilization has been more pronounced within the past seventy-five years than in the previous fifteen centuries.

Capt. Hobson declared that the United States would eventually possess the power and influence to found an era of universal peace and brotherhood, when the vast standing armies of Europe would be disbanded, and arbitration would succeed war as the international agent of settlement. The magnanimous course pursued by the United States in dealing with other nations has had an incalculably beneficial effect in promoting peace.

During the course of his discourse occasional reference was made to the late Spanish war, notably the naval engagement at Santiago, but there was no mention of the valorous achievment of the speaker himself in sinking the Merrimac, his subsequent capture by the enemy and incarceration in the prison at Morro Castle. His observations, drawn from an eighteen years service in the navy, during which he visited all the civilized countries of the world, and being a careful and comparative student of events and conditions, were most entertainingly presented and his audience pleased beyond expression.

William Francis Durst.

William Francis Durst died suddenly at his home in New Germany, in this county, on the 28th day of July, 1904, of heart failure, of which he had been a sufferer for some years. His age was 45 years and something over. He leaves a widow, Alice Durst, and six living children. She was a daughter of Mr. John Bancord, of New Germany, one of Garrett county's most esteemed citizens. She and her worthy children are sharing the sympathy of the whole community.

The deceased was the youngest child of William Durst, who died near the birth time of the son mentioned William was a son of Daniel Durst, and he a son of old John Durst, and the latter a son of Casper Durst, the remote ancestor of the whole Durst race of the county, with an exception or two, the most numerous of the county. It now reaches down to the seventh generation.

The subject of this little tribute lived all his life at or near the New Germany settlement. Was a most excellent citizen in all the relations of a good life, honest, reliable, industrious and faithful. A good and kind husband to a worthy wife. An excellent parent in everyway which is shown by his six worthy children. He was a strict and faithful member of the M. E. Church and one of its chief workers. His remains were tenderly intered at the New Germany church cemetery. The attendance at the funeral was the largest remembered for years. This was an indication, and indeed, proof of the high esteem in which he was held by the many who know him. He will be much missed, not only by near friends, but by the whole community of which he was long a worthy and useful member.

NEIGHBOR.

New Germany, August 5, 1904.

Mrs. Mary Ann Drane.

Mary Ann Drane, widow of the late Mariene Drane, of near McHenry, departed this life on July 11th, 1904, of diseases incident to old age. The deceased was a daughter of William Chambers and resided near Oakland more than seventy-five years ago where her father operated the old Shaffer carding mill and was one of the founders of the M. E. Sunday school, the seventy-fifth anniversary of which was only recently celebrated.

Mrs. Drane was one of the original scholars of the school, having been converted and joined the church while residing here with her parents. She was married on October 26th, 1848, her husband preceding her to the grave many years ago. She was the mother of four daughters and one son, two daughters, Misses Mary and Belle and William R., the son, surviving her, they residing near McHenry with whom the deceased made her home. Mrs. Drane, a number of years ago, changed her church relation, joining the United Brethren congregation at McHenry.

Her funeral was conducted on July 13th, ay Rev. J. E. Johnson, her pastor, at McHenry. The interment was made in the cemetery. Mrs. Drane's age eighty-three years.

Witzenbacher Not a Candidate.

Former Judge William J. Witzenbacher, of Hagerstown, who has been urged by the Democrats of the Sixth district to take the nomination for Congress, states that he was not an aspirant for the nomination, and that his personal engagements preclude him at this time from considering the matter whatever.

ELECTRIC PLANT AT THE PARK

Badly Damaged by Some Unknown Miscreant Tuesday Afternoon.

The electric lighting plant which furnishes light to the Auditorium, streets, business houses and dwellings at the Park, was damaged to such an extent Tuesday afternoon by some unknown miscreant that as a result the machinery could not be operated that evening nor last night, with the probabilities that it will be several days before the necessary repairs can be made and the current again turned on.

Those in charge of the power house declare that the wires entering the armiture had been severed and when the dynamo was started Tuesday evening a short circuit occured which completely burned out the machine, rendering it useless. Another report is in circulation that a nail or some other metal had been inserted in the dynamo and caused the damage.

Miss Ona Chapman, of Huntington, West Va., is in Oakland visiting Miss Gertrude Scott.

HIS LEG CUT OFF.

Oscar Sanner, Attempting to Board a Train Saturday, Met With Serious Accident.

Oscar Sanner, of Cumberland, who until a few weeks ago was employed as a brakeman on the Pittsburg Division of the Baltimore and Ohio Ralroad, when he came to Oakland accompanied by his wife and two children, met with a very serious accident near the station here last Friday afternoon about six o'clook, by attempting to board a west bound freight train, when he missed his footing and fell under the wheels of a car composing the train, which passed over his leg below the knee, producing such injuries as so necessitate the amputation of the leg near the knee. The operation was performed at the McComas Sanitarium by Drs. McComas and Legge, where Mr. Sanner is still an imate and doing as well as can be expected.

He is a son of Prof. R. R. Sanner well known throughout Garrett county and portions of Pennsylvania as an educator of more than ordinary ability.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

JUDGE PARKER, KNOWN AND UNKNOWN

The country has learned something of Judge Parker, but it has much more yet to learn. Until his nomination for President he was practically an unknown quantity. He was chief judge of the Appellate Court of New York, a clean man, a good citizen, an agreeable friend, a jurist of respectable attainments. But what was really known of him as a fit leader to guide the affairs of this great Republic more than of a thousand other men on the edge of public life?

What were his views and prepossessions on the public questions of the day? Was he a man who would simply tread his party pathway or would he exercise independent judgment? What kind of counsellors would he call about him, and would he be likely to yield to their advice? Would he be a leader or rather a plastic follower? Had he the capacity and aptitude for statecraft, and could he without any administrative training of any kind or any experience in national matters, take and successfully conduct the affairs of a great nation?

On these questions which must enter into any intelligent judgment the country had nothing to guide it. Judge Parker's life and career had not been of a character to throw any light on them. He had been simply the quiet judge following the round of his judicial duties, with never any part in legislative or executive service, and with nothing to mark his individuality. Since his nomination some thing has been done to illuminate these points, but not much. The Sheehan telegram was a good indication as far as it went. It helped to lift him out of the level and to stamp his personality. The fact that it was delayed for 24 hours and sent only after the united declaration of the papers that something of the kind was indispensable even to the semblance of a fight detracts from its value as an index; but the fact that it was at all is worth something.

The only other thing that has thrown light on Judge Parker's quality and tendency is the character of the conferences he has held since his nomination, and the selection for chairman of the national committee. The choice of Tom Taggart is clearly not up to the plan of the Sheehan telegram. It is on a low level both politically and morally. It may be true that the range of choice was limited because everybody else declined, but there was just the time for the assertion of commanding power.

Acquiescence in such an apparent constraint was no confirmation of the heroic quality imputed to the Sheehan telegram. As to the visitors and conferences they have substantially all been of one character. They have been the Sheehans, the Hills, the Belmonts, the McCarrens, the Murphys, the Taggarts, simply the machine managers of the party. Certainly it would be unreasonable to complain of Judge Parker for planning with the managers of the party to whom he must look for success; but if that is what is expected to bring success then we know the kind of success it will bring. These conferences have revealed Judge Parker as the politician, and they have added something to the understanding of him.

But much more remains to be disclosed and this will be disclosed in part in his speech and letter of acceptance. In them he must say something. The silence which has so long been maintained must be cast aside. He must speak out on the tariff, on the trusts, on expansion and other questions, and his utterances will do much to indicate the man. They will present his real test.

A TRUE TALE.

The other day in the city of Des Moines an old gentleman, member of the Presbyterian Church, after a few days of illness, died.

His next door neighbor on one side was a Hebrew, on the other side a member of the Methodist Church, and the neighbor a second door away a Catholic.

During his illness the neighbors took turn about in caring for the old man, whose wife was a semi-invalid. There was no help in the household save that rendered alternately by the Jew, the Catholic and the Methodist. They took splendid care of the aged Presbyterian and his wife.

While the old man was dying there was no minister present, and the wife asked if some one could not offer a prayer. The Catholic repeated reverently the Lord's Prayer, and the others reverently joined.

Together the Methodist and the Jew and the Catholic prepared for the funeral. A Presbyterian clergyman read the service.

There was but one relative—a daughter living in Chicago—and the funeral cortege consisted of the daughter and the families of the Catholic, the Jew and the Methodist.

Surely the world grows better and more charitable and kinder.

Obadiah and Elijah.

For sheer courage Elijah is unsurpassed. Among the ever-living heroes he stands the peer of any for interpidity, "Go!" "And he went!" is the brief record, but how much must be read in between the lines. He was commanded to go into the teeth of a raging lion. Ahab felt that the prestige of his kingship had been humiliated in the eyes of his subjects and neighboring monarchs. His wife, inflamed with religious zeal, goaded him on to revenge. Every circumstance, personal, domestic, and national, conspired to make him the implacable foe of the prophet who had brought this withering woe upon the nation. Under the circumstances like these the preemptory command came, "Go, show thyself to Ahab!" Without remonstrance or hesitation, taking his very life in his hand, the prophet stated. The annals of war, exploration, or rescue do not contain an instance which surpasses this in cool and dauntless courage.

The abject terror of Obadiah at sight of Elijah presents a marked contrast to the fearlessness of the latter. Ahab's lord high chamberlain is, at the king's command, searching the drought-stricken land for the last bit of pasture for the royal horses and mules, when he meets the swarthy, sheep-skin-clad prophet in the highway. After the salutations are exchanged, Elijah commands him, "Tell thy lord, 'Behold, Elijah!'" Obadiah's answer not only reveals his apprehension of personal harm, but also the assiduity with which the king had sought the prophet in every kingdom and nation.

Obadiah's plea is pitiful. He deprecates the danger in which the prophet places him. If Elijah does not make good his promise to appear at court, then the king, in the rage of his disappointment, would kill Obadiah. He feels that he does not deserve such a cruel fate. He even recites the things which he has done which would indicate that he ought not to suffer so ignominiously. Prominent among these services was the hiding of the hundred prophets. When that first systematic religious persecution of history broke out, Obadiah, as mayor of the palace, knowing it was impending, hurried all the members of the prophetic fraternity he could gather up to a couple of caverns in the hill country, and secretly provided for their sustenance—of course at peril of his own life. For this deed he felt that he should not now be put again in jeopardy.

With a solemn oath Elijah assures Obadiah that he will not disappoint him. "As the Lord of host liveth, before whom I stand, I will surely show myself unto Him today!"

This is one in a series of "moving pictures" made three millenniums before the modern mechanical device was dreamed of. Nothing in literature surpasses in pictorialness this ancient record. The characters live and move and have a being before one's very eyes. Their black and hideous vices, their radiant virtues, their hopes and fears—all are exposed.

That is a crude and hasty judgment which relegates this incident to the category of mere Old Testament story—and to a far-away land. It really is a cross-section of human life. It shows its motives—fair and foul, its sufferings and successes, and possibilities. Elijah and Obadiah, Ahab and Jezebel, are alive today, and will reappear in every age. They are human types, and as such are "the chief study of mankind."

The Teacher's Lantern.

Three distinct types of character appear. Ahab had abjectly surrendered to idolatry and to his idolatrous queen. He may have had amiable impulses, but these were rapidly exchanged for cruel purposes. He became an apostate and a persecutor. He was obdurate and unreformed. He was a blusterer, shouting to the prophet on first sight of him, "Art thou he that troubleth Israel!" As might have been expected he met a violent death, killed in battle at Ramoth by a certain man who drew a bow at a venture, and the dogs licked up his blood as a servant washed his chariot. Ahab is a type of the positively evil.

Obadiah's position, if not his character, was equivocal. He was outwardly complacent under the dominance of idolatry, but inwardly protesting. He accepted service under a wicked sovereign. He did not reform Ahab. Ahab did not corrupt him. With wickedness on every side, he "still feared Jehovah greatly." In a clandestine manner he was willing to hide prophets, but he was afraid to openly announce the approach of a prophet. Obadiah is a type of the opportunist.

Elijah is an outspoken advocate of truth and righteousness. He is a synonym of courage. Prompt obedience to God, regardless of all risks, is his characteristic. He undertook without hesitation as perilous a mission as was ever given to any one. It was hard for Obadiah to believe that Elijay intended to meet his mortal foe face to face until the prophet had reassured him by a solemn oath.

Obadiah in Ahab's employ illustrates the fact that religion can be maintained in spite of an unfriendly environment. There were also saints in Cæsar's household.

Elijah was awe-inspiring in his very person. At sight of him Obadiah fell upon his face before him, and addressed him in regal form. He was the representative of the Eternal and the wielder of his power.

Waiting is a form of service. Elijah waited three years in the seclusion of a mountain cavern and a widow's hut. He bided God's time and order. For one of his temperament it was more exacting than active service.

It is just as imperative to come out of seclusion when the time is ripe, as to go into seclusion before. In neither instance did Elijah hesitate.

Punishment is not designed to destory, but to reform. The famine was not a day longer than it needed to be.

The "prophets of the Lord" here mentioned formed probably a species of lay fraternity. They were not of necessity foretellers of events, but were holy youths attached to the schools over which the prophets presided, and were in training for a life of preaching and teaching.

Der German Cobbler

He Makes an Empty Barrel and a Sign a Source of Profit.

DOT little tailor comes in to see me der odder day, und vhen I says I don't haf no shoes to repair for three days he shrugs his shoulders und replies:

"Vhell, if you don't haf some brains in your head, how can I help it?"

"But vhy don't I haf some brains?" I says.

"I can't say. I guess you vhas porn dot vhay. I tell you more ash one hoonered times dot you don't understand der peoples of America. If you did, you shall haf plenty of work. Look at my case. I pegin peesness mit a cent, und I can now draw a check for ten t'ousand dollar. It vhas pecause I understand der peoples. I know how to draw 'em to my place. It vhas better if you go und work in a coal yard. If I haf your cobbler shop one day I bet I bring in ten pairs of shoes to be fixed oop. Poor Hans! Vhy do you effer leaf Germany?"

Dot night my wife cries, und I sit down by der stove und think und think. Maype it vhas two hours, und den I vhas all right. In der morning I put an empty barrel in my shop window, und on it I hang a sign dot reads, "Dis Barrel Vhas Empty." It don't seem to be over ten minutes pefore a man comes in und says:

"I VHAS NO MAN MIT CURIOSITY, BUT I LIKE TO LOOK INTO DOT BARREL."

"Cobbler, you may fix oop my heel vhile I wait, but don't be too long about her."

He looks around vhile I work, und pooty queek he smiles und says:

"I vhas no man mit curiosity, but I like to look into dot barrel."

"All right."

He looks in and sees nottings, und he laughs und says:

"Vhell, dot vhas a pretty good joke—pretty good. It shows you vhas a smart man, und after this you shall haf all my work. Yes, it vhas a good joke. Ah, ha, ha!"

I don't see where some joke comes in, but I laugh und wink at him, und his heel vhas fixed, he pays me a quarter und pats me on der back. He vhas hardly oudt doors pefore a woman comes in mit some children's shoes. She vhas a womans who always goes by a dago cobbler, but she talks mit me about der weather und vhas werry sof[illegible] says:

"... now, I like you to speak to me in confidence, und I don't gif it avhay. Vhas it some rats in dot barrel?"

"Oh, no."

"Vhas it a goat?"

"No."

"Vhas it a fox or wolf?"

"No."

"Come, now, please be a dear good mans und tell me how it vhas. I pledge you my word I don't speak to some living soul about her."

"You may look in."

She goes oafer on tiptoe und looks in und don't see nottings. She looks mad at first, but den she laughs und says:

"Vhell, dot vhas der best joke for a year. If anybody takes you for a fool he gets left. From now on you shall fix oop all der shoes in my family, und I vhill send you all der customers I can. Ha, ha, ha!"

I laugh, too, but I don't know vhat I laugh at, und in a leetle time a man stands pefore my shop und looks into der window for ten minutes. He can't make dot barrel oudt. He shakes his head und talks to himself, und by und by he comes in und says:

"Cobbler, I guess you may put a cement patch on my toe for feefteen cents. I vhas going to run for office next spring mebbe, und it vhas a good thing to keep my shoes in repair."

"I begin to fix his shoe right avhay, und he speaks of der price of coal und politics und den says:

"Cobbler, do you know I haf met ten t'ousand liars on my time? Yes, sir, I haf met ten t'ousand mans who lie to me like Texas.

"Dot vhas bad," I says.

"I meet so many liars dot I don't pelief nobody no more. If a man tells me he runs oafer a street car I know he vhas a liar, und I like to bang him in der eye. I see you haf a barrel in your window."

"Yes."

"Dere vhas a sign dot says she vhas empty."

"Yes."

"Vhell, I vhas going to look in, but I know you vhas a liar."

He looks in und finds nottings, und he shakes his head und sits down to think it oafer. After fife minutes he holds oudt his hand to me, und dere vhas some tears in his eyes ash he says:

"Cobbler, I haf found one man in dis wide world who vhas not a liar. Dot barrel vhas empty. In one hour I shall send my boy mit all my shoes to be fixed oop, und you can charge your own price. Keep right on telling der truth und you shall haf a funeral two miles long vhen you die."

Der next person to come in vhas a womans. I see her looking at dot barrel through the window, und she goes home und gets a pair of shoes und comes back to say:

"You may fix dese oop if you will. How much vhas potatoes a barrel?"

"I don't know," I says.

"How much vhas apples?"

"I don't know."

"If you haf some alligator in dot barrel he don't get out sometimes?"

"He vhas no alligator."

"Den he vhas some chickens."

"No; he vhas only nottings."

Dot womans winks at me und looks in der barrel. Vhen she sees dot emptiness she keeps still for two minutes und den laughs und says:

"I see how it vhas. Dere vhas some false bottoms to der barrel, und der poy gets oudt und hides down cellar if anypody looks in. Ha, ha, ha! I like a mans who can make jokes, und I shall gif you all my work to do. How long vhas you in dis shop?"

"More ash fife years."

"Und vhas you a joker all der time?"

"All der time, madam."

"Dear me, und I don't know aboudt him! How many good things I haf lost! Vhell, I shall come in now every week, und I like you to haf a new joke every time."

In three days more ash feefty peoples comes in my shop und brings me work und looks into dot barrel, und I haf work ahead for two weeks. Sometimes a man gets mad vhen he don't see nottings, but most of 'em says it vhas a good joke und I haf brains. Dot little tailor finally comes aroundt to see if I vhas in der poorhouse yet, und when I tells him how she vhas he goes oop by dot barrel und strikes her mit his fist und shouts:

"I tell you, Hans, you don't understand der American public. If you do you haf plenty of work."

"But I haf plenty of work now, und eaferypody says dot barrel vhas a joke."

"It makes no deeference. You vhas some pumpkin heads, der public vhas fools, und I vhill go right home und leave you to smell of your old wax und leather."

I guess dot little tailor vhas no joker und he vhas jealous of me.

Go Ahead!

Go ahead and lay the land out—make the furrow long and straight!
Ain't no fish in any river's goin' to bite without the bait.
Don't you see the birds are buildin'? Nuthin' stops 'em low or high,
And the lizard's thrown his blanket on the old fence rail to dry!

Go ahead! The woods are bloomin', and the fields are waitin' sweet
For the wavin' of the corn blades and the ripple of the wheat!
War ain't stoppin' all creation—pretty soon the shadow fades.
Hooray for the old plantation and the field brigades!

Federal Control Of Railroads

By J. M. BECK, Ex-Assistant Attorney General of the United States

FEW if any cases since the Dred Scott decision have excited greater interest than that of the Northern Securities merger, but this interest is more due to the MAGNITUDE OF THE MONEY INTERESTS involved than to any novel principle of jurisprudence thereby declared.

THE UNDERLYING QUESTION, HOWEVER, IS AS TO WHETHER COMPETITION BETWEEN RAILWAYS IS LONGER EITHER PRACTICABLE OR DESIRABLE.

Other nations have reached the conclusion that the consolidation of railways into a few and even into one system is of greater benefit to the public than a number of SEPARATE SYSTEMS. But it must be remembered that in most of these countries the question is solved by the merger of the railroads into the government, which owns and operates them.

Whether in the absence of state ownership the consolidation of transportation companies is desirable is a question about which men may reasonably differ, and no question should receive earlier and more earnest consideration at the hands of congress.

The Northern Securities decision is also of interest as indicating a future retreat by a majority of the court from the extreme position of the joint traffic cases that the Sherman antitrust law FORBADE ALL RESTRAINTS OF TRADE. At common law the courts reserved the right to determine whether under the circumstances of a particular case a contract in restraint of trade was reasonable or unreasonable, and unquestionably the increasing tendency of the courts has been to regard such restraints, except in EXTREME cases, as reasonable.

As to ordinary contracts between man and man, this does not impose an excessive burden upon the judiciary, but as to the grave and vital questions which underlie railroad management I believe that it would be most unfortunate to cast upon the judiciary the burden of determining when a railroad consolidation was reasonable or unreasonable.

Such contracts between transportation companies are not analogous to ordinary contracts. The courts are already overburdened with questions that are semijudicial, and UPON CONGRESS, as the representative of the American people, should rest the responsibility of determining by a well conceived law the extent, if any, to which the consolidation of competing carriers should be permitted.

In this connection the question suggests itself as to whether all interstate carriers should not be required to operate UNDER A FEDERAL CHARTER. It would not subject them to any great extent to federal power, which is already plenary, but it would enable the federal government to deal with them in a less indirect manner.

The difficulty, however, with a federal charter is that its authority is necessarily limited to interstate trade and can confer none to operate wholly within the borders of a state. This would subject the average railroad to the necessity of two charters, and thus make confusion worse confounded.

In view of the centralizing tendencies of steam and electricity, our country will eventually consider the propriety of such an amendment to the constitution as will grant to transportation companies the right to transact their business THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY under the protection of a federal charter.

SUCH A LAW WOULD UNQUESTIONABLY GO FAR TO OBLITERATE STATE LINES AND CREATE A GOVERNMENT MORE STRONGLY CENTRALIZED THAN THE WILDEST DREAM OF ALEXANDER HAMILTON. BUT NEITHER HAMILTON NOR JEFFERSON EVER CONCEIVED THE POSSIBILITY OF THE RAILROAD OR THE TELEGRAPH.

WARNING TO RUSSIA

Secretary Hay's Views on What Constitutes Contraband Made Public.

CZAR'S STATESMEN MISTAKEN

Contention That Coal Is Contraband of War Flatly Contradicted by Washington Government—Complications Likely to Follow.

Washington, Aug. 9.—"The recognition in principle of the treatment of coal and other fuel and raw cotton as absolutely contraband of war might ultimately lead to a total inhibition of the sale by neutrals to the people of belligerent states of all articles which could be finally converted to military uses. Such an extension of the principle by treating coal and other fuel and raw cotton as absolutely contraband of war, simply because they are shipped by a neutral to a non-blockaded port of a belligerent, would not appear to be in accord with the reasonable and lawful rights of a neutral commerce."

This is a summary of a declaration by Secretary Hay on the right of neutral nations during war. It was embodied in a circular to American ambassadors to Europe which was issued from the state department June 10 last, but for some reason was withheld from the public, although certain shippers, who inquired at the department after their right, were supplied with copies.

The circular is based on a declaration by the Russian government that coal, naphtha, alcohol and other fuel have been declared contraband.

Secretary Hay directs attention to the West African conference in 1884, when Russia "took occasion to dissent vigorously from the inclusion of coal among articles contraband of war, and declared that she would categorically refuse her consent to any articles in any treaty, convention or instrument whatever which would imply its recognition as such."

Due notice is made of the fact that raw cotton could be made up into clothing for the military uses of a belligerent, but the secretary adds that a military use for the supply of an army or garrison might possibly be made of foodstuffs of every description which might be shipped from neutral ports to the non-blockaded ports of a belligerent. "The principle under consideration might, therefore," he says, "be extended so as to apply to every article of human use, which might be declared contraband of war simply because it might ultimately become in any degree useful to a belligerent for military purposes."

The secretary speaks of coal and other fuel and cotton as being employed for a great many innocent purposes, and that many nations are dependent upon them for the conduct of inoffensive industries, adding:

"And no sufficient presumption of an intended warlike use seems to be afforded by the mere fact of their destination to a belligerent port."

London, Aug. 9.—The Times and other London newspapers this morning contain editorials strongly approving the circular issued by Mr. Hay, the American secretary of state, as to what constitutes contraband of war.

The Times says: "Mr. Hay lays down a sound and reasonable rule on the subject. We trust our government will not delay in letting it be known that we fully share the views of the United States and that we shall steadfastly uphold them."

NINETEEN SOLDIERS HURT.

Toulon Fire Is Extinguished After Loss Reaches $2,000,000.

Toulon, France, Aug. 9.—The arsenal fire broke out afresh, but it was finally brought under control late last night. During the entire day squads of sailors and soldiers manned the pumps. There were 19 casualties among the troops, who have now been dismissed and sent back to their barracks.

Of the three torpedo gunboats which were lying at the burned slips two escaped to sea without injury, but the other, which was unable to move, was seriously damaged. It is now estimated that the loss will exceed $2,000,000.

The fire completely destroyed the famous slips built by Vauban, when he fortified the port in 1680, which were the pride of the arsenal. A number of workshops and stores were also burned. The fire broke out at the top of one of the slips and is believed to have been due to a short circuit.

INDIAN AMUSED HIMSELF BY MURDERING GIRLS.

Pender, Neb., Aug. 9.—George Forecloud, a full-blooded Winnebago, age 25, has been held for the murder of Cora Elk, also a Winnebago, the fourth girl he has killed in two years. He had no reason for killing any of them, but apparently amused himself when intoxicated by murdering girls.

New York Workmen Locked Out.

New York, Aug. 9.—The lockout against unions in the building trades whose members have recently ordered strikes has gone into effect. The number of men affected is estimated at from 50,000 to 100,000.

LEADERS IN CONFERENCE.

Democratic Executive Committee in Session at New York.

New York, Aug. 9.—"At the meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic committee all the members were present except Colonel James M. Guffey of Pennsylvania, who is ill; also Chairman Taggart, Vice Chairman Nicoll, Treasurer Peabody and Secretary Woodson.

"The location of national headquarters was fixed at No. 1 West Thirty-fourth street, consisting of the second and third floors and the basement of the Century building. It was determined not to open branch headquarters in the west or to name additional committees for the present."

This epitome of five hours' work, authorized by Chairman Sheehan, does not go into any details of the meeting and members of the committee were also very reticent, although the statement was made that the session was harmonious and the conclusions were reached without discord.

Senator Gorman was not at the meeting, remaining in his room at the Fifth Avenue hotel, but there were frequent communications between the executive committee and the Maryland senator. After adjournment Chairman Sheehan had quite a lengthy conference with Senator Gorman. The meeting was presided over by Chairman Sheehan of the executive committee. Mr. Taggart said after the meeting that he was ex-officio chairman of the committee and in his absence Mr. Nicoll would be ex-officio chairman. There has been some doubt as to Mr. Taggart's connection with the executive committee, but the meeting seemed to recognize the chairman, the vice chairman and the secretary as members.

READY FOR THE VETERANS.

Boston Will Welcome Grand Army of Republic on Monday.

Boston, Aug. 9.—Preparations for the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which opens here next Monday, are now practically complete. The first day will be given up to receptions and a parade by the naval brigade and marines. The great parade takes place on Tuesday. Spectators' stands seating more than 500,000 persons are being constructed along Boston common and at other points.

The business sessions of the encampment will be opened on Wednesday. General Fitzhugh Lee will be unable through press of business to come to Boston with the other Confederate veterans who will make the journey. The work of decorating the city has been begun. A large number of business houses have been hung with flags and bunting and many welcoming inscriptions are being placed in conspicuous places.

FIRE EMPTIES THEATER.

$400,000 Blaze at Buffalo Next Door to Crowded Playhouse.

Buffalo, Aug. 9.—Fire in a five-story building on Main street caused a loss of $400,000, and for a time threatened the Academy of Music, next door, where a play was being produced.

Soon after the fire started in the Main street block, but before the hundreds of persons gathered in the theater next door were aware of the proximity of the flames, Assistant Fire Chief Murphy went to the Academy stage, informed the audience that a building nearby was ablaze, but assured them that there was no danger.

He then asked the people to leave the theater. Exits were thrown open and the crowd filed out. The slight disorder occasioned by the mishap did not result in any serious accident. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

GIRL DIED OF POISON.

Chemist Drayer Finds Strychnine in Stomach of Crystal Krauss.

Hartford City, Ind., Aug. 9.—Dr. Paul Drayer, who examined the stomach of Crystal Krauss, for whose death Mrs. W. R. Krauss, the girl's stepmother, is held pending investigation, has notified Coroner Hollis that he has found large quantities of strychnine poisoning.

He also analyzed the contents of the bottle that was found, it is claimed by Mrs. Krauss, under the dead girl's pillow. This contained white arsenic. The defense admits that the girl died of strychnine poison.

ALL CAUGHT BUT ONE.

Another of the Bellefonte Jail Breakers Returned to His Cell.

Bellefonte, Pa., Aug. 9.—Dominic Constance, the Italian member of the gang of five men who broke jail here over a week ago, was arrested on top of the Bald Eagle mountain, just north of his former home and not five miles from Bellefonte, where he had been in hiding ever since he escaped.

This leaves but one man, George Livingstone, at large. Green, Dillon and Henderson were offered a preliminary hearing, but they waived it.

WRECK CAUSES FIRE.

Train Derailed Sets Fire to Nearby Buildings and Cars.

Plainfield, Ind., Aug. 9.—A Vandalia through train from St. Louis with 300 passengers aboard struck a broken rail near the depot here. Five cars were turned over and destroyed by fire, caused by the explosion of a gas storage tank. None of the passengers were killed and only one seriously injured.

The fire which destroyed the coaches also consumed a grain elevator and a string of freight cars.

The Working Out of Ireland's Salvation

GILBERT PARKER, Novelist, ... and Dramatist

WITHIN THE LAST DECADE IN IRELAND POLITICS HAS SHOWN AN INCLINATION TO BE PRACTICAL, RELIGION HAS BECOME MORE TOLERANT, THE QUESTION OF EDUCATION IS AT LAST BEING SERIOUSLY AND ANXIOUSLY GRAPPLED WITH, AND A NEW SENSE OF THE INTERDEPENDENCE OF ALL SECTIONS, CREEDS, INTERESTS AND PARTIES IN IRELAND IS BY WAY OF BEING EVOLVED.

Nevertheless to a detached observer it could not but be plain that politics, religion and the various systems of education in their respective influences upon the people had missed to a large extent the effect upon character which it was their national office to produce. SOMETHING NEW AND DIFFERENT WAS PALPABLY REQUIRED, not to act independently of other forces, but to concentrate and supplement them, and it was in the deep conviction that the Irish character only needed the right appeal in order to put forth a great recuperative vitality that some fifteen years ago Sir Horace Plunkett launched his movement of organized self help entitled the Irish Agricultural Organization society.

That society has grown until it now embraces over 8,000 branches and nearly half a million persons; its co-operative creameries, dairies, poultry societies, agricultural banks and home industries societies have spread all over the island. With the admirable assistance and stimulus of the Gaelic league IT HAS TOUCHED THE SECRET CHORD OF IRISH NATIONALITY, STRENGTHENED THE BACKBONE AND INCREASED THE PROSPERITY OF THE IRISH PEASANT; it is inculcating thrift, responsibility and businesslike habits; it is founding libraries, reviving the rural arts and handicrafts and bringing back to the countryside something of the old Irish joyousness; its success and Sir Horace Plunkett's determination led to the recess committee and the creation of the new government department of agriculture and technical instruction, and by mitigating the asperities of politics it fostered that spirit of moderation and compromise that alone made the land act possible.

WHAT IS THE SECRET OF ITS SUCCESS? IT WILL BE FOUND TO LIE IN ITS HAPPY CONJUNCTION OF ECONOMIC FACT AND NATIONAL SENTIMENT.

The form the new movement should take was from its beginning prescribed by that characteristic of the Irish people which he was the first not merely to appreciate, but to utilize—their clannishness.

The Irish have the associative qualities; then, said Sir Horace Plunkett in effect, let them associate. The Irish problem is primarily an agricultural problem; then let them associate in agriculture—the sphere of all others, as Italy, Denmark and, indeed, most European countries have shown, where the co-operative principle is of peculiar value.

Such was the central idea of the reformer's policy—profound in its practical simplicity, and, above all, in its consonance with the inherited traditions of the people. Once let this idea fill the national mind and THE CENTER OF IRISH INTERESTS IS INSENSIBLY SHIFTED FROM WESTMINSTER TO IRELAND, for the self help movement opens up outside of religion and politics a sphere of action where the country may exercise a new independence.

It is an effort to expand the sentiment of nationality outside the domain of party controversies, a conscious attempt of the Irish to develop a civilization of their own.

It places, literally as well as figuratively, the recreation of Ireland in Irish hands. Overriding sectional, religious and political divisions, it makes for unity in the solution of problems in which all Irishmen will in time realize that they have a common interest. Constructive, human and patriotic, it is the happiest omen which this generation has witnessed of an Ireland that all true unionists desire, an Ireland responsible and enterprising, occupied less with the abstractions and more with the humdrum realities of existence.

IN SHORT, WE DESIRE A PROSPEROUS BUT NONE THE LESS A DISTINCTIVELY IRISH IRELAND.

Russia Is the Under Dog

By Baron VON HESSE-WARTEGG, German Commissioner to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition

AMERICAN people seem to sympathize with Japan because they look upon that nation as the under dog in the fight, but that is not true. WARNING TO RUSSIA

Secretary Hay's Views on What Constitutes Contraband Made Public.

CZAR'S STATESMEN MISTAKEN

Contention That Coal Is Contraband of War Flatly Contradicted by Washington Government—Complications Likely to Follow.

Washington, Aug. 9.—"The recognition in principle of the treatment of coal and other fuel and raw cotton as absolutely contraband of war might ultimately lead to a total inhibition of the sale by neutrals to the people of belligerent states of all articles which could be finally converted to military uses. Such an extension of the principle by treating coal and other fuel and raw cotton as absolutely contraband of war, simply because they are shipped by a neutral to a non-blockaded port of a belligerent, would not appear to be in accord with the reasonable and lawful rights of a neutral commerce."

This is a summary of a declaration by Secretary Hay on the right of neutral nation during war. It was embodied in a circular to American ambassadors to Europe which was issued from the state department June 10 last, but for some reason was withheld from the public, although certain shippers, who inquired at the department after their right, were supplied with copies.

The circular is based on a declaration by the Russian government that coal, naphtha, alcohol and other fuel have been declared contraband.

Secretary Hay directs attention to the West African conference in 1884, when Russia "took occasion to dissent vigorously from the inclusion of coal among articles contraband of war, and declared that she would categorically refuse her consent to any articles in any treaty, convention or instrument whatever which would imply its recognition as such."

Due notice is made of the fact that raw cotton could be made up into clothing for the military uses of a belligerent, but the secretary adds that a military use for the supply of an army or garrison might possibly be made of foodstuffs of every description which might be shipped from neutral ports to the non-blockaded ports of a belligerent. "The principle under consideration might, therefore," he says, "be extended so as to apply to every article of human use, which might be declared contraband of war simply because it might ultimately become in any degree useful to a belligerent for military purposes."

The secretary speaks of coal and other fuel and cotton as being employed for a great many innocent purposes, and that many nations are dependent upon them for the conduct of inoffensive industries, adding:

"And no sufficient presumption of an intended warlike use seems to be afforded by the mere fact of their destination to a belligerent port."

London, Aug. 9.—The Times and other London newspapers this morning contain editorials strongly approving the circular issued by Mr. Hay, the American secretary of state, as to what constitutes contraband of war.

The Times says: "Mr. Hay lays down a sound and reasonable rule on the subject. We trust our government will not delay in letting it be known that we fully share the views of the United States and that we shall steadfastly uphold them."

NINETEEN SOLDIERS HURT.

Toulon Fire Is Extinguished After Loss Reaches $2,000,000.

Toulon, France, Aug. 9.—The arsenal fire broke out afresh, but it was finally brought under control late last night. During the entire day squads of sailors and soldiers manned the pumps. There were 19 casualties among the troops, who have now been dismissed and sent back to their barracks.

Of the three torpedo gunboats which were lying at the burned slips two escaped to sea without injury, but the other, which was unable to move, was seriously damaged. It is now estimated that the loss will exceed $2,000,000.

The fire completely destroyed the famous slips built by Vauban, when he fortified the port in 1680, which were the pride of the arsenal. A number of workshops and stores were also burned. The fire broke out at the top of one of the slips and is believed to have been due to a short circuit.

INDIAN AMUSED HIMSELF BY MURDERING GIRLS.

Pender, Neb., Aug. 9.—George Forecloud, a full-blooded Winnebago, age 25, has been held for the murder of Cora Elk, also a Winnebago, the fourth girl he has killed in two years. He had no reason for killing any of them, but apparently amused himself when intoxicated by murdering girls.

New York Workmen Locked Out.

New York, Aug. 9.—The lockout against unions in the building trades whose members have recently ordered strikes has gone into effect. The number of men affected is estimated at from 50,000 to 100,000.

LEADERS IN CONFERENCE.

Democratic Executive Committee in Session at New York.

New York, Aug. 9.—"At the meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic committee all the members were present except Colonel James M. Guffey of Pennsylvania, who is ill; also Chairman Taggart, Vice Chairman Nicoll, Treasurer Peabody and Secretary Woodson.

"The location of national headquarters was fixed at No. 1 West Thirty-fourth street, consisting of the second and third floors and the basement of the Century building. It was determined not to open branch headquarters in the west or to name additional committees for the present."

This epitome of five hours' work, authorized by Chairman Sheehan, does not go into any details of the meeting and members of the committee were also very reticent, although the statement was made that the session was harmonious and the conclusions were reached without discord.

Senator Gorman was not at the meeting, remaining in his room at the Fifth Avenue hotel, but there were frequent communications between the executive committee and the Maryland senator. After adjournment Chairman Sheehan had quite a lengthy conference with Senator Gorman. The meeting was presided over by Chairman Sheehan of the executive committee. Mr. Taggart said after the meeting that he was ex-officio chairman of the committee and in his absence Mr. Nicoll would be ex-officio chairman. There has been some doubt as to Mr. Taggart's connection with the executive committee, but the meeting seemed to recognize the chairman, the vice chairman and the secretary as members.

READY FOR THE VETERANS.

Boston Will Welcome Grand Army of Republic on Monday.

Boston, Aug. 9.—Preparations for the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which opens here next Monday, are now practically complete. The first day will be given up to receptions and a parade by the naval brigade and marines. The great parade takes place on Tuesday. Spectators' stands seating more than 500,000 persons are being constructed along Boston common and at other points.

The business sessions of the encampment will be opened on Wednesday. General Fitzhugh Lee will be unable through press of business to come to Boston with the other Confederate veterans who will make the journey. The work of decorating the city has been begun. A large number of business houses have been hung with flags and bunting and many welcoming inscriptions are being placed in conspicuous places.

FIRE EMPTIES THEATER.

$400,000 Blaze at Buffalo Next Door to Crowded Playhouse.

Buffalo, Aug. 9.—Fire in a five-story building on Main street caused a loss of $400,000, and for a time threatened the Academy of Music, next door, where a play was being produced.

Soon after the fire started in the Main street block, but before the hundreds of persons gathered in the theater next door were aware of the proximity of the flames, Assistant Fire Chief Murphy went to the Academy stage, informed the audience that a building nearby was ablaze, but assured them that there was no danger.

He then asked the people to leave the theater. Exits were thrown open and the crowd filed out. The slight disorder occasioned by the mishap did not result in any serious accident. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

GIRL DIED OF POISON.

Chemist Drayer Finds Strychnine in Stomach of Crystal Krauss.

Hartford City, Ind., Aug. 9.—Dr. Paul Drayer, who examined the stomach of Crystal Krauss, for whose death Mrs. W. R. Krauss, the girl's stepmother, is held pending investigation, has notified Coroner Hollis that he has found large quantities of strychnine poisoning.

He also analyzed the contents of the bottle that was found, it is claimed by Mrs. Krauss, under the dead girl's pillow. This contained white arsenic. The defense admits that the girl died of strychnine poison.

ALL CAUGHT BUT ONE.

Another of the Bellefonte Jail Breakers Returned to His Cell.

Bellefonte, Pa., Aug. 9.—Dominic Constance, the Italian member of the gang of five men who broke jail here over a week ago, was arrested on top of the Bald Eagle mountain, just north of his former home and not five miles from Bellefonte, where he had been in hiding ever since he escaped.

This leaves but one man, George Livingstone, at large. Green, Dillon and Henderson were offered a preliminary hearing, but they waived it.

WRECK CAUSES FIRE.

Train Derailed Sets Fire to Nearby Buildings and Cars.

Plainfield, Ind., Aug. 9.—A Vandalia through train from St. Louis with 300 passengers aboard struck a broken rail near the depot here. Five cars were turned over and destroyed by fire, caused by the explosion of a gas storage tank. None of the passengers were killed and only one seriously injured.

The fire which destroyed the coaches also consumed a grain elevator and a string of freight cars.

The Working Out of Ireland's Salvation

ROBERT PARKER, Novelist, ... and Dramatist

WITHIN THE LAST DECADE IN IRELAND POLITICS HAS SHOWN AN INCLINATION TO BE PRACTICAL, RELIGION HAS BECOME MORE TOLERANT, THE QUESTION OF EDUCATION IS AT LAST BEING SERIOUSLY AND ANXIOUSLY GRAPPLED WITH, AND A NEW SENSE OF THE INTERDEPENDENCE OF ALL SECTIONS, CREEDS, INTERESTS AND PARTIES IN IRELAND IS BY WAY OF BEING EVOLVED.

Nevertheless to a detached observer it could not but be plain that politics, religion and the various systems of education in their respective influences upon the people had missed to a large extent the effect upon character which it was their national office to produce. SOMETHING NEW AND DIFFERENT WAS PALPABLY REQUIRED, not to act independently of other forces, but to concentrate and supplement them, and it was in the deep conviction that the Irish character only needed the right appeal in order to put forth a great recuperative vitality that some fifteen years ago Sir Horace Plunkett launched his movement of organized self help entitled the Irish Agricultural Organization society.

That society has grown until it now embraces over 8,000 branches and nearly half a million persons; its co-operative creameries, dairies, poultry societies, agricultural banks and home industries societies have spread all over the island. With the admirable assistance and stimulus of the Gaelic league IT HAS TOUCHED THE SECRET CHORD OF IRISH NATIONALITY, STRENGTHENED THE BACKBONE AND INCREASED THE PROSPERITY OF THE IRISH PEASANT; it is inculcating thrift, responsibility and businesslike habits; it is founding libraries, reviving the rural arts and handicrafts and bringing back to the countryside something of the old Irish joyousness; its success and Sir Horace Plunkett's determination led to the recess committee and the creation of the new government department of agriculture and technical instruction, and by mitigating the asperities of politics it fostered that spirit of moderation and compromise that alone made the land act possible.

WHAT IS THE SECRET OF ITS SUCCESS? IT WILL BE FOUND TO LIE IN ITS HAPPY CONJUNCTION OF ECONOMIC FACT AND NATIONAL SENTIMENT.

The form the new movement should take was from its beginning prescribed by that characteristic of the Irish people which he was the first not merely to appreciate, but to utilize—their clannishness.

The Irish have the associative qualities; then, said Sir Horace Plunkett in effect, let them associate. The Irish problem is primarily an agricultural problem; then let them associate in agriculture—the sphere of all others, as Italy, Denmark and, indeed, most European countries have shown, where the co-operative principle is of peculiar value.

Such was the central idea of the reformer's policy—profound in its practical simplicity, and, above all, in its consonance with the inherited traditions of the people. Once let this idea fill the national mind and THE CENTER OF IRISH INTERESTS IS INSENSIBLY SHIFTED FROM WESTMINSTER TO IRELAND, for the self help movement opens up outside of religion and politics a sphere of action where the country may exercise a new independence.

It is an effort to expand the sentiment of nationality outside the domain of party controversies, a conscious attempt of the Irish to develop a civilization of their own.

It places, literally as well as figuratively, the recreation of Ireland in Irish hands. Overriding sectional, religious and political divisions, it makes for unity in the solution of problems in which all Irishmen will in time realize that they have a common interest. Constructive, human and patriotic, it is the happiest omen which this generation has witnessed of an Ireland that all true unionists desire, an Ireland responsible and enterprising, occupied less with the abstractions and more with the humdrum realities of existence.

IN SHORT, WE DESIRE A PROSPEROUS BUT NONE THE LESS A DISTINCTIVELY IRISH IRELAND.

FOR CONGRESS:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

JUSTICE for labor and capital is a corner stone of Republicanism.

SPEAKER CANON says the Republican motto is "We move on," and he might have added that the Democratic motto is "We follow."

WHAT WOULD PARKER DO?

Ex-President Cleveland praises Judge Parker for his courage in declaring his position in favor of the gold standard, but the ex-President goes much further than the candidate. There has never been any question as to Mr. Cleveland's position, for he did not vote for Bryan in 1896 and 1900. He refused to support the silver heresy because his party had adopted it, and Judge Parker was not one of Mr. Cleveland's associates in that refusal to compromise with wrong because his party did. Judge Parker supported Mr. Bryan and all his issues in two campaigns. He has said nothing so far to repudiate the views he then must have held to vote for Mr. Bryan. He has said he would recognize the gold standard as fixed by law and that he must do until Congress repeals that law.

But suppose a Democratic Congress should be elected and that Congress should enact a free silver law, what would Judge Parker do if President? Would he veto the bill or sign it or allow it to become a law without his signature?

The Democratic party has not confessed that the demand for free coinage, eight years ago, was an error. The most radical expression in favor of the gold standard in the St. Louis Convention was not an admission that the law was right but that the question had been settled by a higher law than that of Congress, by the enormous production of gold to make unnecessary the demand for free silver.

It will not be difficult for the Democrats to take up the silver issue again whenever there is a chance to do so with effect. A Democratic Congress would produce a free coinage bill. A free coinage bill before a Democeatic Congress would have a good chance to become a law. It would present such a threat to the business of the country that there would be a check if not a panic.

CANDIDATES should be judged by the platforms upon which they stand and not by their personal views upon questions which concern the people.

AN APPEAL TO THE RECORD.

The history of financial legislation in America can be summarized into the very brief statement that the Republicans have advocated and the Democrats opposed every act of legislation calculated to perfect the system which now obtains. The consensus of mature Republican judgment has been right. The consensus of opinion of the Democratic party has been wrong, usually. The Republican party has made mistakes and rectified them. The Democratic party has made mistakes and insisted upon repeating them.

The national banking act was a Republican measure, calculated to redeem the country from the evils of wildcat banking. The measure was opposed by 90 per cent. of the Democrats in Congress and is today opposed by a very large number of them, in spite of the time test of its merits. In 1896 the Demoratic platform declared the issue of national bank notes unconstitutional and so recently as 1900 the platform demanded the substitution of Government notes or silver certificates for bank notes as rapidly as possible.

Every Republican in Congress voted for the resumption of specie payments and every Democrat against it; and a Democratic House, in 1877, passed a bill for the repeal of the resumption act. A majority of the Democrats voted against the bill to repeal the silver purchase act, and only 12 Democrats voted for the establishment of the gold standard, while 178 voted against it. The Republicans in 1896 and 1900 and 1904 declared for free gold standard, in their party platforms. The Democrats declared for the free and unlimited coinage of silver in 1896 and in 1900 and remained silent on the subject in their platform of 1904.

That, in brief, is the record and yet the Democratic party comes up and asks the voters of the country to entrust the destinies of the nation to its unsafe hands and its uncertain policies on a question that concerns the welfare of every American. It is like asking the owners of a vessel, freighted with valuable cargo, steaming strong in a known current with a trained pilot, to surrender it to an unskilled pilot and an untried crew.

THE pith of President Roosevelt's speech of acceptance is found in the sentence: "We know our own minds and have kept of the same mind a sufficient length of time to give our policy coherence and sanity." There is no answer to that statement.

"THE WISDOM OF PROTECTION IN THE UNITED STATES."

Extracts from reply of Hon. JAMES G. BLAINE, of Maine, to Hon. Wm. E. Gladstone, published in North American Review of January 1890, and printed in daily Congressional Record, June 8, 1896.

Measuring from 1812, when a protective tariff was enacted to give strength and stability to the Government in the approaching war with Great Britain, to 1891, when a protective tariff was enacted to give strength and stability to the Government in the impending revolt of the Southern States, we have fifty years of suggestive experience in the history of the Republic. During this long period freetrade tariffs were thrice followed by industrial stagnation, financial embarassment, by distress among all classes dependent for subsistence upon their own labor. Thrice were these burdens removed by the enactment of a protective tariff. Thrice the protective tariff promptly led to industrial activity, to financial ease, to prosperity among the people. And this happy condition lasted in each case, with no diminution of its beneficient influence, until illegitimate political combinations, having their origin in personal and sectional aims, precipitated another era of free trade. A perfectly impartial man, unswerved by the excitement which this question engenders in popular discussion, might safely be asked if the half century's experience, with its three trials of both systems, did not establish the wisdom of protection in the United States. * * * As an offset to the charge that free-trade tariffs have always ended in panics and long periods of financial, distress the advocates of free-trade point to the fact that a financial panic of great severity fell upon the country in 1873, when the protective tariff of 1861 was in full force, and that, therefore, panic and distress follow periods of protection as well as periods of free-trade. * * * The panic of 1873 was widely different in its true origin from those which I have been exposing. The civil war, which closed in 1865, had sacrificed on both sides a vast amount of property. * * * A half million men had been killed. A million more had been disabled. * * * The public debt, that must be funded, reached nearly three thousand millions. * * * The country was on a basis of paper money, and all gold payments added a heavy premium to the weight of the obligation. The situation was about parallel. * * * Notwithstanding the evil prophecies on both sides, the panic did not come until eight and a half years after the firing of the last gun in the civil war. Nor did it come until after the two great calamities in the years immediately preceding had caused the expenditure of more than two hundred million dollars, suddenly withdrawn from the ordinary channels of business. The rapid and extensive rebuilding in Chicago and Boston after the destructive fires of 1871 and 1872 had a closer connection with the panic of 1873 than is commonly thought. Still further, the six years' depression, from 1873 to 1879, involved individual suffering rather than general distress. The country as a whole never advanced in wealth more rapidly than during that period. The entire experience strengthened the belief that the war for the Union could not have been maintained upon a free-trade basis, and that the panic of 1873 only proved the strength of the safeguard which protection supplies to a people surrounded by such multiform embarrassments as were the people of the United States during the few years immediately following the war. And, strongest of all points, the financial distress was relieved and prosperity restored under protection, whereas the ruinous effects of panics under free trade have never been removed except by a resort to protection.

NO Republican convention has ever found it necessary to revise its platform. The Republican platform to comply with a telegram of instructions.

HERE is what President Roosevelt says about the farmer, as taken from his several speeches of recent date:

It remains true now as it always has been, that in the last resort the country districts are those in which we are surest to find the old American spirit, the old American habits of thought and ways of living. Conditions have changed in the country far less than they have changed in the cities, and in consequence there has been little breaking away from the methods of life which have produced the great majority of the leaders of the Republic in the past. Almost all of our great Presidents have been brought up in the country, and most of them worked hard on the farms in their youth and got their early mental training in the healthy democracy of farm life. (Speech at Bangor, Me., August 27, 1902.)

The countryman—the man on the farm, more than any other of our citizens today, is called upon continually to exercise the qualities which we like to think of as typical of the United States throughout its history—the qualities of rugged independence, masterful resolution, and individual energy and resourcefulness. He works hard (for which no man is to be pitied); and often he lives hard (which may not be pleasant); but his life is passed in healthy surroundings which tend to develop a fine type of citizenship. In the country, moreover, the conditions are fortunately such as to allow a closer touch between man and man than, too often, we find to be the case in the city. Men feel more vividly the underlying sense of brotherhood, of community of interest. (Bangor, Me., August 27, 1902.)

The man who tills his own farm, whether on the prairie or in the woodland, the man who grows what we eat and the raw material which worked up into what we wear, still exists more nearly under the conditions which obtained when the "embattled farmers" of '76 made this country a nation than is true of any others of our people. (Sioux Falls, S. Dak., April 6, 1903).

The true welfare of the nation is indissolubly bound up with the welfare of the farmer and the wage-worker— of the man who tills the soil, and the mechanic, the handicraftsman, the laborer. If we can insure the prosperity of these two classes we need not trouble ourselves about the prosperity of the rest, for that will folow as a matter of course. (Speech at the opening of the Pan-American Exposition, May [20, 1901.

The success of the capitalist, and especially of the banker, is conditioned upon the prosperity of both workingman and farmer. (The Law of Civilization and Decay—American Ideals, p. 367.)

In a country like ours it is fundamentally true that the wellbeing of the tiller of the soil and the wage-worker is the well-being of the State. (Sioux Falls, S. Dak., April 6, 1903.

MR. JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS says he does not know whether the Democratic double standard notion "is a corpse or in a trance." It is a corpse in the East but very much alive in the West, and some sections of the South.

THERE is nothing involved in the tariff problem, as Democrats would have the voters believe. The hub of the proposition is that whenever the protection is removed from an American industry the employment incident to that industry is simply transferred from American workmen to foreign workmen.

THE Democratic platform of 1900 said: "We are unalterably opposed to monometallism." That declaration has not been changed by the action of the party in national convention.

"OUR policy is continuous," said President Roosevelt in his speech of acceptance. The Democrats follow the plan of the vaudeville managers and present a new policy at each appearance.

IT REQUIRED a display of moral courage for a Democrat to declare for sound money in 1896 and 1900. Judge Parker supported the free silver candidate in those years.

VICE Presidential Candidate Davis is much incensed over the campaign stories that are being told about him. He will lose timidity of that kind when he gets older and more seasoned to the penalties of political life.

THE largest item in our gain of gold imports last year came from Japan's purchases in this country. The Republican party insists upon the open door for American trade. The Democratic policy would make the open door useless by tinkering with the tariff and keeping us out of foreign markets.

MARYLAND AT ST. LOUIS FAIR.

State Building, Geological Display and Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 4.—There are three things at St. Louis to excite more especially the pride of Marylanders. These are the Marvland Building, the geological exhibit, and the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company.

Considering the limited sum of exhibit money at their disposal and the short time in which the work had to bedone, the result accomplished by the Maryland Fair Commission is really remarkable, and the commission, of which Gen. L. Victor Baughman is president is entitled to the thanks of the people of the state. The site awarded to Maryland is one of the most attractive in the avenue of states. The building in appearence, is a handsome private residence of Colonial architecture. It is surrounded by a pretty grass plot and a number of stately oaks. The arrangement of the interior is admirable and the furniture and pictures handsome and appropriate. Mrs. Park Fisher and Mr. Albert Jones have been in charge the former the hostess at a number of delightful entertainments and receptions. General Baughman has been in St. Louis a great deal, and has been unremitting in his work as a member of the commission. As a result, the Maryland Building has attracted wide attention, and the receptions have been attended by many ladies of the exclusive social set of St. Louis, and by men and women of many states whose names are familiar throughout the land. It has also been a refuge and resting place for Marylanders who have visited the Fair.

The display of the mines and quarries of Maryland is pronounced by experts to be the finest of the kind at the Fair. It shows constant industry in gathering it and skill in its preparation and arrangement. It is the work of the Maryland Geological Survey, of which Prof. William Bullock Clark, of the Hopkins, is chief. Nothing at the Fair more thoroughly and satisfactorily advertises the natural wealth of Maryland than this exhibit.

The exhibit made by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company occupies a large and conspicuous place in the great Transportation Building. This exhibit, which was gathered under direction of Major Pangborn, illustrates the history of the railroad, and the Baltimore and Ohio being the first road in operation in this country and almost the first in the whole world for the transportation of passengers and merchandise, its history illustrates the history of railroading. In the construction and operation of modern railroads the best the engineer or manager can hope to accomplish is to make some improvements on existing methods. But in the construction of the Baltimore and Ohio from Baltimore to the Point of Rocks, there was no model for a guide no experience which could be used. The men who built that road invented many of the appliances which are now in common use. Among the men conspicuous in this great pioneer work were Ross Winans, who improved locomotives, and John Elgar, who invented switches, turntables, chill bearings, plate wheels, etc. Of these men and those associated with them the American Railway Journal of 1895 said that "their reports have gone forth as a text-book, and their road and workshops have been a lecture-room to thousands who are now practicing and improving upon their exprience. This country owes to the enterprise, public spirit and perseverance of the citizens of Baltimore a debt of gratitude of no ordinary magnitude."

The charter of the road, which was formulated by the great Maryland lawyer, John V. L. McMahon, is still the charter of the company, and although it was the first railroad charter ever drafted in America it is still the working model for the railroad lawyers of the present day.

Not only was every kind of rail and support for the rails tested in building this road, but its history tells of the evolution of railroad motive power. For more than three years after the company was organized and one year after the first division of the road was opened to travel there was no settled mode of propulsion on railroads fixed upon. The Baltimore and Ohio tried many experiments and each one of these attracted visitors from every part of the country, as well as from Europe.

On January 14, 1831, Mr. P. E. Thomas, president of the company, published an advertisement offering to pay $4,000 for the most approved engine to be delivered for trial by the following June and $3,500 for the next best. Among the specifications were the following:

The engine must burn coal or coke and must consume its own smoke. It must not weigh more than three and one-half tons and must be capable of hauling on a level road 15 tons, including the weight of the wagons, 15 miles per hour.

Three locomotives were produced in response to this advertisement, and the company has them at St. Louis on exhibition. Never were there quainter or cruder machines, and their construction shows that no mind had at that time conceived the idea of the modern locomotive. One of them communicated the power to the whee's by means of a "walking beam," such as is used on sidewheel steamers. Only one of the three was found available. It was made by Phineas Davis, at York, Pa. It employed the combined cylindrical and conical car wheels," invented by Mr. Knight, the chief engineer of the company, and which facilitate the turning of curves. Motion was communicated by gearings, with a spurwheel and pinion on the axles of the road wheels. This engine was used between Baltimore and Ellicotts Mills and was the beginning of the Baltimore and Ohio as a steam road.

On exhibition, in marvelous contrast with the crude locomotive of 75 years ago, is a great modern freight locomotive, the largest owned by the Baltimore and Ohio company. It weighs 334,000 pounds and the tender when filled with 7,000 gallons of water and 13 tons of coal weighs 143,000 pounds more. Contrasted with the 15 tons, including the weight of the wagons," which the locomotives of 1831 were required to haul, the performance of this giant is equally marvelous. It can haul more than 50 coal hoppers, each carrying 50 tons of coal —more than 170 times the strength of the old locomotive. It does not count the weight of the cars and can pull this train up grade.

Not far from the Baltimore and Ohio exhibit in the Transportation Building is that of the Pennsylvania railroad. This, too, is a wonderful exhibit. It contains types of locomotives, a model of the West Philadelphia terminals, a model of the station and underground terminals, in New York city and a section of one of the steel tubes which will constitute the tunnels under North and East rivers and New York city. In this section of the tunnel there is the section of a passenger car of full size.

Retiring The Engines.

On account of the falling off of business the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, says the Baltimore Sun, has retired about 90 of its locomotives from service until there is enough traffic for them to haul. This is said to be a feature of economy in operation practiced by all railroads. The method is to retire motive power proportionate to the decrease in tonnage. These engines are put in repair, covered with white lead and left standing out of service until needed. Officials of the Baltimore and Ohio look for an improvement of business next fall that will necessitate putting the engines back in commission. Tonnage of railroads is said to be off from 5 to 15 per cent., and hence the retirement of motive power. This let up in traffic has one advantage, which is that the badly overworked and damaged engines on the trunk lines can be put in thorough repair this summer, so that last winter's damage will not become permanent.

GOIN' FISHING

If you're waking in the morning, call me early, mother, dear,
For Peanuts Fink and Spider Brown and Bricktop will be here,
And we know where the fishes swim and where the shade is cool
And where's a dandy diving place beside the swimming pool.

I've brung the kindlings in, mother, you wanted me to chop;
I've filled the woodbox till the wood is spilling o'er the top;
I've curried all the horses as my father bade me do;
I've milked the cow and slopped the pigs and fed the chickens, too.

I've weeded out the onion bed and banked the celery,
And I've transplanted cabbage plants and propped an apple tree,
And I have salted all the sheep and fixed the chicken coop,
And run all the errands, mother till I felt no spirit droop.

So, if you're waking early, call me early mother, dear,
For I know where the grayl'gs play and where the pools are clear,
And I've dug all the worms I want and cut me an alder pole,
And corks will bob tomorrow morn in that old fishin' hole.

BOY KILLED BY A MULE.

Tragic Fate of Robert McMillan, of near Lonaconing, Tuesday.

Robert McMillan, aged sixteen years, son of Hugh McMillan, of District No. 11, this county, and nephew of Orphans' Court Judge George B. McMillan, of Garrett county, was killed Tuesday afternoon by being dragged by a runaway mule. He was a driver in the American Coal Company's Jackson mine, and having finished work was returning his mule to the stable when the animal became frightened and ran away. Young McMillan became tangled in the harness and was dragged to death, life being extinct when the body was picked up. His body was badly torn and mangled and nearly every bone was broken.

Mr. E. J. Fringer, accompanied by his daughter Miss Lulu, left Oakland yesterday morning for Tower Hill, Illinois, where they will visit Mr. Fringer's brother for an indefinite time. During their absence from Oakland they will also visit the Fair at St. Louis.

Mr. Fairfax S. Landstreet, vice president of the Western Maryland railroad, arrived here on Saturday at noon in his private car, "West Virginia." Mr. Landstreet went to Deer Park Saturday afternoon. His car went up the West Virginia Central yesterday morning—Cumberland News.

Prof. J. G. Robinson, of Baltimore, who represents the old and well known firm of Sanders & Stayman, musical dealers of Baltimore, arrived here yesterday and will be prepared to tune instruments and put them in thorough repairs. Orders left at the office of Dr. J. G. Robinson, on Liberty street, will be promptly responded to.

THE TOWN A LITIGANT OVER PAVING

Injunction Proceedings Instituted Last August to be Argued.

Some time during the month of August of last year Mr. E. Z. Tower, of Oakland, instituted injunction proceedings in the Circuit Court for this county to prohibit the Mayor and Council of Oakland from proceeding further with the grading, then in progress, of Oak street. In his bill Mr. Tower made the allegation that in the event the grading was proceded with along the lines set by the civil engineer his property fronting on Oak street would be irreparably damaged and he would be put to a large expense. It was further alleged that the town was bankrupt.

In view of the facts as set out in the bill the Court granted an injunction, work on the street was stopped, and a date was set to hear the cause argued last December but owing to unforseen circumstances the hearing did not take place and from that time until recently nothing further was done in the case, when the City Attorney acting upon the orders of the Council filed a petition with the Court asking for an order setting a time for final argument in the case, with leave in the meantime for either side to take testimony in support of the allegations in the proceedings.

The petition was presented to Judge Henderson a week or two ago and he set September 12th as the date for final argument.

Testimony on both sides will be taken some time next week before a special examiner.

Mr. Jacob Brown, of Cumberland, is at the home of his nephew, Mr. Ross Compton, near Grantsville, for an outing of a week or ten days. In a note to the editor received a day or two ago Mr. Brown states that he is improving in health which will be glad news to his many friends in Garrett county and elsewhere.

Mr. Leon M. Hewitt, of Lynchburg, Va., press representative of the Swanson and Sheridan Gala Week Amusement Company, is in city completing all arrangement for the big carnival which shows here all next week. Mr. Hewitt states that Messrs. Swanson and Sheridan have purchased the entire outfit of the Hutchinson Carnival Company and combined the two, making one of the strongest and best companies out this season.

Miss Anna Anderson, daughter of the late Robert I. Anderson, of Oakland, returned to her home here Monday afternoon after an absence of almost a year which she spent in Europe, principally with her uncle, Henry Anderson, who resides at Glasgow, Scotland. A tour was also made by the young lady through Ireland. Miss Anderson's many friends in Oakland welcome her.

Col. Johh W. Averitt, of the Cumberland Times, who was so seriously injured a few weeks ago by being caught in the machinery in the press room of his office, came up to Oakland Friday evening and on Saturday went to Lake Brown where he remained until Tuesday as the guest of Hon. and Mrs. R. T. Brewning, when he returned to Oakland. Col Averitt is slowly recovering from his injuries and with a few more weeks under favorable circumstances he will be entirely well.

Mr. C. W. Friend, of Homestead, Pa., son of Rev. Henry E. Friend, of Mountain Lake Park, is at the parental home on a short vacation from his duties as an expert meterologist in the Carnegia steel works at Homestead. Mr. Friend was in Oakland Saturday, when he called at this office. We found him an exceedingly sociable gentleman. He was accompanied by his cousin, Mr. M. R. Frantz, of Gypsy, West Va., who was also at his home in Crellin ona short vacation

The Bachelor's Club of Confluence will leave here today for a two week's outing at a camp at Friendsville, Md. The members are Bert Frantz, Bob Black, Bert Black, Doc. Fichtner, Art Rieber, Bert Kretchman and Charlie Swan. Dr. Wolford will act as male chaperon for the bachelors and make them walk as straight as a club of benedicts. Sunday, August 6th, the fair sex of this place will visit them and inspect their cooking and find out their qualifications for future matrimonial honors. Dr. Wolford, their worthy chaperon, will deliver a lecture to them as occasion requires.—Myersdale Commercial.

Mill Destroyed by Fire.

The Kendall & Deeter Lumber Company, of Meyersdale lost a saw mill by fire early Saturday morning, and their loss upon the same will be at least $2,500, without any insurance. The mill was located on the Carey tract, about six miles west of Frostburg, and was across the line in Garrett county. It was about one o'clock in the morning when the fire was discovered by the men employed in the mill who were in a boarding house only about eighty feet away, but they were powerless and the entire plant was destroyed. The fire was discovered in the roof, and the mill being open the flames were fed by the breeze and not a thing was saved.

CARNIVAL ALL NEXT WEEK.

The Swanson and Sheridan Carnival Company the Attraction.

The merchants and business men of Oakland have engaged The Swanson and Sheridan Gala Week Amusement Company to exhibit here all next week, opening on Monday evening at 7.30. This company is one of the biggest and best traveling this season. They travel on their own special train of ten cars and carry fifteen high class tented exhibitions, merry-go-rounds, Ferris wheel and military band. The shows are: Red Dome Electric Spectacular Theater, featuring Steona, the lady who dances in a dress containing five hundred yards of pure white silk, the largest dress ever made. This is by far the grandest and most elaborate tented exhibition in existence.

Lunette, the flying lady. Lunette is hypnotized by the professor and while under his power is caused to fly, float and dance in mid-air, out in the audience above your very heads. The great Train Robbery, presenting the "Bandit King," Tracy's great hold-up and robbery of the fast express on the Sante Fe Route. In conjunction with the train robbery they give fifteen different scenes from the Russian and Japanese naval battles, including the battle of Port Arthur.

Old Plantation, giving a complete reproduction of life in the Sunny South before the war, consisting of sixteen colored performers, the best that "Dixie" produces.

Ula, the leopard-girl, a remarkable child of eight years, born in Bombay, India, and covered with spots similar to those of the leopard.

The Baltimore fire, reproducing by electricity that terrible catastrophe which so nearly destroyed the Monumental City.

Darkness and Dawn, a scientific exhibition featuring Yalatea, the living statue.

Streets of Cairo, Laughing Parlor, Palace of Illusions, Glass Blowers, Electric Palace, Holy City, Florence's Vaudeville and Sellers' Museum of Washington.

Four startling free attractions take place twice daily on the grounds. Kid McComb, the world's greatest head-foremost high diver, diving from a ladder ninety feet high into a tank containing but four feet of water.

Deralla Bior, champion cyclist of the world, riding the smallest and steepest cycle wheel ever built.

Prof. Palmer, daring fire slide for life, sliding down an incline two hundred and fifty feet long suspended by his teeth with both hands and feet tied through a burning mass of flames.

Beener, the dare-devil of the universe, performing seemingly impossible feats upon the flying trapese. These are all free.

The Carnival will be given on the Oakland Hotel grounds in front of the hotel.

Visit Oakland next week and spend a pleasant time with the merchants and business men.

Mr. Austin Brown, chairman of the State Central Committee for Garrett county, was in attendance at the meeting of the State Central Committee at Baltimore on Tuesday last.

NOW AT MOUNDSVILLE.

J. F. Wilfong, Who Escaped from Oakland Jail, in Penitentiary.

J. F. Wilfong, the Randolph county (West Va.) outlaw, an account of whose misdoings since his escape from the Oakland jail about a year ago where he was incarcerated charged with stealing two horses belonging to Jesse Ashby at Crellin, was published in these columns last week, is now in the Moundsville Penitentiary to which prison he was taken from Parsons, West Va., on Sunday by Sheriff William M. Shaffer, of Kingwood, to serve out the sentence imposed upon him by the Circuit Court of Preston county for the burglary of W. W. Shoch's store at Rowlesburg some time early last fall. Wilfong escaped from the Kingwood jail a day or two before the sheriff was to start with him for Moundsville and until recently all trace of him was lost by the authorities.

Miss Carrie Colardeau, who has been living with her mother in Philadelphia since before Christmas, returned to Oakland Saturday morning and is the guest of Dr. E. H. Bartlett's family on Alder street.

Among those who attended the Congressional committee meeting at Mountain Lake Park last Thursday night and who visited Oakland during the afternoon of that day were Congressman A. G. Dayton, Messrs. G. A. Bolden, of Grafton; S. B. Montgomery, of Tunnelton, who is the Republican candidate for Senator, and L. V. Reed, editor of the Terra Alta Republican.

Hon. A. F. George, of Swanton, was in Oakland Saturday, on business. He spent last week at home on a vacation, leaving Sunday for Ohio where he will be engaged several weeks establishing new rural free delivery routes.

Baltimore and Ohio Agent V. V. Washburne is taking a well earned vacation of ten days from his duties. His place at the station is being filled by Relief Agent Bunker, of Cumberland.

Morman R. Sanner, of Pittsburg, arrived here Monday afternoon and went down to Lake Brown the same evening at which place his wife and children are the guests of. Hon. and Mrs. R. T. Browning.

Miss Annie B. Spedden, who has been residing in Culpeper, Va., arrived in Oakland last Tuesday night, and will spend the remaining portion of the summer as the guest of her sister, Mrs. S. E. Shirer at her home on Alder street.

Misses Bessie and Annie Thompson, of Baltimore, whose grandfather was one of the pioneer residents of Oakland and probably the town's first postmaster, are here on a visit to Miss Clara Davis, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Chas. S. Davis.

Mr. E. J. Fringer, accompanied by his daughter Miss Lulu, left Oakland yesterday morning for Tower Hill, Illinois, where they will visit Mr. Fringer's brother for an indefinite time. During their absence from Oakland they will also visit the Fair at St. Louis.

Mr. Fairfax S. Landstreet, vice president of the Western Maryland railroad, arrived here on Saturday at noon in his private car, "West Virginia." Mr. Landstreet went to Deer Park Saturday afternoon. His car went up the West Virginia Central yesterday morning—Cumberland News.

Prof. J. G. Robinson, of Baltimore, who represents the old and well known firm of Sanders & Stayman, musical dealers of Baltimore, arrived here yesterday and will be prepared to tune instruments and put them in thorough repairs. Orders left at the office of Dr. J. G. Robinson, on Liberty street, will be promptly responded to.

THE TOWN ALITIGANT OVER PAVING

Injunction Proceedings Instituted Last August to be Argued.

Some time during the month of August of last year Mr. E. Z. Tower, of Oakland, instituted injunction proceedings in the Circuit Court for this county to prohibit the Mayor and Council of Oakland from proceeding further with the grading, then in progress, of Oak street. In his bill Mr. Tower made the allegation that in the event the grading was proceeded with along the lines set by the civil engineer his property fronting on Oak street would be irreparably damaged and he would be put to a large expense. It was further alleged that the town was bankrupt.

In view of the facts as set out in the bill the Court granted an injunction, work on the street was stopped, and a date was set to hear the cause argued last December but owing to unforseen circumstances the hearing did not take place and from that time until recently nothing further was done in the case, when the City Attorney acting upon the orders of the Council filed a petition with the Court asking for an order setting a time for final argument in the case, with leave in the meantime for either side to take testimony in support of the allegations in the proceedings.

The petition was presented to Judge Henderson a week or two ago and he set September 12th as the date for final argument.

Testimony on both sides will be taken some time next week before a special examiner.

Mr. Jacob Brown, of Cumberland, is at the home of his nephew, Mr. Ross Compton, near Grantsville, for an outing of a week or ten days. In a note to the editor received a day or two ago Mr. Brown states that he is improving in health which will be glad news to his many friends in Garrett county and elsewhere.

Mr. Leon M. Hewitt, of Lynchburg, Va., press representative of the Swanson and Sheridan Gala Week Amusement Company, is in city completing all arrangement for the big carnival which shows here all next week. Mr. Hewitt states that Messrs. Swanson and Sheridan have purchased the entire outfit of the Hutchinson Carnival Company and combined the two, making one of the strongest and best companies out this season.

Miss Anna Anderson, daughter of the late Robert I. Anderson, of Oakland, returned to her home here Monday afternoon after an absence of almost a year which she spent in Europe, principally with her uncle, Henry Anderson, who resides at Glasgow, Scotland. A tour was also made by the young lady through Ireland. Miss Anderson's many friends in Oakland welcome her.

Col. John W. Averitt, of the Cumberland Times, who was so seriously injured a few weeks ago by being caught in the machinery in the press room of his office, came up to Oakland Friday evening and on Saturday went to Lake Brown where he remained until Tuesday as the guest of Hon. and Mrs. R. T. Brewning, when he returned to Oakland. Col Averitt is slowly recovering from his injuries and with a few more weeks under favorable circumstances he will be entirely well.

Mr. C. W. Friend, of Homestead, Pa., son of Rev. Henry E. Friend, of Mountain Lake Park, is at the parental home on a short vacation from his duties as an expert meterologist in the Carnegia steel works at Homestead. Mr. Friend was in Oakland Saturday, when he called at this office. We found him an exceedingly sociable gentleman. He was accompanied by his cousin, Mr. M. R. Frantz, of Gypsy, West Va., who was also at his home in Crellin ona short vacation

The Bachelor's Club of Confluence will leave here today for a two week's outing at a camp at Friendsville, Md. The members are Bert Frantz, Bob Black, Bert Black, Doc. Fichtner, Art Rieber, Bert Kretchman and Charlie Swan. Dr. Wolford will act as male chaperon for the bachelors and make them walk as straight as a club of benedicts. Sunday, August 6th, the fair sex of this place will visit them and inspect their cooking and find out their qualifications for future matrimonial honors. Dr. Wolford, their worthy chaperon, will deliver a lecture to them as occasion requires.—Myersdale Commercial.

Mill Destroyed by Fire.

The Kendall & Deeter Lumber Company, of Meyersdale lost a saw mill by fire early Saturday morning, and their loss upon the same will be at least $2,500, without any insurance. The mill was located on the Carey tract, about six miles west of Frostburg, and was across the line in Garrett county. It was about one o'clock in the morning when the fire was discovered by the men employed in the mill who were in a boarding house only about eighty feet away, but they were powerless and the entire plant was destroyed. The fire was discovered in the roof, and the mill being open the flames were fed by the breeze and not a thing was saved.

CARNIVAL ALL NEXT WEEK.

The Swanson and Sheridan Carnival Company the Attraction.

The merchants and business men of Oakland have engaged The Swanson and Sheridan Gala Week Amusement Company to exhibit here all next week, opening on Monday evening at 7.30. This company is one of the biggest and best traveling this season. They travel on their own special train of ten cars and carry fifteen high class tented exhibitions, merry-go-rounds, Ferris wheel and military band. The shows are: Red Dome Electric Spectacular Theater, featuring Steona, the lady who dances in a dress containing five hundred yards of pure white silk, the largest dress ever made. This is by far the grandest and most elaborate tented exhibition in existence.

Lunette, the flying lady. Lunette is hypnotized by the professor and while under his power is caused to fly, float and dance in mid-air, out in the audience above your very heads. The great Train Robbery, presenting the "Bandit King," Tracy's great hold-up and robbery of the fast express on the Sante Fe Route. In conjunction with the train robbery they give fifteen different scenes from the Russian and Japanese naval battles, including the battle of Port Arthur.

Old Plantation, giving a complete reproduction of life in the Sunny South before the war, consisting of sixteen colored performers, the best that "Dixie" produces.

Ula, the leopard-girl, a remarkable child of eight years, born in Bombay, India, and covered with spots similar to those of the leopard.

The Baltimore fire, reproducing by electricity that terrible catastrophe which so nearly destroyed the Monumental City.

Darkness and Dawn, a scientific exhibition featuring Yalatea, the living statue.

Streets of Cairo, Laughing Parlor, Palace of Illusions, Glass Blowers, Electric Palace, Holy City, Florence's Vaudeville and Sellers' Museum of Washington.

Four startling free attractions take place twice daily on the grounds. Kid McComb, the world's greatest head-foremost high diver, diving from a ladder ninety feet high into a tank containing but four feet of water.

Deralla Bior, champion cyclist of the world, riding the smallest and steepest cycle wheel ever built.

Prof. Palmer, daring fire slide for life, sliding down an incline two hundred and fifty feet long suspended by his teeth with both hands and feet tied through a burning mass of flames.

Beener, the dare-devil of the universe, performing seemingly impossible feats upon the flying trapese. These are all free.

The Carnival will be given on the Oakland Hotel grounds in front of the hotel.

Visit Oakland next week and spend a pleasant time with the merchants and business men.

Mr. Austih Brown, chairman of the State Central Committee for Garrett county, was in attendance at the meeting of the State Central Committee at Baltimore on Tuesday last.

NOW AT MOUNDSVILLE.

J. F. Wilfong, Who Escaped from Oakland Jail, in Penitentiary.

J. F. Wilfong, the Randolph county (West Va.) outlaw, an account of whose misdoings since his escape from the Oakland jail about a year ago where he was incarcerated charged with stealing two horses belonging to Jesse Ashby at Crellin, was published in these columns last week, is now in the Moundsville Penitentiary to which prison he was taken from Parsons, West Va., on Sunday by Sheriff William M. Shaffer, of Kingwood, to serve out the sentence imposed upon him by the Circuit Court of Preston county for the burglary of W. W. Shoch's store at Rowlesburg some time early last fall. Wilfong escaped from the Kingwood jail a day or two before the sheriff was to start with him for Moundsville and until recently all trace of him was lost by the authorities.

Bowser Tries Playwriting

He Returns to the Old Subject With New Hopes and Ambitions, Even Though Mrs. B. Gives Him No Encouragement.

[Copyright, 1904, by C. B. Lewis.]

AFTER one glance at Mr. Bowser's face Mrs. Bowser had no doubt that he had something on his mind to bother him, but whether he was trying to figure out a new flying machine or seeking to find out how long it would take a bear running at twenty miles an hour to catch a boy running at eighteen she couldn't say. As he was quiet and good natured over it, she let him figure away, and it was half an hour after dinner before he finally said:

"Look here, now, but I'd like to have a talk with you—a real sensible talk. I'll agree not to get mad, and you must agree to say nothing sarcastic."

"I'll talk, of course, and be glad to," she replied. "What is it that's bothering you?"

"Well, you know I belong to the Primrose Dramatic club. I haven't attended but two or three meetings, and they are pushing me to show up. In fact, they want me to write a play to be produced two weeks hence."

"Well?"

"I want to oblige them, of course, and I want the honor and prestige of the play, but can I write one? That's what I want to talk to you about. Don't jump on me with both feet, as you generally do, and cry 'fad,' but give me a candid opinion."

"Mr. Bowser, how many times in your life have you been to the theater?" she asked as she laid aside her book.

"As many as five or six."

"And did you pay the least attention to what is called the action of the play—to the construction—to the situations—to the stage craft?"

"I—I don't know that I did, but what has that to do with it? Some of the plays written by people who were never inside a theater have been the most successful."

"Whoever has told you that has told you nonsense. You can't learn to be an actor by looking at a drug store nor

"I SAID THERE WAS TO BE NO SARCASM," PROTESTED MR. BOWSER.

a lawyer by walking around a courthouse. I should say that you might as well try to cure a patient of typhoid fever as to expect to produce a play for the stage."

"But, you see, you start in prejudiced against me. I wrote a play last winter, and we had a little scrap over it, and so you are naturally down on me."

"Yes, you wrote a play. Do you remember where the scene was laid?"

"In Bagdad."

"Yes, in Bagdad, and for no other reason than that you wanted to show as many Bagdad curtains as possible. Are you thinking of laying this one in Arabia, so as to get as many dates into it as you can?"

"But Bagdad curtains are not dates, Mrs. Bowser."

"No, and dates are not California prunes. Why not lay it in California? However, we won't dispute about that. What is your plot?"

"A young man loves a young girl."

"That's nothing startling."

"He is poor, but proud."

"He generally is."

"Her father is a rich old skinflint and would sell her to an old chap of the same ilk for $50,000. The young man asks for her hand, and of course he gets the bounce. Right there, when he throws his hat down and jumps on it and says he will defeat the father's villainous machinations or perish, is a chance for some of the strongest acting on the American stage. It makes my hair curl to think of it. Adolphus stands like this, and gestures like this, and hurls his words"—

It was the cat. He had been sitting up and listening to every word and wondering when Mr. Bowser would begin to get red in the face and yell out, and his attitude and gestures struck terror to his heart, and he uttered a howl and dived under the lounge.

"By thunder, but that infernal old feline shan't live another day!" he exclaimed as he located the interruption.

"Never mind the cat," replied Mrs. Bowser, "and you needn't go on with what Adolphus says either. There is no originality about that. All poor and proud young men get off the same expressions when told to go forth and hoe potatoes at 50 cents a day. How does your hero finally get the girl?"

"He bears her away at midnight after she has put a dose of chloral in her father's gin and water."

"That's very fair. But how much does she weigh?"

"How much? How much? Why, what odds does that make? Whoever heard of weighing the characters of a play?"

"It makes just this difference, Mr. Bowser. If your heroine weighs 160 pounds and your hero only 140 the audience won't be prepared to see him throw her over his shoulder and trot across a grapevine bridge and up the side of a steep mountain. However, you can have her take antifat and feed him upon corned beef at the same time and thus get the right proportions. He bears her off at midnight, but where to?"

"I said there was to be no sarcasm," protested Mr. Bowser.

"And there is none. I am just making friendly comments. Does he bear her to a depot, a ferryboat or where?"

"He bears her to the mountains, of course. I want mountains in for scenic effect. He bears her to a cave in the mountains. Her father discovers her flight next morning, and he raises a force of fifty men and starts in pursuit. He swears that he will have her back dead or alive and that he will kill Adolphus or put him to the torture. Right there again is a chance for a Booth or Barrett. Imagine the scene. The fifty men are drawn upon a bridge over a gulf. The old man stands confronting them. Suddenly he raises his right hand and"—

The cat had come out, thinking the performance had closed, but when Mr. Bowser's right hand went up he realized the peril of the situation and made a second scramble for life.

"Never mind," consolingly observed Mrs. Bowser as the hand fell.

"But I will mind," he savagely retorted. "Do you think I'm going to have one of the best plays of the century knocked out by a cross eyed, double jointed old spotted tomcat!"

He spent five minutes freezing the cat's soul with terror by words and glares and then gave it up, and Mrs. Bowser said:

"Well, Adolphus gets the heroine to a cave, and they have a picked up breakfast of johnnycake and bologna sausage, and then what happens?"

"Who said they had any such breakfast?"

"Then they couldn't have had any at all. That isn't so material to the play, however. The father and his fifty men follow on, of course?"

"Of course. What are they there for?"

"But you should have the villain guide them. You have a villain, haven't you?"

"Y-e-s—that is, I'm going to have. There's no particular hurry about the villain butting in. He will naturally lead the crowd when he does come in."

"Well, the villain, the father and the fifty armed men set off up the mountain, and then what happens?"

"They are overwhelmed," replied Mr. Bowser.

"By a snowslide?"

"Yes, by a snowslide started by Adolphus. He sees them coming. He sees a snowslide just ready to slide. He would spare the father in order to have a father-in-law, but he cannot. He swings his hat. He calls out. He warns them to return before it is too late. He stands thus, and—and"—

And Mr. Bowser looked around for the cat. The feline had his head out from under the lounge, and the two stood glaring at each other till Mrs. Bowser had to laugh in their faces.

"Thanks for the insult," stiffly replied Mr. Bowser.

"But it is no insult. Please go on with the plot."

"Not another word, madam. I was an ass to have told you as much as I did. It is evident to me that you are far more interested in an infernal old cat than in my play, and you and the cat can go to Ballyhack!"

He thereupon walked down the hall and put on his hat and overcoat and walked over to the drug store. He knew the druggist to be an old theater goer, and after a bit he queried of him:

"What would you say if I told you I was writing a four act comedy?"

"I should say that you were the biggest jackass in town!" was the prompt reply.

Mr. Bowser looked at him for a moment with sudden death in each eye and then passed out into the night. And the gas lamps flared, the shadows danced as he wandered to and fro and felt that of all the living, breathing human beings on earth he was the only one who couldn't write a play and get a snowslide started at the proper moment.

M. QUAD.

Youthful Wisdom.

"Oh, mamma," she said, with a little burst of girlish confidence, "what do you think? Mr. Iddyot proposed last night."

"Ah, did he, my dear? And what did my little girl say?"

"Oh, I told him that an engagement was too solemn and sacred a thing for me to enter into without serious thought and consideration and that I would give him my answer in a week. And now, mamma mine, we must go to work and find out if he really and truly has a thousand a year."

"You dear, wise little girl!" cried the fond mother, folding her child to her bosom and weeping softly over her.

A Sinister Suggestion.

"Bliggins and his wife must get on very happily," said the gossip. "She says she never scolds him."

"That doesn't indicate happiness," answered Miss Cayenne. "It is sad. It shows that she considers him beyond hope."—Washington Star.

"So I understand."

"Yes, he dropped out some time ago."

ONE HUNDRED PERISH

Passenger Train Goes Through Bridge Across Swollen Colorado Stream.

THREE COACHES SWEPT AWAY

Only Three Occupants Live to Tell Tale of Their Experience—Pullman Cars Stop on Brink of Abyss—Seventy-Six Bodies Recovered.

Pueblo, Col., Aug. 9.—The wreck of the world's fair flyer, on the Denver and Rio Grande railroad, near Eden, seven miles north of Pueblo, proves to have been one of the greatest railroad disasters in the history of the country. Two crowded passengers cars and a baggage car were engulfed in the torrent that tore out a trestle spanning Steele's hollow, otherwise known as Dry creek, and as far as known only three of the occupants of these cars escaped death. Two sleeping cars and a diner remained on the tracks at the edge of the abyss and none of their occupants were killed or injured.

How many perished probably never will be definitely ascertained, for the treacherous sands are drifting over the bodies. Searching for the dead is in progress. All corpses found were brought to Pueblo and placed in four morgues here. At 8 o'clock last night 76 bodies had been recovered, and of these 50 had been indentified. During the day bodies were recovered all the way along Fountain river, from the scene of the wreck to this city. Two bodies were taken from the stream at First street, Pueblo, more than eight miles from the point where the disaster occurred, and it is probable that some may even be recovered further down the stream.

Engineer Feared Accident.

On the outlook for danger, warned by the squally clouds and heavy rains to the north, Engineer Charles Hindman was running cautiously, about 15 miles an hour, as he approached the arroyo, which was spanned by a bridge 96 feet in length. The condition of the bridge was not known until the locomotive, one of the monster passenger type, had nearly crossed. Fireman Mayfield, with a torch that the engineer and the fireman had burning to ascertain the condition of the track, was in the gangway. When Engineer Hindman felt the tremor in the great machine and caught a glimmer on the water he shouted his last words:

"Put out that torch," evidently thinking that in the accident he felt certain was coming, the flames would serve to spread fire. But beyond Mayfield could obey, while the words were still on the lips of the doomed man, and his hand seeking the mechanism controlling the air, the bridge gave way as though it had been a stack of kindling wood and the locomotive dropped 30 feet to the bottom of the arroyo.

The baggage car, smoking car, and chair car followed the locomotive into the stream and were swept away. All the occupants of these cars except three men perished, and had not the roof of the chair car burst asunder, none would have escaped. The fireman, as the locomotive went over, was thrown out and managing to grasp a piece of wreckage from the bridge floated to the bank. He ran toward Eden, meeting on the way operator F. M. Jones and his wife, who already had started up the track.

Victims Died Quickly.

"Notify Pueblo," came the voice of the running man, "the train's gone down and everybody is killed."

Even as he spoke, relates the operator, there were cries coming from the distance. The two men ran to where the bridge had been to search for victims of the disaster. When they reached the spot all cries had ceased.

Relief trains with physicians, wreck and pile driving outfits and scores of workmen were hurried from the city. The first train from the wreck came in shortly after midnight. [illegible] I. M. Killin, of Pueblo; H. S. [illegible], Tony Fisher and Fireman Mayfield. These were four men in the midst of the wreck who escaped.

When dawn came the wonder grew that four had been permitted to emerge from the raging torrent with breath still in their bodies. The end of the Pullman car Wyuta extended four feet over the brink, while broken timbers and twisted rails hung still further over. The arroyo had been widened for more than a hundred feet at the point where the bridge had been. The water tore a zigzag course across the prairie to a depth of 30 feet in several places. There was little left of the baggage car, a few rods, a truck or so, dimly seen in the muddy water, and a half buried iron safe. The great locomotive, the boiler free of the trucks, the cab and tank gone, lies where it fell.

Debris Along the Stream.

A quarter of a mile to the east, where this gorge of death debouched into the Fountain, lay the chair car, windows gone, three-fourths filled with mud and sand. A hundred feet farther on was the smoker, bottom up against a sandbar. A hundred and fifty feet farther on, in the bed of the river, was the tender of the engine, and from that point on for four or five miles vestiges of the coaches, the engine and tender stuck up from the bed of the stream or lay along the shore or in the islands.

Bits of clothing, coats, skirts and women's hats were found in the brush along the shore. Masses of earth had caved in from the high sides of the river at many places and searchers passed these with fear that bodies were buried under them which they were helpless to reach.

The first of the corpses recovered were those of Miss Irene Wright and little Dorothy Johnson, sister-in-law and daughter respectively of Harry Johnson of Pueblo. An unknown woman lay beside them. Engineer Hindman was found with his watch still running a few feet further down the stream. All day long stretchers with dripping burdens were carried to the railroad tracks, where the death train awaited them. While it was still dark axes had been used on the half-buried cars at the junction of the creek with the Fountain and at daylight this work was resumed on the smoking car, which lay out in the Fountain, where men were compelled to wade almost to their waists to reach it.

Drowned Like Rats in a Trap.

A second party further down the river found several persons entangled in a mass of debris, thought to have been part of the baggage car, which was literally torn to pieces. In a short time a large number of bodies were dug out of the sand here. Some bodies were found lodged in the shrubbery along the banks, other in the wreckage in midstream and many half buried with only an arm or a bit of clothing to reveal their whereabouts.

Without doubt the great majority drowned like rats in a trap when the cars plunged into the water.

When brought ashore the bodies were placed on the ground and covered. A baggage car was kept running between the city and the wreck, bringing in those who were found. A number of wagons finally were pressed into service to haul the bodies to the tracks, leaving the searchers free to continue the hunt for others. Some searchers worked all night and all day without food or rest. Persons were constantly arriving and anxiously inquiring for lost ones known to have been on the train. By 9 o'clock in the morning the plains were dotted with vehicles, each with its load of anxious seekers or the morbidly curious.

Were Returning from the Fair.

Bodies recovered were identified very slowly because many of them were those of strangers here who had been to the fair at St. Louis and other eastern points.

Fountain river still rushes with the impetus of the flood and the arroyo has a clear, tiny stream trickling along where the fatal mass of water rushed a few hours before. The earth on either side is swept clean

The walls of the so-called Dry creek are rugged, irregular, caving and widened, but still so narrow that it is almost impossible to understand how the great coaches, the baggage car and tender could have been swept so far without becoming lodged against the sides. Most of the bed of the creek is now visible, with little streams weaving about the strips of sand, forming islands of mud and sand, which are being searched for bodies that may lie buried in them.

Pullman Porter Plays Hero.

W. Vance, porter on the forward sleeping car Wyuta, was one of the heroes of the disaster. To him and his nerve and braverv the persons on that car owe their lives. Vance was standing near the front end of the car when the crash came and with rare presence of mind rushed to the hand brake on the front of the car and began tightening the brakes on the wheels. His car was slipping forward from the momentum and from the terrible drag in front, caused by the forward cars falling into the stream. Vance held on to the brake like grim death. His hands clenched the wheel until his fingers almost bled, but he held on until his tight grip stopped the car. The forward cars broke from the sleeper and fell into the water, while the car which Vance had held with the brake stopped one-third of the way on the brink of the chasm overhanging the gulch below. The forward trucks had left the track and gone down, but the remainder of the coach stayed on the tracks and the lives of the passengers were saved.

It required two engines and nearly a half hour's work to pull this sleeper back from the brink of the chasm. Nothing but Vance's cool and brave work at the brakes kept the car from plunging into the stream.

Japanese Asked to Take Away Some of the Sick and Wounded—St. Petersburg Populace Anxious About Liaoyang and Gen. Kuropatkin.

London, Aug. 9.—According to the correspondent of the Morning Post at Shanghai, it is reported there that there are 10,000 sick and wounded persons at Port Arthur and that the Russians are negotiating with the Japanese to send the hospital ship Mongolia away full of sick.

It is reported, the correspondent says, that Lieutenant General Stoessel, in command of the military force at Port Arthur, has committed suicide and that panic prevails there.

GENERAL ANATOL M. STOESSEL.

Marquis Oyama, commander-in-chief of the Japanese forces in Manchuria, has proceeded north and expects to attack Liaoyang Aug. 10.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 9.—There is increasing impatience among all classes for decisive news from Liaoyang. Lieutenant General Sakharoff's report that there has been no change in the Manchurian army's sphere of operations merely adds to the tension which possibly will continue for some time.

There is no telling how much time the notoriously slow and methodical preparations of the Japanese may consume before they feel ready to advance on General Kuropatkin's strong positions. Every day's delay gives the Russian commander greater opportunity to fortify or to get away in case he decides to avoid a big battle, though it is not generally thought here that there is much likelihood of his retreating without a decisive fight.

Viceroy Alexieff's dispatch from Mukden communicating official messages from Port Arthur bears out the reported loss of the Japanese protected cruisers Itsukushima and Chiyoda and indicates considerable activity on the part of the Port Arthur squadron. The care exercised in sending a dredger fleet ahead of the squadron, both in relieving and returning to the harbor, is amply vindicated by the loss of one of the pilot boats and is also taken as a guarantee that there will be no further damage to the Russian warships by Japanese mines.

The city is full of wild rumors that Port Arthur has fallen, due to reports from Chefoo of another assault in which the fortress was taken by the combined land and sea forces, though the Japanese lost three warships, including the protected cruisers Chiyoda and Itsukushima. It is believed that the Japanese are still unable to capture the outer works, much less the fortress itself.

Viceroy Alexieff reports that in the engagement which took place July 26 off Port Arthur between the Japanese and Russian squadrons three Japanese ships, including a gunboat, were damaged.

The Final Blow at Atlanta

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

September 1, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

BY the end of August, 1864, Sherman had fought his way step by step to the very gates of Atlanta. He did not attempt to take the works by storm, but established the Twentieth corps under General W. H. Slocum in the trenches he had built in front of the city and launched forth with the main part of his army to cut the communications of his opponent on the south.

The Confederate commander at Atlanta, General J. B. Hood, was a brave but impetuous soldier and had depleted his fighting strength in heroic efforts to loosen Sherman's grip by desperate attacks in open field. Even when virtually surrounded he still clung to the citadel. It was said that he believed that Sherman's supplies were exhausted and that the Federal army was at the point of abandoning the siege. From this dream he was suddenly awakened by the appearance of an immense army of foes southwest of Atlanta, close to the railroads from the south which brought supplies to his camps. Still determined to fight to the last, he dispatched General Hardee with his own corps and that led by General S. D. Lee to defend the railroads and remained in the Atlanta trenches with the rest of his force.

The march of Hardee's column southward was led by the intrepid Pat Cleburne, the "Stonewall of the West," who could always find an enemy and stir up a fight, even though the chances were against him. Cleburne struck out for the extreme flank of Sherman's moving column, intending to march till he reached it, then double it up by a vigorous attack, like his prototype at Chancellorsville. He had the victim of Chancellorsville, General O. O. Howard, to deal with, but Howard was alert and had already seized the road ahead of Cleburne.

It was an accident which took Howard so far south that Cleburne was headed off and the Confederate plan of campaign changed. Howard discovered that there was no water at the place where Sherman had ordered him to halt and pushed on to Flint river. There he intrenched a position, having learned that the enemy was in force at Jonesboro, a point near by and only fifteen miles from Atlanta, with rail communications still open. During the night Howard heard the trains moving southward from Atlanta and sent word to Sherman, who was following in his wake with the army of the Cumberland, under sturdy "Pap" Thomas, that the enemy was not to be caught napping.

There were rare fighting spirits gathering around the wayside halting place that August afternoon. "Black Jack" Logan was in line along Howard's front and was soon pounced upon by the indomitable Hardee. The Confederates did not fight with their old time vigor, and Logan held his ground. Meanwhile the restless Cleburne came thundering along in Howard's rear, making a two sided fight of it. But Howard was not alone in his wrestle with Hardee. General Schofield's Federal corps, having taken a wider sweep to the west than Howard, came in between Jonesboro and Atlanta and cut the railroad, heading off a train which sped back to Atlanta with the news that Sherman's army was marching on the city from the south. Hood attempted to recall Lee's corps from Hardee's line at Jonesboro to defend Atlanta, but it was too late. Sherman ordered Slocum to push things on the northern side of the beleaguered city and if possible drive Hood from the trenches.

In order to strengthen Howard, Sherman brought forward Thomas' Cumberland army, a move which led to the hard fight at Jonesboro on Sept. 1, settling the fate of Atlanta. Up to this point Sherman was simply getting his forces into position to control the railroad and be ready to fight Hood somewhere south of Atlanta as soon as the severing of railway communications forced him to evacuate that stronghold. But the Federal scouts picked up the news that Hood had sent word to Hardee to return S. D. Lee's corps to him at Atlanta. Thinking that the loss of Lee's help would place Hardee at the mercy of his army, Sherman determined to close in and capture Jonesboro, Hardee and all.

Now, when Hardee took up his position at Jonesboro he expected to deal only with Howard's column, coming against him from the west. The right or northern flank of his line was held by Cleburne's division, and this flank was struck by Thomas' advance corps under General Jeff C. Davis. Three divisions of Davis' column formed in front of Cleburne, and the brigade of United States regulars led by Colonel Edie sallied out to reconnoiter and see what Cleburne had in front. Driving the men in gray from a ridge they occupied as an outpost after a brisk skirmish, Edie planted his flag and discovered that his line extended beyond the salient angle of the enemy, the key to the position. Two divisions of Davis' corps rallied around Edie, and a battery was hauled up the ridge which enfiladed part of Cleburne's line and disabled a number of the Confederate guns.

Finally all was ready for an assault, Sherman being on the ground and impatient of delay. The divisions of Carlin and Morgan charged forward in two lines, Edie's regulars having the lead and carrying the enemy's salient at the first rush. In this charge the famous Eighteenth United States infantry won new laurels. The commander of the Eighteenth, Captain L. M. Kellogg, rode out in front of the colors, picking his way through a dense undergrowth for 400 yards, to the edge of an open field. Reforming their line, the regulars dashed on a distance of 800 yards, all the way under fire. On reaching the breastworks, filled with Cleburne's Tennesseeans, Captain Kellogg spurred his horse over the parapet to inspire his men with bravery. The gallant soldier was hit by a bullet and a fragment of shell at the same time, but continued to urge on his followers until they were inside the works.

The sudden blow of the regulars surprised the Confederates in Cleburne's front line, but a second Confederate line lay in hiding in the woods beyond, with an unobstructed range of the ground captured by the daring assailants. The regulars held their ground for a time, suffering heavily, and, not being supported in the attack, were finally driven out by a rush of Cleburne's men.

The point in dispute was only a trifling height, defended by three worn down brigades of Tennesseeans, but the fate of Hardee's line at Jonesboro was at stake and after that the fate of Hood at Atlanta. If Jonesboro fell, the whole Confederate rear lay at the mercy of Sherman, and Atlanta could not be held. While the regulars were heroically fighting to break through the salient Thomas had been away hurrying up another division to support the attack. He reached the front at 5 o'clock, and Colonel Estes' volunteer brigade moved slowly through the tangled undergrowth to the field in front of the works where Edie had fought so well only to be driven out. Estes' men were not behind Edie's in courage and dash and took the salient in a few minutes, losing one-third of their number, but holding on to the prize. In the Thirty-eighth Ohio 150 men fell, the highest loss of the day.

While Estes clung to the salient the companion brigades of Carlin's division swept in from the left and Morgan's division from the right, completely enveloping the angle which had cost so much brave blood. Cleburne's advance brigade was captured almost entire, with its leader, General Govan, and two batteries of artillery. After the loss of the salient Cleburne drew back his two brigades under Lewis and Granberry, forming a new salient, and stood ready for another assault, but darkness ended the conflict and the fighting for Atlanta.

When news reached Hood in Atlanta of the doings of Sherman at Jonesboro he knew that the Federals were neither hard up for rations, as originally supposed, nor moving north to inclose the city. Two corps of troops remained with him there, and these he set in motion the night of the 1st to pass around Sherman's flank and join Hardee and Lee, ten miles southeast of Jonesboro. Hardee at the same time withdrew from the lines so bravely defended by Cleburne.

About midnight of the 1st the Federals in Slocum's camps on the north side of Atlanta heard explosions in the direction of the city, and at daylight couriers brought word to headquarters that the place had been abandoned and the military stores destroyed by powder and flames. Slocum appeared before the city early on the 2d of September and received its surrender by the mayor. Sherman soon got word and telegraphed to Washington, "Atlanta is ours and fairly won."

The Confederates were highly elated over the escape of Hood from the limits of Atlanta while Sherman was south of him with an immense force. In point of fact Sherman was bent upon smashing the railroads and the half of the Confederate army with Hardee at Jonesboro.

THE TAX ON OLD BACHELORS

By Seba Smith

THIS poem has been ascribed to Lucretia Maria Davidson, the literary prodigy (born 1808, died 1825), but Stedman and Hutchinson's "Library of American Literature" says it came from the pen of Seba Smith, the humorist, who used the pen name of Major Jack Downing. Smith, who was a journalist by profession, was born in 1792 and died in 1868. Some of his work was declared "among the most successful adaptations of the Yankee dialect to the purposes of humorous writing."

I DREAMED a dream in the midst of my slumbers,
And, as fast as I dreamed, it was coined into numbers;
My thoughts ran along in such beautiful meter,
I'm sure I ne'er saw any poetry sweeter.
It seemed that a law had been recently made,
That a tax on old bachelors' pates should be laid;
And in order to make them all willing to marry,
The tax was as large as a man could well carry.
The Bachelors grumbled, and said 'twas no use,
'Twas cruel injustice and horrid abuse,
And declared that, to save their own heart's blood from spilling,
Of such a vile tax they would ne'er pay a shilling.
But the Rulers determined their scheme to pursue,
So they set all the bachelors up at vendue.
A crier was sent thro' the town to and fro,
To rattle his bell, and his trumpet to blow,
And to bawl out at all he might meet in the way,
"Ho! forty old bachelors sold here today."
And presently all the old maids in the town,
Each one in her very best bonnet and gown,
From thirty to sixty, fair, plain, red and pale,
Of every description, all flocked to the sale.
The auctioneer then in his labors began,
And called out aloud, as he held up a man,
"How much for a bachelor? who wants to buy?"
In a twink every maiden responded—"I—I."
In short, at a hugely extravagant price,
The bachelors all were sold off in a trice;
And forty old maidens, some younger, some older,
Each lugged an old bachelor home on her shoulder.

PARADISE

By Frederick William Faber

FREDERICK WILLIAM FABER, clergyman, priest and hymn writer, was born in Calverley, Yorkshire, England, in 1814 and died in Brompton, England, in 1863. He was ordained in the Anglican church, but left it for the Roman Catholic communion. Besides other poems Faber wrote many hymns that have gained widespread favor by their sweetness and spirituality.

O PARADISE, O Paradise,
Who doth not crave for rest?
Who would not seek the happy land
Where they that loved are blest?
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

O Paradise, O Paradise,
The world is growing old;
Who would not be at rest and free
Where love is never cold?
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

O Paradise, O Paradise,
Where they shall sin no more,
Who strive to be as pure on earth
As on thy spotless shore;
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

O Paradise, O Paradise,
I greatly long to see
The heavenly place my dearest Lord
Is destining for me;
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

O Paradise, O Paradise,
I feel 'twill not be long;
Patience! I almost think I hear
Faint fragments of thy song:
Where loyal hearts and true
Stand ever in the light,
All rapture through and through,
In God's most holy sight.

THE RAIL

By George Hunt Clark

GEORGE HUNT CLARK, poet, was born in Northampton, Mass., in 1809 and died in Hartford, Conn., in 1881. He was a frequent contributor to Putnam's, the Knickerbocker and other magazines, and some of his numerous and sentimental verses are still remembered by older readers. He was an iron manufacturer by trade.

I MET him in the cars,
Where resignedly he sat;
His hair was full of dust,
And so was his cravat;
He was furthermore embellished
By a ticket in his hat.

The conductor touched his arm
And awoke him from a nap;
When he gave the feeding flies
An admonitory slap,
And his ticket to the man
In the yellow-lettered cap.

So, launching into talk,
We rattled on our way,
With allusions to the crops
That along the meadows lay—
Whereupon his eyes were lit
With a speculative ray.

The heads of many men
Were bobbing as in sleep,
And many babies lifted
Their voices up to weep;
While the coal dust darkly fell
On bonnets in a heap.

All the while the swaying cars
Kept rumbling o'er the rail,
And the frequent whistle sent
Shrieks of anguish to the gale,
And the cinders pattered down
On the grimy floor like hail.

When suddenly a jar,
And a thrice-repeated bump,
Made the people in alarm
From their easy cushions jump,
For they deemed the sounds to be
The inevitable Trump.

A splintering crash below,
A doom-foreboding twitch,
As the tender gave a lurch
And a mangled mass of men
Lay writhing in a ditch
Beyond the flying switch—

With palpitating heart
My friend essayed to rise;
There were bruises on his limbs
And stars before his eyes,
And his face was of the hue
Of the dolphin when it dies.

I was very well content
In escaping with my life;
But my mutilated friend
Commenced a legal strife—
Being thereunto incited
By his lawyer and his wife.

And he writes me the result,
In his quiet way as follows:
That his case came up before
A bench of legal scholars,
Who awarded him his claim
Of fifteen hundred dollars.

BOYCOTT IS DECLARED.

Chicago Strikers Use New Weapon In Fight Against Packers.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—The union teamsters are to be the principal weapon which the labor leaders propose to use to win the stockyards strike. Orders have been issued to drivers of ice wagons to deliver no more ice to butchers who buy of the big packers or to any of the branch houses of the packing plants where the men are now on strike. A list of more than 200 retail dealers who have been buying meat from the so-called trust packers and hauling it away with their own wagons has been compiled and, according to the claims of the strike leaders, the ice supply will be cut off from every one of these today. Arrangements have been made to have pickets stationed at all the retail markets which have been placed under the ban of the unions to see that the boycott is enforced to the limit.

The order is a duplication of the one issued last week but which was never enforced because it had not been sanctioned by the international officers of the teamsters' union. At Cincinnati, where the International Brotherhood of Teamsters was in session, the necessary indorsement of the proposed boycott was given and the belated order will be put in force.

All the packing plants began operations with slightly increased forces of workmen, nearly 200 additional employes having been secured over Sunday. Nearly all the new men who left the yards Saturday night to spend Sunday at their homes returned to work. Among those who reported for duty were a considerable number of the strikers, who, according to the packers, had become tired of being idle and made application for the places they held prior to the strike.

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

BLOOMINGTON.

It does seem queer. A "nigger" begins to get white just as soon as he votes the democratic ticket, but as long as he continues to vote the republican ticket he is blacker than the cinders of the lower regions.

About twenty hobos are summering at the W. Va. Junction. When the weather is disagreeable they occupy the sand house and the broken down cars backed off in the yard for repairs. Of late they have commenced to commit depredations on the neighboring gardens by digging up potatoes and helping themselves to cabbages or any other vegetables their appetites may crave. In a number of instances some of them have been bolder and entered the kitchens of people who were away from home and carried away tinware, butter, lard, bread or anything loose that suited their wants. Mr. James La Rew, of Buxton Dump, was prepared for them on last Saturday evening and extended a warm reception to three of them whom he caught in his garden digging up potatoes. He exploded a double-barreled shot gun three times at the intruders and feels positive from their hurried exit that they will not forget his potato patch for some time to come.

Bring on the corkscrew and let's open the campaign.

Mr. George Graham, a prominent and wealthy business man of Crawfordsville, Ind., in company with his brother, Mr. D. F. Graham, the prosperous Lake merchant, was in town last Monday, the first time in thirty-two years, shaking hands with friends of former days and reviewing and noting the changes that have occurred since he left his native town. Fortune has been kind to George in his Western home as he is proprietor and owner of a large and extensive carpet store employing about seventy people.

State Senator Cornwell, of Romney, Hampshire county, W. Va., the democratic nominee for Governor of West Virginia, in company with his colleague, State Senator C. W. Osenton, of Fayette county, en route to Charleston, to take part in the extra session of the legislature, spent Sunday evening in town with relatives and friends.

Miss Nan Hepburn, the lady lawyer of Piedmont, was in town on business Tuesday.

Mr. Jacob Tusing, of Seldom Seen, moved his family to Elk Garden on Monday, where he has obtained employment in mine No. 20.

Report came to town on Tuesday that Mr. William Ball, of this place, working in the N. Y. mine at Blaine, had been caught under a heavy fall of slate and sustained such injuries about the head and body that he could not live. Later on he was reported dead. Much to the surprise of friends and relatives when the evening train arrived Will stepped off with no marks of disfigurement except a patch of sticking plaster on his chin about as large as a quarter.

Mrs. Robert Hines and children, of this place, sailed from New York on Saturday to visit relatives in England.

Mr. Carl V. Drake, of Harrisburg, Pa., reader, reciter and impersonater, gave two entertainments this week in the M. E. church.

The democrats had to have a Western Union telegram pasted on the bottom of their platform to make it complete.

Mr. James Cross, of Tunnelton, is here visiting friends.

Edward McRobie is home from Fairmont nursing an injured hand.

Mrs. S. A. Dellinger, of Bond, visited our town for the first time on Tuesday.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church will hold a festival next Saturday evening.

Miss Nellie Hyde, eldest daughter of the late P. S. Hyde, of Piedmont, was in town Tuesday on business.

SELBYSPORT.

We have been having fine weather for the past month and hope that it will continue so.

The farmers in this section have nearly all their grain harvested and report good crops all along the line.

I am glad to be able to note that A. J. Frazee, of Frazee Ridge, is able to be out again without the aid of crutches.

Mr. Doc Frazee, one of our most popular young men, has accepted a position with a Pittsburg firm.

Our old friend, Mr. Danks, formerly of Selbysport, but now residing in Zion City, Ill., is ill in that city suffering with smallpox.

Mr. and Mrs Jackson J. Fike arrived here from Pittsburg on last Sunday where they took dinner with Mrs. A. J. Fike. Mr. Fike returned to Pittsburg Sunday evening. His wife will remain with friends here for a week or two.

The many friends of Misses Florence Frazee and Myrtle Hanley, of Pittsburg, were surprised as well as gratified to see them alight at the station here on Tuesday to visit friends for a few days.

GRANTSVILLE.

The lawn fete held by the Lutheran people Saturday evening was a grand success. The proceeds, which amounted to about one hundred dollars, will be used for repairing the church, which is very badly needed.

Mrs. Rush Montgomery, of Cumberland, spent a few days with her mother, Mrs. Henry Winterberg.

Thos. H. Bittinger was at Mt. Lake last week putting up a monument for Mrs. Winters.

Miss Sadie Durst, of New Germany, was a visitor at this place Monday.

Orvel Folk and Savanah Pressler attended church on the mountain Sunday.

Mrs. Harry Ambell and little son, of Pittsburg, are visiting Mrs. Ambell's aunt, Miss Louisa Kurtz.

Rev. Ward held communion services at the M. E. church Sunday.

Dr. G. C. Keller went to Accident Monday to do some dental work.

The First National Bank building is undergoing a new coat of paint.

Mrs. Baker Johnson, of Frostburg, has moved back to this place.

Mrs. E. E. Compton and children were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Beachy Sunday.

Dr. Louderbaugh and S. O. Bender are making new pavements. The ladies of this place hope some of the other people will follow their example, as it is very embarassing to catch their feet in a loose board and fall while out strolling with their best fellow.

Mrs. Dr. Bruce Lichty, of Meyersdale is the guest of her sister, Mrs. G. C. Keller.

Nellie Broadwater, who has been ill for some time, is convalescing.

C. A. Bender sold his planing mill and cider press to Jacob P. Zook.

Eli Stanton & Son are putting new machinery in the mill which will enable them to do better work.

Miss Emma Cochran is visiting Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Bender.

Mr. Henry Smouse has left this place and will make his home as Elk Lick, Pa.

J. S. Broadwater finished painting the M. E. church.

Henry H. Baker, clerk at the First National Bank, was the guest of Miss Laura Durst over Sunday.

Mr. Jacob Brown, of Cumberland, was in town Saturday.

Dr. Lee Beachy and wife are spending the season with Dr. Beachy's parents.

There will be communion services at the Lutheran church Augnst 14.

Harry Bevans and L. Blocher were at Avilton Monday putting in telephones.

Mr. Frank Bill and daughter, of Lonaconing, are the guests of Chas. Bill.

Ward Beachy is repairing the German Reform church.

Mr. Fazenbaker is laying the foundation for Chas. Younkin's new house.

Sam Brenneman, of Bittinger, was in town Tuesday.

PRIMROSE.

BITTINGER.

A family party consisting of some prominent citizens of Myersdale and California, Pa., passed through here last week enroute for Mt. Lake Park, where they will spend a few days. The party was entertained over night at the Ellithorpe hostelry.

Mr. Weekland and wife, of Meyersdale, Pa., were in this section last Wednesday, and while here Mr. Weekland purchased a fine Hamiltonian horse three years old, of Mr. Clarence Brennemen, at a cash price of $195.

Mr. Harry Lethaun of Keyser, Md., was canvassing this territory last week, introducing a novel and convenient repair outfit, for use in mending all manner of leather articles.

Mr. G. W. Engle, of Baltimore, came home last Saturday night for a few days with his family.

Miss Ida Ralston went to Barton and vicinity last Friday, for a visit with friends.

Miss Gertrude Clark, of Barton, Md., is visiting the Misses Ralston west of town.

Mr. Joseph Buckle was kicked in the side and chest by a horse and so seriously hurt that he has been unable to be about his work for some days.

The huckleberry season is now open and wonderful snake stories will soon be forthcoming.

Mr. Jeff. Lohr hauled the remnant of his sugar crop to Salisbury, Pa., last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Wiley were calling on Mr. and Mrs. Simon Brenneman last Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stark were visiting at the home of Mr. H. Legeers last Sunday.

Born unto Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Bittinger, on Monday Aug. 1st, a daughter.

HORSE SHIELD AT A SNAKE

Prof. George M. Perdew Had a Thrilling Experience.

For some days past Prof. George M. Perdew, the capable principal of Central Street public school, has been noticed limping about the streets and to all inquiries as to why he "limped" the Professor would reply "rheumatism."

Today the real cause of the rheumatism eked out. Prof. Perdew each summer spent a portion of his vacation in Garrett county. He had just completed this season's outing in that section and was on his way from Sang Run to take a train at Friendsville for home when he met with an experie which was so thrilling that it is little wonder that he was lame when he got to Cumberland. He started from Sang Run in a one-horse conveyance, used in carrying the mail between the two points. The driver of the horse was a youth, who was just boasting to the professor about the large number of snakes he had killed during his daily trips through the mountain wilds, when the animal he was driving shield at a monster snake stretched across the road in front of him. Seeing a chance to add another reptile to the number already slain, the youth leaped from the buggy, leaving Prof. Perdew seated in the same. The latter, however, didn't remain seated very long, as the boy had scarcely reached the ground before the horse came to the conclusion that it was really frightened and made a leap that threw Prof. Perdew headlong headlong between the shalves, the wheel of the vehicle striking him in the back and whirled him to the ground. That is he struck the ground after the "wheel" got through "whirling" him but the whirling process continued some seconds. At one moment Prof. Perdew was sweeping mother earth with his coat tails and the next seemed to be up among the tree tops.

Finally, however the professor found himself lying flat upon his back in the road, with his ribs bruised and the fibula bone of his leg broken.

The youth who had innocently been the cause of Prof. Perdew's trouble, didn't know whether to laugh or cry but the former made the latter believe that he wasn't hurt and then the boy helped himself to a good laugh, after which he finished killing the snake and then started after the horse.

The animal was finally overtaken, but before that feat was performed the buggy had been so completely wrecked that much trouble was experienced before the trip to Friendsville could be concluded.

Prof. Perdew come on home that afternoon sought the aid of a physician and is now able to walk without experiencing much pain. He tried to keep his accident out of the papers and succeeded pretty well until today when a friend gave the story away, innocently, however, just as the driver "innocently caused the same." —Cumberland Times.

A NARROW ESCAPE

From Death or Serious Injury Made by Party from Oakland.

That instant death or very serious injury was averted by a number of ladies and two gentlemen from Oakland last Monday morning was Providential there is little doubt.

The party composed of Prof. and Mrs. John G. Robinson, of Baltimore, their three daughters, Mrs. Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh, of Oakland, Mrs. Messersmith and Miss Grace Robinson and Mr. Howard Robinson, also of Baltimore, went to Conneway's Tower to spend the day and in descending the hill leading from the tower to Mr. Conneway's house the brake on the wagon slipped which allowed the vehicle to crowd the horses. The animals were unable to hold the wagon and as a consequence it gained considerable velocity. The driver, a young colored boy, did his best to control the team and when nearing the bottom of the hill the horses made a sharp turn and upset the conveyance, throwing the occupants out and injuring three of the ladies, two of them, Mrs. Robinson and Miss Grace Robinson suffering scalp wounds, and Mrs. Hinebaugh being somewhat injured in her side. They were brought to Oakland late in the afternoon and are now resting quite easy at the home of Dr. Hinebangh on Alder street..

ELECTION OFFICIALS.

Appointed at Meeting of the Election Supervisors Held Saturday.

Last Saturday the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county met at the office of the board in Oakland when Judges and Clerks of Election were appointed to serve at the November election. The list of appointments will be found in the advertising columns of this paper today.

The full board, composed of Messrs. Edmund Jamison, Charles M. Miller and Edward E. Sollars, and Clerk Chas. A. Deffinbaugh was present.

Mines to Re-open.

The mines at Schell have not been operated since the first of June, but Michael Cain, the superintendent, is now at work with a small force of men cleaning up the mines and making some needed repairs preparatory to an output of coal in the near future.

THE HISTORIC NATIONAL PIKE

The Venerable Jacob Brown Writes of the Famous Highway.

AS A VISITOR IN GARRETT COUNTY

He Notes the Prosperity of the Community.—Duriug His Stay He Was the Guest of Mr. Ross Compton Near Grantsville.

For many summer seasons in the past it has been my custom as well as pleasure to visit the mountain regions of Garrett county. The route has almost invariable been the old National (properly Cumberland) road. The month of July has usually been chosen for the ride while the scenery, foliage and bloom of that delightful region are yet at their best and this season they are exceptionally fine on account of the plentiful rains which in some respects have been quite excessive, yet the season in all has been a very favorable one, especially for those engaged in agricultural pursuits, which are in the lead here.

On July 30th, myself and little party boarded a trolley car at Cumberland for Frostburg and in one hour we were safely there, after a pleasant ride over the old historic road, which the trolley line follows on its bed. At the city of Frostburg, to which title for many reasons she has just claims, we were met by the same acceptable conveyance which has many times taken us to a coveted place of enjoyment and rest. The old pike, with its many marks and designations, and recollections, was the route; nothing new along the line, yet many things and places of historic interest, especially to one in that way inclined are to be seen. The road bed itself is in tolerably fair condition, but by no means like it was from about 1834 to 1854, when a writer remarked it was almost as fine as "The Avenue" in Washington. The old iron mile markers are nearly all in their places, somewhat marred, of course, as they have been standing about 70 years, giving voiceless instructions to those passing along. An old acquaintance could not help but give each one a gaze in passing by. One had a bullet hole from an unfriendly rifle. But the hotels and buildings along the line of the road have nearly all disappeared, and the "Shades of Death," are now entirely without the awful shades, with cultivated fields, and nice houses in their stead. A short distance beyond is the haunted house on Red Ridge, of which nothing but debris remains. It was burnt down several years ago by tramps, as supposed. Here once lived and acted Judge Isaac Beall, youngest son of Capt. Thomas Beall, of Samuel, the father of Cumberland; and later came Henry T. Beall, son of Isaac, who died in Nebraska, six months ago, nearly 80 years of age. Still this house, as its name signifies has an unsavory history. It is believed for many reasons, two murders were perpetrated there. The place looks desolate, indeed. But we passed on over Meadow Mountain, that beautiful range of many pleasant recollections of the "unliving past," and at its Western base a halt was made. This is the Little Meadow which received its name from no less a personage than Washington himself. It was a favorite place of his for rest, as well as safety. It is an historic spot, and deserves to be so regarded even at this late day. For a time, it was the most noted place on the old Braddock National road between Cumberland and Brownsville. It was a kind of midway point. After many previous ownerships this fine estate for some years has been the property of Mrs. David W. Kuykendall, and forms her summer residence, where she is now staying with a few of her chosen friends, in the full enjoyment of the season. Mr. Kuykendall is now the acceptable teller of the Second National Bank of Cumberland, which keeps him closely at a place of great trust and responsibility and he is only able to enjoy the pleasures of his country home about once a week for a short time.

This is certainly a most interesting place, not merely historically, but in many other ways and to none more so than to him who now endeavors to write briefly about it. It was at this kindly remembered spot in the very twilight of life he received the actual beginning of his education, such as it became in after years, now of the remote past. But with regrets, as on many similar occasions in past years, this favorite site is parted with by turning a right angle to the left; one mile over a country road brought us to the ancient Bruce Boucher homestead, how the residence of Mr. P. C. Boucher, who expects soon to raze the old house of many happy associations and erect upon its site a new suitable dwelling for himself and family. Thence an onward move of two miles through beautiful lands, grounds and shrubbery, brought us to our destination, "Hunter's Art," the very comfortable and hospitable home of Mr. Ross Compton, one of Garrett county's most prominent citizens. Here I have spent many happy and restful vacation times gone by and none have been more so the one now nearing the end. Not a final one, it is to be hoped.

I never saw vegetation in its many shapes and forms so beautiful and inviting to the eyes of observers. Decay or blight is not to be seen anywhere. Crops of all kinds are very fine, especially oats and hay. Hay making was somewhat delayed on account of the rains. Oat harvest is near at hand—crops large and prices good. In fact the farmers here are in good cheer and condition. They will have much of their products to sell for good prices. Besides the grain crops the fruit and berry crops are promising, especially apples which are now fit for use and many going to waste for the want of use or demand. They mature earlier this season than usual; even the nut crop is promising—chestnuts just beginning to burr, and the acorns beginning to show from the trees—good time coming for the squirrels, but they are few; pigeons, none for many years—exterminated or gone beyond the limits of the reach of information. But strange to say there are more of the songster birds than for many years, especially the musical and harmless robins. They sing early and late for grateful ears Someone has said he would rather listen to the notes of the robin than to the fancy tones of the prima donna, not a poor comparrison, this. But on the other hand the destructive varmints anciently so called foxes, polecats, minks and hawks are very numerous and destructive. Where I am staying the good lady of the mansion has lost her whole turkey crop except one by these pests. Still she is a scientist in the poultry production. But more or better inducements should be given for the destruction of these pestiferous little animals. They not only destroy domestic fowls, but the game animals and birds.

The people in this region of Garrett county are certainly in a prosperous condition. There is much evidence of it. No real poverty to be seen. One evidence of prosperity and enterprise is the telephone, which is to be seen and heard in almost every home. Its jingle in some houses is almost constant. Some nervous persons might think at somewhat annoying at times, but the yonng folks think it fine music. The cost is $3 per year. It has come to stay in this prosperous and happy community and appears to be a great convenience in many ways.

Among the pleasant resorts in this neighborhood is the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Swauger. They are hospitable, genial and friendly. They have a dam or fish pool stocked with fish, speckled trout, among the rest of which I had a toothful meal, they having been kept for some days on ice, storage, especially for the occasion. The delicious taste was not in any way impaired thereby.

COMMUNICATED.

Deer Park, Md., Aug. 16, 1904.

To the Editor of The Republican:

In looking over the Garrett Journal last week I notice that the Democratic editor of that paper in his editorial columns says that "the presidential nominations have caused an immense revolution in the New York City newspapers." Then he gives us a list of papers that were against Bryan but are now for Parker, and says all of the New York papers "except the Tribune, Press and Mail, support Parker," and then we are given a list of the papers which "are now friendly to Parker" among which the Sun is named. We hope our friend the editor of the Journal will give us the facts straight in this campaign. It is true that we are a long way from New York and some of us never saw the city and others may never see it, but the people are not going to be fooled in this campaign even by Democratic editors of so called independent newspapers. Now, Mr. Editor, that the people may see how the New York Sun is supporting(?) Parker please print the enclosed clipping from a recent issue of that influential paper:

Two things might have happened to make the choice of 1904 a choice between individuals rather than between parties standing on their respective records. Neither of the two things has happened. The first opportunity was deliberately avoided by the compromising tricksters at St Louis. The second was deliberately thrown away at Rosemount. Barring Judge Parker's gold telegram of 1904, offsetting in some degree his two free silver votes for Bryan in 1896 and 1900, and barring a politic anti-second term pledge which might have been made, perhaps, more gracefully in an inaugural address after election nothing has come from Judge Parker's lips or pen to indicate that he possesses a single political idea marking him as a statesman of independent initative, of courage superior to the St. Louis brand, of stature to command and lead. With the two exceptions noted, he is an echo of the conventions, and naught beside. He is yet the unknown quantity that he was throughout the preliminary period of silence prescribed by judicial dignity. Instead of rising above the platform Judge Parker has crawled pretty ignominously beneath it, is our reluctantly expressed opinion. He himself has decreed that the choice of the independents shall be one of parties and records and principles, rather than of men.

To state the Sun's position and its reasons therefor requires no metaphysical subtlety of explanation. The main consideration is as broad as the nation's interests. As the case is now made up, we prefer the impulsive candidate of the party of conservatism to the mildly conservative, temporizing opportunist representative of the Hun vote in the background. We have more faith in the distinct promises of the Chicago platform, not ignoring the many serious defects of that document, than we have in the miserable hell-broth of dishwater and dynamite concocted at St. Louis a month ago by a party afraid to renounce its criminal follies, and tasted at Esopus by a respectable candidate who declares with gusto that its flavor is admirable!

We shall therefore advocate the election of Roosevelt and Fairbanks and advise the defeat of Parker and Davis; preserving our own absolute independance of organic control, and our freedom of judgment as to every specific question occurring. And may the Hon. Theodore Roosevelt's present mood continue, and if he is elected may the Discourager of Precipitancy stand always at his elbow!

If that is the kind of support Parker is to get from the New York papers which the Journal says are supporting him, he will no doubt before the campaign is over pray to be delivered from his friends. L. S.

RECRUIT FOR MR. ROOSEVELT.

The esteemed New Nork Sun has just executed another of those feats of agility with wnich, during the past twenty-five years or more, it has so frequently astonished and delighted the country. After devoting itself for something like thirty months to the ridicule, disparagment, and denunciation of President Roosevelt, it now proclaims allegiance to his cause and, with a straight face which commands our admiration, advises the American voter to aid in his election.

When we review the Sun's record in respect to Mr. Roosevelt's public acts and private character, since the early days of 1902, it seems to us its ferocious pursuit of Grant, Cleveland, Henry Ward Beecher, and John A. Logan was the work of an immature novice in comparison. Mr. Roosevelt has been held up to public odium and execration. The Sun has charged him with folly, false pretense, lawlessness, and despotism. It has pictured him as a reckless mischief maker, a charlatan, the protagonism of social and industrial chaos. Yet now we have this same Sun recanting all its professions of the past three years and solemnly inviting the American public to accept its latest and most astounding somersault as a strictly and intellectual performance.

Acknowledging that the independent vote will decide this year's elections, it appeals to that vote in these remarkable terms:

"To state the Sun's position and its reasons therefor requires no metaphysical suptlety of explanation. The main consideration is as broad as the nation's interests. As the cause is now made up, we prefe. the impulsive candidate of the party of conservatism to the mildly conservative, temporizing opportunist representative of the Hun vote in the background. We have more faith in the distinct promises of the Chicago platform, not ignoring the many serious defects of that document, than we have in the miserable hell-broth of disaster and dynamite concocted at St. Louis a month ago by a party afraid to renounce its criminal follies, and tasted yesterday at Esopus by a respectable candidate, who declares with gusto that its flavor is admirable.

"We shall therefore advocate the election of Roosevelt and Fairbanks and advise the defeat of Parker and Davis."

And only last week the Sun was abroad with its lantern, looking for the absolute antithesis of Mr. Roosevelt as the ideal President!

Whether Mr. Roosevelt himself will relish this jaunty convert we have no means of knowing. That nobody of sane mind and tolerable principles will attach the smallest importance to its abominations, is of course. Mr. Roosevelt will probably be elected next November, but it will be in spite of and not because of the fresh remodeled activities of the New York Sun—Washington Post.

WITH an octogegenarian as candidate for Vice-Presidency on the Democratic ticket, we shall soon hear of the organization of Old Men's Democratic Clubs.

BOTH CLAIM $40,000 TAXES.

Arguments Heard on the Allegany-Garrett Boundary Dispute.

Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd heard arguments Thursday in the suit to establish the boundary between Garrett and Allegany counties. About $40,000 taxes are involved. The dispute is as to whether what is known as the Chisholm line, surveyed in 1872, or the line relocated according to the act of the legislature of 1898 is the correct line. By the latter line, which was surveyed by L. A. Bauer, a strip of land heretofore on the Allegany side of the line, which averaged about 2000 feet for 18½ miles and consisted of about 6½ square miles of coal land, was thrown on the Garrett county side of the line. When, however, the Garrett county authorities attempted to collect the taxes on the land in dispute the Consolidation Coal Company through Allegany county, secured an injunction to prevent the payment of the taxes, which amounts to about $40,000, to Garrett county and the suit thus instituted was argued Thursday by Benjamin A. Richmond and Albert A. Doub on the part of Allegany county and Edward H. Sincell, of Oakland, on the part of Garrett county.

It was claimed that the Chisholm line was simply a trial line, Surveyor Bauercontending that when Chisholm made his return, the latter intended to run another line. It was shown that when the Chisholm line was located the Surveyors' returns were accepted and by a vote of the people the new county was formed. The line was relocated as the result of the representation of Hiram P. Tasker that there were a number of military lots, some in Garrett and some in Allegany county, that were not assessed. The case was held sub curia.

DAVIS' GRAND-DAUGHTER AS A DEER TAMER.

The Elkins, W. Va., correspondent of the New York World, says:

"Why is it that the people of Elkins say that your twelve-year old granddaughter Katharine Grace Brown is your favorite grandchild?" The World correspondent asked Henry Gassaway Davis, the Democratic candidate for Vice President.

Mr. Davis chuckled

"I suppose because she is the most like me," he answered. "You see, she is only one of my granddaughters who wishes that she had been born a boy."

To say that little Miss Brown is a "tomboy" is far from the truth. She is a pretty buoyant, athletic little girl with dark brown hair and brown eyes, and is entirely feminine in her appearance. But she plays outdoors ll day long at Graceland, the country home of her grandfather at Elkins, and the haymakers say that she is the best farmer in the town. She knows by kicking her little russet shoes among the drying hay just when it is ripe to be raked and cocked for the wagons. She knows when the corn is full in the ear and where the ripest strawberries grow.

But her most noted feat was the taming and training of the wild mountain deer in Mr. Davis' preserves. These deer are the common wild Virginia deer, very beauatiful and shy. They were caught on the hills and since being turned into the game ranges have increased and multiplyed till they are envy of every wealthy man who visits Graceland. But Shannon Hardman, the game-keeper, could do nothing with them. They ran into the jungle every time he approached to feed them, and visitors at Graceland could not get a sight of them.

"I can't tame them a mite," said Hardman, helplessly.

"Pooh! You don't go about it right!" said Miss Katharine. "I can tame anything. I tamed grandpa, and I guess I can tame the deer."

The next day she took a white silk handkerchief and a pail of bran and went up over the hill to the deer park. Sitting down in a hollow, she elevated the handkerchief on a stick and held the curious signal just where the mildeyed does and the antlered bucks could see it waving in the breeze Now, there is nothing in all the world so filled with curiosity as a deer, and some one had told Katharine this secret. The deer saw the white object and "edged" down for a better look. Nearer and nearer they came till they got a good look at the little girl—and then scampered away.

The next day she sprinkled bran near the hollow and again lifted her handkerchief. Again the deer folk crept down for a look and discovered the bran. They ate it timidly and scampered away. In a week the deer were coming to her when she held up the handkerchief and eating from the pail in hands. And before long they came running to meet her whenever she appeared. After a time she introduced them to Hardman and when they found he always had bran it was an easy matter to call them.

Miss Katharine—she insists on spelldg it with an "a"—is the oldest of the ex-senator's grandchildren and is a sort of little mother to them. "since my mamma died" she said to a World reporter "I have had to be a mother to myself and so I have got used to caring for little children."

Elijah on Mount Carmel.

Carmel has been call the Park of Palestine. It is fragrant and lovely. Its foliage is luxuriant. It commands a superb view of the mountain, sea, and plain. The battlefield of the Holy Land is at the foot of it. It is as if the names of Deborah, Barak, Gideon, and Saul were graven with an iron pen on the rocky side of the mountain. But a greater battle was fought on the heights than was ever waged upon the plain. It was a duel of gods—Jehovah and Baal.

Jezebel had paganized Israel. The very multitude of her priests proves it. Four hundred and fifty to the male god Baal and four hundred to the female Astarte. All Jehovah's priests had gone into exile and his prophets into the caves of the mountains. The lascivious Zidonian worship, like a poisonous weed, covered the whole land. It had the prestige of the court. The sensualism of its pompous ritual appealed to the Oriental mind. The chains of a hideous and polluted worship seemed riveted forever upon an apostate nation.

One heroic soul stood against the apparently irresistible stream. As Antony denounced the perfect of Alexandria, Athanasius seized the bridle of Constantine, Knox rebuked Mary, so Elijah, as if consciously under the shield of divinity, fearlessly rebuked king, queen, courtiers, and people. A sharp sword proceeded out of his mouth. The grandeur of his solitude is indescribably impressive.

All against his will Ahab issues a royal proclamation for the assembly of all Isreal. As if designed for the very purpose Carmel afforded a stage for a fascinating and awful drama, a trial of gods by fire. The dread scene is described in a magnificent narrative in every way worthy of it. It fairly lives again before the eyes of the reader.

The priests of Baal were devil-possessed. They did not sham. In their extremity the darkest sorceries of blood and self-mutilation were resorted to. As modern fakirs eat glass and bite living snakes, so these devil-dancers went through every conceivable contortion and fantastic gesture. No more vivid description of idolatrous customs exists in literature.

With a proverbial stoical patience of the Arab the people had been sitting hour after hour looking on as these spirited scenes were enacted. The denouement is at hand. The climax is reached. The conduct of Elijah is the best comment on that Scripture, "The righteous is as bold as a lion." With that absolute assurance which inspiration never fails to give, Elijah stepped to the fore. There is large significance in his smallest act or word. He mocked the prophets of Baal. It is one of the few examples of irony in the Bible. He is not frivolous in this. His object is to make idolatry contemptible, His sarcasm is pitying and withering. His words are addressed to the people rather than to the priests. He cries, "Make him attend! for he is the supreme god. He may happen to be giving an audience to some one. Make him know that everything is now at stake. If he has gone away call him back." A course meaning attaches to the phrase, "He is pursuing." The reference is to act of the toilet, and would not be tolerated in Western speech, but indicates vividly the lowest degree of contempt.

Just at the hour of the evening sacrifice under the Mosaic ritual, Elijah repairs to the old altar of Jehovah—previously existing on that spot. That marks him as the Restorer. He takes twelve stones. That is his protest against schism. The twelve tribes should be in one state and in one nation. Then comes that Divine bugle-call, "How long halt ye!" The awe-struck people maintain the silence of guilt to this lofty challenge. An ideal prayer follows, with its triune invocation of Jehovah's name and its seven rythmic lines.

The assembly of the nation is convinced beyond all cavil both of the impotence of Baal and the omnipotence of Jehovah. Allegiance to God is renewed by popular and unanimous voice. A death-blow is struck to foreign superstitions. The recovery from a postasy showed itself in the mind, affections, and conduct of the people.

The winding Kishon runs red with the blood of the fanatical priests, who joined to their idols miserably perish with them that very day. The self-indulgent nature of the king shows itself in that he gives himself up to the pleasures of a banquet. The heart-searching events of that memorable day seemed not to have touched the quick of his sluggish nature. But while the king ate, the prophet prayed. The prophet's servant, who may, as tradition says, have been the son of the Sareptan widow and also the Prophet Jonah, kept running to scan the horizon for signs of tain, and back to report to his master.

The whole spirited scene closes appropriately. The king rides in his chariot at top of speed to cross the water-brooks before they shall become foaming torrents. The victorious prophet patriotically condescends to be the defeated king's forerunner, As his herald he cries, "Prepare the way of the king!" No doubt his motive is the desire to strengthen Ahab's good resolves.

The Teacher's Lantern.

The lessons of Carmel are as clear-cut as the sky-line of the mountain itself.

Carmel matches Sinai. Elijah matches Moses.

The nonentity of an idol was never more strikingly illustrated. The scene on Carmel is a striking commentary on Paul's words, "An idol is nothing in the world". Not for six hours on the mountain had Baal been appealed to but probably for the whole three years of famine. Not a whisper came in response.

The moral courage and grandeur of Elijah challenges admiration. He was oblivious of self. The honor of Jehovah, the welfare of the people impelled him to fearless action.

The base character of Ahab presents a marked contrast. He was more concerned for the royal stud (horses and mules) than he was for the famine-stricken people. He attempted to "bulldoze" Elijah when he cried blusteringly, "Ah! at length I have found you, you troubler of Israel!" He complacently ate while his priests were being hacked to pieces. He went from the fire-crowned mountain and the discredited Baalism to be the truculent slave of his Baalite queen.

The lofty simplicity of Elijah's prayer is all the more marked when contrasted with the frantic cries of the Baalites.

Jehovah gave a sure sign to His doubting people, but he required a choice at their hands. He gives light, but in the ultimate analysis decision is with the individual.

It is still "do and know". If any man will do His will he shall know of the doctrine." Many are guilty of the impiety of asking for truth and yet withholding choice, asking for more light and yet not obedient to the light they already have. It has been aptly said. "Obedience will scatter more doubt than volumes of treatises."

The killing of the four hundred and fifty priests of Baal was a species of judicial murder. No one need be at pains to justify it. The deed must be judged by the standards which then maintained. If it was right, then the Inquisition finds in it a Scriptural proof and warrant.

Jesus abrogated the lex talionis when he says, "Ye have heard an eye for an eye, but I say love!"

Crude and wild conditions then maintained. Laws were imperfect; penalties unduly severe. They were times of ignorance at which God winked. This bloody deed must be measured by the standards then current, not by the principles of Christian ethics and modern humanities. Violence then as now was "hateful to the God of love."

Farrar compares the relation of Obadiah to Ahab to that which maintained between Sebastian and Diocletian. But the analogy fails at an important point. Obadiah avoided an issue with his royal master, while Sebastian confronted the emperor, reproached him for his impiety, and paid the forfeit with his life.

ANCESTRAL LIMITATIONS

By T. Blair Eaton

Copyright, 1904, by K. M. Whitehead

Francis Norton looked at the pouting girl opposite him and smiled pleasantly. This was characteristic of Norton. When anything particularly displeased him, or when there was something unpleasant to be said, he invariably prefixed his utterances with this same misleading smile.

"Dolly," he said with much conviction, "you must admit that I have followed your whims with a fidelity deserving higher rewards than I have ever received. When you took up golf—and you took it up with undue seriousness, it seemed to me—kindly remember the patient afternoons I spent with you on the links. When you went in for slum work, you probably recall the rounds of calls I made with you on the McGinnisses and the Lampero-

"MY GREAT-GREAT-GREAT-GRANDFATHER WAS A THIEF."

nis and the Barofskis and the number of dirty children I held uncomplainingly on my knees and fed with candy. At the time your mind was bent on collecting old china you certainly haven't forgotten the trip to Maine I made in the dead of winter to get a 'state's pitcher.' And so on through the list—and it's a long list, Dolly. Don't you misunderstand me. I was glad to do anything, so long as it was in your service. But the point is just here—whenever I speak to you of marriage all these things seem to count for nothing in my favor. There is some new fad to be followed out, and when that is done another is brought to light. It seems to be an endless task, and that is why I am protesting against your present devotion to genealogy."

Dolly bit her lip and looked at Norton angrily.

"Genealogy is not a fad with me, permit me to explain," she said coldly. "I have taken it up as a serious work. Mr. McGregor of the Genealogical society says I have the true genealogical instinct requisite for such endeavor."

Norton sighed.

"There have been so many things taken up by you as 'serious works,' Dolly," he began suggestively.

She interrupted him with an imperious little gesture.

"And all this because I suggested a man should take some interest in his ancestors," she remarked.

"I do take an interest in my ancestors," said Norton, "so much interest, indeed, that I am willing to let their memories rest in peace; infinitely better it seems to me, than prying into their affairs."

Dolly sniffed scornfully.

"Your lack of family pride is positively shocking," she asserted.

Norton's face became quite grave.

"Dolly," he said slowly, "if it would hasten your answer to my eternal question I'd hunt my ancestry back to Adam."

Dolly's face brightened.

"I'll make a compact with you," she said. "If you'll hunt it up for ten generations back, I'll—I'll marry you, Frank."

"Dolly! Do you mean it?"

She nodded emphatically.

"I'll do it," he said with determination, "not because I want ancestors, but because I want you, Dolly."

For two weeks after the interview Dolly saw little of him. Then, one blustering February evening, he came, with a strange, preoccupied look and a meek humility of bearing that contrasted strangely with his usual brisk, determined air.

"It's all over, Dolly," he said, dropping into a chair near the fire.

"What's all over?" said Dolly.

"Everything," he announced ambiguously.

"I thought you'd find it difficult," she said knowingly.

He paid no attention, but stared at the crackling fire.

"It is discouraging at first," she persisted, "there are so many of them."

"So many of what?" he said, looking up.

"Ancestors," said she.

He grunted something unintelligible.

"Still, with time and patience you can trace them," she went on.

"I've found them too readily," he said gloomily. "I wish they all were untraceable."

"I'm afraid I don't understand," she said, eying him curiously.

"I wish I didn't either," he groaned.

"Perhaps you'll explain, anyway," she said.

"Dolly," he said, with much tragedy in his voice, "this is probably the last time I shall ever see you."

Dolly looked a trifle frightened.

"My veins are fairly bursting with criminal blood."

"What!" said Dolly, thoroughly alarmed.

"My ancestors, you know," he said.

"Goodness!" she exclaimed, with more or less relief.

"I'll tell you all about it," he said, "but first you'd better lock up the silver. My great-great-great-grandfather was a thief."

He paused.

"Well, go on," she said impatiently.

"And I know now why I detest the confinement of the office so," he said. "One of my—I don't know how many 'greats' there should be—grandfathers did ten years for arson."

"Oh!" said Dolly, beginning to understand.

"That isn't the worst of it," said he.

"No?" asked Dolly anxiously.

"I also know why it is my collar often feels tight," Norton rattled on.

"Why?" said she.

"One of my ancestors wore a rope collar."

"Well, that certainly isn't a crime," said she.

"Dolly," he said severely, "try to understand. He was hanged. He was a pirate. They strung him up to the yardarm."

"Gracious!" gasped Dolly.

"So I came to say goodby," he said wearily. "Of course in light of these discoveries I can't ask you to marry me."

"You idiot," said Dolly, "I'm not marrying your ancestors."

He came over to her chair, and, catching her face in his hands, he looked at her until she grew crimson to her little ears.

"You display a shocking lack of family pride," he said severely.

Dolly chuckled softly.

"All the same," she said, "I don't think I care as much for genealogy as I did."

A Quotation Well Used.

Few have ever forgotten the cyclone of cheers that burst over the Republican convention of 1880 as Conkling, tall, majestic, imperious in his bearing, strode upon the platform and faced that great audience of 20,000 souls. Conkling was there determined to secure the nomination of Ulysses S. Grant as president for a third term. It was fifteen minutes before he could be heard. The mighty thunder of those 20,000 throats, from friend and foe, rolled and crashed and rumbled on. At length Conkling, swinging his arms above him, brought them down, down, down, by graceful moves as if to soothe the tempest. He did this a dozen times. There was silence at last. In a voice broken by four days of battle in committee rooms and on the floor of the convention, yet sonorous in its very hoarseness, he began his speech by declaiming:

And when asked what state he hails from our sole reply shall be,
He hails from Appomattox and its famous apple tree.

No scene in any national convention of either party since has rivaled that which greeted Conkling's use of Miles O'Reilly's famous lines. It was half an hour before he could proceed, and through it all the mulfitude cheered and roared its interruptions.—Everybody's Magazine.

Wonders of Chess Combination.

To estimate the actual number of ways of playing even a very few moves in chess is beyond the power of calculation. At first both players have a choice of but twenty moves. The first player has an average of twenty-eight, thirty and thirty-three ways of playing the second, third and fourth moves respectively. On the hypothesis that the number of "replies" is always the same, no matter what the preceding move may have been, the number of ways of playing the first four moves on one side only would be 318,979,504,000. Let us assume for convenience of calculation that for the next six moves on each side after the first four there is a choice of thirty ways of playing. We thus get by combination with the result quoted above figures which prove that the number of ways of playing the first ten moves on each side is 169,518,829,100,544,000,000,000,000,000.

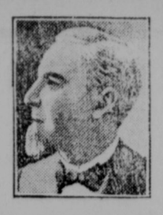
The above figures are quoted from an article on "The Inexhaustibility of Chess" by Edward Anthony, a noted British mathematician.

Strange Antipathies.

"One of my patients," said a physician, "faints at the smell of a rose. In studying her case I found that a number of persons of a certain nervous temperament have always fainted before odors that to the normal mind are pleasant. Cardinal Cardona fainted if he drew near heliotrope. Boyle fainted at the smell of honey. Others have fainted at the smell of thyme, of fish and of violets.

"A second patient of mine develops a rash whenever she eats crab meat. That is a strange case, but in the records there are stranger cases—a boy, for instance, whose lips grew sore and swollen if he ate an egg; an old man who would bleed at the nose if he ate an apple.

"But the most peculiar personal antipathy I know of is the case of a widow. She is healthy and of a calm, placid mind, yet the sound of a funeral bell invariably throws her into a deep and dangerous swoon."—New York Telegram.



What Should the Young Man Do to Succeed?

By THOMAS N. HART, Former Mayor of Boston

THE question of what a young man should do, what means he should take, in order that he may achieve success in life, DEPENDS ENTIRELY UPON THE YOUNG MAN HIMSELF.

The young man who wants to succeed, who is willing to take measures that will make him successful, is a success from the very first. In every establishment where a number of people are employed you will find that a certain number of the young men or boys who come in immediately make themselves useful, so useful, in fact, that they find that people cannot get along very well without them.

THESE ARE THE BOYS OR YOUNG MEN WHO ARE NOT CONSTANTLY LOOKING AT THE CLOCK TO SEE HOW SOON THEY CAN GET THE SHUTTERS UP AND GET HOME AND OUT TO "FUN," AS THEY CALL IT. WHEN THE YOUNG MAN'S ATTENTION IS DIVIDED BETWEEN CLOCK AND DUTY, THE CLOCK GAINS NOTHING BUT TIME, AND DUTY IS NOT DONE.

No, the young man who succeeds is he who is looking all the time to see if there is not something that he can do to make business go a little better than at the present time. And success, it seems to me, means that whole story through life from beginning to end.

If, on the contrary, the young man is not thus striving to do his best, if he is not endeavoring to find ways to make himself more and more useful to his employers or his superiors, then, the chances are, he remains a hewer of wood and a drawer of water all his life. And HE HONESTLY THINKS THAT THE FATES ARE AGAINST HIM, WHEN, AS WE CAN PLAINLY SEE, THERE IS NOTHING AGAINST HIM EXCEPT HIS OWN NEGLIGENCE.

But there is a good deal to be done by the young man besides merely attending to business in the store or factory or wherever he may be employed. One of the important things he should do is to select good books to read for a half hour each day. The right kind of books and a serious intention of learning will make him, at thirty, A FIRST RATE SCHOLAR, IF SUCH HE DESIRES TO BE.

Again, every day of his life he should make it in his way to talk with men of affairs. Let him get an idea from such men, and let him come to realize the fact that every morning when he arises he knows a little more than he knew on the previous morning.

THIS SCHEME OR PLAN OR PROGRAMME CARRIED OUT FOR BUT A FEW YEARS, AND THE SUCCESS OF THE YOUNG MAN OR BOY IS ASSURED. FROM THESE GENERAL RULES THE AMBITIOUS YOUNG MAN OR BOY CAN BUILD A PLAN OF HIS OWN. BUT THEY SHOULD BE A PART OF IT.

When Human Brotherhood Will Be Established

By the Rev. Dr. LYMAN ABBOTT, Editor of the Outlook

THE COURSE OF HISTORY HAS BEEN TOWARD SOCIALISM.

There was barter when one man found another could do better than he himself something which he desired. Then followed trade, commerce, manufactories. Later came the discovery that steam, electricity, powers of nature, God given, could do the drudgery if they could only be applied.

The moment these discoveries were made there came the demand for organization of capital or of that which man was able to save by his industry after satisfying the demands for the necessaries of life. As soon as manufactories are established you must organize hours of labor and conditions under which that labor is performed.

ORGANIZATION IS A RESULT OF CIVILIZATION. THE DAILY PAPERS ARE CONSTANTLY DISCUSSING THE QUESTION, "SHALL LABOR BE ORGANIZED?" AND THE QUESTION IS REALLY, "SHALL LABOR HAVE SOMETHING TO SAY ABOUT IT?"

I believe in democracy, I believe in my fellow man, in God as the father of all. Men must have something to say about their own destiny and their own lives. WE CANNOT HAVE A COUNTRY WHERE ALL THE QUESTIONS ARE SETTLED DEMOCRATICALLY AND THE LABOR QUESTION SETTLED AUTOCRATICALLY. We tried the autocratic system to labor in the south and the average age of the negro was seven years.

Wherever the organization is necessary there the voice of labor is heard. Organized capital and organized labor are developments of the century we cannot get rid of. The organization of capital and the organization of labor must be voluntary. Wherever there is a blow at the individual there is a blow at all organized labor and all freedom of industry.

THERE IS AT PRESENT A MOVEMENT TOWARD THE EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION OF WEALTH. THE LABORER HAS CONFIDENCE IN HIS BROTHER LABORER, THE CAPITALIST IN HIS BROTHER CAPITALIST. WHEN EACH IS WILLING TO STEP OVER THE BARRIERS AND HAVE CONFIDENCE IN EACH OTHER, THEN WILL BE ESTABLISHED A BROTHERHOOD OF THE HUMAN RACE.

The Characteristic That Succeeds

By JAMES B. DILL, Lawyer, "The Father of Trusts"

ALTHOUGH combination is the fashion today, the only successful combination is the combination under the leadership of strong men. THE NEARER YOU GET TO THE TOP OF ANY COMBINATION OF MEN, MONEY OR INFLUENCE YOU WILL FIND THAT THE MEN IN CONTROL ARE INDIVIDUALLY CHARACTERISTIC. THEY MAY BE DIFFERENT, BUT THEY ARE STRONG IN INDIVIDUALISM.

DO YOU WANT A CHANGE?

Democratic campaign managers and orators are trying to convince the voters of the nation that the time is ripe for a "change." Every petty grievance against the party in power is magnified and every possible bugaboo concerning future developments is raised and waived in an effort to make the people believe that their interests and their welfare will be best subserved by abandoning Republican policies and adopting Democratic. The Democratic party completed a four years term of power in 1896 and it may interest the voter, who is thinking the country needs a "change" to contrast the business of the nation in 1896 with that of 1904. The figures quoted are for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904.

Merchandise exports in 1896 were $382,000,000 as against $1,460,000,000 in 1904. Do you want a change?

The favorable balance of trade in Democratic 1896 was $102,000,000 as against $470,000,000 in Republican 1904. Do you want a change?

We imported $33,000,000 in gold in 1896 as compared with $99,000,000 in 1904, and we exported $112,000,000 in 1896 as against $81,000,000 in 1904. Do you want a change?

Our total foreign commerce in Democratic 1896 was $1,661,006,000 as compared with $2,451,000,000 in Republican 1904. Do you want a change?

The bank deposits in December, 1896, amounted to $4,945,000,000 as compared with $9,530,000,000 in December, 1903. Do you want a change?

IF YOU believe the Democrats are in favor of the gold standard, call a roll of the Democratic State conventions that have so declared this year.

WHICH WAS RIGHT?

Charles W. Goodyear, of Buffalo, a man of whom Grover Cleveland spoke recently in the highest terms as an ideal Democrat candidate for Governor, said on August 5th, of a charge that he was not a Democrat in good and regular standing, became he had twice bolted Bryan:

I have never sought to conceal the fact that I voted against Mr. Bryan, and if I had it all to do over again I should vote against him.

I voted for Mr. McKinley for several reasons. I believed that some of the planks of the Chicago platform, if they should ever become effective, would be ruinous to the country, and that the best way to defeat Mr. Bryan and the principles he stood for was to vote for Mr. McKinley and I did it, and I don't want any misunderstanding about it, either.

If I should decide to become a candidate I'll make the hardest kind of a fight for the nomination that I know how to make, but I won't stand for any lying or concealment as to whom I have voted for or what principles I have been willing to accept as good American Democratic doctrines.

That is a manly and straightforward declaration, and it represents accurately the attitude of what is known as the Cleveland Democracy in the State of New York. How does it bear on Judge Parker's position in the past? Here is his definition of that position as he himself has written it down:

My Dear Danforth: It was entirely right for you to bring my attention the question which the sincere friends of Mr. Bryan are pressing upon you. I can say to you frankly and sincerely that you can assure them that I voted for the last national nominees of the Democratic party, as I have voted for all the regular Democratic nominees since I had a vote. Yours very sincerely, Alton B. Parker.

Sept. 22, 1897.

It is understood also that Parker voted for Bryan again in 1900. In fact he said nothing to indicate that he was not still faithful to Bryan and silver till he sent his telegram to the St. Louis convention, after he had been nominated. If Mr. Goodyear's position is manly and straightforward before he has received a nomination, if he was right from a Democratic point of view in bolting Bryan in 1896 and in 1900, what is to be said of Parker's acts in those years and of his conduct this year? Can Goodyear be praised without rebuking Parker? Would Parker, after Goodyear's statement, favor his nomination as the Democratic candidate for Governor? If not, why not?

THE President has shown that he is for the right. It makes no difference to him on whose side is the right. And the American people hate a coward.

ROOSEVELT AS A SAFE MAN.

Col. Charles J. Bonaparte, of Maryland, is a man of great influence in business and commercial circles. In seconding the nomination of Robert Garrett as Representative of the Second Congressional District of Maryland, Colonel Bonaparte said:

Some of our Democratic friends are much troubled just now because they think President Roosevelt "unsafe." He has had to deal, probably, with more grave and delicate problems, demanding for their solution tact, patience, self-control and sound judgment on his part, than any President since the close of reconstruction; and while in many cases he has done what many people thought he should not do, in nearly every instance he has surprised and disappointed his numerous critics by complete success. To note but a few illustrations: The pacification of the Philippines, success of self-government in Cuba, the settlement of the coal strike and the consummation of the Panama treaty, with its assurance of an isthmian canal. A man justified by the event in matters such as these is, I think, "safe" enough for another trial; and, at all events those so often mistaken in their prophecies of failure might show a little less assurance in calling him "unsafe." In truth, I doubt if we have ever had a President, and I, at least, have never seen a man more open to suggestion, advice or remonstrance than Theodore Roosevelt. He can not be cajoled, he can not be bullied, he can not be bought, either with money or anything else. If Democratic editors mean that these qualities render a President "unsafe," then they are quite right to prefer another candidate; and I venture to add that David B. Hill is remarkably well fitted to suggest a candidate to suit them.

It may be owned that whether Mr. Roosevelt be "safe" or not, certain classes of people would undoubtedly feel in greater safety were he out of the White House. "Grafters" who look to "pull" for immunity; men, whether rich or poor, few or many, in the North or in the South, who trespass on the constitutional rights of their fellows; rebels and conspirators in the Philippines; Moorish brigands who kidnap our citizens; South American adventurers who would "hold up" our canal—in short, criminals and lawbreakers of high and low degree in our midst, enemies of our country both at home and abroad, all these gentry agree in finding him too "strenuous" for their comfort, and would sleep better with a "safer" President at Washington. If the newspapers which declare him "unsafe" are the mouthpieces of one or more of these classes, I find no cause for wonder in their utterances; otherwise these seem surprising, except as showing that they have nothing more sensible to say.

COL. BRYAN says he will support Judge Parker after September 30. He figures, probably, that it will take him that long to get a proper edge on his hatchet.

A "JUST AND STRONG MAN."

The Boston Pilot one of the oldest and most influential organs of Catholic and Irish-American opinion in the United States, which has been uniformly Democratic for sixty years, is giving vigorous and unqualified support to the Republican national ticket. The Pilot seems to be moved mainly by its approval and admiration of President Roosevelt's public acts in his twenty years of public life. It declares that "no man can point to a single act of his, public or private, influenced by prejudice of race or creed or color except prejudice in favor of the poor, the oppressed or the despised."

The change in the party alignment of this influential Irish-American journal is significant. It is an instance and evidence of the change which has been going on for twenty years which has divided between the two great political parties the Irish Catholic vote, which formerly was almost solidly Democratic. The Democratic party was well served by the Know-Nothing craze which swept the country for a very brief period fifty years ago. This drove the foreign-born voters, the great majority of whom to the Democratic party because it was opposed to the Know-Nothings. When the organization and ideas of the latter disappeared from the face of the earth the Democratic party retained the advantage which it had gained, and new immigrants naturally joined the political organization to which their friends and the other members of their race belonged. A great many Irishmen broke away from their old moorings and voted for Blaine in 1884, and have remained with the Republican party ever since. These will vote for Roosevelt this year, and the Boston Pilot points out why other Irish-Americans should do the same thing.

The Irish as a race have flourished and grown strong in this country. They have improved their condition in many ways. They have gained wealth. They have displayed a genius for politics and have found here their opportunity to make the most of it. A generation ago they were making our railroads and doing the rough and heavy work of the country generally. Now immigrants from the south and east of Europe fill the role of day laborers for the most part, while the Irish are more likely to be found superintending the job. They have prospered and grown with the growth of the country, and as they perceive that this country has been for over forty years, excepting a very brief interval, under the sway and dominated by the policies of the Republican party it is not surprising that intelligent Irishmen are joining the party under whose rule they have profited so greatly.

There are many good reasons why Irishmen should vote the Republican national ticket. The Pilot however, lays most of its stress on one consideration, which is that the candidate of the Republican party, Theodore Roosevelt, "is no fair weather friend, no favorer of any class or creed or race, but a just man and a safe one to trust in storm or calm."

IT IS a little strange that Mr. Littleton, who placed Judge Parker in nomination at St. Louis, in a speech which was submitted in advance to Judge Parker, had nothing to say about his candidate's financial views. It would have been a courageous thing to have announced them at that time, but it would have undoubtedly resulted in the nomination of another candidate.

IT makes little difference whether the managers of the Democratic party are deliberately trying to deceive the public, or are deceiving themselves. They may think they have reorganized the party on a sane and safe basis. But Bryanism is still the dominant note of the St. Louis platform as Bryan was the dominant figure at the convention. In fact Mr. Bryan exerted more power at St. Louis in July than he did in Chicago in 1896 and at Kansas City in 1900. At Chicago he simply leaped to the crest of the silver wave and rode to the nomination. He exhibited the skill of a clever opportunist and with an eloquent and dramatic speech made himself the most conspicuous representative of the silver craze which had already possessed the convention. At Kansas City in 1900 Mr. Bryan had no opposition for the nomination, and he naturally dictated the platform, though the reaffirmation of the silver plank was granted grudgingly. The committee on platform gave him that reaffirmation by a majority of one and the one vote came from Hawaii, not then organized as a Territory. At St. Louis Mr. Bryan did not seek the nomination for himself, nor did he try to name the candidate. He had refused to express a preference. He opposed the nomination of Judge Parker, but not with another candidate and he lost that one point. It was the only point lost by Mr. Bryan at St. Louis. He dictated what should not go in the platform and what should go in. He had two-thirds of the Committee on Resolutions with him in refusing to admit a gold plank which was to be the one sure sign of a sane and safe Democracy lined up behind Judge Parker. He also had the committee with him in re writing the tariff plank, the trust plank, and the plank on imperialism. The platform represents Mr. Bryan more than it does Judge Parker or any of those who claim to have reorganized the party. Judge Parker is a candidate of the Bryan Democracy. It matters little what are the opinions of Judge Parker, the Democratic party has not changed, and should it secure control of Congress the legislation would be Democratic as to tariff and silver, imperialism and all the rest. Judge Parker would be only a figure head. Bryan will not be President, but Bryanism still rules the party and he is still its best exponent and defender.

SILENCE NOT A PLEDGE.

In his role of advisor emeritus of the Democratic party, Grover Cleveland has been discussing the action of the St. Louis convention. Referring to the money question he says that he does not overlook the fact that two clear and unimpeachable verdicts of the people stand recorded in favor of the gold standard, and that its perpetuity has been secured by Federal enactments. Then, the distinguished ex President goes on to argue that the telegram of Judge Parker to the convention supplies a "plank in a disabled platform," and pledges the Democratic party to the maintenance of the gold standard.

With all deference to the opinion of Cleveland, who is offering a mitigating circumstance in behalf of a client who has already pleaded guilty, the Parker telegram does nothing of the kind. The money question was ignored in the St. Louis platform because the delegates in favor of the Republican system of sound money did not dare force their demands. The Bryan followers, wedded to free silver and flat money, were too strong to be turned down and the convention compromised its differences on the question by a cowardly dodge. So far as the Democratic party is concerned, and it must be judged by its platform utterances, the money plank of 1896 and 1900 stand, and they must stand, as tenets of the Democratic creed until changed by a vote of the Democratic party in convention assembled.

The tariff question is also a "Federal enactment," as Cleveland would say. It would be just as logical as Cleveland's argument to insist that the omission of the tariff plank from the Republican platform would remove the issue from the field of politics. The money question is just as much an issue as the tariff and must continue to be so long as the stability of our currency is opposed by probably a majority of the Democratic party.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

There's a terrible row down in Free Trade Alley. The Judge and his boodle burdened pard worked up a game of political bluff and wheedled a lot of town kids into the game, and after the two duffers got a boost and were landed on a time tattered platform with their pedal portions dangling over the weather beaten sides, they point the finger of scorn at the arena of American citizenship, and cry "Nigger, Nigger", 'cause the black fellers don't play their way. Go 'round to the brown stone where the twain are lodged, and I'll swar

Thar's nigger in de dinin'-room,
Thar's nigger in de kitchen,
An' when de Judge am drivin' out,
Dat nigger do de switchin.'

De Cun'el he am berry grand,
His boodle cuts de figger;
But when he joines ole Gabriel's band,
He'll muzzle ebery nigger.

FACTS ABOUT THE STATE OF MARYLAND.

Geological Survey Publishes a Gazeteer of the State.

FULL OF DATA OF INTEREST.

Shows that It Ranks 14th Among the States in Manufactures and 29th in Agriculture.

The United States Geological Survey has published a gazetteer of Maryland, which besides giving the location and a brief description of every geographic feature in the State includes an introductory chapter containing a variety of statistical data. This gazetteer, which is listed as bulletin No. 231 in the survey's publications may be obtained without charge on application to the Director of the Survey.

Prof. Henry Zannett, the geographer of survey, had charge of the preparation of the gazetteer. After giving the boundaries, a description of the topography and a brief outline of the history of the State, he gives the following table showing the growth of population in the State from the first census in 1790 to that of 1900.

Census.	Popul'n.	Increase. p. c.
1790	319,723	.....
1800	341,548	6.8
1810	380,546	11.4
1820	407,350	7.0
1830	447,040	7.0
1840	470,019	5.1
1850	583,034	23.0
1860	687,049	17.8
1870	780,864	13.0
1880	934,943	19.7
1890	1,042,390	11.5
1900	1,188,044	14.0

"In 1730 Maryland was the sixth State in the Union in population. In 1900, although its inhabitants were 3.7 times as numerous, it had dropped to the 26th rank, owing to the rapid growth of the new States in the Mississippi Valley. In 1900 the average density of population was 120 persons to the square mile. It has five cities which exceed 9,000 inhabitants, of which Baltimore has over half a million. The other four are as follows: Cumberland, 17,138; Hagerstown, 13,591; Frederick, 9,296, and Annapolis, the capital, 8,525. These five cities contain 46.9 per cent. of the population of the entire State. In cities of more than 2,500 inhabitants live 48.8 per cent., or nearly one-half of the population of the State, while the remainder—51.2 per cent.—may be regarded as rural. In 1900 the population was divided almost equally between the two sexes, 49.6 per cent. being males and 50.4 per cent. being females.

"The negro population, though large for a border State, is diminishing in proportion to the whites. In 1900 the whites formed 80.2 per cent. and the negroes 19.8 per cent., or nearly one-fifth of the population. The number of foreign-born inhabitants was also small, the persons of native birth forming 92.1 per cent., while those born in foreign countries were 7.9 per cent. Immigration from other States has not been large, since it is found that of the native population 13 per cent. were born in other States.
